FUNERAL OF MRS. FORCE

Hundreds of Friends Attend the Obsequies of Wife of Publisher.

TWO MINISTERS OFFICIATE.

Many Beautiful Floral Tributes—Rev. Dr. Johnson Pronounces the Eulogy.

The funeral services of Mrs. Clarissa M. Bradshaw Force, wife of A. L. Force, took place yesterday afternoon at her late home, on Duer street, North Plainfield. The services were conducted by Rev. John Y. Brock, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, and Rev. Dr. E. P. Johnson, of New Brunswick, a former pastor and intimate friend of the family.

The spacious home of the family was filled to its utmost limits by friends of the woman who had endeared herself to so many of Plainfield's people and when the beautiful words of the twenty-third psalm were uttered by Pastor Brock, at the opening of the service, there were few dry eyes in the rooms.

Mr. Brock's opening and closing sentences were scriptural and were parts of the Bible best loved by Mrs. Force, and words which she loved to quote. The prayer which followed was equally simple and showed the feeling uppermost in the mind of the pastor, who had learned to esteem in the highest terms, one of his most faithful flock.

Rev. Dr. Johnson's eulogy which followed Pastor Brock's prayer was a beautiful epitome of the splendid life and high character of Mrs. Force; her love and devotion to her home and church and to the many Christian qualities for which she will long be remembered.

At the conclusion of Dr. Johnson's address the assemblage were permitted to take a last view of the remains and passed in silently considering the beauty of the change from the earthly life to the heavenly repose.

Many and beautiful were the floral tributes received and placed about the bier, and they came from the friends, associates and societies of which Mrs. Force was a member.

Following is an original poem recited by Dr. Johnson at the conclusion of his address:

Why do we moan
For loss that doth enrich us yet
With chastened, yearning sense of regret?
Bleaker than unmossed stone
Our lives were but for this immortal gain
Of unstilled longing and inspiring pain!
As thrills of long-hushed tone
Live in the viol, so our souls grow fine
With keen vbrations from the touch divine
Of noble natures gone!

Gentlest of spirits; not for thee
Our tears are shed, our sighs are given;
Why mourn to know that thou are free
Partaker of the joys of Heaven?
Finished thy work, and kept thy faith
In Christian firmness unto death;
And beautiful as sky and earth
When autumn's sun is downward going,
Thy blessed memory of thy worth
Around thy place of slumber glowing!

Mother—made for motherhood,
Wife most fit, most true, most rare—
Busy after others' good,
For herself the last to care;
Like the chosen Mary pure,
Like her, true and strong of heart,
Bright to enjoy, brave to endure,
As is wife's and mother's part.

She was true woman; one in whom
The springtime of her youthful years
Had never lost its fresh perfume,
Though knowing well that life hath room
For many blights and many tears.
Blessing she was; God made her so;
And deeds of week-day holiness
Fell from her noiseless as the snow,
Nor did she ever chance to know
That aught were easier than to bless.
No simplest duty was forgot;
Life had no dim and lowly spot
That did not in her sunshine share.

She joyed in little kindnesses
Which most leave undone, or despise;
For naught that sets one's heart at ease,
And giveth happiness or peace,
Was low-esteemed in her eyes.

A full, rich nature, free to trust,
Truthful, yet never sternly just,
Impulsive, earnest, prompt to act,

LOYAL TEMPERANCE LEGION CELEBRATION

The Loyal Temperance Legion held its annual Christmas entertainment in the W. C. T. U. rooms, last night, under the direction of Mrs. Henry Thomas, superintendent, assisted by Mrs. George B. Staats, and Henry Thomas. The rooms were attractively decorated for the occasion. The program comprised the singing of Christmas carols, recitations, exercises and dialogues, and a feature was an interesting address by Mrs. M. D. Tomlinson, president of the W. C. T. U.

During the evening prizes were awarded to the members for faithful attendance. Miss Theodosia Vail received a gift for not missing a meeting during the past year, while a number of other children were remembered for not missing more than a few days or a week.

After the entertainment there was a distribution of gifts to the children, including candy and oranges. This was in charge of Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. Staats. The latter provided the oranges. Mrs. C. W. Grim presided at the piano during the exercises and Mr. Thomas led in the singing of the carols.

HELD XMAS EXERCISES AT MONROE AVE. CHURCH

The Christmas exercises of the Sunday-school of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church were held last night in the church. Walter McGee, the superintendent, was in charge. Rev. Charles S. Kemble, the pastor, made the opening prayer.

The members of the school gave a cantata entitled "Santa Claus Surprised." There was a cast of forty-two and the affair was greatly enjoyed and enthusiastically received by the large audience.

The cantata was filled with catchy music and the performers filled their parts to perfection. The songs were well sung, the costumes were pretty and the marching and countermarching on the stage was cleverly executed.

The decorations were in chage of John McCormack. He transformed the church into a canopy of green, with innumerable Christmas bells, suspended in all parts of the room. The stage illuminations were by George Henry Fisher, Jr. Two small Christmas trees were on the stage, and in the general decorative scheme the figures 1909 and 1910 were displayed by electricity. In the work of decoration and stage work, John J. Pried and Lewis Mulford assisted.

Miss Charlotte Aldrich was the pianist and trained the children and had general supervision of the cantata, for which she deserves much credit. The cast:

"Mother Goose," Louise McCormack; "Santa Claus," Herbert Hillman; "Jack Frost," Robert Lee; "Evergreen Girls," Sophia LaPoldevin, Stella Rink, Lillian Harris, Ethel Runk, Viola Stewart, Mrs. Gilbert and Mrs. Shreve; "icicles," Arthur VanPelt, Clarence Drake, Charles Goodwin, Walter Walters, "snow flakes," Eleanor Manning, Madeline Bunnell, Ethel Peck, Evelyn Peck; "holly girls," Alice Williver, Bessie Gunzelman, Jennie Gray and Louise Praed; "mistletoe girls," Annie Lee, Elsie Organ, Clara Lee and Christian Lude.

Robert Lee, as "Jack Frost" in his song, "Way Off in Christmas Land," made a decided hit. Herbert Hillman, as "Santa Claus," in his song, "I'm a Busy Man," received several rounds of applause. After the performance boxes of candy and oranges were distributed, under the direction of Blanchard E. Randolph, John Grey and Fred Jacobs.

CALVARY BAPTIST CHURCH HOLDS SPECIAL SERVICES.

Calvary Baptist church did its share toward helping the poor colored people of the city on New Year's day, contributing no less than sixty-three dinners to poor people who enjoyed their repasts in the church and sending out twelve good dinners to those who were unable to be present in the church. G. W. Bailey, the pastor, was assisted in the philanthropic work by a committee composed of Mrs. Robert Silf, Mrs. Fernanda Brown, Mrs. Daniel Robson and Mrs. Twyne.

The week of prayer in the church will be continued until and including Friday night, services beginning at 8 o'clock each evening. Sentence prayers and hymns make up the program and the attendance is growing at each meeting.

THE WEATHER.

Snow tonight and Thursday; rising temperature; increasing east winds.

MORE SNOW AND COLDER

Such is the Weather Forecast for Tonight and Tomorrow.

ICE CUTTERS ARE VERY BUSY.

Another Cold Wave Coming From the West—Thermometer Two Above This Morning.

According to "Weather Prophet" John Neagle, there will be snow tonight and Thursday; rising temperature; increasing east winds. The maximum temperature reported was 36 degrees above zero, while the minimum temperature was two above zero at 8 o'clock this morning.

While many believed that this morning was the coldest of the winter, the official record shows that this was not so. On New Year's morning Sergeant Neagle's thermometer registered one degree below zero. The majority of householders found it exceedingly difficult to keep warm last night and it was a question of stoking the furnaces and stoves to the limit to keep comfortable. There were numerous reports this morning of frozen water pipes and other troubles, incident to winter weather.

The local ice dealers have been "making ice while the cold lasts" and large forces of men have been engaged in cutting ice during the past few days. It is the general belief that the dealers will obtain a full supply of ice this winter and there should not be a shortage next summer. Tier's ice-houses have been filled, while rapid progress is filling the ice-houses in the valley is being made.

The worst is yet to come, according to the weather man, for he announces a blizzard for tonight. The storm was central last night over Missouri, with exceedingly heavy snows in the upper Mississippi valley, and such high winds over the lake region and Ohio Valley. If it maintains schedule time it will reach here this evening, having increased in intensity, the Washington bureau says:

But with the snow today a rising temperature is promised and tomorrow, to add to the mess, it may rain. In eleven hours following midnight on Monday the temperature dropped 22 degrees or 2 degrees an hour. It was 5 degrees higher at 5 o'clock yesterday morning than at 9 o'clock and the degree lower at noon than at 9 o'clock. A bright sun shining in a sky without a blem'sh had no effect at all, apparently on the downward progress.

HACQUER TO JOIN IN HUNT FOR SOUTH POLE

Archibald Hacquer, formerly a local newspaperman, but now connected with the city news department of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, is contemplating a trip to the South Pole next spring.

While doing newspaper work in the Quaker City, Hacquer gained the friendship of Prof. Wetherill, the noted navigator, who was a warm supporter of Dr. Cook in the latter's contentions that he discovered the North Pole.

Prof. Wetherill recently received a proposition from the American Philanthropic Society to lead an expedition to the Antarctic in quest of the South Pole, which is now under consideration. If the proper amount of funds is forthcoming the trip will be made.

Prof. Wetherill proffered "Colonel" Hacquer a position as one of his secretaries, which the latter has decided to accept, if the plans for the trip materialize.

Firemen Nipped by Cold.

With the thermometer registering three degrees above zero at 1:57 o'clock this morning, the fire department responded to a telephone call from the home of Mrs. Sallie Robinson, at 61 Oxford avenue. A small fire was discovered in one of the rooms, but the blaze was extinguished before the arrival of the firemen.

Hope Chapel Services.

At Hope chapel, the week of prayer will be continued tonight at 8. Albert M. Brodt, teacher of the Y. M. C. A. Bible class, will be the leader and the topic will be "Love, the True Spiritual Life." Tomorrow night's service will be preparatory to the communion and will be led by the pastor, Rev. L. R. Howard.

Small Yard Fire.

A fire in a pile of debris in the yard of Henry C. Irons, on West West Seventh street, called the fire department out yesterday morning. There was no damage.

MISS JEANETTE KRAFFERT WEDS GEORGE M. HENNE

Miss Jeanette C. Kraffert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Kraffert, of 520 Woodland avenue, and George M. Henne, of Titusville, Pa., were quietly married at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon at the home of the bride's parents. Only the immediate members of the bride's family were present. Rev. Morgan Ashley, rector of St. Stephen's church, performed the ceremony.

After a wedding trip the couple will reside at Titusville, where the groom is in business. The bride is a communicant of St. Stephen's church, where she has been a regular attendant. Owing to the fact that her mother is an invalid, no one outside the family witnessed the ceremony.

"JACK TAR" WEARREN OFF ON LAST TRIP

"Jack" Wearren, of the U. S. Battleship Connecticut, returned to duty today after spending a ten day furlough with his parents at 211 Rock avenue. The Connecticut sails today for Cuban water for a six months' cruise. Wearren's term of enlistment will expire in four months and at its completion he will return to this city and engage himself with civic affairs.

During his absence Wearren has been around the world. He started his sea-going on the Battleship Kansas when she entered the commission. It was on that section that Wearren encircled the globe. On November 15 he was transferred to the Connecticut, a sister ship of the Kansas, and flag ship of the squadron.

During his travels Mr. Wearren said he was greatly impressed with the hot pace being set by Americans in Australia and Japan. In the former country, he declared, that hundreds of Yankees are getting rich in sheep raising.

TROLLEYMEN MAY STRIKE; CONFERENCES COMING

That a strike is imminent among the motormen and conductors of the Public Service railroads is the opinion of those who have watched the developments of the past few days immediately following the announced voluntary increase in the pay of the men. Many of the officers of the unions with which the men of this Corporation are affiliated are openly declaring that they want certain concessions or there will be a tie-up which will affect the entire service in this State and which may extend into others.

It is reported that Revin Orr, international treasurer of the union, is decidedly against a strike of the men, but says that it will amount to that unless President McCarter does not recede from the antagonistic position he has taken in regard to the claims of the men. These latter want a ten hour day with consecutive hours and a uniform wage of twenty-five cents an hour. The control exercised by the officers of the unions has been the only cestopal in the radical action recommended by the men two months ago. W. D. Mahon, the national president of the trolleymen's union, is expected here shortly and will hold conferences with the men in various places looking toward a settlement of the questions at issue.

Salvation Army Meeting.

There will be a special meeting at The Salvation Army hall tomorrow night at 8 o'clock, conducted by Adjutant and Mrs. Jackson and four members of their family. Owing to illness, Mrs. Jackson was not able to be present at the meeting on Sunday night. Therefore this will be in the nature of a welcome meeting to Mrs. Jackson. A cordial invitation is extended to all to be present.

Bolton Hall Acquires Farm Land.

Bolton Hall has purchased nineteen acres of land opposite the Murphy farm at Stony Hill, New Providence township, from Robert G. Rogers and Charles Burgmiller, and forty acres from William Henry Rogers and brothers. The latter property adjoins the nineteen acre tract.

TRADE BOARD'S TICKETS

Two Factions Striving for Supremacy at Annual Election.

MEETING IS TOMORROW NIGHT.

One Ticket Is Rushmore and Crane —Jeffrey Leads the Other— Herr Candidate For Re-election.

Not for years has there been so much interest taken in a meeting of the Board of Trade than that scheduled for tomorrow night, when officers will be elected for the coming year. There are two tickets in the field and the opposing factions each claim victory in advance.

Edmund Rushmore, now vice president, is the candidate of the present administration to succeed the president, H. W. Marshall. This faction calls itself the "conservatives" and in addition to Mr. Rushmore for president, its ticket contains the name of J. Henry Crane for secretary. Mr. Rushmore is a real estate broker and Mr. Crane a lawyer.

The other faction's ticket is headed by Williar Jeffrey, "the bungalow man," who is a candidate for Mr. Marshall's position. The present secretary, A. S. Herr, is a candidate for re-election. Mr. Herr wishes it understood that he is a candidate of no faction; that he rests his case with the members on his record and that he is as ever pledged only to the best interests of the community. He says that his vote for the presidency will be cast for Mr. Jeffrey, but that he desires his friends to know that he has not solicited any votes and will abide by their impartial decision.

"I have consented," said Mr. Crane today, "to become a candidate for the secretaryship. If elected, I will work hard to advance the interests of the board. I deplore factional fights, but at the suggestion of Mr. Rushmore, I have consented to become his running-mate. There is real work for the board to do in a conservative and non-sensational way this coming year and if I can help I will gladly do so, either as an officer or a rank and file member."

The report is current that Mr. Marshall may consent to become a candidate for re-election and that in that event Mr. Rushmore's friends will vote for him.

William Jeffrey said today that he was not a factional candidate. He added that he had been requested by his friends to run for the office and that he had not neither would he solicit any member's vote.

MRS. DOBBINS TELLS OF CENTRAL AMERICA

A paper full of interest on Central America was presented by Mrs. Walter C. Dobbins at the meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist church held yesterday afternoon in the lecture room. Mrs. Dobbins pointed out at the opening of her paper the ease with which the republics of Central America can be reached, only three days from New Orleans, the variety of soil and climate, their fruitfulness and geographical importance, as they include the isthmus of Tehuantepec in Mexico and Panama in South America, the short commercial route between the Pacific and Atlantic oceans.

*Mrs. Dobbins described the popu*lation made up of pure blooded Indians, pure whites, negroes, Spanish and Indian and Creole half breeds, most of whom are superstitious, ignorant and slothful. Education, she said, was free, but very few children were enrolled except in Salvador, where attendance at school was obligatory. Roman Catholicism, she alleged, was the prevailing faith but mixed with remnants of African heathenism.

The lack of mission work among a people so sadly needing the benefits of the gospel was one of the features of Mrs. Dobbins' story. In Gautemala, with her two millions of people, she said, were two missionaries from the Presbyterian Board who had labored in Gautemala City since 1882. She concluded her paper with showing how broad a field for mission work was offered by the four millions of people living in the Central American Republics, especially pleading for the medical missionaries who could accomplish the best results.

A devotional service, led by Miss Mary Thickstun, preceded the paper.

Buys the Palmer Tract.

William Jeffrey has purchased the Palmer property, about twenty-three acres, located on Sherman avenue, near the property recently sold by Charles Lyman.

M'INTYRE'S CONCERT NEXT MONDAY NIGHT

With a piano quartet and an assisting artist of international reputation assured, the fourth and last of the McIntyre Chamber Music Evenings, to be given next Monday evening, at the High School Auditorium, promises to be the most successful and charming of the series.

Contrary to the precedent long established by Joseph McIntyre, Plainfield's well known pianist, his trio will be augmented by a viola and this makes available for the artists to present Beethoven's op. 16 for four instruments, piano, violin, viola and 'cello. Another announcement of equal moment and one which will doubtless create a pleasureable thrill among all devotees of music *living here, has to do with the re*appearance in Plainfield of Miss Christine Miller, the contralto whose exquisitely rich and resonant voice has been heard in all the principal cities of the country.

*Miss Miller is a resident of Pitts*burg, educated abroad and her voice cultivated by the most finished masters. Hers has been one uninterrupted series of successes since she first made her appearance upon the concert stage. It will be recalled that Miss Miller's first appearance occurred at the song recitals held under Mr. McIntyre's auspices at the home of Mrs. Stephen A. Glana last March. Recently she sang before the Author's Club in Chicago, an organization which claims to be the most discriminating and critical in the New World. Miss Miller, also, has appeared for three successive years at the annual concerts of the great Bach Mass in B minor, which is given every year in Chicago.

The personnel of the quartet for Monday evening's concert is: Joseph McIntyre, piano; Arthur Lichstein, violin; Otto K. Schill, viola, and Vladimir Dubinsky, cello. Mr. Lichstein, it will be remembered, was to have appeared at the concert at which Signor Campanari, of the Metropolitan Opera House forces, created such a furore here, but, due to illness, cancelled his engagement at the eleventh hour. Mr. Lichstein will participate in the quartet and later he will be heard as soloist. Mr. Schill is from Newark and be is regarded as one of the foremost masters of the viola in this country. Altogether the concert promises to be a memorable one and already many demands have been made for extra seats by the patrons.

Trolley Kills Horse.

A hore valued at $300 and belonging to the Hand Storage and Express Company, was struck by an Arlington avenue trolley on Randolph road last night and died later as a result of its injuries. The accident occurred at 10 o'clock, the team being on its way to this city from Matawan. After being hurt the horse continued its journey, but when the Park avenue railroad bridge was reached, the animal dropped dead.

Will Hold Union Services.

Union services of the three M. E. churches will be held tonight in Vincent chapel, when Rev. C. S. Kemble, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, will speak. Tomorrow night the service will be held at the Monroe avenue church, and Rev. Ora J. Fridy will speak, while on Friday night Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson will speak at the meeting at Grace M. E. church.

MATCHES FOR AMUSEMENT

Children's Love for Pyro-display Leads to $4,000 Loss on Park Avenue.

STUBBORN FIGHT OF FIREMEN.

Elmer E. Gulick's House Gutted By Flames, But Furnishings Are Saved.

Fire, which originated by children playing with matches, almost totally destroyed the home of Elmer C. Gulick at 1146 Park avenue yesterday afternoon. It was one of the most stubborn blazes to fight in the history of the local fire department. Practically all of the furnishings of the house were saved, but the damage to the building is fixed at about $4,000 by Fire Chief Doane. The flames executed most of the damage to the upper portion of the dwelling. The house is owned by a Mr. Voorhees, of New Brunswick, and the loss is covered by insurance.

The firemen received a setback in checking the flames because of a delay in sending in an alarm from the box. Fire headquarters received its first report of the fire in a telephone message from Mrs. W. E MacClymont, who resides on Woodbine avenue, or opposite the Gulick house.

The fire got its start in a room on the southwest side of the second story, where Mr. Gulick's children were playing. It is evident that the children started the fire, became frightened, and went down stairs without giving an alarm, thus giving the flames an excellent opportunity of making a headway.

When the department reached the scene nearly all of the second floor was at the mercy of the fire. Flames were shooting up and down and through the studding and weatherboards on all sides and also through the roof. Being hard to get at they *stood up with spirit despite the ef*forts of the fire fighters.

The firemen, however, labored persistently with three streams of water, and assistance from the chemical apparatus, and in one hour the flames were under control. The alarm was sounded at 3:45 o'clock and the recall was made at 5:40 o'clock.

All of the furniture was removed from the house across the street to the MacClymont home before the arrival of the fire engines by a carpenter, who was engaged at work at the latter place. Mr. Gulick's children and housekeeper were also taken care of there.

A striking feature of the fire was that repairs to the fire whistle had just been completed when the alarm was turned in.

INDEPENDENT SOCIAL CLUB IS ORGANIZED.

At the regular monthly meeting in the Babcock building last night the Independent Social Club closed its charter list with a membership of twenty-two. Considerable business was transacted. The committee appointed to prepare a list of names from which one was to be selected for the club, made its report, but the changing of the club's name was deferred until a special meeting Tuesday night.

The charter member list follows: George H. Cole, F. C. Denton, William Dorman, Harry Doty, Arthur J. Dow, James Downing, George Dunavan, William J. Hartpence, H. Hoffman, Edward Koechlein, E. R. Honeyman, William Hoffman, James Kenny, Roy Lee, Gustav Meisner, Wallace Morton, Archibald Niles, James Niles, D. Rogers, George Sierah, Albert Trotter, N. J. Wiley, G. Wilson, R. Bird.

STAGS AND THEIR ANTLERS.

A stag and his antlers are almost as inseparable in the mind of the sportsman as in the mind of one to whom deer-stalking is nothing but a name, says The Country Gentleman. Yet there are not only hornless varieties of the family cervidae, but not a few members of the great red deer group are found to have been denuded by Nature as well as by accident of the crowning glories of their race and sex.

Stags without horns are called Hummie stags, and they are far from being the helpless creatures one might reasonably have imagined them. They have been known to fight and to conquer heavily antlered stags of their own weight. The appendages known as antlers are so far from being universal among the cervine tribes that naturalists prefer to rely upon other characteristics in their definitions of the several families and groups. But a hornless stag is no far-in exception to the system of judging the merit of the stalkers' spoil by the character of the head and the number of tines or points is certainly the best that could be devised.

Many years ago an antler with fifteen points was dug up from an Irish bog. Assuming an equal number on the antler that was missing, the mighty hart to which the horns belonged would have been a stag not of twelve or thirteen, but of thirty points. Such prizes are not, however, now within reach of the tip of the Scottish deer stalkers, still less will they be able to send to the stuffers such magnificent examples as those which may be found in many an old German schloss.

The continental deer have always been allowed to exceed than the British, a fact which may partly be accounted for by their having access to much better feeding than they are able to procure in Scotland. But remembering that heads of eighteen and twenty points have been killed in this country, it seems quite reasonable that any head with tines in excess of the "royal" should be distinguished by a special designation.

There is some difference of opinion as to what constitutes a royal hart. Strictly speaking the head should not only possess "brow," "bay" and "tay," and three on the top, but these last three—the "sur royals," as they are called—should form cups in order to qualify the head as "royal." The more generally accepted proposition that a royal head is a head of twelve tines, is however, also the most convenient in the awarding of honors where honors are due.

PSYCHE BOWS.

They're lovely.
They are dainty.
The bow is of tulle.
It is worn at the throat.
It is caught with a jeweled clasp.
This clasp usually is more or less in butterfly form.

Hence the name which indicates Psyche, or the soul.

An exquisite little affair is but a string of tiny pearls bent into butterfly form. It costs $62.

A New Danger.

"I was fined a hundred dollars and costs this morning," said the owner of the aeroplane, sadly.

"What for?" queried his friend.

"My chauffeur lost control of the machine, and it bumped into and smashed some fellow's air castle," answered the high flier.—Chicago News.

CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL AT CHILDREN'S HOME

The annual Christmas festival at the Children's Home was held Thursday afternoon, when the large and handsome tree was lighted by electricity, and the members of the board of managers provided lots of good things for the children. Among those present yesterday were the children of the Home, as well as former members of the family, who returned for the celebration. A turkey dinner was provided for thirty, under the direction of Mrs. Martin L. Cooley, assisted by Miss Ella Serrell, Mrs. E. E. Farvin and Mrs. C. E. Horn.

Through the generosity of many friends, lots of good things were provided the children. The girls received dolls and the boys were presented with games, while there was a general distribution of candies, pop-corn, etc., as well as articles of wearing apparel. One society in Plainfield sent a large number of toys. In all about $60 in cash was received for the work. This afternoon the children have been invited to a home of one of the interested women and a good time will be provided for them. The board of managers as well as the children are grateful for the many kind acts of friends as well as for the gifts.

TRAVELING IN A "KAJARAH."

The kajarah, a traveling carriage of Persia, consists of two cage-like boxes, suspended one on each side of a mule, says Youth's Companion. The interior of these boxes sometimes boasts a little low seat, but as a rule is innocent of any such luxury. In "Behind the Veil in Persia and Turkish Arabia," Mrs. M. E. Hume-Griffith tells of these carriages and of the troublous experiences of their occupants. Two persons of about the same weight must sit one on each side, or the result is disastrous.

I remember once, she writes, being with a large caravan. In one of these kajarahs was traveling a government official and his wife. He was very tiny, she was quite the reverse, the result being that the little man was generally up in the air, while the opposite side of the kajarah was weighed down nearly to the ground.

They made all manner of experiments in their endeavor to strike the balance, gathering stones and depositing them in the lighter side, tying bags of flour on the outside of the kajarah, but all of no avail. At last, in disgust and anger, the woman jumped out without giving her husband any warning. The result, to the onlookers, was ludicrous.

The wife refused all that day again to enter the kajarah, *preferring to walk, till one of the mule*teers offered her a seat on the top of one of the baggages mules. Her husband was soon balanced with stones picked up by the wayside, and traveled for the rest of the day in peace and comfort. At the end of the stage, however, his wife would not speak to him or cook his dinner for him, and the man came to one of my husband's assistants, and begged him to act as mediator. Even among Moslems there are some strong-minded women.

I have traveled many miles in one of these kajarahs, and found them very comfortables and restful, even after riding for hours. When traveling by night, I have slept for hours at a stretch in one of these kajarahs, the steady, measured walk of the mule favoring slumber. Some times, however, the monotony is broken by the mule suddenly stopping to take a drink, and you find yourself deposited on the ground, shot out like an arrow from a bow.

An Irreparable Loss.

"What has happened to me?" asked the patient when he had recovered from the effects of the ether, relates the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"You were in a trolley car accident," said the nurse, "and it has been found necessary to amputate your right hand."

He sank back on the pillows sobbing aloud.

"Cheer up," said the nurse, patting him on the head, "you'll soon learn to get along all right with your left hand."

"Oh, it wasn't the loss of the hand itself that I was thinking of," sighed the victim. "But on the forefinger was a string that one of the girls around it to remind me to get something for her this morning, and now I'll never be able to remember what it was."

New Factory at Lincoln.

The Bongartz Company, of New York, manufacturers of automobile accessories, have purchased at Lincoln a plot of ground containing 100,000 square feet upon which they will erect a plant, costing $10,000 for the manufacture of specialties. This makes the second manufacturing company to locate in Lincoln this year. The American Cement Tile Manufacturing Company completed their main building and began operations December 1.

Great Day for the Office Boy.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 9, 1910.

Topic.—Bringing others to Christ. Who should do it? How is it done?—John 1. 5-42. Command; by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

Bringing others to Christ is the most important subject that can concern the mind of one who has himself found Christ. Having been found, we should become seekers. If a man who had been lost when he was a child should live in a community where a child was lost, we can readily understand how deeply interested in the search for the child he would be. Having once been lost, but found, we should be deeply interested in seeking souls that are still lost. Moreover, Christ's example inspires us to this work. He died to draw others unto Him that they might be saved. "I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." "The Son of Man came to seek and save the lost." Still further, Christ's supreme mission to His church is to bring the unsaved to Him. The Holy Spirit could convert all men without man's help, but God has graciously given us a part in this great work of leading souls to Christ.

There is no question, therefore, as to who should do this work. It may be answered in one word—Christians. But not all Christians can do it by personal work, as did Andrew and Philip. Some Christians have the tactfulness to lead others to Christ, but many others have not. It is well to employ the personal work, but not too much. Many are thus made to feel a duty resting upon them to speak to others when they are totally unfit and do more harm than good. Where there is no ability there is no responsibility. We need today to emphasize the church as the supreme place where men are led to Christ. Pulpit preaching should be and is the supreme power under the blessing of the spirit of God for the conversion of sinners. If we think that the personal conversation of perhaps one absolutely unfitted for such a work is superior to the message of the pulpit we are vastly mistaken. Yet this is the tendency of today. Personal work is overemphasized, and many plunge in who should be the last people in the world to speak to any one else upon such a subject. If all such would lead others to the church and attend the church faithfully themselves better results would be obtained.

Under this topic Andrew and Philip are the usual illustrations selected. But all men are not Andrews and Philips. An Oxford Bible with a few passages marked in it does not make a soul winner, and the great pity is that Acts II is not more frequently taken as an illustration of leading others to Christ. There Peter in one sermon led 3,000 to Christ. But today hand to hand work is emphasized. It is, however, under the personal work that fewer converts are made directly through preaching. Men think that some one must see them and talk with them, and these some ones very often fail to accomplish the purpose desired. But few Christians and many Christians are competent to lead others to Christ. Yet more emphasis today should be placed upon the church and preaching as the supreme place and method of leading souls to Christ. If they are unfaithful in the midst of the multitudes paid the men should be equal to those paid in any other part of the State. This would obviate the feeling that exists among the men that their salaries are not commensurate with the duty performed.

In conclusion Chief Kiely thanks the citizens who have given him loyal support in the discharge of the duties of his department and refers to the able assistance rendered by City Judge William Runyon and assistant Prosecutor Walter Hetfield, Jr. The Municipal Court board also come in for a mark of appreciation from the chief. He also paid a high tribute to the men under him who have so efficiently guarded the public welfare.

MISS JULIA D. LEMATTY
G. H. LEIVERS' BRIDE.

Miss Julia D. LeMatty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John LeMatty, of West Fifth street, and George Howard Leivers, of Philadelphia, were married at 8 Wednesday night at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, performed the ceremony in the presence of a small company of relatives and friends.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Grace LeMatty, as bridesmaid, while Harry Leivers, brother of the groom, was the best *man. After the ceremony, congratu*lations were offered and supper served. After spending a short time in Pennsylvania, the couple will reside here. The groom is employed at the Hall Signal Company works at Garwood.

Busy Papa.

"Mamma," asked little 3-year-old Freddy, "are we going to heaven some day?"

"Yes, dear, I hope so," was the reply.

"I wish papa could go, too," continued the little fellow.

"Well, and don't you think he will?" asked his mother.

"Eh, no," replied Freddy, "he could not leave his business."—Tit-Bits.

John Coyle Receives Tapestry.

John Coyle, of West Frost street, has received the handsome piece of tapestry, which was made by the Sisters at the College of Mt. St. Mary and which has been in possession of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus. The tapestry, representing a woman, is 2x6 feet and is a work of art, and greatly admired.

Bible Readings.

Isa. iii, 3-7; iv, 1-7; Ps. lxxiii; Dan. xii, 1-3; Prov. xi, 30; Matt. xxvii, 19, 20; Luke xv, 1-10; Acts ii, 36-41; iv, 31-33; Jas. v, 19, 20.

Spiritual Communion.

While we may not enter into physical communication with the loved ones in glory, there is a mystical communion of saints in which souls beyond the horizon and souls on earth may enter into fellowship with each other, a spiritual communion dependent upon the emotions of the soul, which will make us braver, patient and eager to be worthy of them who have gone on before.—Rev. Madison C. Peters, Baptist, New York.

Age of Unbelief.

In this day and age of the world many people do not believe in sound doctrine for salvation from sin, therefore it is a great temptation for the pastors to preach those things which they like to hear.—Rev. E. G. Cryer, Aurora, Ill.

OVERSEER OF THE POOR REPORT FOR THE YEAR

Overseer of Poor Alexander Ayers' report was especially gratifying, as it showed that through the successful operation of the city farm resulted a net saving of $1,200 in the maintenance of the city almshouse over the expenses of last year. As a result of the excellent crops on the farm this item was held down to $3,137.56 during 1909.

The total disbursements of the poor department was $5,250.56. This amount includes the expense in maintaining the city home, and also $1,500 which was allotted to Muhlenberg Hospital for the care of indigent patients. At the present time there are fourteen inmates at the home, there were four deaths during the year. Persons claiming miscellaneous attention during the year number 1,207.

That the farm is sure to be a big money saver is shown by a few detail items in Mr. Ayers' report. The produce, fruits, etc., raised on the land was divided as follows: 1,000 bushels of vegetables and fruit; 1,950 bundles of cornstalks; 5,000 ears sweet corn; 100 pumpkins, 200 melons, 400 cucumbers, 300 peppers, 175 egg plant, 40 bushels apples, 278 dozen of eggs, 88 pounds butter and 100 chickens.

Appended to the report of the overseer of the poor was the annual statement of City Physician C. B. Lufburrow. During the year he made 153 visits to the poor and 102 visits to police headquarters. He also examined seven candidates for police jobs.

MORE MEN NEEDED FOR POLICE FORCE

*Chief of Police Kiely's annual re*port as presented to the Common Council Thursday gives the data for the workings of the department for the past twelve months. The total number of arrests for the year were 910 of which 676 were whites and 234 colored. The whites embroced 21 nationalities. A total of 57,400 reports were turned in by the various police officers. The total amount expended during the year including the salaries of all the officers was $30,-221.73.

In his recommendations for improvements in the department Chief Kiely suggests the increase of the force to make it adequate for the demands made upon it. Extra men are needed in the center of the city for the regulation of traffic and he also suggests that additional call boxes be installed.

Another important recommendation is made as to the time of labor for the patrolmen. The chief believes that eight hours is enough for any man to work and the salaries paid the men should be equal to those paid in any other part of the State. This would obviate the feeling that exists among the men that their salaries are not commensurate with the duty performed.

In conclusion Chief Kiely thanks the citizens who have given him loyal support in the discharge of the duties of his department and refers to the able assistance rendered by City Judge William Runyon and assistant Prosecutor Walter Hetfield, Jr. The Municipal Court board also come in for a mark of appreciation from the chief. He also paid a high tribute to the men under him who have so efficiently guarded the public welfare.

SHADE TREE COMMISSION REPORT FOR 1909

The Shade Tree Commission also presented its report to the Common Council Thursday and in it is found some food for reflection on the preservation of the elms of which the city is proud. The commissioners state that during the year the spraying of trees has been of such great benefit that most of the trees sprayed have been preserved. And trees on private property have been sprayed so that the spread of the elm beetle has been to some extent stopped. The commission would urge upon the owners of shade trees the necessity of spraying, thus helping to eliminate the pest.

The commission has been much interested during the past year in the proposed Greenbrook park, partly because of our identification with the city park, and partly on account of our serving with a committee of the Common Council in investigating and reporting on the plan.

We feel that it is unusual for a town to have offered to it an area of such beauty and landscape possibilities, and we trust that due consideration may be given the project, so that Plainfield may not be obliged, in the future, to pay high prices for inferior land for park purposes after it is too late to secure suitable tracts on reasonable terms.

The commission spent all the money appropriated and the income from the sale of wood, etc., i. e. $2,727.67 and there is a balance due MunsonWhitaker Co. for spraying elms $104.17. The cost of furnishing and setting out new trees was $435.67.

TWO 5,000 GALLON OIL TANKS FOR MFG. PLANT

The Spicer Universal Joint Company was given permission to install two five thousand gallon fuel oil tanks on its property by the Common Council at the meeting, Thursday night, all the members voting for the resolution except Mr. Mygatt and Mr. Clay. They objected on the grounds that more definite plans be drafted and approved by Corporation Counsel Marsh for the proper protection of the city.

In response Mr. Taylor said that the company agreed to install the tanks under the direction of Fire Chief Doane and to take every precaution against fire or accidents. Owing to the nature of the fuel oil which it is proposed to use, Mr. Taylor said he did not think there could be any danger. Mr. Mygatt amended the resolution to lay the matter on the table, but the amendment was lost and the original resolution adopted.

No action was taken regarding the application from the F. L. C. Martin Auto Company for permission to install a large gasolene tank on its property. Mr. Taylor said that he had made arrangements to have an expert from a large concern come to Plainfield and give the members a talk on the subject. He had learned that there is now a tank of 40,000 capacity in New York city. At Mr. Taylor's suggestion there will be a meeting of the Council as a committee of the whole, together with auto garage owners on Thursday night, January 6, when the expert will address them. He has also offered to assist in drafting proper specifications for the installation of such a tank as proposed.

Guilty.

On an assault and battery case tried in a Cleveland court the prosecuting witness testified at length that the defendant had knocked him senseless and had then kicked him for several minutes. "If this man's attack rendered you unconscious," demanded the magistrate, "how is it that you know he kicked you when you were down?"

This question seemed to floor the witness. He was lost in reflection for some moments; then, brightening he replied:

"I know it, Your Honor, because that's what I would have done to him if I'd got him down."

RECOMMENDATIONS OF FIRE CHIEF T. O. DOANE

The annual report of Chief T. O. Doane, of the fire department, presented to the Common Council Thursday, contains several recommendations, in addition to enumerating the strength of the department, both as to men and apparatus and horses. He states that there are now placed and in use 346 hydrants, twenty-four of which are four-way. The water pressure west of Richmond is stated to be about 75 pounds; throughout the Netherwood section about 30 pounds and east of Richmond street and north of South avenue the pressure will average about 60 pounds.

Chief Doane recommends that the city provide more water pressure, and if this cannot be done by the water company, then he says some means must be employed whereby this greater pressure may be obtained. He renews his request for a larger steamer on the ground that the water pressure is not sufficient for the city under present conditions.

It is further recommended that with the rapid development of motor propelled fire apparatus, and its installation in most of the fire departments throughout the country, that steps be taken to secure such apparatus for Plainfield. Chief Doane says that this kind of apparatus is no longer in the experimental stage. The request that a heater be placed in No. 1 Engine House to keep the water warm in the boiler of the steamer is renewed and also that more hydrants be placed on Front street, between Watchung and Central avenues.

The chief calls attention to the fact that the floor under the stalls in No. 1 Engine House needs immedi*ate attention*. Another important recommendation made by Chief Doane is that the wages of the regular firemen be increased. He says that at present the men are not receiving living wages, that the schedule of pay is now less than in any other city the size of Plainfield. He says it should be at least $1,000 a year after five years' service with a gradual increase of $50 a year thereafter until the salary reaches $1,200 a year.

Attention is called to the recent occupancy of the new engine house in the Netherwood section, and Chief Doane adds that he trusts that the city will see its way clear to build up the department during the coming year in keeping with the city's rapid growth. He thanks the police department, Mayor Fisk and the members of the Common Council for all assistance, and acknowledges the faithful work performed by the men of the department.

The report calls attention to the fact that a contract has been made with the Gamewell company for the installation of a six-circuit switchboard and repeater with necessary storage batteries at headquarters and recommends that the incoming Council will place all fire alarm wires underground.

The report also states that during the past year there were 313 alarms of fire as follows: 'Phone, 61; box, 42; verbal or still, 8; special, 1; false, 1. The causes of fire are reported as follows:

Chimney and defective flues, 23; woods, grass and trees, 21; debris, 11; stoves, 9; unknown, 9; locomotive sparks, 6; fireworks, 3; gas jet, 3; lamps, 3; children and matches, 3; lantern, 2; heater, 2; spontaneous combustion, 2; cigar, 2; automobile, 2; out of smoke, 2; candles, 2; oil stove, plumber, compound lightning, turpentine, paint and false one each.

The amount of duty performed by the department follows:

Small extinguishers 36; no duty, 32; chemical engine, 11; beaten out, 7; hydrant stream, 6; combination chemical, 5; hydrant stream and chemical, 5; small extinguishers, 3; chemical and hydrant, 3; pails water, 2; combination and small extinguishers, 1; steamer and hydrant, 1; thrown out, 1; total, 113.

The insurance and losses are as follows:

Loss on buildings, $6,406.50; insurance on buildings, $145,450; loss on contents, $5,601; insurance on contents, $147,150; total amount of insurance, $292,600; total amount of insurance collected, $11,312; total loss insured and uninsured, $12,-007.50; value of property involved: Buildings, $231,850; contents, $255,-600.

HOSIERY.

There was a time when women were satisfied to save the finest pair of black stockings and to stow away for best use the daintiest of shoes, but nowadays the question of hosiery agitates women as much as coat suits and evening hats.

The woman who has plenty of money buys silk stockings to match her gown and even indulges in designs embroidered over the instep. She cannot originate or transfer a design correctly, therefore she has a pattern stamped on the stockings by a competent person.

For the bride who is to be married in white there could be no more acceptable gift than white silk stockings. These may be plain, embroidered or enriched by inserts of a good quality of lace.

The "New Thoughters" have established a trust. They have gathered in one fold the heads of the various schools of philosophy, psychology, metaphysics and "progressive thought" in New York city, and the aim to men and apparatus and horses. LONG COATS ARE CUT ON STYLISH LINES.

Stre t suits of the two-piece variety almost invariably show the long coat over a skirt in comfortable walking length, and these long, well-cut coats over the short skirts have a style and grace never achieved by the limp, trailing skirts of the long coat tails of the directoire mode.

Colors are also more pleasing to the refined taste this winter. Only on afternoon costumes of the more dressy sort are the perishable lavender and berry shades seen. Good, honest dark grays, a deep, strong green, navy blue and a rich marine blue are the favorites for street suits, and these colors are seen in heavy materials like cheviots, wide-wale serges and diagonals and coarsely woven home spuns.

Often the diagonal weaves show welts of color on a ground of black, giving a very harmonious and pleasing tone. In other instances two shades of the same color in the popular two-tone effect are used.

These long coats are quite plain in style, the trimming consisting only of flat braidings and very large buttons effectively placed. Striking effects are produced by the manner of cutting, all sorts of oddly shaped gores and sections overlapping each other, and pleats being often set into the coat below the hip line. Many of the printzessen coats have these odd shapings in the gores, but these models are proverbially graceful and distinguished in line, and the unusual shape of the sections seems to produce exquisitely beautiful lines.

The printzess top coat is one most distinguished, and the beauty of these topcoats is that they may be worn in all sorts of weather over the daintiest frocks. One may don a delicate lavender or rosecolored cashmere or silk costume now and venture to a bridge party in the most inclement weather, secure in the certainty that one's frock is completely covered and protected by the long coat. The topcoats are smart, too. Every woman who can own two handsome out-of-door garments should possess one of these long coats, which will come in handily for automobile wear and for evening wear over light dresses, as well as for general street wear this winter.

If the suit coats are unique in cut, the topcoats far exceed them in this particular. Some of the Deauville coats seen at the Deauville-Trouville races were wonderfully put together, sections being lapped upon sections in bewildering manner. The French topcoats are mostly of homespuns in neutral colorings and two-tone effects in black with white. Among women seem to prefer the plain fabrics, like diagonal serges and mediums, for these long coats, and some of the models, fastening low at the hip and with smartly built lines, are extremely distinguished in style.

As colder weather approaches big fur collars are beginning to appear on the topcoats, huge, round, "bear" muffs matching the collars in most luxurious effect. These cloth coats, with handsome fur collars and muffs to match, are really smarter now than the cost of fur for walking and general wear, the all-fur garmen being reserved for a carriage or limousine wrap over evening costumes.

THE RULE OF THE ROAD.

"The first day in England," says an American traveler, according to Youth's Companion, "my heart jumped into my throat several times. Riding on top of a bus, the driver would always turn toward the left when we were about to pass another vehicle, and, although I knew that was the English custom, I held on tight and got shivers anticipating a collision every time. One morning I stepped up to a policeman at King's Cross, to get my bearings, *and as he was disposed to be talka*tive, I kept him company.

"Among other things, I asked him whether there was any rule requiring pedestrians to keep to the left. No, he told me, it was only for the roadway that the rule held.

"I then asked him why it was that in England they always turned to the left, whereas in all other countries the rule was to turn to the right.

"'Oh, it's very important to keep to the left,' he said seriously. I knew it was very important to observe the rule of the road, but why turn to the left?

"'Well,' he said, 'I'll show you. Now you come here,' and he led me to the middle of the roadway. 'You see,' he continued, 'how the traffic moves along the two sides of the road?'

"Yes, I saw, and a pretty sight it was, too—a string of all sorts of conveyances coming toward us on our right, and moving away from us on the left, as far as the eye could see.

"'Well, now—and he was very impressive—suppose you were driving along in the middle here, and another kerrige was coming the other w'y, and suppose you turned to the right, don't you see you would be getting in the w'y of all those vehicles?'

"Yes, I saw that.

"'Well, that w'y we always turn to the left.'

"I learned afterward that the 'bobby' expected a tip for all this information he had given me."

DAINTY HANDKERCHIEFS NEEDLE-WOMEN MAY MAKE.

There is a variety of ways in which dainty handkerchiefs can be made at home. Those with quarter-inch hemstitched hems with a line or two of drawn work border above it appeal to the woman who prefers this kind of stitchery to plain embroidery.

Books can be had giving full directions for different drawn work stitches. If one happens to own some of the handkerchiefs worked by the Mexicans the designs can be easily copied by anyone who is accustomed to such fancy work.

Another simple and easily made handkerchief of good style has a tiny embroidered scallop as shallow and delicate as possible. Run the scallop with darning cotton on both edges of the scallop and buttonhole closely and evenly.

The only other embroidery need be a small medallion in one corner, containing the initials of the person to whom the handkerchief is to be given. This can be a delicate floral wreath or some conventional scroll work, done in fine silk stitch.

If this seems too much trouble, small initials in block letters should be embroidered in one corner. It is important that every style of these hand-made handkerchiefs be marked, as it gives the individual touch and adds much to their appearance.

If there are to be half a dozen handkerchiefs for one person, two of each kind would afford variety. A handsome gift would be the tiny scallop described with block initials in one corner, all worked in color.

The mercerizer cottons can now be had to wash well, and in lovely shades. When the work is kept delicate and fine and soft blues, pink and lavender are used, such handkerchiefs are hard to tell from the imported ones that are in such favor with smartly dressed women. There is a tone of the old Alice blue that is especially good, to be preferred to baby or turquoise tones, says an exchange.

Plain hemstitched handkerchiefs without the drawn work border are *lovely, with a tiny wreath of forget*me-nots in the corner, or a slightly larger object in place of the same flower. It should be in the corner diagonally opposite the spray.

Handkerchiefs with edge of needle point are particularly good style just now. The edges of the handkerchiefs are first basted and the roll loosely buttonholed with stitches about an eighth of an inch apart.

Into five of these stitches make another row of loose buttonholing, then a row of three more stitches, then one to finish the point. After working the row of three it will be necessary to throw the thread in the opposite direction. Take several small stitches on the side of the point to bring the thread back to the first row, then make the second point in the same way.

Use a fine linen thread for this edging. Some persons do it with mercerized cotton, but the other wears better.

WARDS OF THE STATE ARE COSTING MILLIONS

New Jersey this year spent $1,807,195 for the care of *10,000 in*mates of its penal and charitable institutions, this sum representing a weekly per capita cost varying from $11.90 to $1.75. This is set forth in the annual report of George B. Wight, Commissioner of the State Department of Charities and Corrections.

The exact cost of the penal and correctional institutions of the State was $600,804, and of the charitable institutions, $1,206,390. This represents a net increase over the preceding year of $130,465, there being a decrease of $31,119 in the cost of the penal institutions and an increase of $160,574 in the cost of the charitable institutions. The total number of persons was 10,220, this being an increase of only five over the number cared for during the previous year.

Dr. Wight gives particular attention to the work of the Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Glen Gardner, of which he says:

"It is doing excellent work along the line marked out for it by law, but its object continues to be largely misunderstood by the public. Constant applications are being made by friends of tubercular patients suffering from consumption, and great is their disappointment when denied admission to the institution. But it *is not a hospital, and cannot be un*der the statute creating it. It is a sanatorium for consumptives cases and for these alone. Tuberculosis is declared to be a contagious disease, and if so the public safety demands that it receive public attention. Provisions should be made speedily for the erection of hospitals for advanced cases. But who shall erect these hospitals, is the question."

The concluding paragraphs of the report are devoted to a discussion of the subject of convict labor, and Dr. Wight renews his suggestion of former years that the earnings of prison labor, after the cost of conviction and board have been deducted, be paid to the families of the prisoners if they have families or to the prisoners themselves on their release.

GOVERNOR DEPLORES PUBLIC SCHOOL FADS

John F. Fort Very Rightfully Pleads for Sound Methods.

MAKE SURE OF THE THREE R's.

Our Free Educational System He Truely Says Has Become Top-Heavy—Gives Some Good Advice.

Declaring in his address that breakdown of the mind in latter years is frequently traced to the number of studies of young children; that he favors a return to the reading of the Bible in schools, and that the educational system is topheavy, Governor Fort created a stir at the State teachers' convention at Trenton Wednesday.

Governor Fort in part said:

"It is always a pleasure to me to listen at college, or other like gatherings, to the commendation and praise which is given to the professors by men who have long since been out of the institution. As we come to after life we realize more and more the force for good that the teacher has been to us. In the days of a quarter of a century or more ago there was less of rush, and I am inclined to think more of care, not only in business, but in the school life, and in practically everything else. In those days men were not in so great a hurry to get riches or to acquire an education. They did things thoughtfully and with due deliberation. The children were not pushed in the schools then as they are now.

"The number of books which children of tender age are seen to carry, and are known to be expected to study, in our time, makes one wonder whether it is not possible that the breakdown of the mind in after years, which so frequently occurs in our times, has come to had its inception in the school room.

"It is probably that at least two-thirds of all the scholars in our public schools finished their schooling at 14 years of age or younger. Beside the plain rudiments which are required to be taught by the statute, namely, reading, writing, arithmetic, spelling, English grammar and geography, children cannot do taught a knowledge of cooking, manual and physical training, drawing, music, nature study, Latin, Greek, psychology, astronomy and agriculture at the same time. Of course these latter things may be studied with advantage, but the child that leaves school thus early should be grounded in the rudiments rather than permitted to be moved into what might be called the advanced branches. If manual training is to come, it will have to come as a side study, along with the practical work which the child enters upon in his or her business in life.

"The public schools of our State have increased both in attendance and in expense very rapidly in the past 30 years. On every side the schoolhouse has been going up. At the end of the school year of 1901 the value of school buildings was about $17,500,000, and they had increased at the end of the school year of 1902 to about $24,000,000, being an increase in value of $10,000,000 in eight years, and represented by 2,052 school buildings. I question whether any other State in the Union can show such a remarkable increase in school property.

"This is neither the time nor the place to suggest modifications of law or change in system, but there are many changes, in my judgment, in our school system which can be made to advantage. It is top-heavy. There is a lack of concentration of responsibility. Boards and bodies are too large and should be reduced in size, both in the State and locally. It may be wrong, but there is a *feeling existent among the represen*tative men in the State, in the Legislature and elsewhere that improvement can be made in many directions in our public school system, which will give us better results for the expenditures we are making than we are now receiving. An outcropping of this feeling is represented in the Senate committee, which is now inquiring into the public school system and its operation, with a view to suggest corrections and to promote its efficiency. Have we not too much supervision with the State Board of Education, State superintendent, county superintendent, High School inspectors, supervising principals, principals, vice-principals and the supervisors of various branches? Should not the supervision be left rather to the localities than to its being forced by statute, or by powers higher up? Would it not be more desirable if the teachers were called together, more particularly in our larger cities, and conferred with and their opinion obtained and their influence felt? If the teachers felt that there was no risk in their gathering together and presenting their views to their local boards of education, and if in the doing so they differed with their supervisors, that no harm would come to them, do you not believe that better results would be obtained? No system of education will be satisfactory which does not leave the teacher in every department and in each grade of the school free to express his or her opinion and to criticise without fear of any personal results to follow, in case the opinion expressed was not in accord with that of the higher official. The strength of the public school system is in the teacher and not in the official that is over him."

MRS. KATHARINE WEISS NOW MRS. J. E. CHURCH

Mrs. Katharine Weiss Leland and James E. Church, of 243 Somerset street, were married at 7 Wednesday night by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, at his home on Central avenue. The ceremony was witnessed by a small company of relatives and friends. After the ceremony the couple left on a honeymoon and will reside at 243 Somerset street after January 6.

Mr. Church is prominent as a Sunday-school worker, being an active member of the First Baptist church and Sunday-school, and a teacher of a Bible class. He also holds the position of State superintendent of the Home Department of Sunday-school work, and represents "The Good Housekeeping" magazine. Both he and his bride have a host of friends and acquaintances. Mr. Church was a widower and the bride was a widow. Both have grown-up children.

OVERCOATS NECESSARY IN DISTRICT COURT

The temperature in the District court Thursday was low enough to cause the lawyers in the two cases which were tried to keep their overcoats on and whoop things up a bit to keep themselves warm. Only two matters for the consideration of the court came up and in these Judge Holland and Thomas Hesketh presided in the place of Judge William Newcorn, who was detained in Elizabeth on special cases.

Charles Ramey, represented by F. J. Blatz, recovered a judgment against Isaac Schrager on a contract for repairs with the Singer Manufacturing Co., for $17.29. Another suit brought by H. G. McVoy against H. H. Williams for work done in the latter's house, the contract for which was held by E. S. F. Randolph, brought about a peculiar state of affairs. Mr. McVoy, who was represented by V. W. Nash, Jr., will have to sue Mr. Randolph to recover the amount for which he sued Mr. Williams. All of which is a triangular fight for the sum of $43.

SERGEANT N. H. HORT 'BLOWS' CO. K. 'NON-COMS'

Sergeant Nathan H. Hort entertained the non-commissioned officers of Company K at dinner at the Waldorf Hotel Wednesday. Covers were laid for eight and Mr. Windham gave the boys a fine spread. It has always been Sergeant Hort's *practice to give the non-commission*ed officers a dinner once a year, and it is appreciated.

In connection with the dinner the non-commissioned officers' association held a short business meeting, when several matters of importance were discussed. It was decided to hold a Christmas tree entertainment *at the armory on January 10. Le*Roy DeCamp is chairman of the committee in charge.

Those present at the dinner last night were Sergeants Nathan H. Hort, O. R. Pearson, A. R. Phillips, George L. Apgar and A. H. Tranch, and Corporals James L. Niles, Arthur Dow and Samuel Rothberg.

"Now, here," says dad, "I'll let things go,
And lounge around and read a book."

Next day his wife's relations come,
To entertain them was his job;
And every day it was the same,
Of friends he always had a mob.

He dug the worms and minnows caught
That they all might a-fishing go;
He ran the naphtha launch and taught
The children how to sail and row.

He cleaned the fish and baited hooks,
To get the water was his chore;
He had no time to spend with books,
At night he slept upon the floor.

JOHN M. BETTMAN WEDS MISS WETZEL

Miss Mary Wetzel, sister of Charles H. Wetzel, of East Front street, and J. M. Bettman, also of this city, were quietly married at 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at Mr. Wetzels home. Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of which the groom is an officer, performed the ceremony.

The guests numbered about a dozen, and after the ceremony and congratulations a wedding supper was served. Later Mr. and Mrs. Bettman left for a honeymoon trip. They will reside in this city upon their return.

The invitations were limited owing to the illness of Mrs. Charles H. Wetzel. The bride formerly lived at Pottsville, Pa., but has been making her home here with her brother during the past two years.

STEPHEN M. STAATS BECOMES A BENEDICT

Miss Florence Minnie Pierson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar F. Pierson, and Stephen Monroe Staats, of this city, were married at 8:15 Wednesday night, at the home of the bride's parents, 1018 East Front street. There was an assemblage of about one hundred relatives and friends from New York, Brooklyn, Newark, Bayonne, Somerville, Raritan, New Brunswick, Martinsville, Dunellen and this city.

Rev. Lawrence R. Howard, pastor of Hope chapel, of which the bride is a member, performed the ceremony. The Episcopal marriage service was used.

The bride was gowned in ivory satin messaline, trimmed with chiffon embroidery and she carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lillies-of-the-valley. The bridesmaid was Miss Mabel Pierson, an older sister of the bride and she wore a gown of pink and white organdie over pink silk and carried a bouquet of Killarney roses. Oscar P. Pierson, a brother of the bride, was the best man and the usher was Albert Walter Pierson, also a brother of the bride.

Mrs. Ivan G. Pierson, of Newark, an aunt of the bride, played the Lohengrin wedding march, when the bridal party entered the parlors. The ceremony was performed beneath a bower of palms, southern smilax and ferns. The bride was given in mar*riage by her father, Oscar F. Pier*son.

The parlors were decorated with white carnations and greens and in the dining-room carnations, smilax and holly were used, while in the dining-room they consisted of pink carnations and greens. The decorations were arranged by Miss Lincoln.

After congratulations were exchanged upon the couple, an elaborate collation was served. The couple left later in the evening for a brief honeymoon, their destination being a secret. On their return they will reside with the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen O. Staats, of 130 West Second street.

In the exchange of wedding gifts among the bridal party, the groom gave the best man and usher pearl stick-pins. The bridesmaid received a pearl brooch from the bride. The bride also presented to her aunt, who played the wedding march, a silver belt buckle. The bride and groom presented diamond rings to each other.

Mr. and Mrs. Staats were the recipients of many handsome wedding gifts from relatives and friends, including a substantial check from the groom's parents. Mr. Staats holds a clerical position in the Mutual Life Insurance Company, of New York.

MISS DUCHINI DEAD AT 99 YEARS OF AGE

Miss Maria Duchini, aunt of Dr. *P. J. Zeglio, passed away at the lat*ter's home on Somerset street Wednesday, after an illness of two days. Miss Duchini was in her ninetyninth year, and while she enjoyed fairly good health for one of her age, she had been an invalid for the last two years.

Born in Switzerland in 1811, she came to this country about thirty years ago, and always made her home with her nephew. The funeral service was private.

NO MORE SLANG FOR THEM!

"For goodness sake, John," said Mrs. Medbury, according to the Boston Post, "be more careful in the slang you use around the house. I've been intending to speak to you about it for some time, but it got away from me."

"What's the kick?" demanded her husband, indignantly. "You don't hear me spilling any profanity or anything like that, do you?"

"No, but you will talk slang!" protested Mrs. Medbury, "and I'm getting into the habit so that I'm ashamed to talk to my friends. It's fierce. I mean, it's distressing!"

"I never noticed you talking slang," said Medbury. "Besides, everybody talks a little slang nowadays. What's the principal noise about?"

"There you go now!" said his wife, sharply. "You talk that way two-thirds of the time and I can't help falling for some of it myself—I would say, unconsciously assimilating *expressions from your conver*sation. When any of my friends call I'm in a nervous tremor all the time for fear I'll forget myself and make some kind of horrible break. They're not used to it."

"Oh, I guess you're not so bad," protested Medbury. "They can stand for anything you hand them without straining themselves. I'd like to see any of your set that you don't shape up with on the conversational thing when you put yourself to it."

"That's the trouble," went on Mrs. Medbury, "and that's why I wish you would cut out some of your slang. Then in time I could break myself of the habit. Only this afternoon Mrs. Miggles and Mrs. Jasper were here making arrangements about the lawn party at the church next week, and we got to talking about the servant girl problem. I told them how annoying Minnie had been and how we planned to let her go, and in my absent-minded way, what do you think it was that I said?"

"I couldn't hit it in a thousand years," said Medbury. "Come across with it."

"Well, I was so embarassed afterward I could scarcely talk to them," went on his wife. "I was telling them how Minnie was growing more impudent every day, and I said: 'I think she knows that I'm fixing to put the rollers under her.'"

Medbury pounded his knee with his open palm and shrieked with laughter.

Mrs. Medbury bit her lip and frowned. "You see?" she exclaimed. "That's the way it goes, and it'll all your fault. You've simply got to talk better English around the house, because I'm sure all the women I know are beginning to get wised up on me, and the first thing I know I'll find myself getting ditched—I *mean snubbed and ignored. It's real*ly a serious thing, John, and I don't see where you get such a big laugh out of it."

"Neither do I," admitted Medbury. "I'm trying to be serious, no matter how painful. You know I ain't there with that long-faced stuff very much, but I'm really going to try to help you out. I can see where it will help to get in touch with these dames that aren't Joseph to your line of talk, and it isn't right. I appreciate that. I'm going to chop."

"Oh, will you try, John?" exclaimed Mrs. Medbury, eagerly. "That's fine and dandy! We've simply got to frame it up some way, so we won't use so much slang. Don't you see it my way?"

"Surest thing! you know, kiddo!" exclaimed Medbury, enthusiastically. "You can count on me being there with my hair in a braid when it comes to the reform gag. Nothing but the purest wells of English undefiled for mine after this—just watch my smoke!"

"That's the real goods!" said his wife in delight. "Now I know we can put it over."

JERSEY CENTRAL COMES NEAR LOSING STATION

About seventy feet of the north side of the station of the Central Railroad of New Jersey at Communipaw was destroyed by fire Thursday. The blaze started in the brakeman's room, which was back of the station master's room and the women's waiting room, which are side by side and nearest to the train shed. In the rear of the brakemen's room were sleeping rooms used by train men. That part of the station is a one-story brick structure.

How the fire started is not known. Some one waiting in the station turned in an alarm, but his name was not learned.

The Jersey City firemen had a hard time reaching the station, as to do so they had to cross one of two bridges over the Morris Canal and then travel about a mile over railroad tracks, the station being surrounded by train yards. Two ferryboats that were at the slip turned streams of water on the flames and several Jersey Central tugboats also helped to drown out the fire. The Fire Department places the loss at about $10,000.

LACK BIBLE KNOWLEDGE

Rev. Dr. Eaton Says American's Ignorance is Creditable to Jungle.

HE PREDICTS GREATER UNITY.

Noted Clergyman Declares He Knows of Few Places Where Prayer Is Needed More Than in Wall Street.

Although he called prophecy a dangerous pastime, the Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, who resides at Watchung, told his congregation Sunday that the churches of America in 1910 might look forward to greater unity and an increase in the layman's activity. At the same time he said that Americans in the mass have a "knowledge of their church and of their Bible that would not do credit to jungle inhabitants."

"It is characteristic of our life today that we find everything unsettled, that matter into what region of thought we enter," he said. "This attitude is beneficial in many ways, yet we encounter difficulty in holding up clean cut issues and standing by them. There was a time when we believed fully in the Bible, taking every period and comma as the word of God. Now a perfect flood of light has been turned upon the Bible; the attitude of the mind toward it has changed and must change in every age.

"In the general question of the general Christianity of America we must consider a growing sense of unity among all the churches. The question is not of Protestantism as against all other beliefs, but solely of churchman against infidel.

"Looking forward into this year, what is there for you and me to take as the basis of our life? They say that down on Wall street we have not much time to pray, but I know of few places where they need it more. You men who have your places in the business world will place your faith in the Bible and in prayer. I think the Americans, no matter what they have done for economic or social progress, have a knowledge of their church and their Bible that would not do credit to jungle inhabitants. I am not speaking of the men only; I feel sure that if you asked the average small girl to turn to Deuteronomy she would look for it in the New Testament."

FREEHOLDERS DELAY ELECTING A COUNSEL.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders organized Saturday at Somerville and completed its work with the exception of electing a counsel. This office has been held by John A. Frech, a Democrat, for nearly a score of years. The new board is a tie politically, there being six Republicans and six Democrats. The Republicans decided to support all the old Democratic officers except the counsel and Joshua Doughty, re-elected director; Arthur P. Sutphen, clerk, and Joshua Doughty, engineer, without opposition. The Republicans nominated Hugh K. Gaston for counsel against Frech, who was again named by the Democrats. Gaston received six votes, Frech five and there was one blank. Four ballots were taken with the same result. Director Gibson ruled that there was no election.

It was decided to lay the matter of counsel over until the next meeting.

Director Gibson called attention to the power of the board to bond the county in the construction of stone roads. He said it was confronted with applications for nearly 200 miles of roads and had vowed to build about twenty. The county can spend only about $20,000 a year for roads.

The report of County Collector E. B. Allen showed receipts for the year of $570,851.07, and disbursements aggregating $535,272.60, leaving a balance of $35,578.47, with taxes due from various townships amounting to $8,148.40.

A report was presented on the cost of the new courthouse. The amount paid out for the building and all its furnishings was $289,600.34. The bonds issued and the premiums amounted to $287,059.40.

THEY GAVE CARD PARTIES ON EVE OF NEW YEAR.

Mrs. W. J. Hudson, of Somerset street, gave a card party to a number of friends there was an exchange of greetings, after which supper was served.

Than we dream or know;
Tenderer voices cheer us
Than we deaf will owa;
Never, walking Heavenward,
Can we walk alone.
Hand in hand with angels,
Some are out of sight,
Leading us unknowing
Into paths of light;
Some dear hands are loosened
From our earthly clasp,
Soul in soul to hold us,
With a firmer grasp.

They whose hearts are whole and strong,
Loving holiness,
Living clean from stain of wrong,
Wearing Truth's white dress,—
They unto no far-off flight
Wearily need climb;
Heaven to them is close in sight
From these shores of Time.

It lies around us like a cloud
That world we do not see;
Yet the soft closing of an eye
May bring us there to be.
Its gentle breezes fan our cheeks;
Amid our worldy cares
Its gentle voices whisper love,
And mingle with our prayers.
Dear hearts around us throb and beat,
Dear helping hands are stirred,
And pulses press the veil between
With breathings almost heard.
That silence, solemn, sweet and calm,
They have no power to break;
For mortal words are not for them
To utter or partake.
So light, so soft, so sweet they glide,
So near to tuch they seem,
They lull us gently to our rest,
And melt into our dream.
And in the hush of rest they bring
Tis easy now to see
How lovely and how sweet a change
The hour of death may be.
Dear souls around us! watch us still;
Press nearer to our side;
Into our thoughts, into our prayers,
With gentle promptings glide!
Let death between us be as nought,
A dried and vanished stream;
Your joy be the reality,
Our suffering life the dream.

Slain Man Buried at Last.

Newton, Jan. 4.—The body of Demeter Leleak, who was shot to death on Christmas night near Andover by a fellow workman, alleged to have been in the employ of Peter Leleak, was buried by P. B. Wintermute in the Andover cemetery Friday. The expenses of the burial were borne by the county at the order of Acting Coroner Jeptha C. Clark, of Andover, and the Freeholders in session Saturday allowed Mr. Wintermute $15 for his service.

An Unpleasant Reminder.

General Leonard Wood, at a dinner in Newport, praised a souffle, says the Washington Star.

"Good cooking is a boon to mankind," the general said. "We should none of us feel above it, none of us, men or women. I am rather in sympathy with the bitterness of Scroggs.

"Mrs. Scroggs, after a very unsatisfactory dinner, said, shrilly:

"'When you married me, young man, you didn't marry a cook!'

"'Well,' said Scroggs, and his tone was very bitter—well, you needn't rub it in.'"

Hope Chapel Celebrates.

The Hope chapel Sunday school was twenty-two years old Sunday and the event was marked by special exercises. After the lesson, G. Herbert Condict, superintendent, spoke briefly concerning the anniversary and introduced F. H. Andrews, one of the first officers of the chapel. He spoke of the founding of the chapel and of the generosity of some of the early members, and the good work accomplished during the existence of the chapel.

Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor of Hope chapel, has been invited to conduct week of prayer services at Atlanta University Ga., January 16-21, and has accepted.

MAYOR EXPECTS SEWERS

Borough's Executive in Message Dwells on Proposed Improvements.

MR. SMALLEY OUTLINES POLICY.

Favors Substitution of Commission for Freeholder Board—Advocates Public Park—Talks on Taxation.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley in his message delivered at the organization meeting of the Borough Council took an optimistic view of the bright outlook for the installation of a sewerage system shortly. The Mayor declared that in his opinion that the question of the location of the plant will be settled by the Council within ninety days.

Mayor Smalley slapped the freeholders mildly and advocated a law authorizing the county to be represented by a commission. Mr. Smalley spoke as follows:

"This being the annual meeting for the purpose of organization, it seems proper at this time for me to make some few remarks in reference to our work.

"I wish the people of this borough, and you of the Council in particular, to feel that I appreciate the effort to which I have been called. I realize perhaps more than any other man the responsibilities of this office. Our borough was formed something over twenty-five years ago, and I have had the pleasure of serving in this same capacity nearly one-third of the time, a very unusual distinction to be placed upon one person. I appreciate it and I expect to carry out the purposes of this office in conformity with the wishes of the people as closely as it is possible for me to so do, and with the support of this Council I may be able to accomplish this end.

"I am not going to detain you for any great length of time, but there are a few things that might be mentioned in connection with our borough's growth that are very important, I hope will be the limits of my term, and I fully believe that it will come about, that this borough will have installed a system of sewerage, which every man admits is very much needed. I am confident that within the next ninety days we will have the question of the location of our sewer system settled. I am confident that if this Council acts promptly, followed by the sewer commission, that before the end of the year we will have our proposed system of sewers well underway, and I am just as sanguine that if we do complete it, and we install a proper system, the property values will raise enough to justify the present assessment, and we will see a large number of the best people coming to live in what is known as the most beautiful building section anywhere in New Jersey. There is no good reason on earth why this borough should be held up in its growth if reasonable care is exercised by the authorities. Our property values and the general welfare demand that we keep pace with the times to that extent at least. While this great question is one that will be hard to so,ve, I believe that in the hands where it now rests, there will come a solution so satisfactory to the people, that at the expiration of two years, they will be ready to show that North Plainfield's government will compare favorably with boroughs of the same character.

"You gentlemen, realize, as well as I, that this is not an easy government to handle. If our forefathers had had the foresight to have placed the county line between Somerset and Union through the centre of Front street instead of through the centre of the brook, we would no doubt have been more prosperous, but we are limited in a great measure.

"We are as you know at the extreme end of Somerset county, where, with high valuation and a growing tax rate, we should all hope that in the near future, for the benefit of the county in general, that the law authorizing the county to be represented by a commission will be taken up and acted upon, and it is my belief that if this is done we will receive much greater benefits than under the present regime. I can say from my experience as a member of the county tax board going about the various townships, that the work of the board of freeholders is not in keeping with the progressive state of affairs which should exist.

"I regret that the establishment of a park for the borough has not met with the approval of the committee in charge. My opinion of that is, that if proper care can be used in laying out the territory in which that park would be located, it would not only be advisable but very profitable to this borough to locate the park in that territory and connect it and the upening up of new streets during the installation of the sewer system, would save more money than the park would cost. This matter will come up at a subsequent meeting and can be handled judiciously by the committee interested in looking after our sewer matters.

"I am handicapped somewhat in the discharge of my duties due to the fact that I am not going to appoint a corporation counsel at this time. For a long term of years former Senator Reed served in that capacity, and having framed the borough laws, he was very familiar with their provisions. I do not know that he would serve in that capacity again, but I regret exceedingly that he is not with us on this particular occasion in order that we might derive the benefit of his counsel.

"The sewer question is in the hands of the present commission, and it is being advised by Mr. Depue, of Newark, and I believe that it is good business to continue him in that capacity, and that it will eliminate many of our troubles within the Council.

"I am gratified to preside over the destiny of this borough because of the makeup of its governing body. I believe that the mayor of a borough or city, should preside, and should be held responsible for the business done by its Council in reference to all matters. This borough has had many men holding the office of mayor preceding my election, and I hope that when my term expires we will continue that same line of high standard of men for that position.

"In my appointments today I am not going to make a great many changes. My predecessor, Mayor Townsend, appointed many of those who served during the previous administration, and I believe without exception that they have made good in their various offices, and I am going to continue them in their places in order that this borough will receive just as good a government in the future as it has in the past, because it is not a one man's government. The men of the various departments were selected because of their particular ability to fill the place with credit, and I expect that they will perform their several duties in a straightforward and sensible manner.

"We are fortunate in lying near the city of Plainfield in some respects, one, because they have a goodly number of fire apparatus, and they have never been called up when the response was not prompt and effective. For this reason it is my judgment that our Department should be kept always within bounds. I hope we may also profit by the police force. We have practically all the force necessary here, first, because of the make up of our citizenship they do not require so much looking after as some communities, and second, this is a residential town. I am in favor of a good deal too much policing, and again Plainfield has a great many officers who are practically at our command when needed.

"I am interested enough in the future of this borough to join you gentlemen in any proposition that will present itself for the borough's improvement. I believe the utmost care should be made in laying out the present unimproved lands within its borders, so that the character of our citizens who might come to us in the future will be of a high standard rather than otherwise. The greatest credit that can come to any of us, or the best that any of us can receive when we retire from our different positions is, to feel that the public is fairly well satisfied with our acts.

"A government of this sort should be sustained by taxation. It is not only the people in North Plainfield who are taxed high, but taxes in all the cities and boroughs in the northern part of the State are high. Again when the people are continually demanding so many improvements a fair rate for the governing body of the community, it is expected that the tax rate will increase from time to time, but that will not prevent the mayor and Council from watching the various other methods for the escape of the public money.

"It is a hard matter to look into the future, but I hope that the men in the various departments will have a watchful eye on the affairs of the government of which we are participants, because no matter how hard we try some unusual expenditures are apt to take place.

"I have said about all that I care to say at this time, but before proceeding with the further business, I wish to extend to the people of the borough of North Plainfield a prosperous and happy New Year, and ask you for your support in the deliberations of this body, and should any of our citizens have matters of importance pertaining to the welfare of the borough to offer, I believe I am voicing the sentiments of the Council when I say, 'We trust that you will bring them to our attention.'"

Poor Nagg.

"Mrs. Nagg treats her husband as she might a schoolboy."

"Yes, did you hear how she punished him for some minor fault the other day? She made him stay in the house after supper and button her shirtwaist down the back eleven times."

Hunt Club Chase.

A half-dozen members of the Watchung Hunt Club enjoyed a chase on Saturday, starting at Dog Tavern and finishing at Westfield. The hunters found the snow pretty deep, but there were no spills.

Chris Cumins, whip of the Watchung Hunt Club, has tendered his resignation to the club, but the members have refused to accept it. He will remain here for the present.

DUNELLEN'S NEW MAYOR

Tells of His Aspirations for the Future Government of the Borough.

MAYOR WANTS A SINKING FUND.

Hopes the People Will Back Him Up in His Suggestions For Improvements.

In assuming the office of mayor of Dunellen on New Year's Day Mayor William A. Sanford made known the policies which he would pursue in an exhaustive message to the Council. As the time appears ripe for more improvements in that municipality it is the general opinion that the Council will give careful consideration to Mayor Sanford's suggestions. The Mayor in his address to the Council said:

"Gentlemen of the Council and citizens here assembled, I hardly expected to see so many faces here today. I thought it would be a sort of common function, but it seems to have assumed a rather higher character than I thought. I know many people have come here today, it has been hinted to me that they would, for the purpose of hearing a speech.

"Now, I would simply say in that connection that the days of oratory are past. That would be perfectly proper at political gatherings, where promises are made. Now we have come to the point where promises must be kept.

From oratory we have got to come down to the serious realities of business and take up the different propositions which have been put themselves to us and think them over in a serious way and deal with them in a serious manner. This occasion is one of serious import to me. I feel that I am assuming a burden of responsibility which at my time of life and in consideration of health, I possibly might have avoided but it seemed as if circumstances pushed me to the front and I was compelled to take hold of public work.

"When I first came to the borough some five or six years ago my friends wished to push me forward for the mayoralty. It would have been a very unmodest thing for me to accept. You have now placed me in this chair. I have been placed here and am duffed by the best people of this community regardless of politics and to those people I owe a duty which rests upon me more heavily than party promises.

"I positively refused to listen to anything to advance my interest as a party man, for the purpose of gain. I positively refused to pledge an office, and I have come into this chair positively unpledged and free to do my duty as a citizen of this borough to the best of my ability. Upon me there is a heavy responsibility because I feel that I owe it to the very best people in this borough to do the very best I can. Now, I may not succeed altogether. It is pretty hard for any man to become perfect in the right way out of the infinite number of one ways and they are infinite; it is pretty hard that man will ever only a finite mind to search out of the infinite that which is just right. So, therefore, if at any time I should err. I want you to remember that I am only human, but so far as in me lies, I intend to do my duty. I am going to do my best to make you a good mayor and I want you to back me up in it.

The Mayor then gave a brief summary of what he wished to accomplish for the borough. He would strongly urge the raising of more money by some method for the work on hand. The Mayor spoke of the large number of real estate developments along the Central Railroad as far as Bound Brook, a large number of which would not be built upon, but the people would come out into the country and become permanent residents of communities offering the best facilities and felt that the time was opportune for the borough to be bonded and money raised for permanent improvements on the sinking fund basis which would be soon returned to the borough in the shape of increased valuations and by larger population. He explained that the borough spent $2,000 for streets each year, which, if a certain portion was applied to a sinking fund, in two years only would be enough sufficient funds, if economically used. The bonded indebtedness could be worked out on the following basis:

"An issue of $10,000—Sinking fund, $200; interest, $450; total, $750; balance from amount raised of $2,000 available for borough funds, $1,250. An issue of $15,000—Sinking fund, $450; interest, $675; total, $1,125. Balance from amount raised of $2,000 available for borough funds, $875. An issue of $20,000—Sinking fund, $600; interest, $900; total, $1,500; balance from amount raised of $2,000 available for borough funds, $500.

The Mayor also recommended a proper amount of policing, proper sanitary conditions, attractive parks, and as far as possible a better and more attractive borough, which will result in increased valuations and a rapid growth in population.

"Yes, my boy, you have permission—
You may go where'er you choose;
But if you would get back some time
Take along your walking shoes."

HEPTASOPHS IN REVOLT; OBJECT TO NEW RATES

Many members of Protection Conclave, No. 505, Improved Order of Heptasophs, in this city have declined to accept any of the options suggested by the Supreme Conclave and which were to become effective on January 1, and will pay their assessments under protest, claiming that the Supreme Conclave has no power to increase the rates upon a certain class of members or reduce the amount of their certificates.

It is maintained that the late decisions of the Court of Appeals in the cases of Dowhall vs. the Catholic Mutual Benefit Association and Wright vs. the Knights of Maccabees, as reported in the New York Press of December 12 last, define the powers of fraternal organizations.

The action of the Supreme Conclave affects nearly all the members of the local conclave, reducing the amounts of some certificates hundreds of dollars. This seems to the members an unjust discrimination as they have already stood a raise in assessments of fifty per cent. on the amount they agreed to pay upon joining the order.

The circular letter sent out by the supreme secretary refers in detail to the action of the Supreme Conclave, which held its session at Saratoga last June and it insists that all options must be selected and returned to the supreme secretary by January 1. Many of the members have refused to file their acceptances on the grounds stipulated above.

CITY FATHERS ADJOURN TO NEXT MONDAY NIGHT

According to the plans decided upon on Saturday night, several members of the Common Council met Monday night and immediately adjourned to Monday night, January 10, when the regular business of the new year will be taken up. Those present last night were President Tolles, Charles C. Randolph, Francis L. Montgomery and Councilman Taylor, together with Mayor Charles J. Fisk.

The reason for this action was that there was little or nothing that could be done last night, as more time is needed to get into shape several important matters demanding the attention of the members. In the meantime., the various committees will have time to prepare business for presentation on Monday night.

TRINITY SUNDAY-SCHOOL GRADUATING EXERCISES.

There was an interesting session of the Sunday-school of Trinity Reformed church on Sunday afternoon, when the graduating exercises took place. Twenty-one pupils were passed from the beginners to the primary department, thirty-five from the primary to the junior department and twenty-two from the junior to the main school. The passing from one department to the other was accompanied by special services and each child received a diploma.

As the transfers were made the superintendents of the various departments in dismissal and acceptance of the pupils made appropriate remarks, and each separate newly formed class listened to a short address by the pastor, Rev. John Y. Brock. The graduates from the primary to the junior department each received a bible in addition to the diploma. After the transfers there was speaking and singing by the various new classes. The report of the superintendent of the school was the most encouraging ever given and showed a healthy growth

NO RADICAL CHANGES

Mayor Smalley Satisfied with Machinery of Borough Government.

HE OUTLINES HIS POLICY.

William McCullough Succeeds Howard Woolston as Chief of Fire Department.

Mayor N. B. Smalley in assuming the mayoralty chair in the borough at Saturday noon made it plain that he is well satisfied with the machinery of the borough government. As expected there were no radical changes in the matter of appointments. The two changes were the appointment of William McCullough as chief of the fire department to succeed Howard Woolston, and Dr. D. C. Adams as borough physician to succeed Dr. A. H. Dundon. In both cases the incumbents of the office refused reappointment. From all outward appearance harmony reigns supreme and unity will prevail between Mayor and Council in the new administration.

There was also a minor change made in the committees, William L. Smalley being appointed to membership on the police committee in place of Julius J. Stahl, who received a place on the street committee. The remainder of the reappointments follow:

Borough clerk, Fred A. Martin; recorder, Charles M. Dolliver; borough engineers, Harry C. VanEmburgh and Frank J. Hubbard; overseer of the poor, Fred Becker; street commissioner, John Y. Barrett; chief of police, George Weiss; secretary of the board of health, Dr. A. H. Dundon.

In the fire department, in addition to the selection of William McCullough, as chief, William Daley was named as captain; tillerman, Otto Reujert; lieutenant and driver, William Gaub.

In reappointing Chief Weiss, Mayor Smalley paid a high tribute to the efficient service of the police department head during the past six years and declared he was highly gratified in reappointing him to the office.

A large representation of citizens attended the opening session at which Mayor Smalley outlined his policy to the members of the council.

OSGOOD AGAIN HEAD OF HEALTH BOARD

The annual report presented by Secretary Dr. A. H. Dundon at the meeting of the Borough Board of Health Monday showed that health conditions are generally good in that municipality. There are a few contagious cases on hand, but none of them considered of a serious nature.

The annual election was held and Joseph O. Osgood was re-elected president and Dr. A. H. Dundon secretary and registrar of vital statistics. Louis Ollif was retained as health inspector and Francis J. Blatz, Esq., as counsel.

ROBERT EMMETT SCOTT HEADS TYPO UNION.

The Plainfield Typographical Union, No. 399, met Monday night and elected these officers: President, Robert Emmett Scott; vice-president, C. A. Nichols; secretary and treasurer, H. W. Thomas; sergeant-at-arms, C. W. Francisco. It was announced that all arrangements were completed for the first annual ball to be held at Saengerbund Hall, Friday night, January 29.

The members resolved to send a floral piece to the funeral of Mrs. Albert L. Force, wife of the publisher of this paper as a tribute of respect.

LAST CALL.

'Tis the day before Christmas and all through the stores
The people go tramping by dozens and scores.
They didn't shop early and now it is late
And they are all left in a terrible state.

But some had no money and waited for pay
And therefore are doing their shopping today.
And some received presents they didn't foresee,
And some forgot something for trimming the tree.

'Tis the day before Christmas and all through the streets
The people are running their Marathon heats.
But all of the shoppers are merry and bright
And hope to get through with their trouble by night. —Exchange.

"Did you know Miss Skinner's cats have disappeared?"

"Yes, that little Annastasia Snow, who lives in the alley behind the Skinner home, told me she was going to have a new muff for Christmas."—Exchange.

MR. LOVELL RE-ELECTED

Following Organization, Education Board Listens to W. C. T. U. Plea.

THE COMMITTEES ARE NAMED.

Dr. B. VanD. Hedges Greeted As a New Member—A Janitor Resigns.

The meeting of the Board of Education Monday was enlivened by the presence of several members of the W. C. T. U., including the president, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, and Mrs. Emily Coard, of Los Angeles, Cal., both of whom spoke on the subject of essays on temperance questions in the local high school and the pupils in the seventh and eighth grades of the other schools.

Mrs. Tomlinson told of the desirability of having the higher grades compete for prizes offered by the county, State and national unions, using as an argument the value of inculcating knowledge of the injurious effects of alcohol on the human system. The local union has a standing prize of $5 for the best essays on submitted questions, and it is desirable to place these questions before the higher grade pupils for their absorbtion and discussion.

Mrs. Coard talked along similar lines giving the results in figures, of the plan as developed at Los Angeles, Pasadena and other California cities. In the competition there is a natonal prize of $50, which may be won by some pupil in the East. It was stated by Miss Tomlinson and interpreted by President Lovell that the Plainfield schools stand as high as any other schools in the matter of temperance learning. The matter was deferred until the next meeting of the board for decision.

The formal organization of the board was the first matter considered and Mr. Lovell was re-elected president; W. B. Tyler, vice-president; F. T. Woodhull, secretary. Dr. B. VanD. Hedges was greeted cordially at his first meeting with the board and was appointed chairman of the committee on fuel.

The report of the dental examining committee was read at length and showed the members how much work there is to be done in the mouths of the pupils of Stillman and Whittier Schools.

The resignation of Janitor H. P. Pugh, of Irving school was accepted and the nomination of his successor was left to the building committee with power. Harry Fraley, who has been Mr. Pugh's assistant, will probably be given a trial at the job. Other applications for the position of janitor were received from Eugene Lawson and F. M. Kelso.

A letter of thanks was read by Secretary Woodhull from C. F. Abbott in appreciation of the resolution recently passed by the board regarding his long service.

President L. N. Lovell announced the appointments of committees for the ensuing year, as follows: Teachers and text books, L. N. Lovell, W. S. Tyler and F. T. Woodhull; books, stationery and supplies, Buckle, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges and L. N. Lovell; buildings and repairs, Woodhull, Buckle and Hedges; finance, Tyler, Woodhull and Lovell; fuel, Hedges, Buckle and Tyler.

The question of whether the pupils of the public schools will be allowed to contribute funds to Muhlenberg Hospital was discussed and finally referred to Superintendent Maxson with power. According to the plan outlined for the purpose, prizes are to be awarded to the individual and class making the largest contribution of money. The policy to be adopted in this matter will be given out later. The board adjourned at 9:40.

NEW YEAR'S RECEPTION OF A PASTOR AND WIFE.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Herring held a New Year's Day reception at their home on DeLacy avenue, Saturday afternoon and evening. A large number of members of the First Presbyterian church and other friends called during the day. In the afternoon there was an informal program of music by Miss Edith Rupel, violinist, and Clifford A. Braidner, pianist.

In the evening, Miss Helen George rendered several piano solos, Mrs. Clifford A. Braider and Mrs. LeRoy Gates were in charge of the dining-room in the evening.

REVIEW MISSION EFFORT

Women's Foreign Society of First M. E. Church 25th Anniversary.

SOME INTERESTING HISTORY.

Miss Minnie B. Sharp Reads An Interesting Paper—A Luncheon Is Served At Noon.

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the First M. E. church held its twenty-fifth anniversary meeting Tuesday morning in Vincent chapel, when there was an interesting review of the work of the society during the past quarter of a century. Mrs. Addison W. Hayes, wife of the pastor of the Westfield M. E. church, and corresponding secretary of the general auxiliary for the district, conducted the devotional services. Then followed the reports, which proved interesting to all present. Mrs. Mary L. Winter, president of the society, presided at the meeting.

Miss Minnie B. Sharp, recording secretary, presented a review of the work of this society for twenty-five years. Among other things she said:

"On Wednesday evening, January 7, 1885, Miss Clara Cushman, a missionary on leave of absence from her field of work, made an address in the interest of the Women's Foreign Missionary society, and if I remember correctly, she had been invited by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Tuttle, who thought this church should be represented in the work of sending the gospel to the women of foreign lands who could not hear it, only through the women sent out by the society.

"The following Friday afternoon, the women of the church met in the church parlors for organization. After the meeting was opened by Dr. Tuttle these officers were elected: President, Mrs. Samuel Mitchell; vice-president, Mrs. R. R. Fairchild; corresponding secretary, Miss Addie McGee; recording secretary, Miss Susie Jackson; treasurer, Mrs. Edwin Loomis.

"Four years later, Mrs. Mary L. Winter was elected to the chair, and has ever since been president, except part of one year, when Mrs. J. L. Hurlburt was president. Mrs. Loomis served as treasurer for five years, then resigned and Miss Jackson was elected and has since carried the burden of that office. There have been a number of corresponding secretaries. Miss Rachel Day served from 1894 to 1903, the others serving one, two or three years. The recording secretaries have been Miss Belle Jackson, Mrs. G. R. Cornwell, Mrs. Nelson Y. Hull and Miss Minnie B. Sharp.

"During the first year there was recorded a membership of eighty-two. At the November meeting of that year, Mrs. James McGee, gave the society $50 for the support of a Bible woman, and each year succeeding that sum was raised for the same purpose. Since then another Bible woman has been supported and the outlook of the society today is bright.

"The money raised during the past quarter of a century amounts to $2,667.74, and what has been accomplished for Christ's Kingdom no one can know, except the Master, who alone can give the increase."

After the meeting the members enjoyed a luncheon served by a committee from the society.

Rev. Dr. Hester, of Brooklyn, performed the ceremony.

Following the wedding congratulations were offered and a wedding breakfast was served. Early in the afternoon, the couple left on an extended wedding trip. They will reside at New Bedford, Mass., where the groom is engaged in business as a manufacturer.

DIAMONDS AND TRADE DURING CURRENT YEAR

Prosperity has returned, according to the figures of the imports and exports for the calendar year of 1909, just published by the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor.

The surest indication of ready money, officials declare, is the diamond market, and during the first eleven months of 1909 this has boomed, the importation of cut diamonds amounting to $25,214,541, three times more than during the same period last year and almost $6,500,000 more than during that time in 1907. In fact the imports of cut diamonds for this year, with December omitted, amounted to over $1,000,000 more than for the twelve months of 1907, the banner year in the importation of cut diamonds. On these cut diamonds this year the United States Government has collected $2,500,000 in duties. Belgium and Netherlands are the countries selling the most of these stones to the United States.

It will surprise many people to learn that over $40,000,000 worth of diamonds and other precious stones were imported into the United States for the first eleven months of 1909. These are the correct figures and represent an increase of $28,000,000 over the figures of 1908, and more than $8,000,000 over 1907, this country's record year for the import of jewels.

During the calendar year the foreign commerce of the United States exceeded in value that of any earlier year with the single exception of 1907. The imports were larger than for any previous twelve months, but the exports will fall somewhat below those of 1908 and 1907.

The only matter for serious reflection in the report is the statement that the exportation of food stuffs, both raw and manufactured, has fallen lower than has been noted in a decade. This gives rise to some apprehension, especially when it is accompanied by the statement that while other countries are selling to the United States, this country's trade with other nations has suffered.

WHAT IS THE $5 FOR? JANITORS WANT TO KNOW

Why should a school janitor be compelled to pay $5 for a special policeman's badge and then lose half of this amount on the return of the badge to the chief of police? This question caused a whole lot of discussion at the meeting of the Board of Education Monday and, as the board think, with reason.

The janitors fail to see why they should deposit five good dollars for the purpose of wearing a distinguishing emblem of authority when there is absolutely no emolument to be derived and they have lodged a protest with the board. They don't quite see the justice of contributing $2.50 to the police pension fund when they are not considered in the benefit of that fund.

Their badges may be of use in chasing trespassers away from the school grounds, but, well what is there in it? The question could not be answered with any clearness last night, as Vice-president Tyler will investigate and report at the next meeting.

President Lovell appointed Mr. Tyler and himself as the members of the Board of School Estimate after the other committees had been named.

Funeral of Lorraine C. Hurtt.

The funeral of Lorraine C. Hurtt, was held Sunday afternoon at his late residence, 442 West Front street, the services being conducted by Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church. J. Edmund Skiff sang two solors. Another service was held at the vault and was conducted by the Brotherhood of Trainmen and the bearers were from the same organization. Many floral tributes were received from friends of the popular young trainman. The body was placed in the receiving vault at Hillside cemetery and will be interred beside that of his father in the spring.

Worshipful Master W. G. Hutchcroft, of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. & A. M., received word Sunday of the death in a Trenton hospital of John T. Odam, formerly of this city. His death was the result of injuries received December 20, when he fell off the roof of a building at Bordentown. He was a slater by trade and conducted that business here years ago. He was a member of Jerusalem Lodge.

FIVE TOOK SOLEMN VOWS

Bishop Mc Faul and Other Dignataries of Catholic Church Officiate.

AT MT. ST. MARY'S COLLEGE.

Service at Which Nuns Take Vows of Perpetual Profession —The Bishop Makes Address.

The Rt. Rev. J. A. McFaul, of Trenton, and other distinguished representatives of the Catholic church were present at the reception and perpetual profession ceremony of five nuns who entered the religious world, at Mt. St. Mary's convent Monday. The two services occupied two hours and the latter ceremony was marked with the impressiveness as is usual on such occasions.

The five women who took the vows of nuns were Sister Mary Caul Cannon, of Hoboken; Sister Mary Regis, of Red Bank; Sister Mary Casimir Schlis, of Bound Brook; Sister Mary Cornelia Anderson, of South River; Sister Mary Hillery Keely, of Summit.

Miss Genevieve Dineen, of Dunellen, was received as a novice into the order and given the name of Sister Mary Charles. She is a graduate of St. Gabriel's Academy, of North Plainfield, and entered the convent six months ago. Three years hence she will take the perpetual profession and become a nun.

Bishop McFaul spoke at length after the religious exercises in which he explained the duties of the various orders of the Catholic church. He said that women entering the nunnery make three vows, viz.: Voluntary poverty, perpetual chastity and perfect obedience.

Among the visiting clergymen were the Rev. William H. Miller, rector of St. Joseph's church, of the borough; the Rev. Edward Dunphy, rector of St. John's church, Dunellen; Monsignor Charles J. Kelly, of Hoboken; Monsignor Connolly, of Phillipsburg; Dean Mulligan, of Camden; Father McConnell, of Belmar; Father Reynolds, of Red Bank; Father Vivaer, of Raritan; Father Ryan, of Bernardsville; Father Leahy, of Princeton; Father Devlin, of Hoboken, and Dr. Griffin, of Trenton.

NEW MARKET FIREMEN GET NEW QUARTERS

George Schenck, a member of the New Market Fire Department, surprised his friends and fellow members by presenting to the volunteers a frame building on his property for use as a headquarters.

The communication presenting the building was read at the annual meeting Monday and a vote of thanks was immediately extended to Mr. Schenck for his generous gift. The structure will be moved to property of Justice Clark T. Rogers, who has offered the use of his land to the fire laddies. The firemen plan to take possession of the new fire house in the spring. A reading room will be provided and other comforts arranged.

The annual election resulted as follows: President, Alvin G. Nelson; vice president, W. T. Piddington, Sr.; treasurer, Clark T. Rogers; secretary, W. T. Piddington, Jr.; chief, Clark T. Rogers; first assistant, Harry J. Piddington; second assistant, Alex. Stillwagon; foreman, Alex. Herlich; with George Schenck and R. P. F. Von Minden as assistants. Alex. Herlich was elected steward.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"In the Bishop's Carriage," the dramatization of the famous novel of the same name, which comes to the Plainfield theatre January 16, is one of the most costly and elaborate productions taken on tour this season. Miss Stephanie Longfellow, an actress of most interesting personality, portrays the principal part, Nance Oldfield, who is a sort of female Raffles. But unlike the hereditary tendencies of that gentlemanly thief, the peculations of "Nan the Nipper," are the result of vicious environment. Her natural instincts are good, and her regeneration is one of the prettiest stories ever staged. Baker and Castle, the managers, have given this play a sumptuous mounting and a splendid company.

YOUNG LIFE CRUSHED OUT

Lourraine C. Hurtt Fatally Squeezed by Coal Cars Near South 2nd Street.

HAD PREMONITION OF DEATH.

Young Brakeman, Married But Three Months, Conscious to the End.

Lourraine C. Hurtt, twenty-two years old, was crushed to death between the bumpers of two freight cars which he was uncoupling in the rear of 674 South Second street Thursday afternoon at about 3 o'clock Death was not instantaneous, but followed an hour after the accident. He was attended by Doctor Pittis and removed as quickly as possible to Muhlenberg Hospital where he expired.

As far as can be ascertained Mr. Hurtt was uncoupling cars at the trestle at Rheaume's coal yard and had been warned that it was dangerous and to be very careful. He exercised the greatest care in doing the work, but in spite of it was caught between the cars just as he was about to step from between them. He fell through the trestle to the street below and while not unconscious seemed to realize that he was fatally hurt.

His greatest concern seemed to be for his wife and mother, the latter because he had been the main support since the death of his father five years ago. On the way to the hospital Mr. Hurtt continually referred to his mother and his wife, who is only a bride of three months. It was said this morning that the young man had had a premonition of the accident which killed him and had spoken of it recently to his wife and mother who had urged him to use extraordinary precautions.

Mr. Hurtt was well known to everybody in Plainfield and was in high standing with the Central Railroad officials. His wife and mother are prostrated from the shock and the family has the sympathy of all. The funeral services was held on Sunday afternoon at the residence of his mother, No. 442 West Front street, at 2:30.

WHITE PLAGUE DEFEATS AT STATE SANATORIUM

Dr. Samuel B. English, superintendent of the Sanatorium for Tuberculosis Diseases at Glen Gardner expresses in his annual report the belief that the increased agitation on the subject of tuberculosis and the awakening of the people to the fact that permanent improvement can better be obtained in early cases, is largely responsible for the gratifying results attained at the institution during the past year. The report shows that total cures were effected in thirty per cent of the cases treated, the disease was arrested in forty-four per cent of the cases, improvement was shown in fifteen per cent and slight improvement in only six per cent. The percentage of fatalities was only one.

At the close of the preceding year there were 103 inmates, of whom 53 were males and fifty females. During the year 134 males and 142 females were admitted, making a total of 320. There were 156 males discharged and 140 females, a total of 296. This left 75 males and 82 females, a total of 127, in the sanatorium at the close of the last fiscal year. During the year 867 applicants were examined for admission, of which 463 were accepted, 172 deferred and 267 rejected. Of the 320 admitted, 83 paid $5 weekly, the remainder being treated free.

Forty-two patients left the sanatorium with a residence of less than one month and are not considered in the final results. These fail to react to tuberculin tests, were homesick or unwilling to follow the prescribed rules of the institution. The average daily number of beds filled with year was 118.5. The average length of residence was six and a half months, an increase over the preceding year of two months. The average gain in weight per patient was fifteen pounds. The maximum male gain was forty-three and a half pounds, and the maximum female gain forty-eight and a half pounds. While 259 patients gained in weight, only twelve lost weight, the average loss being 5.5 pounds. There were 24 who neither gained nor lost.

CITY GETS $2,133.00 FROM DOG LICENSES

Among the interesting reports presented at the final meeting of the 1909 Common Council, Thursday, was that of City Judge William N. Runyon. It showed that $745.50 had been received during the year in fines, and after disbursing $138.55 for various expenses, the balance, $606.95, was turned over to City Treasurer W. F. Arnold. He reported disposition of cases as follows:

Number of cases appearing, 910; fined, 130; committed, 86; on probation, 88; sentence suspended, 495; held for the grand jury, 56; pending, 13; held for juvenile court, 2; complaints dismissed, 16; under bonds, 2; transferred to other departments, 24.

City Clerk J. T. MacMurray's report showed that $2,361.00 had been received from the licensing of hackmen, peddlers, junkmen, auctioneers, etc., while 948 dogs had been licensed, which at $2.25 each, made the total receipts $2,133.00. Six kennel licenses were granted at $10 each, a total of $60 and 39 dealers' tags were issued at fifty cents each, a total of $19.50, making the total receipts $4,513.50, which has been turned over to the city treasurer.

The report of City Physician Dr. C. B. Lufburrow showed that he had made 102 visits and 162 prescriptions during the year. He also gave a detailed statement regarding the inmates of the almshouse and treatment given.

SARATOGA IN 1790.

Now that the ancient glories of Saratoga are to be revived, a description of the famous spa by a visitor of 119 years ago is interesting, says Harper's Weekly. The visitor was Elkanah Watson, of Massachusetts, a man of repute in his day, whose memoirs, including his journals of travels in Europe and America from the year 1777 to 1842, and his correspondence with public men and reminiscences and incidents of the American Revolution, were published by his son in 1856.

Watson visited Saratoga in 1790, and writes thus about the place: "The succeeding September I made a tour to the mineral springs at Saratoga. Here I spent a day bathing in a trough and drinking the exhilarating water which gushes from the centre of a rock. I met with about a dozen respectable people sojourning at a wretched tavern. The wilderness and the rough state of the roads by no means commodious made me recur to the condition of Bath in the barbarous ages, when, several centuries before Christ, as the legend says, the springs were discovered by their salutary effects upon a herd of decrepit wolves wallowing in the mud.

"The Saratoga waters were discovered about twenty years ago, I was informed, by Mr. Ball, of Ballston, in following a deer track; but in its progress to the springs was known to the Indians. The remarkable medicinal qualities of these springs and their accessible position must render this spot at some future period the bath of America. At present it is enveloped in rudeness and seclusion, with no accommodations appropriate to civilized man. The rock through which the water issues by a narrow passage has been probably formed by petrification. Vessels are let down through this fissure or natural well to procure the water for drinking.

"There is no convenience for bathing except an open log hut, with a large trough similar to those in use for feeding swine, which receives water from a spring. Into this you *roll from a bench. This water ap*pears to be strongly impregnated with saline ingredients highly charged with fixed air, and is almost as animated as champagne wine. Its taste is grateful, but it leaves no pleasant impression upon the palate. Those accustomed to it, however, regard it as a great luxury. It is in high estimation as a specific in all scorbutic affections, gout, rheumatism, etc. These springs are situated in a marsh partly encompassed by slight and pretty eminences, along the margin of which the road winds. A little off from the highway I visited a new spring, which is much more highly charged with mineral elements. This is called the Congress Spring.

"From Saratoga I proceeded to Tryon's, a low, one-story tavern on a hill in Ballston. At the foot of this hill I found a fine, delicious new spring, which issues from a rock. Here some sores near the barrel. There was also a shower bath, with no protection except a bower of bushes. Tryon's was the only public house; no buildings having been erected below. This is a great resort for number of visitors at one period the past summer was ten or twelve, and these were as many as could be accommodated.

The officers-elect of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., will be installed on Thursday night.

Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T. will hold a regular conclave tonight.

CELEBRATING CHRISTMAS

More Festivals are Held by Children of Various Congregations.

PRESENTS ARE DISTRIBUTED.

Addresses, Carols, Recitations and Refreshments Are Features of the Programs.

Following are some of the Christmas festivals held Thursday night:

The primary, beginners' departments and cradle roll of the First M. E. church Sunday-school enjoyed their festivities in Vincent chapel, Thursday afternoon. The chapel was crowded with children and their parents and all had a good time. Mrs. Thomas McDonald, who has charge of the primary department and cradle roll, and Miss Edna French, of the beginners' department, were in charge, assisted by other teachers and helpers.

An informal program was rendered by members of the primary department. There was a recitation by Howard Carter, an exercise by Charlotte Carpenter, Carrie Creegar, Thelma Dawson, Lois Beekman and Margaret Dunavan; another exercise by Warren Moyer, Loren Pope, Russell Lynn and Arthur McVoy; recitation, Howard Carter and a selection by a choir of children. The children in the beginners' department also gave a short informal program of carols and exercises.

The children then marched into the rear parlor where they were seated at small tables for refreshments. Ice cream and cake were served to them, while the parents received cocoa and wafers. While the children were all seated, Santa Claus in the person of Arthur Humble made his appearance by the way of a ladder from the gallery and he delighted all with his clever antics, after which he distributed gifts to all.

Those who acted as helpers were Miss Mattie Humble, Miss May Randolph, Miss Dawson, Mrs. Maurice McGrath, Mrs. Nelson E. Hull, Miss Gertrude Sharp, Miss Minnie Sharp, Miss Susie Jackson, Mrs. Arthur T. Goodenough.

"What Happened to Santa," is the name of the Christmas cantata given by the Sunday school of the Park Avenue Baptist church, Thursday. The church was crowded with members and friends and the whole affair was enjoyed greatly. Superintendent George E. Hall was in charge of the exercises. The characters were as follows:

"Santa Claus," Martin Sutsman; "Sexton," Charles VanWinkle; "Jack Frost," William Hadley; "Scribble," Santa's secretary, George E. Hall; "Sparkle," queen of the faries, Clara Hadley; "Roma," queen of the gypsies, Miss Ruth Runyon.

In addition to choruses of fairies, tots, gypsies and brigands there were several other features. This cantata was given by the school two years ago, and proved to be such a success that on the request of a number of interested parties, it was decided to repeat it this year.

"Betsey Jane," the rag doll, was impersonated in his inimitable fashion by Lawyer Harry C. Runyon, and he made a hit last night. After the cantata there was the usual distribution of gifts to members of the school, while the teachers were all remembered in a special way. Altogether it was one of the best entertainments given by the school in a long time.

Christmas entertainments were held in Holy Cross church, Trinity Reformed and the First Presbyterian churches Thursday at which the usual Christmas trees were denuded of their gifts for the children of the various Sunday schools. At Holy Cross church carols were sung by the children assisted by the full vested choir. The presentation of gifts to the children ended a pleasant evening.

At Trinity Reformed Professor Hendrickson, a magician from New York and Brooklyn, Monday, a professional impersonator and ventriloquist amused an immense audience of parents and children. Prof. Hendrickson's work as a magician and shadowgraph artist elicited much applause. Mr. McKay, was splendidly assisted in his impersonations and kept the audience in good humor by his ventriloquial work. The cantata given be the junior C. E. members on Wednesday afternoon was successfully repeated last night and was very pleasing.

At the First Presbyterian church some effective tableaux were given by the scholars. These tableaux represented different phases of Christmas time in different places and circumstances and were beautifully executed. H. Warren Rankin entertained the large audience with stereopticon slight of hand manuevers which pleased everyone. The children were given candy, ice cream and cake. There was no tree.

The primary department of the First Baptist church held an enjoyable Christmas entertainment in the lecture room of the church Thursday afternoon. Mrs. J. A. Powlison, the superintendent, was in charge, assisted by the teachers of the department. The program follows:

Song, "Away in a Manger;" Christmas lesson, Mrs. Hannah Flanders; prayer and Lord's prayer; song, "Christ Was Once a Little Baby;" recitation, Florence Douglas; duet, Everett Case and Dorothy Lee; recitation, Harry Allen; semi-chorus, "Rock the Cradle;" address, Mrs. J. A. Powlison; song, "Merry Christmas Day." After the program there was a distribution of gifts as usual.

The Christmas entertainment of the Sunday-school of the Congregational church was attended by a large number of people and was thoroughly enjoyed. The children presented a little cantata entitled "Santa's Success," and it was given with supreme confidence and ability. The characters were: Maud, Kathleen Phillips; Madge, Helen Weseman; Millie, Martine Weeks; Jack, Donald Updike; Joe, Albert Bentley; Jimmie, Roy Wyckoff; Hard-working Mother, Irma Phillips; Fairy Queen, Elizabeth Martin and Santa Claus, Warren Weseman. There were carpenters, college boys and girls, Goblins and lots of little fairies, who all acquitted themselves nobly. Miss Jean Millar presided at the piano. The cantata was under the direction of Miss Fuller and Mr. McClymont. A collection was taken for the Antonio Arrighi, Italian mission in New York city, which netted quite a sum.

Christmas was observed by the members of Grace M. E. Sunday school Thursday afternoon. In the evening the main school listened to an enjoyable program in which the special feature was the presentation of the cantata, "Mrs. Wiggs in the Cabbage Patch."

The cast was the Misses Jennie and Helen Nelson, Florence Hoagland, Adah Van Horne, Minnie Nelson, Etta Bodenheimer; Ronald Conroy, Samuel and Clarence Bodine and Benjamin Shuck. Miss Florence Conroy rendered a solo "Silent Night." The program was arranged by Miss Mary G. Steiner.

The primary department held its exercises in the afternoon. A program of songs and recitations was presented by the members A Christmas tree from which candy, dolls and toys were distributed brought joy to the little ones. The entertainment was supervised by Miss Belle Lunger and Miss Alice Carroll.

ROUTINE TRANSACTIONS OF THE CITY FATHERS

The Common Council for 1909 held its final meeting of the year Thursday, when all business pending was either disposed of or referred to the 1910 body. The reports of the city judge, overseer-of-the-poor, chief of fire department, chief of police, city physician, city clerk, shade tree commission and street commission were presented and filed, it being understood that the substance of them will be published in the news papers.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported the granting of seventeen permits last month and a total of 295 for the year. Andrew Jennings, treasurer of the firemen's pension fund, reported the total amount on hand as $6,853.86, and Horace G. Adams, Dirt Direct Court clerk, reported receipts for the past month to be $103.13, disbursements, $30.43, with a balance of $72.70.

Mr. Buxton offered a resolution which was adopted, providing for the borrowing of $6,500 on account of fire fund and $1,500 on account of poor fund.

At the conclusion of the evening's business City Clerk J. T. MacMurray read the minutes of the meeting, they were approved and the Council adjourned sine die.

BRIDGEMAN TELLS OF "THE FARTHEST NORTH"

The Christmas entertainment for the main school of the First Baptist church was held Thursday, and consisted of an exhibition of Robert E. Peary's views of "Farthest North," including several taken on his last trip, when he reached the pole. The lecture was given by Herbert S. Bridgeman, of the Brooklyn Eagle, who was the secretary of the Peary Arctic Club for several years.

In the minds of those present there seemed to be no doubt but that Peary reached the North Pole after bearing the graphic story as told by Mr. Bridgeman. He was introduced by L. W. Randolph, and in this connection there was an interesting incident. The two men had never met before, although Mr. Bridgeman had published several complimentary articles in his newspaper concerning Mr. Randolph and there had always been a feeling of high regard for each other.

The views shown by Mr. Bridgeman were exceptionally fine, some of them being exhibited before. The pictures did not show the exact spot reached by Peary, but Mr. Bridgeman, by the aid of a map, showed the audience the route taken by the explorer and how he reached the coveted goal. No direct reference was made by the speaker to Dr. Cook, although indirectly he spoke of "others" who had laid claims to accomplishing the task. The lecture was highly instructive and greatly enjoyed.

WORK OF STREET DEP'T

Commissioner Gavett's Interesting Report of the Year's Improvements.

TELLS OF THE DUST PROBLEM.

Many Things Are Needed Among Them Proper Numbering of the Houses, He Says.

Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett's report which is signed by the Councilmanic Committee on Streets and Sewers gives in detail the expenditures for the year 1909 and a complete list of the streets and roads which have been treated for the settlement of the dust problem and tells of the material used in an endeavor to minimize the nuisance created by dusty thoroughfares. Liquid asphalt has been used in streets newly opened up and various qualities of oil, including Tarvia, Dustoline, Texas Oil and Standard Oil, have been used with varying results.

Mr. Gavett says:

"As noted in our report for 1908, the contractor for constructing brick pavement failed to make the necessary repairs at the expiration of the six months during which he was required to keep the pavement in order, and these repairs were made during the summer, the cost of the work being charged to the contractor.

There are other places now needing repair, which have developed since tre period for which the contractor was responsible, and it is recommended that they be attended to in the spring, and that all necessary repairs be made promptly in the future so as to keep the pavement in good order.

Mr. Gavett says that the frequent repairs to the streets and roads has been made necessary by the phenomenal increase in automobile traffic. Amiesite was used on some of the streets and is recommended by the street commissioner for future use. This material properly prepared for use costs 55 cents per square yard, or 47 cents per lineal foot for a strip 16 feet wide.

Tarvia, grade X, was used on the renewal of the grade on West Front street near Grant avenue with good results. The testing of dust preventatives have been continued during the year and is safely said that all the preparations tried have met with approval. Renewals of Tarvia B were made on Park avenue by request of the residents on that street, from Fourth street to South End avenue. This preparation has proved very efficacious. Tarvia is not a dust absorber, but prevents the formation of dust to a considerable extent and this material, applied to Grove street late in 1908, is still in good order.

The Texas and Standard Oils are similar in appearance and are applied cold, the Texas Oil being somewhat more enduring. Both oils remain hard during moderate rains, but after continued storms, when there is much traffic, the surface softens to some extent, more so than is the case with Tarvia B.

Material used, Tarvia B; gallons used per square yard, .4174; cost of material per square yard, .0255; cost of spreading per square yard, .0050; total cost per square yard, .0305.

Material used, Dustoline; gallons used per square yard, .2089; cost of material per square yard, .0146; cost of spreading per square yard, .0015; total cost per square yard, .0161.

Material used, Texas Oil; gallons used per square yard, .3884; cost of material per square yard, .0175; cost of spreading per square yard, .0025; total cost per square yard, .0200.

Material used, Standard Oil; gallons used per square yard, .3669; cost of material per square yard, .0122; cost of spreading per square yard, .0025; total cost per square yard, .$147.

A total of $1,939 gallons of Tarvia B, Dustoline, Texas Oil and Standard Oil were used and the total length of streets treated was 22¾ miles. The total area covered was 252,490 square yards and the cost of above materials was $3,816.92. The cost of applying the materials was $597.87, making an average cost of 1⅜ cents per square yard for materials and labor. The above amounts are exclusive of repairs and inclusive of streets constructed with Tarvia X and Liquid Asphalt binders.

The work of oiling the streets in 1909 was begun April 17, and was practically completed on August 31, a small quantity being applied in October, but such late oiling is not to be recommended.

It is very desirable that all streets should next repaired before being oiled, but it was impossible to do this in a number of cases this year.

It cost $5,212.82 this year for sprinkling with water the streets not treated with dust preventives. We have had to pay rather an early start be made in oiling the streets, employing several gangs, and that water sprinkling be done only where absolutely necessary.

Extensive repairs were required last spring on East Front street east of Leland avenue. The worst places were underdrained and the whole street was given a good resurfacing with increased crown.

Farragut road, Rahway road, Putnam avenue, parts of West Fourth street and Madison avenue were also repaired.

On the Watchung avenue hill, between Woodland and Belvidere avenues, the serious raveling of the macadam was remedied by spreading a layer of hot Tarvia X, into which half-inch stone was rolled. This work was done in September, and although the surface of the street, before repairing, was very unfavorable, being composed of loose stones and dirt, it is now in excellent condition.

We would recommend the early opening of East Fourth street, from Richmond street to the angle point near Washington street, in order to remove the obstruction at the latter point.

Perhaps there is no small thing which causes so much unnecessary annoyance as the wrong numbering of houses. Earnest efforts have been made to have the correct numbers substituted for the wrong one and new numbers put on where none existed, but neither newspaper warnings nor postal card requests seem to be effectual, as a recent canvass shows that there are still at least 500 houses with incorrect numbers or with none at all.

The Street Railway Company paid $1,589.62 as its proportion of the cost of repairing streets and removing snow.

There are 49.63 miles of macadam streets in the city, 0.78 mile of brick pavement and 0.07 mile of concrete (alley) pavement.

Some work has been done in establishing and monumenting street lines and much more remains to be done. These monuments are in constant danger of being displaced by excavations.

Sewers.

There are now 44 miles of sanitary sewers, 396 manholes, 137 flush tanks and 12 direct flushing connections. Owing to the dry weather and consequent diminution in the amount of ground water infiltration, the flow of sewage has not materially increased during the year, being now about 1,600,000 gallons per day. There have been 27 connections made with the sewers in 1909, making the present total 3322. 36 of the above connections were made with sewers draining to the pumping station, making a total of 112 connections to these sewers. The pumping plant has operated successfully during the year, the average quantity pumped being now 45,000 gallons per day. The pumps are overhauled occasionally to replace diaphragms, ball valves, etc., but the only regular attention required is about one hour, morning and night.

The cost of special work at the disposal works during the past year may be briefly summarized as follows:

Foreman, labor and carts, $1,096.55; stone, $620.87; drain tile, $234.45; tools and supplies, $81; total, contact beds, $2,032.87; cost of additional scuttles in septic tanks and covering weir channel, $151.89; total, specific work, $2,184.76.

The detailed statement of receipts and disbursements for streets and sewers is as follows:

Receipts—Streets: Regular appropriation, $65,000; special appropriation for steam rolling and scarifier, $2,300; sPublic Service Railway Company for removing snow, $60.77; Public Service Railway Company for repair and oiling of streets, $1,528.85; sale of stone, pipe, etc., $18.96; sale of barrels, $21.50; use of steam roller, men and teams by contractors and others, $839.92; money due Italians and others, location not known, $2.35; total, $39,772.35.

The disbursements equal the total receipts, being $39,772.35. The amount of receipts and expenditures for sewers was $13,749.22.

Amount certified to assessors for removing snow and ice from sidewalks (to be included in tax bills), $664.16; amount paid on account of cost of streets macadamized by contract in 1909, $7,353.78; five per cent. retained for six months, $381.77; amount charged against property owners for flagging, curbing and concrete sidewalks, $2,824.57.

Respectfully submitted, William L. Gloak, Charles C. Randolph, Herbert Buxton, Frederic E. Mygatt, Francis L. Montgomery, Committee on Streets and Sewers.

Andrew J. Gavett, City Surveyor and Street Commissioner.

HE LAYS CLAIM TO BEING A SUPERVISOR.

Supreme Court Justice Francis J. Swayze Thursday night signed an order to show cause why a writ of certiorari should not issue to review the proceedings of the Essex County Board of Chosen Freeholders when it named a successor to John Barrett, of South Orange, as county supervisor of roads. The order, which was signed at the request of Daniel J. Dugan, of Orange, as counsel for Barrett, is returnable January 15.

Barrett declares that under the civil service act his removal was illegal. He was apointed to the position December 20, 1906, for three years. George W. Eager was appointed as the new supervisor of roads, according to resolution, his term beginning on December 21. Barrett is a veteran of the Spanish American War.

CHARMING FUNCTION GIVEN FOR DEBUTANTE

One of the most brilliant social functions of the season was the debutante dance given, at the Park Club Thursday, by Mr. and Mrs. James C. Peck, of Myrtle avenue, for their daughter, Miss Gladys Peck, who was formally introduced to society a few weeks ago. There were about 175 guests present, including a number from out-of-town, and all joined in showering congratulations and best wishes on the charming young woman.

The clubhouse was lavishly decorated for the occasion, there being a gorgeous profusion of beautiful flowers, including, carnations, potted plants, and other flowers appropriate to the Christmastide season. The clubhouse was transformed into a floral garden and it never looked better.

Dancing began about 8:30 o'clock and continued until 2 o'clock this morning, with an intermission at midnight for refreshments. The music, which was a feature, was furnished by Vonbar's Orchestra, of New York. The program included all of the popular dances and there were numerous encores.

LADIES AUXILIARY, A.O.H. DANCE LARGELY ATTENDED

An enjoyable dance was held in Saengerbund Hall, Thursday, under the auspices of Ladies' Auxiliary, Division No. 1, A. O. H. There was a large attendance and the merry-making continued until an early hour.

A feature of the ball was the presence of F. Hennessey, an Irish piper of New York, who dispensed music for jigs and reels for the older folks downstairs, while the younger generation enjoyed itself with the waltz and the schottishe on the main floor.

The committee in charge was comprised of the Misses Jennie Griffen, Mamie Casey, Anna Corgan, May McGauley, Anna Kearns and Mrs. A. Reilly. It was the fourteenth annual dance given by the society.

SCOTTISH RITE MASONS HONOR "PATRON SAINT."

Scottish Rite Masons everywhere united Wednesday in paying honor to the memory of Gen. Albert Pike, who was the "patron saint" of Scottish Rite Masonry, on the one hun*dredth anniversary of his birth.* Plans for a widespread observance of the centenary were perfected at the meeting in Washington last October of the Supreme Council of Scottish Rite Masons for the Southern jurisdiction. In further commemoration of the anniversary the Supreme Council has distributed among its members 200 medals, bearing an image of the head and bust of General Pike, and with an appropriate inscription.

Though General Pike is best remembered for his services to the Masonic fraternity, these do not by any means constitute his only claim to fame. In the course of his stirring career he fought with distinction in two wars, was of national prominence as a journalist, and was known as one of the most able lawyers of his day. He also found time to write much creditable poetry.

General Pike was a product of Massachusetts, and in his youth attended Harvard University, and subsequently taught school at Newburyport. At the age of 21 he went West and engaged in exploring the country. In 1832 he located in Arkansas, where he taught school for a time and then became a newspaper work. In 1835 he was admitted to the bar. Upon the outbreak of the Mexican War he recruited a company of cavalry, which he led at the battle of Buena Vista. He returned to his extensive law practice in 1849, and in 1853 transferred his office to New Orleans, returning to Arkansas in 1857. As attorney for the Choctaw Indians, he obtained the award of nearly $3,000,000 from the United States Government.

At the beginning of the Civil War he was appointed Confederate Commissioner to negotiate treaties of alliance with the Indians. He was appointed a brigadier-general in the Confederate States army and took a leading part in the battles of Pea Ridge and Elkhorn. In 1866 he removed to Memphis, where he edited a newspaper, and two years later he went to Washington to practise law.

General Pike was grand commander of the Supreme Council of thirty-third degree Masons, and was also grand commander of the royal order of Scottish Masons. He compiled numerous Masonic rituals and also wrote a famous reply to Pope Leo XIII's bul against Masonry.

The Common Council for 1910 held its first meeting for organization, Saturday night, in the office of Mayor Charles J. Fisk, the council chamber being too cold for use. All of the members were present and Mayor Fisk was there as a spectator.

The first business was that of re-electing Ralph I. Tolles president fo, the fifth consecutive term. He is now serving his fourteenth year as a member of the Council. He thanked the members for the honor conferred and expressed the hope that all would work harmoniously together the coming year for the best interests of the city.

George B. Wean was re-appointed stenographer and typist for another year at a salary of $500, and Jacob C. Dunham was re-appointed janitor for the coming year. Constable P. V. Wemmy's bond was offered, referred to the corporation counsel for approval and ordered filed in the county clerk's office.

The matter was referred to the street committee. A petition was received from the Borough of Washington, Pa., seeking information about boroughs and was referred to the finance committee. Residents of West Fifth street between Monroe avenue and Lee place, asked for lights and this was referred to the light committee. A petition from residents of East Seventh street for an extension of the sewer system to Central street, was referred to the sewer committee. All matters left over by the 1909 Council were then referred to the proper committees.

The resignation of Patrolman Joseph Dunlap was received, accepted and placed on filed.

Mayor Fisk explained that owing to a new law, the appointment of special policemen hereafter must be done by the Common Council, that when a special is appointed he must deposit $5 for his badge and when he leaves office he is refunded $2.50, while the other half goes to a police pension fund, or if there be none, to the city treasurer for the benefit of the police department.

In the opinion of the Mayor, upon the advice of the corporation counsel, it was suggested that His Honor might nominate specials and have the same confirmed by the Common Council. Mr. Fisk explained that he had appointed Thomas O'Gorman, patrol driver; Health Officer W. H. Addis, Overseer-of-the-Poor A. D. Ayers and E. H. S. Dalley special at Proctor's theatre, as specials, it being necessary that they be given this authority at this time. These appointments were confirmed. Others will be named later.

Mayor Fisk then appointed Miles Roberts, a shade tree commissioner for three years; Andrew J. Gavett, street commissioner for three years; Dr. T. S. Davis and F. W. Dunn, as members of the Board of Health for two years, and all appointments were confirmed.

Councilman Buxton, as chairman of the finance committee, then offered a number of resolutions, which were adopted as follows: Appointing The Daily Press and Courier-News, as official newspapers of the city; instructing the finance committee to arrange for the publication in pamphlet form of all the city reports; appropriating $300 to the Shade Tree Commission; $4,000 to the street committee; $1,000 to the Board of Health, and $1,000 to the sewer committee, until the regular appropriations are made.

Another resolution offered by Mr. Buxton and adopted, renewed the usual arrangement for securing two copies of all legislative bills, as soon as offered, at an expense not to exceed $25.

Mr. Taylor gave notice of the meeting on Thursday night, when a gasolene expert will be present to explain matters pertaining to the application of the F. L. C. Martin Automobile Company for permission to install a large tank on its property. All auto garage owners will be invited.

It was arranged that the members meet tonight, according to the law, and then adjourn to Monday night, January 17, when the regular business will be taken up. The meeting then adjourned.

SANFORD WANTS TO BOND DUNELLEN FOR $20,000

Mayor W. A. Sanford in his first message to the Dunellen Council, which convened at noon on New Year's day, advocated the issuance of bonds to the extent of $20,000 to be used exclusively for street purposes. The opinion of the new Mayor, evidently met with the popular approval of citizens who heard the message.

The following appointments were named: Borough Attorney, Walter L. Hetfield, Jr.; marshall, James Benson; street commissioner, Goldson Smalley. The office of the overseer-of-the-poor and recorder will be filled later.

NEW YEAR RECEPTION HELD AT PARK CLUB

The New Year's Day reception at the Park Club was a great success. It was held during the afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock and a large number of members and friends called. The clubhouse was attractively decorated with Christmas greens, while the Christmas tree was left on the stage.

Those who received were Mrs. James R. Joy, Mrs. William A. Connor and Mrs. H. L. McGee, and those who presided at the tea tables were Mrs. James C. Peck, Mrs. Alexander Milne, Mrs. Francis DuBois, Mrs. Robert H. McCutcheon, Mrs. Edward T. Wilson, Mrs. George T. Rogers, Mrs. John M. Conklin and Mrs. John Vallant.

A feature of the afternoon were the readings and recitations by Henry Gains Hawn, of Brooklyn. Especially noteworthy were his negro dialect stories. Being a southerner these were given true to nature.

The Junior dance at the club New Year's eve was also a success, the attendance of junior members and friends being large.

BRYANT DISCUSSES CHILD LABOR LAW

A vigorous discussion of the existing discrepancy between the factory law regulating the form of me-ployment of children in factories of new Jersey and the compulsory school law, are features of the annual report of Labor Commissioner Colonel Lewis T. Bryant, which has been sent to Governor Fort for transmission by him to the incoming Legislature.

Colonel Bryant says that in the administration of the laws regulating the employment of minors in factories his department has been confronted with the difficulty existing between the factory and compulsory school attendance law. He then goes on to say:

"In order to obtain a more satisfactory enforcement of both the factory law regarding the employment of minors, and the compulsory school law, I am of the opinion that the Department of Labor should have absolute control over the question of age, and that so far as the manufacturer is concerned a certificate of this department should fully protect him in the employment of minors. The school authorities should pass on the educational qualifications specified under the law, and it would be well to have their certificate made one of the requirements of issuing working papers. If it may be deemed advisable to specify educational test as a requisite for factory employment, the standard being such as to permit of a reasonable, uniform and universal enforcement. This arrangement, in my judgment, would have more satisfactory results than a law demanding a higher standard, but indifferently enforced.

"The jurisdiction of the Department of Labor should be extended, I believe, to include the enforcement of a law regulating the age of employment for minors in mercantile establishments at least during school hours."

Commissioner Bryant, commenting upon the factory conditions in New Jersey, says that present child labor conditions are good, and reflect the benefits of a strict enforcement of the law applying thereto. During the year the department ordered 229 children discharged.

Gesang's Enjoyable Dance.

The annual ball of the Gesang and Turn Verein, which was held in Saengerbund hall on New Year's eve was largely attended and an enjoyable affair. The committee in charge was Charles Stranzenbach, A. Wolf and Charles Kletz.

CHRISTMAS OBSERVANCES

Belated Celebrations are Held by Several Protestant Congregations.

FINE MUSIC WAS RENDERED.

Special Sermons a Feature—Many Sunday-schools Also Hold Appropriate Exercises.

Belated Christmas exercises were held by these congregations Sunday:

Congregational.

The services at the Congregational church Sunday included an uncommon occurrence, the celebration of both ends of Christ's life, the birth and the last communion. This would not have happened but for the storm of last Sunday. However, the program of music, both at the church and Sunday school services, were carried out with fidelity and a proper regard for both events.

The Christmas music at the church service was rendered by a quartet composed of Mrs. Theodore Mantz, soprano; Miss Nellie Winkler, contralto; John D. Townsend, tenor, and Charles E. Lewis, bass. This quartet assisted also at the exercises which followed in the Sunday school, the collection for Muhlenberg hospital was taken up at the morning service and was a splendid contribution.

The Sunday-school exercises were enjoyed by a large number of adults who remained after church to hear the children sing and recite.

Trinity Reformed.

When the members of Trinity Reformed church Sunday school marched into the church Sunday, singing "Onward Christian Soldiers," accompanied by the organ, and the concert admirably handled by E. D. Young, the immense audience arose and felt the influence of the martial music. It was the preliminary to a fine program of song and speech in commemoration of Christmastide.

With one or two omissions, the program prepared for last Sunday evening was carried out and provided no little amusement and cheer to the congregation. A feature of *the event which will remain in*delibly impressed upon those who were present was the quartet sung by Adele and Ruth Freeman, Mildred Clark and Helen *Thompson. Miss Adele Freeman dis*tinguished herself in the solo, "O Wonderful Light." Master Charles Todd would have won applause had it been permitted, for his playing of "O Come All Ye Faithful," on the violin, accompanied by Miss Coriell.

The chorus singing by the school was one of the most pleasing features of the evening and the preparation for the exercises was most evident in the singing of "O Bethlehem," led by Horace J. Martin.

The pastor, Rev. John Y. Broek delivered a short address in which he referred to the lesson brought to the pupils a year ago. At that time he referred to Christ as the Saviour. This time he spoke of Him as the Examiner and if all goes well he will tell about Him as the master next Christmas. Mr. Broek told the children to be imitators of God, for then they would not be imitating anything false.

Superintendent Smith added a few words of praise referring especially to the higher standard reached by the school and wished all the members a happy New Year.

First Baptist Church.

The Sunday-school of the First Baptist church held its Christmas exercises Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, when a program of a week ago, was rendered. Superintendent George H. Brown was in charge and a feature was an excellent address by Arthur M. Harris, of the school. The program follows:

Prelude, "Hymn to St. Cecelia," Gounod, Miss Florence Wohlfert, violin; Mrs. B. T. Barnes, piano and Howard Case, organ; carol, "God Rest You Merry Gentleman," school; invocation, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss; Christmas greeting, Emily Pilger; Scripture reading, school; contralto solo, Miss Josie Bracker; recitation, "The Shepherd's Vision," Helena Francisco; carol, "The Savior's Star," school; semi-chorus, "Rock the Cradle," primary department; recitation, "Christmas," Anna Sherwin; solo, Elsie Moore; carol, "Sing for Joy," junior department; offertory, "Minuetto," Beethoven, Miss Wohlfert, violin and Mrs. Barnes, piano; carol, "O, Merry Christmas Day," primary department; address, Arthur M. Harris; carol, "O, Little Town of Bethlehem," school; responsive reading, led by P. W. Jones, first assistant superintendent; carol, "The Christmas Song," junior department; benediction, pastor; postlude, organ. The offering was for the Day Nursery.

The chorus choir gave its Christmas program of music in the evening before a large congregation and the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, gave a talk on the authorship of well known hymns. The solo work was taken by Miss Louella C. Harris, soprano; Miss Josie Bracker, contralto; William Holmes, bass, and George Smith, tenor. The program follows:

Chambliss; anthem, choir; contralto solo, Miss Josie Bracker, with choral accompaniment; anthem, "Traditional Melody," arranged by Pinsuti, soprano and contralto; sermon, Dr. Chambliss; offertory anthem, choir; benediction, pastor; postlude, "Fantasia," Bach.

First M. E. Church.

The Christmas exercises of the Sunday school of the First M. E. church were held in Vincent chapel, Sunday afternoon, when there was an interesting musical program with recitations by the school, and an address by Harry Lee. Maurice E. McGrath was acting superintendent. The program follows:

In the evening the vested choir, under the direction of J. Edmund Skiff, organist and choirmaster, rendered "The Coming of the King," by Dudley Buck. The soloists were Miss Bertha vanNuis Willis, Harry R. Moyer, Bertram F. Tallamy, Miss Jessie Haynes and William Tallamy was the assisting artist.

Warren Chapel.

The children of the primary department of Warren chapel Sunday school had their Christmas exercises Sunday afternoon. A feature of the program was the presence of the members of Helen Lovell's class of Bethel chapel, who rendered Christmas songs. A solo was also rendered by Miss Nora B. Schenck. E. C. Parvin gave an interesting talk on the characteristics of the Gospel of St. Mathew. The pastor, Rev. J. C. McKelvey, also made an appropriate address.

At the morning service J. Frank Burd, of the Anti-Saloon League, told of the progress being made in the local option movement throughout the State.

Monroe Avenue Church.

Watch-night services during which the thirteenth anniversary was celebrated, were held at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church Friday night, under the auspices of the Epworth League. The pastor, Rev. Charles S. Kemble, spoke on "Bethlehem," led by Horace J. Martin.

The services began at 9:30 with an informal social, and at 10:30 refreshments were served by the league members. A novel arrangement in the decorations was used. Early in the evening there was displayed by means of an electric light the figures "1909," and after the last hour of the old year was spent in prayer and song, the above figures disappeared and in their place appeared those of "1910" as the New Year was ushered in. There was a general wishing of Happy New Year, the singing of "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," and in conclusion the church bell was rung for several minutes.

First Presbyterian Church.

The quartet choir of the First Presbyterian church, under the direction of Clifford A. Braider, organist and choirmaster, rendered the following Christmas music. The quartet is comprised of Miss Jeanette C. Grant, soprano; Miss Jessamine Bird, contralto; Otto Knauer, tenor; Herbert R. Byard, baritone. Miss Edith Cecelia Ruber, violinist, of New York, assisted. The program follows:

In the morning the Sunday-school held its Christmas exercises, comprising carols, recitations and an appropriate talk by the pastor, Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring.

Temple Baptist.

Christmas services were held at the Temple Baptist church, Sunday. In the morning the pastor, Rev. J. W. Musson, preached a sermon upon the theme, "The Birthplace of the Christ Child." MR. TOLLES' COMMITTEES

Common Council Head Puts New Men in Charge of Police Dept.

HE MAKES FEW CHANGES.

Mr. Buxton Retains Most Coveted Position As Chairman of the Finance Committee.

Contrary to expectations in some quarters, President Ralph I. Tolles occasioned considerable surprise in the announcement of committees at the first meeting of the 1910 Common Council, Saturday night. Mr. Tolles, who is entering upon his fourth years as a member of the Council and his fifth year as president, decided to make some pronounced changes for the coming year.

The greatest surprise was in the makeup of the committees on police and alms. There is a complete change in the police committee, Frank DeWitt Randolph, who has been chairman for the past seven or eight years, being succeeded by Charles C. Randolph as the head, while his associates are Frederic E. Mygatt and Frank L. Holt, both new men to the committee. Frank Randolph is made chairman of the alms committee, and his associates are Duncan W. Taylor and W. W. Wilson.

The heads and general makeup of the other committees remain practically unchanged. Herbert Buxton is retained as head of the finance committee, Duncan W. Taylor the fire and building, Frank L. Holt the laws and ordinances, William L. Gloak, street, Frederick E. Mygatt the public affairs, Francis L. Montgomery the street lighting, George S. Clay the license and W. W. Wilson the auditing.

In explaining his appointments, Mr. Tolles said that he had tried to be perfectly fair in the apportionment. He declared that the days for "cliques" in the Council were over and every member seemed to realize that they must al work in harmony for the best interests of the city.

Another important change made *in the committees is that of separat*ing the street and sewer committee, under a new law the sewer committee must be selected by ballot by the members of the Common Council, while the street committee, like the others, are appointed by the president.

Mr. Buxton moved the amendment of the rules to conform to the new law, re-arranging the committees. After this was done, Mr. Mygatt offered a resolution, which was adopted, that the members proceed to select a sewer committee. Those *chosen were William L. Gloak, chair*man; Charles C. Randolph, Frank DeWitt Randolph, Herbert Buxton and Francis L. Montgomery. The complete list of committees, other than the one on sewers, follows:

Finance—Herbert Buxton, chairman; Frederic E. Mygatt, Frank DeWitt Randolph, Duncan W. Taylor, George S. Clay.

Fire and Buildings—Duncan W. Taylor, chairman; Herbert Buxton, Frank L. Holt, Charles C. Randolph, William W. Wilson.

Police—Charles C. Randolph, chairman; Frederick E. Mygatt, Frank L. Holt.

Alms—Frank DeWitt Randolph, chairman; Duncan W. Taylor, William W. Wilson.

Laws and Ordinances—Frank L. Holt, chairman; George S. Clay, William L. Gloak.

BELIEVE LAWYERS ARE AFTER JUDGE'S SCALP.

Several members of the Union County Bar Association held a private meeting Thursday at the courthouse, Elizabeth, to prepare some bills for introduction in the approximent of a lawyer to preside over the Elizabeth Police Court in place of Judge Owen P. Mahon, the incumbent, who, it is alleged, is not a lawyer. Judge Mahon, it is reported, has incensed several Elizabeth lawyers by his rulings in cases tried before him and now they are after his scalp and declare they will get it through legislative enactments.

Judge Mahon is a Democrat and his champions assert that outside the coterie of lawyers whom he has offended and who want him displaced his administration has given satisfaction to the general public.

He has held the position several years.

New Year's Eve Supper.

The Independent Social Club held its first annual supper and watch-night meeting at the home of William Hartpence, on East Second street, Friday night. It was an enjoyable affair. Edward Koechlein acted in the capacity of toastmaster.

ST. MARY'S RECEIPTS FOR THE YEAR $30,990

An important feature of the services at St. Mary's church Sunday was the rendering of the financial statement of the parish for 1909 by Father Bogan. The report showed that during the year the total receipts were $30,990, the largest in the history of the parish.

The most gratifying feature of the year, said Father Bogan, was the payment of $14,500 for the old Washington School. The parish begins the year with a balance of $7,400 in the treasury. The money will be used as a nucleus for the convent fund. Plans are now being submitted by architects for the structure which will be started in April.

"THE CLIMAX" EVOKES ENTHUSIASTIC APPLAUSE

No better presentation of "The Climax" was ever given than that presented at the Plainfield theatre Friday night. Judging by the frequent curtain calls from the first act to the last, Effingham Pinto and Miss Leona Wenman had equal numbers of friends in the huge audience which greeted them on the raising of the curtain on the first scene.

The dramatic posibilities of the play stood out in bold relief through the excellence of the artists who presented it and they were applauded, deservingly, throughout.

The events of Friday night need no comment here. The ball at the Hartridge auditorium with its brilliant assemblage requires no description. Everyone knows that the costumes were really elegant and that a goodly sum has been realized for the hospital, which latter was the goal desired.

WM. M'INTOSH RESIGNS JERSEY CENTRAL JOB

William McIntosh, of Willow avenue, who has been superintendent of motive power of the New Jersey Central for several years, resigned his position to take effect January 1, and on the same date, Charles Chambers, of Cranford, was appointed to succeed him.

Mr. McIntosh, who is one of the foremost authorities in the country in matters of railroad motive power and construction of locomotives, formerly held a responsible position with the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad company, and he left that position to go with the New Jersey Central. During his service here he has designed several high-class locomotives, which have attracted considerable attention. Mr. McIntosh has been in poor health and only recently returned from Battle Creek, Mich., where he underwent special treatment.

Mr. Chambers has been associated with Mr. McIntosh, in the motive power department and is said to be fitted in every way for the responsible position to which he has been appointed.

FAMILY REUNIONS WERE THE ORDER OF THE DAY.

The Blair and Dowd families had a reunion at the residence of J. R. Blair on New Year's day at which there were twenty-one representatives of the two families present.

Another reunion was held at the Wyman and Trimmer families at William Wyman's home on East Front street. Here thirty-four enjoyed the day. Representatives from Middle Valley, Elizabeth, Neshanic and this city were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Senno, of East Seventh street, gave a dinner party to a number of friends on New Year's Day. Covers were laid for fifteen. The home was attractively decorated in red and green. Guests were present form Newark, Elizabeth, Bound Brook, Philadelphia and this city. Mr. and Mrs. Senno received a number of gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Alpaugh, of 223 East Ninth street, held their usual family reunion on New Year's Day For the past twenty years this reunion has been held on Thanksgiving Day, but owing to the illness of their son, D. S. Alpaugh, and the absence of another son, Edward J. Alpaugh, it was decided to hold the affair on New Year's Day. The children are Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Alpaugh and their daughters, Emmeiene, Bessie and Florence, of East Sixth street; Mr. and Mrs. Forman Alpaugh and daughters, Lucy and Elsie, and son, LeRoy, of Orange. The other two sons, Edward J. and Chester T., live at home.

Indirect Methods.

Bill—Did you say he remembers the first dollar he ever made?

Jill—Sure; it was counterfeit, and he did time for it!

MRS. A. L. FORCE IS DEAD

Beloved Wife of Newspaper Publisher Goes to Her Reward.

SHE SUDDENLY PASSES AWAY.

Woman of Beautiful Character Died An Hour After Heart Attack—Husband and Daughter Survive.

While surrounded by her family and in her usual bright spirits, Mrs. Clarissa M. Bradshaw Force, wife of A. L. Force, of Duer street, was suddenly attacked by aneurism at her home shortly after eight o'clock on New Year's eve, and passed away in an hour. Medical aid was promptly sent, despite the heroic efforts of the physician, Dr. Adams, to restore her.

Mrs. Force was a woman of exceptionally sunny disposition and fine womanly character and was greatly beloved by the hundreds who enjoyed her friendship during the many years she had made her home here before being called to the Life Eternal. Her domestic life was ideal and widespread sympathy is felt for the grief stricken husband and daughter. While she had passed the three score term, being in her sixty-second year, she retained the brightness and apparent health of one of half her years.

Together with a number of friends, she celebrated her sixty-first birthday anniversary on Tuesday night and at that time, as at all others, she was the life of the party and in excellent health except for a slight affectation of the heart from which she had suffered for a number of years.

For some twenty-three years, Mrs. Force had been a faithful worker in and member of Trinity Reformed church and her good deeds and kindly influence was marked in that congregation. She was a devout Christian and found much enjoyment and comfort in church work. For two terms she had been secretary and again for two terms president of the Ladies' Christian Work Society and was active in other departments of church usefulness.

Mrs. Force was born in Brooklyn on December 26, 1848, and was the daughter of the late Joseph A. and Sarah Bradshaw. The family removed to Newark, where she was married on September 16, 1868, to Al*bert L. Force, of this city*, at the Bradshaw residence in Mulberry street. Rev. Dr. Levy, pastor of the Kinney Street Baptist church, officiated. Mr. Force was then associated with his brother, the late William L. Force, in the printing business here. Later they become publishers of the Constitutionalist. For many years Mr. Force has been the editor and proprietor of The Daily Press, which he founded in 1882.

The couple took up their residence in East Third street and shortly afterwards removed to their own home in Duer street, which they have occupied for thirty-five years. By the union, there were two daughters, Clara Josephine, who died twenty-three years ago, and whose death was a great blow to the couple, and Lillian Augusta, who survives her mother. Mrs. Force is also survived by a brother, Robert Bradshaw, of Newark. Her only other living relatives in Plainfield are T. O., J. Hervey, John H. and Charles A. Doane, who are cousins.

There were few dry eyes, when Rev. Mr. Broek in a prayer at Trinity's morning service Sunday offered a thanks for Mrs. Force's beautiful life and works. The pastor, himself, was deeply moved, so much so that he changed the announced subject for his sermon, preaching instead on the topic "Make Sure of Tomorrow." He said that Mrs. Force's beginning of the new year Trinity had suffered an irreparable loss in her death and he referred to her sweet Christian womanhood, her domestic happiness and love and her devotion to the church and its upbuilding.

REV. JOHN Y. BROEK SPEAKS AT NETHERWOOD CHURCH.

Rev. John Y. Broek conducted a special service at the Netherwood church Sunday and Sunday-school for his subject "The Conditions of a Successful Church." Mr. Broek selected an appropriate text and said in part that every great movement must have a leader. In the religious history of His Kingdom God has always provided leaders to carry on His work. We need especially leadership in the church today, but organization was essential. We must work together where we are doing things for God.

Combination is God's principle. Order is God's first law. We share privileges and we must also share burdens. God has organized His church here on earth that she might live in peace and holiness.

A successful church needs co-operation on the part of its members. One member cannot say to another, "I have no need of you." We all need each other and the church needs all its members.

There and Back.

"Papa, may I take my auto
In the country for a ride?
I will start out early, papa,
And be home by eventide."

TROLLEY SERVICE TALK

Mayor Tells Trade Board Committee of His Efforts to Get Decent Cars.

HEADS THE CORRESPONDENCE.

Mr. Fisk Confirms Report that Col. Hine Broke Faith With Him On Trolley Improvement Agreement.

President-elect William Jeffery, J. Fred MacDonald and Charles H. Frost, from the Board of Trade, met in conference with Mayor Charles J. Fisk, President R. I. Tolles and Councilmen Charles C. Randolph and William L. Gloak, in the Mayor's office, last night, for the purpose of discussing matters relative to local trolley conditions.

It was recently announced by Mr. Jeffery that he planned to make a thorough investigation into trolley conditions here, and he desired all possible information from Mayor Fisk as to what had been done in the past. Last night Mr. Fisk afforded Mr. Jeffery and his committee every bit of information at hand, and dictated a statement covering the case fully, which was given to Mr. Jeffery.

At the conclusion of the reading of all communications passing between the Mayor and the Public Service Corporation officials, in which the former showed how he had tried to remedy poor conditions, suggested to Mr. Jeffery that he, as the new head of the Board of Trade, take the matter up with the Public Service Corporation. He said that the company's officials were so accustomed to dealing with municipal authorities that it got to be an old story, while if Mr. Jeffery, representing more than two hundred members of the Board of Trade, should go to the company, it would be more apt to listen to complaints.

The suggestion seemed to be received with favor by the new head of the Board of Trade, although Mr. McDonald said he did not know whether the board wants to pull the chestnuts out of the fire for the city or not.

In the communications read by the Mayor, it was shown that at frequent intervals he had called the company to task for alleged infractions of the ordinance under which the trolley system is operated here. It was further made plain that the company's attention had been called to old and dirty cars, flat wheels, often giving the number of the car. The correspondence showed that the company's officials had taken cognizance of the complaints and made inspections.

One important thing developed at the conference and that was that Col. Hine did promise Mayor Fisk and others that in return for the privilege of double tracking the line in Watchung avenue and East Front street, the city should have new cars on the following January or thereabouts, and that Col. Hine had broken faith. It was conclusively shown that judging by the action of the company it does not intend to do anything more than absolutely necessary for Plainfield.

Mr. Fisk further explained that under the ordinance the city could compel the company to adopt the underground trolley system of motive power, removing the poles and overhead wires, and he thought it would be a good idea to take steps to do this, if the company fails to live up to the letter and spirit of the ordinance.

The Mayor stated further that of his own knowledge the cars now being operated on the local lines were used by the North Jersey Street Railway Company, long before the Public Service Corporation was thought of. They have simply been repainted and repaired and made to do service here. It was agreed that local cars at this season of the year are not kept clean, neither are they properly heated, while the general equipment is in poor condition and needing attention.

Mr. Fisk said that he had informed Col. Hine that Plainfield does not want a large type of car such as is operated on the main line, neither does it care whether the cars are of the single or double end type, so long as the equipment is first-class.

The Board of Trade representatives listened attentively to all that Mr. Fisk had to say and promised to inform the city officials of any results obtained. The board committee will meet today and decide on a plan of action.

Another matter discussed briefly last night was that in reference to better lighting of Front street. This was brought out by Mr. Jeffery simply for the purpose of getting information as to what had been done. The conference was a harmonious one throughout and it seemed to be the opinion of those present that much good will be accomplished in consequence.

WAR VETERANS INSTALL

Department Commander Officiates at Winfield Scott Post Function.

THE RELIEF CORPS ALSO.

Many High Officers of the G. A. R. Take Part — Some Speeches Are Made.

The officers-elect of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A., and the Women's Relief Corps, auxiliary to the Post, were installed jointly at G. A. R. headquarters in Reform Hall, last night, and the occasion was of special significance because of the presence of Department Commander James Connolly, of Newark, and several members of his staff, as well as Department President Mrs. Anna M. Spramaker, of Trenton, and others of her staff.

The Post officers were installed first by Past Department Commander Alfred Atkins, of Roselle, and all the work was done without the ritual, making it very impressive. Owing to the fact that H. Craig Smith, the commander-elect is quarantined at home because of the illness of a member of his family, he could not be present and a proxy was used. He will be installed later. The officers installed last night were as follows:

Senior vice-commander, Charles B. Stephens; junior vice-commander, William Green; surgeon, Joseph Thames; quartermaster, John R. Naylor; officer of the day, Stephen R. Struthers; officer of the guard, Edward Vanderweg; chaplain, Nathan Pennington; adjutant, Dr. J. F. Berg; sergeant-major, Isaac Houston; quartermaster-sergeant, William Townley.

Then the officers-elect of the Corps were installed by Past Department President Mrs. Susie Elizabeth Wilkes, of Trenton. Department President Mrs. Anna M. Spramaker, of Trenton, acted as conductor, while Mrs. Jennie C. Smith, Past Department Commander John Lawrence, of New Brunswick and Chief of Staff David Keefe, of Newark, assisted in installing the color bearers. The work of the installing officers was highly complimented. The officers installed were as follows:

President, Mrs. Kezia K. Frazee; senior vice-president, Mrs. Hattie Gibbons; junior vice-president, Mrs. Eva Summers; chaplain, Mrs. Sarah Mattox; treasurer, Miss May T. Smith; conductor, Mrs. Mary Meiers; guard, Mrs. Elizabeth Naylor; color bearers, Mrs. Jennie D. Bergman, Miss Margaret Summers, Miss Evelyn Manley, Mrs. John Kitchell; assistant conductor, Mrs. Stephen R. Struthers; assistant guard, Mrs. Maria Terry; secretary, Miss Try Mattox; patriotic instructor, Mrs. Frederick Lewis; press reporter, Miss Jennie D. Smith; delegates to national convention, Miss Try Mattox and Mrs. Mary Meiers; alternates, Mrs. Anna Smith and Mrs. Eva Summers.

In addition to Department Commander James Connolly, of Newark, other staff officers present were Department chaplain, L. T. Abbott, of Asbury Park; assistant quartermaster-general, Walter Tully, of Jersey City; chief of staff, David Keefe, of Newark; judge advocate, James English, Jr., of Paterson; Past Department Commanders Lawrence, of New Brunswick, and William Windle, of Cranford.

After the installation there were a number of good speeches by the visiting officers and Captain William C. Smith, who is also a past department commander. Then the Women's Relief Corps provided plenty of good things to eat and a social time was enjoyed. The visiting department officers were loud in their praise of the excellent work of both the Post and Corps.

An Opportunity For Young Men.

The Union Building and Loan Association, of this city, in another column of The Daily Press, offers exceptional opportunities to young men who are anxious to own a home. The cost of a loan through this association is less than a straight mortgage plan. A new series will be opened on Monday night at 146 Park avenue, and the officers of the association would be pleased to talk the matter over with any interested person.

Union Street Defeats Holy Cross.

The Union street hockey team, made up of P. H. S. and Holy Cross players, defeated the strong Netherwood Hockey Club, Monday, at the brick yard, by the score of 7 to 3. Phillips, Conover and Tollotson were the forwards for the Union streets. There will be a return game at Ohl's pond Saturday afternoon.

LECTURE ON FORESTRY

State Commissioner Whipple Gives an Instructive Talk at Additorium.

HE PRAISES GIFFORD PINCHOT.

President Roosevelt Also Lauded For Originating the Forestry Movement.

The inception of forest conservation, the results achieved, what conservation means to the welfare of the American nation and how to help the conservation movement were made plain in a lecture delivered by James S. Whipple, State commissioner of forests, game and fish for New York State, last night, at the Hartridge auditorium. A large audience greeted Mr. Whipple, who held the attention of his hearers for almost two hours.

Commissioner Whipple paid a tribute to Gifford Pinchot, in which he said: "There is no man in our country today, who has done more for the people of this country, for the fight against special privilege. The policies he initiated are the policies that must control if we are to be what this nation ought to be in the future."

Mr. Whipple also praised former President Roosevelt for what he had done in the interest of conservation. Quoting Mr. Roosevelt, he declared, "The conservation of our natural resources is the buring question of the time."

The Commissioner commended the hunting license law, which was framed to prevent ignorant foreigners from destroying the bird life of the state.

The Ashokan dam in the Catskills, costing $162,000,000, came in for some criticisms, because the engineers in charge don't think trees are necessary for the success of that great reservoir, while 36 to 40 inches of rainfall take place there each year, the evaporation is ten times greater without forests. The greatest natural reservoir, he said, is the forest.

Mrs. E. H. Harriman's gift of 10,000 acres of land to New York State for a Park Preserve, came in for words of commendation. The speaker suggested that New Jersey establish a similar preserve on their side of the Hudson. The Commissioner is in favor of land being exempt from taxation, when given to tree planting.

The latter half of the lecture was illustrated by the views of forests, producing pictures of New York State, the Palisades, Adirondacks; the Catskills, Germany, France and Switzerland.

Charles W. McCutchen introduced J. S. Whipple and paid a glowing tribute to the eminent forester from New York State.

REV. MR. STEVENSON ENTERTAINS CLERICUS

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, entertained The Plainfield Clericus at his home yesterday afternoon, at luncheon, after which he presented a paper prepared by himself on the topic, "The Peace Movement in Missions." It was an able paper and covered the topic in a concise and interesting way.

The members of the clericus present included Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, Rev. Elery B. Bowers, Rev. George A. Warner, Rev. Cortlandt H. Mallery, Rev. Dr. W. H. Nelsen, Rev. Morgan Ashley, of this city; Revs. Rush and Cross, of Westfield; Revs. Dr. Otis A. Glazebrook, H. H. Oberly, J. R. Atkinson and Mr. Little, of Elizabeth; Rev. Mr. Phelps, of Bound Brook; Rev. Mr. Sylvester, of Somerville; Rev. Mr. Conover and Rev. Mr. Siegel, of Bernardsville.

Fight for Counsel Still On.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders failed to select a counsel to the board at their meeting in Somerville yesterday. When the board organized a tie vote for the position resulted between John Hoy, who has held the job for twenty years and Hugh Gaston. In expectation that the matter would be settled yesterday both candidates had a full complement of their friends at the meeting and considerable wire pulling ensued between the rival factions.

Mr. Spangenberg's "Rot."

Exactly twenty-four people listened to Leonard Spangenberg deliver a "lecture" on "Municipal Affairs" last night in Coward's hall, which he hired. He was not taken seriously by any of those present so far as could be ascertained. Many of his allusions to former office holders drew laughter instead of serious consideration from his audience.

GOT SOUND SPANKING BY ORDER OF COURT

Cornelius Webley, one of the "incorrigible class," will ere this have felt the weight of his father's displeasure for his recent actions in the public schools. Webley has been before Judge Runyon before for misconduct and his release by the Judge this morning was obtained only with the understanding that he be soundly whipped.

Detective Sergeant Flynn was delegated to see that the edict of the court was carried out and unless all signs fail master Cornelius is now repentant.

SCHOOL BOY DRUNK; POLICE INVESTIGATING

Harry Lewis, a twelve year old public school-boy, became intoxicated yesterday afternoon, requiring the services of City Physician Lufburow to straighten him out. When brought to police headquarters Harry was frothing at the mouth and had every appearance of alcoholic poisoning. Dr. Lufburrow administered emetics and soon had the boy out of danger.

When arraigned this morning the boy was apparently still suffering from his indulgence, but Judge William Runyon managed to get enough information for him to place the fault where it belongs. A rigid investigation will be made as to the source of the supply of liquor and those who are responsible for the child's condition will probably get their just deserts.

HETFIELD JR. CHAIRMAN OF CITY G.O.P. COMMITTEE

The City Republican Executive committee held its first meeting of the year, last night, for organization, and Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., assistant prosecutor, was chosen chairman, to succeed Winfield S. Angleman. George W. Moy was elected vice-chairman, while William H. Townsend was retained in office as secretary and treasurer.

The change in the head of the committee was not altogether unexpected, for it had been understood that Mr. Angleman would decline to serve another year. Mr. Hetfield has been active not only in city, but county affairs as well, and always keeps in touch with the political situation. Mr. Moy is one of the ablest men in the "New Idea" movement. Chairman Hetfield will announce his committees at the next meeting of the committee.

YOUNG HIGHWAYMAN CAUGHT IN THE ACT

Through "dumb luck," Charles B. Wicht, manager of the Clarkhurst Dairy office, 122 North avenue, nabbed a twelve-year-old boy last night, who a few moments before had taken two dollars from the cash register in the store. Since making the capture, Mr. Wicht believes he has solved the mystery of several petty robberies of cash which has been going on since the holidays, in which about forty dollars disappeared from the register in small amounts.

It was a lucky "catch." Mr. Wicht and A. T. Jordan, the distributing agent of the dairy, had closed up the office as usual at six o'clock. Later in the evening Mr. Wicht had occasion to use the telephone. He went to the office and while ringing for the call heard a noise under the counter. Looking down he discovered the boy crouched in a corner.

It is not likely that the case will be prosecuted. Mr. Wicht took the boy home and told his parents of the thefts which have been going on. The boy confessed. He made his entrance to the office from the rear of the store.

Only a Sick Collie.

Chief George Weiss was summoned to Fairview avenue yesterday morning to shoot a mad dog. When he arrived on the scene he discovered that an untagged collie was recovering from a fit. The canine is now at the borough lockup awaiting its owner.

At Heavenly Rest Church Tonight.

Tonight at the Church of the Heavenly Rest there will be an entertainment of unusual merit in which members of the Men's club will participate. Songs, topical and otherwise, will be features and a famous baritone from New York will sing some of the old songs.

BUSINESS AT POSTOFFICE

Postmaster Bird Reports That Year's Receipts Were $73,776.93.

WAS AN INCREASE OF $5,900.30

950,000 One Cent and 1,795,000 Two Cent Stamps Sold—12,582 Special Deliveries—Box Rentals $442.45.

Postmaster Elias H. Bird's annual report of the year ending December 31 shows that it was the greatest in the history of the local postoffice. The report figures that the net increase over the business of 1908 was $5,900.30. The total business for 1909 amounted to $73,776.93, which represents a vast amount of work in the local postoffice.

All of the departments show an increase over the preceding year. Postmaster Bird has been ably supported in his management of the postoffice by an efficient corps of men, and when the volume of business is considered, it is surprising that so few mistakes have been made. The number of stamps of all denominations sold during the past year follows:

One cent stamps, 950,000; two cent, 1,795,000; three cent, 11,000; four cent, 29,500; five cent, 33,500; six cent, 13,000; eight cent, 16,500; ten cent, 18,000; ten cent special delivery, 2,800; fifteen cent, 1,900; fifty cent, 180; $1, 3; $5, 8; $2, 36; overdue, 11,200, making a total of 2,-$86,123.

There were 10,750 stamp books sold and 320,375 postal cards, while there were 559,475 envelopes sold. There was received for special request envelopes, $6,457.42. There were 12,552 special delivery letters delivered, which multiplied by eight cents, the amount paid to special messengers shows a total of $1,-004.16. The amount paid for postoffice box rentals was $442.45. The amount paid for second-class matter by publishers was $609.53.

While the stamp and other departments show a large increase, the same is true in the money order department. During the year $170,000, 18,496 domestic money orders issued and 3,358 foreign money orders issued. The local department delivered 11,132 domestic money orders and 207 foreign money orders. Up to November the business in this department aggregated over $170,000, a pretty good sum for an office of the Plainfield class. This, Mr. Bird says, represents a natural steady growth in postal business and is not of the mushroom variety.

CHARITY BALL NETTED TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS

The charity ball committee has reported at a meeting of the Muhlenberg Hospital governors that it was not ready to make a detailed statement as yet, as all accounts had not been settled, but that it could be stated that there would be a net profit of approximately $2,000 for the institution. The governors passed a resolution extending their thanks to the various committees and all others who helped to make the charity ball so great a success.

A special committee was appointed to consider the advisability of having the hospital ambulance kept at the police station quarters in the future instead of at the livery stable. There are ample accommodations at the police station, and it is believed that this will make the service more effective.

The report of the medical board for December showed 27 patients remaining in the hospital on December 1, and 53 more patients admitted during the month of December, making a total of 80 patients treated. Thirty-eight were discharged cured, nine were discharged improved, and three were discharged unimproved. Six patients died. In the contagious ward there were seven patients, and five were discharged cured, leaving two remaining in the contagious ward on January 1. In the dispensary there were 65 patients treated and a total of 169 daily visits to the dispensary. There were 646 general hospital days.

In the tuberculosis pavilion, which is managed and operated by Muhlenberg Hospital, there have been eight patients admitted, all of whom are remaining and doing well.

Election Was Illegal.

The North Plainfield Firemen's Relief Association elected officers last night as scheduled, but discovery was made today that the election was not in compliance with the law. As a result of the misunderstanding another election will be necessary.

GERMANS HAVE BIG TIME

Gesang and Turn Verein's Annual Meeting an Enjoyable Affair.

TWO ENTERTAINMENTS TO COME

Stephen Schlief Chosen President, Gets a Rosewood Gavel and a Big Bouquet.

Presentations and other manifestations of the good old German brand of sociability marked the installation of the newly elected officers of the Gesang and Turn Verein in the society's hall on Somerset street last night.

Two coming entertainments of interest are the annual masquerade ball on Monday night, February 21, and the carnival for members and their families on Sunday night, February 13. Menzenbach; financial secretary, August Wolff; treasurer, Fred Becker; finance committee, William Bamberger, George Zepp and A. One of the pleasing features of the session was the presentation of a rosewood gavel and a huge bouquet of flowers to President Schlief. Fred Becker, who is physical director of the turning classes, composed *of boys and members, received a lov*ing cup as a Christmas gift as a mark of appreciation from his pupils. Prof. Eichorn, of Elizabeth, leader of the singing section, was not forgotten by the members of that branch of the society, and he was the recipient of a ten dollar gold piece.

ANDREW M'LEAN PARKER ON 'MANHATTAN BRIDGE'

An interesting and instructive talk on the erection of bridges was given to the members of the Men's Club, of the Crescent Avenue church, last night by Andrew McLean Parker, of this city, who was one of the contracting engineers in the construction of the new Manhattan Bridge over the East River.

Mr. Parker's address was devoid of all technical terms and easy to comprehend. The speaker interspersed his remarks with highly interesting incidents which featured the construction of the wonderful connecting links between New York and Brooklyn.

The highest grade of steel that could be procured in the market was used in the construction of the new Manhattan bridge, declared the speaker. He described the building of the anchorage, the placing of the cables in position, and the erection of the temporary and finally the permanent roadways. The work was executed at such a rapid clip that twenty carloads of structural steel, was used a day.

SCOTT TERRY LOST CASE

His Assertion That Check is Forgery Disproven in District Court.

"ALIBI" A DISMAL FAILURE.

Terry Finally Admitted He Might Be Mistaken and Judgment Goes Against Him.

The suit of Joseph Gallagher, formerly the proprietor of a roadhouse in Rahway avenue, Elizabeth, against Winfield Scott Terry, of Plainfield, trial of which was continued yesterday in the District Court at Elizabeth, was ended late in the afternoon, when Judge Whittemore gave judgment for $142.50 to the plaintiff. Gallagher sued for $125, which he claimed to have loaned Terry, September 20, 1907.

There was considerable interest in the suit, as the parties involved are also the principals in the Hetfield will case which is still in litigation in the Union County Orphans Court. Gallagher was named as the heir of Corra Hetfield, an old man who died while living at the Rahway avenue hotel. Terry, as a relative of Hetfield, joined with other heirs at law and contested the will.

The suit of Gallagher against Terry was begun last week when testimony was taken for one whole day. Terry at that time attempted to prove an "alibi," claiming that on the day Gallagher said he loaned him the money he was in Clover Hill purchasing horses. He fixed the date by claiming that he had at that time requested his sister to loan him $300. Terry also alleged that he had never seen the check that Gallagher said he gave him and pronounced the endorsement on a check offered as evidence by the plaintiff not his own. Terry also denied that he had borrowed the money.

Yesterday Terry went on the stand and testified that he might have been mistaken about the day he was at Clover Hill. The plaintiff introduced David M. Runyon, the cashier of the First National Bank, of this city, who testified that Terry had been to the bank on the day in question and had submitted a check signed by Gallagher.

J. W. WILSON ARRESTED FOR FAILING TO RETURN A RIG.

James W. Wilson, 22 years old, a book and subscription agent for Collier's Weekly, hired a rig for two hours from the Knickerbocker Stables, in New York, Saturday afternoon, to take Miss Grace McKibbin, also of New York, for a drive. When he returned he drove to a livery stable and Sunday morning he sent a negro for the rig, intending to give Miss McKibbin another drive.

When he called at the young woman's home, detectives arrested him on complaint of Emil Seelig, proprietor of the Knickerbocker stables. Wilson, the police say, was arrested in this city, a while ago for the theft of two bicycles. There is no record of such a case here.

FORM A CONGREGATION

Netherwood Reformed Church Formally Organized by Classis.

REV. DR. VANCE PREACHES.

Representatives of Classis Conduct Service and Organization Meeting—Church Is Free of Debt.

The Netherwood Reformed church was formally organized Wednesday and Rev. Royal A. Stout appointed the minister in charge. The Newark Classis consisting of Rev. Charles B. Condict, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, Newark; Rev. William W. Comper, of the Bellville Reformed church; Rev. Stuart N. Hutchinson, First Reformed, of Newark; Rev. Dr. J. I. Vance, North Reformed, of Newark; Rev. John Y. Brock, Trinity Reformed, of this city; Elder Mitchell, of the First Reformed church, of Newark; and elders F. E. Smith and H. J. Martin, of Trinity Reformed, Plainfield. Rev. Royal A. Stout was elected a corresponding member of the classis.

The services with devotional exercises at which Rev. Mr. Condict presided. The invocation was pronounced by Rev. Mr. Stout responsive reading led by Rev. Mr. Condict and the Scripture by Rev. Stuart Nye Hutchinson, and prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Conner. Miss S. Etta Raybert sang a solo accompanied on the organ by A. L. Titsworth. Rev. James I. Vance, pastor, of the North Reformed church, of Newark, and president of the Board of Domestic Missions delivered the sermon taking for his text from Philippians, 1:27, and spoke as follows:

Dr. Vance took for his text Philippians 1:27: "Only let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ: that whether I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs that ye stand fast in one spirit, with one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel."

Dr. Vance said in part:

"The lives we live as Christians must give credit to what we teach. Members of a church must live worthy of the gospel. We must rebuke skepticism and shame sin. This will make a conquering church. Let this newly organized church be made of people whose lives are worthy of the gospel.

"Paul pleads for a united church. In order that we may have such a church, we must fight shoulder to shoulder, and stand foursquare to all winds that blow. If the church of Christ would only stand together, she could conquer almost everything. The apostle in this text has united to that it may be a permanent church. Christians should stand shoulder to shoulder for certain things. Paul does not speak so much about corporate union, as Christian personal union. Christians must be brotherly and kind toward each other. If this occurs, the organization will take care of itself.

"We must get together for the sake of the gospel and for sake of Calvary. If we can get together for the sake of trade, can we not get together for Christ. We must not stand in estrangement of each other, for the sake of sectarianism.

"We need people in the church who are dead in earnest. The power is not in our earnestness, but in our message. The gospel is power of God unto salvation and must become our companion in arms. Whether this church grow rapidly or slowly, become self-supporting or aided financially for a length, the important thing is to live lives worthy of the gospel."

After the sermon the call from the classis for the special meeting was read by Rev. Royal A. Stout. The petition contained thirty-two signatures of residents of the vicinity asking the classis to organize the new church. The classis went into executive session and the petition was granted. Seventeen members were received into membership by letters other churches while fifteen were from other churches while fifteen were admitted upon confession of faith. The elected candidates were examined by Rev. Mr. Vance and upon their admission the church was declared duly organized.

Rev. John Y. Brock pronounced the benediction.

The church begins its work free from debt and is founded on sound principles which practically guarantees its continued existence. No small congregation ever started under more favorable circumstances. The history of the church, toward establishing the little church is interesting. The matter was presented to the classis on April 23, 1909, at the spring session. Money was raised by the classis to undertake the work and by considered endeavor and willing workers among the prospective members the building was erected and dedicated on July 7 last, creating a record in church building in this city. The church was well filled Wednesday notwithstanding the storm.

The following members were admitted: S. O. Rush, Enoch Berry, Isaac Stevenson, Gustave Frumerie, Richard Mauser, Valentine Steenson, James H. Steenson, Mrs. S. O. Rush, Mrs. C. Berry, Mrs. J. Steenson, Mrs. G. Frumerie, Mrs. K. Yeomans, Mrs. G. York, Mrs. G. H. Young, Mrs. S. E. Carson, Miss Helen Carson, Clarence Berry, Mrs. Walter Coon, Mrs. Fred, Frey, Gertrude Berry, Elizabeth Steenson, Mrs. C. Gonod, Claude Gonor, Mrs. G. D. Merkle, Mrs. W. arson, Rose Carson, William Carson, James C. Hansen and Mrs. J. C. Hansen.

MOTHERS, CAN YOUR BABIES BEAT THIS?

Irene, the ten months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald, of West Fourth street, can always be able to count Wednesday, January 5, 1910, as one of the unlucky days of her career.

Little Miss Fitzgerald encountered three thrilling experiences Wednesday, but she passed through all unscathed. At 9 o'clock in the morning Irene rolled out of bed for a starter. Two hours later she nearly swallowed an open safety pin which she picked up while creeping on the floor. The little one was probably saved from choking to death by prompt attention from her mother who succeeded in extricating the pin from Irene's throat.

Before being put in her cradle for the night, Irene succeeded in scalding her hands and arms by upsetting a cup of hot tea while occupying a seat on her father's lap at the supper table.

MR. GILMORE QUIETLY WED TO MISS YAEGER

Mrs. Charles Yaeger, of Webster place, today announced the marriage of her daughter, Miss Emma Yaeger, to Harry J. Gilmore, of Westfield. The announcement came as a great surprise to the many friends of the couple as well as the bride's family, who did not know of the marriage until today. The couple tried to keep it quiet, but in some mysterious way it became known.

The couple was married at Jersey City on November 30, by Rev. Gotlieb Andreae, pastor of a Presbyterian church in that city. Since that time the groom has been living at his home in Westfield and the bride has been living at her home. Their plans for the future are not made as yet.

The bride was formerly a member of Grace church choir, and has been active in the work of the parish. The groom is employed at the City National Bank, and is also an athlete of some note. He was a member of last year's Y. M. C. A. baseball team, being the star second baseman. Both the bride and groom have a host of friends.

STATE'S REVENUE FROM ITS INTEREST

An increase of over 100 per cent. in the amount of money received by State Treasurer Voorhees, as interest on State moneys, will be shown in the annual report of State Comptroller West to the Legislature. This demonstrates the wisdom with which Treasurer Voorhees has handled the State's funds. The interest is paid on deposits in various banks in New Jersey.

The fiscal year ended October 31 last, and at that time $84,000 had been received in interest from State deposits. For the previous year from similar sources the State received $47,490.19.

In 1907-08 the expenses of the comptroller's office totaled $20,295.55, and those of the treasurer $17,739.91, while $4,322.37 added expense was entailed in the two offices as the result of the new system of compelling all institutions to draw their appropriated funds on requisitions showing exact expenditures. Thus the total departments was $42,357.83, leaving a net profit of $5,112.32 over the cost of administering State finances.

The comptroller's office cost about $1,000 less to administer in 1908-09 than the year previous, making the outlay $19,000 in round figures. The treasurer's office cost slightly more than a year ago, for here the total cost was approximately $18,000, while there is an added expense of about $5,000 for handling the new by institutions. These sums deducted from the income of $84,000 received from the deposits show that there is a net profit of $42,000 on account of interest.

It is not likely that the record made last year will be equaled the ensuing year. The State has had large sums of money on deposit and has received the interest pending the distribution of the funds. The revenue derived from interest on State funds covers the cost of maintaining the comptroller's and State treasurer's offices, with a balance of about $40,000 besides for the use of the treasury.

The Plainfield Society for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis acknowledges the receipt of $20, a contribution from the Housewives Social Club.

ASKS FOR MAIL CARRIER

Postmaster Garretson, of Dunellen, Hopes to Establish Delivery Service.

MERCHANTS URGING SCHEME.

Recommendations Will Be Made to Postoffice Department in Report Which is Now Being Prepared.

Postmaster Henry C. Garretson, of Dunellen, in his report which he is preparing for the postoffice department at Washington will recommend the appointment of one letter carrier for that office. Mr. Garretson in his efforts to give the residents of that place carrier service will have the united support of the merchants as well as all citizens. While no movement to prepare a petition on the part of citizens to the postoffice authorities it is likely that such a step will be taken.

Under the existing postal rules towns in the third class, as Dunellen is classified, are not entitled to carriers, but since the introduction and successful operation of the rural delivery system, exceptions have been made to the general rule.

The rules state that offices to be designated in the second class must transact an annual business of not less than $10,000. As the business of the Dunellen office approximated a little over half that amount last year, and has shown a steady growth, the postoffice department, it is thought, will coincide with Postmaster Garretson's suggestions.

Several years ago the hopes of Dunellen's citizens for better postal service were elevated by an agitation calling for the consolidation of that office, New Market, South Plainfield, Fanwood and Scotch Plains, with the Plainfield office, the local office, being the central receiving and distributing point, but the scheme failed to materialize.

A. G. HOOLEY PRESIDENT OF THE KENNEL CLUB

Election of officers for the coming year, together with reports of the past year, comprised the chief business at the annual meeting of the Plainfield Kennel club, held at Truell Hall, Wednesday. Owing to the bad weather only twenty members of the club put in an appearance, but the meeting was interesting and much enthusiasm was shown.

A Clinton Wilmerding, who was president last year, gave a review of the club's history during the first twelve months, and then announced that under all circumstances would he be able to continue in office, although urged to do so. Resolutions were adopted thanking the retiring officers for their earnest efforts in behalf of the club.

Abram G. Hooley was chosen president of the club for the coming year, and owing to his great interest as a dog fancier and the fact that he has one of the best kennels in the country, will insure the continued success of the club. The other officers chosen are as follows:

Vice-president, John C. Haywood; secretary, Charles Faber; treasurer, Edward F. Feickert; honorary vice-presidents, Robert A. Fairbairn, William J. Buttfield and Edwin S. Hooley.

There was considerable discussion regarding the bench show for the coming year, it promises to be much bigger and better than ever. It will be held immediately following the annual horse show in June, and the date will be announced later.

The report of the first annual bench show held last June was received and proved to be very gratifying. It was stated that the deficit only amounted to $27, and when it is considered that a $1,500 show was held, the small shortage was considered remarkable. Every kennel club expects to lose money the first year, but the results here were far better than expected. The local club has a large and gratifying membership, comprising the best people of the city and nearby places. The few mistakes of last year will be avoided at the coming show and there is no reason why it should not be equal to any outdoor show held in this country. All of last year's exhibitors have promised to return and there will be the usual attractive prizes.

Just to Show the Dog.

"Tell me when we get to Blank street," said the woman with the dog.

"Blank street!" called the conductor, stopping his car.

"Here's Blank street, lady."

But the woman held the dog up to the window and pointed to a near by house.

"Does 'oo see it, Pinkie?", she cooed. "That's where we used to live, Pinkie."

The conductor started the car.

"I didn't want to get off," she explained, "I only wanted to show Pinkie our old home."—Detroit News.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON BECOMES AN AUTHOR

The famous Big Six of the New York Nationals has just about completed the manuscript of a baseball story for boys of all ages, and it is the promise of his publishers, the R. J. Bodmer Co., of New York, that it will be ready for delivery in February. This will be the first of a series of boys' stories on sports, to be known as "The Matty Books." Associated with "Christy" Mathewson, the "Father of the Fadeaway," in the preparation of "The Matty Books" is W. W. Aulick, the sporting writer, who will act as editor of the various publications.

The king of writers is an occasional visitor to this city at the home of his brother-in-law, Dr. P. B. Cregar, on Grant avenue. During his visits here scores of local fans made his acquaintance.

Matty, in speaking of his new position, says he hopes the official scorers won't mark up too many errors against him.

"I don't claim to be a Shakespeare in the Literary League," says the Old King, "but I believe I've got something to say to the boys, that may interest them, so I haven't hit on a name yet for this baseball story, and if any of the fans, old or young, think they have a happy title, I'll be mighty glad to hear from them at the office of my publishers, Suite 608, 437 Fifth avenue, New York. I think a good way to select a title would be to take the one the majority of fans favor.

"The story is about a boy who comes to the leading college of the United States from the other end of the continent. He isn't very well off in money, but he has a natural ability for ball-playing, and this brings him something in the end. Maybe the readers will be able to trace a resemblance between the hero of the book and a certain young player who gets his name in the box score about every time the Yankees play a game of ball. I've written the story just as I have thought it out, and I think the championship games referred to would come out as I have them come out in the book. Oh, no, I shan't leave baseball myself, just because I've become an author. I'll be in the game as long as they'll let me stay."

HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS IN BASKETBALL GAME

The Plainfield High School girls' basketball team played a scrub team composed of alumni and high schools yesterday afternoon, in the gymnasium. The first team won by a score of 5 to 1. Miss Crampton played the best game for the scrub, seconded by Miss Alpaugh. The Misses Wean and Woolley played a fast game for the high school. The lineup:

P. H. S.—Forwards, the Misses Wean, Newall; centre, Dorothy Merrill; guards, the Misses Woolley and Stites.

Scrubs—Forwards, the Misses Newall, Todd; centre, Louise Andrews; guards, the Misses Crampton and Alpaugh.

The first boys' team beat the second team by a score of 83 to 27. It was a comfortable walkover for the first team. Lidgate, Clark and Morris played the star game and Doane did some good foul shooting. This is the first time Captain Lidgate has played since he injured his foot. The lineup:

P. H. S.—Forwards, Clark, Lidgate; centre, Morris; guards, Overton, Doane and Woodhull.

P. H. S. 2ds—Forwards, Manley, Ricketts; centre, Smith, Kenneth Runyon; guards, Bristol, Woodhull, E. VanZandt and H. VanZandt.

FACTION SEEKS TO OUST PASTOR MOONEY

The democratic ways of the Rev. George W. Mooney, former pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, has resulted in the aristocratic faction of his congregation at South Orange, deciding to ask the Newark conference to appoint a successor for him, when that body convenes next Spring.

While reticience is maintained as to the causes of dissatisfaction, it is said wealthier members of the congregation are not particularly pleased members of the parish are his ardent friends.

That the friends of the clergyman intend to make a counter effort to retain him is also stated, and the prospects for a lively time in the parish are being discussed.

The Rev. Mr. Mooney's term as pastor will expire on April 1. He left here two years ago to assume the South Orange pastorate. During his stay in this city Mr. Mooney worked hard and conscientiously and was well liked by the Monroe Avenue congregation.

"Yes, I'm married."

"Well, can two live as cheaply as one?"

"More cheaply, it seems. I'm saving money now."

STORK OUTWITS FLAMES

Fire Visits Rubin's Domicile While Messenger of Love Tarried.

BUT THE STORK WON OUT.

Daughter Born In Hospital This Morning—Girl Nearly Suffocated—Damage to House and Furniture $1,000.

While Mr. and Mrs. Samuel L. Rubin were awaiting a visit from the stork at their home, at 47 Pearl street, in the borough Wednesday, a fire occurred at the house and drove the inmates outdoors in a sleet storm that was raging at the time. The messenger of love, however, refused to be balked in its mission by the invasion of the flames, as Dr. J. H. Carman, who was in attendance, had Mrs. Rubin removed to Muhlenberg Hospital, where she gave birth to a bouncing seven-pound daughter early Thursday. Despite the excitement mother and daughter are reported as doing well.

The house is also occupied by Henry Levine, the owner, and family, the former being responsible for the fire. Mr. Levine at 5 o'clock in the evening was preparing to leave the house. While looking for a pair of rubbers, under a couch in a room on the second floor, he lighted a match, the fire from which ignited the sofa. The blaze brought the search for the rubbers to an abrupt termination and Levine hurled the burning couch out of a window into the yard.

In the excitement Levine did not notice that the yellow curtains had caught fire and had forgotten that his four-year-old daughter, Etta, was in the room. He rushed downstairs, and into the yard and devoted his attention in trying to save the couch.

In the meantime, Mrs. Taib, his mother-in-law, remembered that the little girl was left in the room. She summoned Levine, who hurried up stairs and rescued his daughter, who was suffocating in a smoke filled room. Prompt treatment by Dr. Carman, however, resuscitated the little girl.

The flames spread rapidly from the curtains and found their way into the partitions and rapidly journeyed to the attic. Prompt work of the firemen, however, checked the flames and the damage was confined to the attic and a part of the second floor. Owing to the sleet and ice the local firemen experienced a difficult task in checking the flames and they remained on duty for three hours.

While performing their duties on the roof of the porch, Lieutenant William Gaub and William Hogan slipped on the ice and fell into the snow, a distance of twenty feet. Both escaped injury.

Levine was badly burned about his hands in removing the burning couch from the house.

The damage to the building and furniture will total about $1,000. The loss on the house is covered by insurance but the furniture was uncovered. The lower and second floors of the house were completely gutted and the furniture was practically all rendered useless.

ADELPHI ACADEMY TOO MUCH FOR P.H.S.

The P. H. S. basketball team went down to defeat before the Adelphi Academy at Brooklyn Friday night, with score of 63 to 19. The local boys were completely outplayed throughout the game. In the second half they picked up a little, but it was too late then. Halstead and Frenkmen played the star game of the opponents, while Overton and Clark played very good games for P. H. S. Morris held his end of forward up strong.

The lineup: P. H. S.—Forwards, Morris, Woodhull, Clark; centre, Lidgate; guards, Overton, Doane. Adelphi—Forwards, G. Halstead, Samis, Ray; centre, H. Halstead; guards, F. Frenkmen and E. Frenkmen. Time of halves, 15 and 20 minutes; referee, Fisher; umpire Bristol. Goals, Morris, 2; Clarke, 2; Lidgate, 3; Overton, 2; Doane, 1 foul goal; Samm, 2; Ray, 3; H. Halstead, 10; F. Frenkmen, 3; E. Frenkmen, 12.

Will Study Foreign Missions.

The Young People's Association of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, during the month of February will devote its time to the study of Korea, Immigration and South America, for which purpose the association will be divided into sections as follows: A class of young girls led by Miss Edna Brown, subject, Korea; class for boys, leader to be announced, subject, Immigration; one for adults, led by Miss Harriet Halloway, subject, South America. The classes are open to all interested.

"Does you believe it's lucky to see a new moon over yoh right shoulder?"

"Sho I does," replied Mr. Erastus Pinkney. "Dese here stormy days you's lucky to see any kind of a moon, anyway."

"GIANT JACK" PAYNE TO QUIT POLICE WORK

John C. F. Payne, who has made a creditable record as a member of the police department, will tender his resignation at the next meeting of the Councilmanic police board to take effect January 15. During his five years honorable service, he has made the record of never having struck a prisoner with his billy, although he has repeatedly arrested dangerous characters of powerful physique.

Patrolman Payne was a member of the Y. M. C. A. State champion track team, and was third man in the shot put in the athletic events a year ago. He also made a record as a member of the Y. M. C. A. baseball team.

"Jack" as he is familiarly called by his many friends, holds the record of being the only "cop" in New Jersey who had the "nerve" to box with "Bob" Fitzsimmons. "Lanky Bob," two years ago, dismissed his trainer, when he found that Payne could give him all the "exercise" he needed.

His friends say that his resignation is due to long hours and poor pay, the claim being made that the wages here are less than in any city of the size in the East. Payne has not announced his future plans. He is the most powerful built young man on the force.

KINGS DAUGHTERS' UNION HOLDS MONTHLY MEETING

The executive board of the City Union of The King's Daughters held an interesting meeting Thursday at the Y. M. C. A. parlors, when reports for the past month were received. The treasurer reported a balance of $229.47, and during the month of December 242 children were cared for at The Day Nursery, while the city nurse made 113 visits.

It was voted to hold the birthday tea and reception of The Day Nursery on Friday afternoon, January 21, from 3 to 6 o'clock and the public is invited. Each person attending is requested to bring something for the storehouse.

The board is gratified with the many donations made to The Day Nursery during the holiday season, in addition to about $25 from persons who do not care to have their names made known, there was received $11.50 from the girls, who held a sale on East Seventh street; a large donation of toys, games, etc., from the Park Avenue Baptist church; the Christmas Day collection, $24.75 from the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church; about one hundred articles of groceries from the Seventh-Day Baptist church; $10 from the Religious Society of Friends; a barrel of flour from a friend; $10 from Salaam Temple, Ancient Arabic Order Nobles Mystic Shrine; gifts from pupils of the fifth grade of the Lincoln school, and a Christmas tree and all the accessories on December 30; also provided refreshments, etc., for the children. The Public Service Corporation lighted the tree free of charge for that occasion. The King's Daughters take this means of acknowledging the receipt of the above and thanking the donors.

NEWARK CONFERENCE M.E. CHURCH, IN MARCH

The annual session of the Newark Conference of the M. E. church will be held in the Central M. E. church, Newark, of which Rev. Dr. W. H. Morgan is the pastor, for one week beginning March 31, and promises to be one of the most interesting gatherings of the conference held in several years. Several matters of great importance, it is said, will be considered. Bishop W. F. Anderson, of Chattanooga, Tenn., will preside over the session and direct the deliberations of the ministers. The work of the approaching conference is of interest now as the churches have entered upon the fourth quarter's business, although the quarterly conferences have not been held as yet.

Although no official announcements have been made, that usually being done at the fourth quarterly conference, it is said that the local M. E. church pastors have been invited to return another year. Rev. Dr. W. H. Anderson has made a host of friends since coming here and has done good work. The same is true of Rev. C. S. Kemble, of the Monroe Avenue church and Rev. Ora J. Shoop, of Grace church, it is said, and there is no desire on the part of the members to make a change.

Lamar VanSyckel, son of the late Dr. Sylvester VanSyckel, of Clinton, Hunterdon county, and a nephew of former Judge Bennett VanSyckel, of Trenton, has formed a partnership with John H. Doane, in the real estate and insurance business, with offices on the ground floor at 207 North avenue.

CITY BAKERIES INSPECTED

Board of Health Report Shows There is Room for Improvement Here.

THE MILK SUPPLY IS BETTER.

Tuberculosis Cases Increased By Nine Over Last Month—Various Licenses Granted.

The regular monthly meeting and also the annual meeting of the Board of Health was held Wednesday in the offices of the board, with all the members present.

Dr. B. Van D. Hedges was re-elected president, Dr. T. S. Davis, secretary, and Fred W. Dunn, treasurer, for the ensuing year.

Reports were read, showing the sanitary condition of the city for the past month. The number of communicable diseases reported in December, is as follows:

Scarlet fever, 8; typhoid fever, 2; tuberculosis, 13; diphtheria, 6; chicken pox, 3; measles, 14; total, 44.

Sixty-five dairies, creameries and milk bottling places were inspected during the past month. The results were favorable in the majority of cases. One dairy was, however, prohibited from sending milk to a creamery supplying milk in Plainfield.

Sixty-four samples of milk were collected and analyzed during the month and the quality was found to be better than for the previous month.

Twenty-two houses and seventy-one rooms were disinfected during the past month, on account of communicable diseases.

An inspection was made of a number of barber shops and they were found to be in a first class condition.

"An inspection of the bakeries of Plainfield and North Plainfield was made during the past month, in connection with the Borough Board of Health," says the report. "These inspections made at night in order to observe the methods used in baking. The results showed that there is plenty of room for improvement, and it is the intention to inspect these bakeries once each month in an effort to bring them up to the standard prescribed by the Pure Food law."

W. R. Way was granted a permit to sell milk from his store. B. C. Firstbrook was also granted a permit to sell milk in the city.

The following plumbing bonds were ordered filed: George F. Giles & Company, Charles M. Rayhert and James Whalen.

The total number of plumbing inspections made during the past month was ninety-four. Total number of general inspections made was 262. Total inspections made in December 356.

The following returns were made to this office during December: Marriages, 15; births, 28; deaths, 53; still births, 1.

The annual report of the board for 1909 was presented at this meeting and will be submitted to the Common Council at its meeting on Monday night.

Y.M.C.A. ATHLETIC NEW FIELD TO COST $10,000

Physical Director Listman is having rosy dreams of the projected Y. M. C. A. athletic field. It is the aim of the association to have the field ready for the 1910 football season, and it may be possible that the field may be put in condition for baseball purposes although the association holds a three years' lease on Crescent Oval, which adjoins their own tract.

The grounds will be up-to-date in every way and will cost $10,000. The park will be inclosed by a fence and a commodious grand stand erected. Dressing rooms and shower baths will also be installed for the convenience of athletes.

In addition to a fast ball diamond a track will also be built for field events.

Somerset Society Gets Fine.

Acting on the advice of Colonel Edwards, president of the State S. P. C. A., Recorder Dolliver, of the borough, has turned the $30 fine collected in the Geer cruelty to animal case, over to the Somerset County Society. Mr. Van Van Hoesen, the Union county agent, who prosecuted the case, will render a bill to the Somerset Society for expenses involved in the case.

Plans to Complete Railroad.

Upon the application of Pitney, Hardin & Skinner, counsel for Frederick V. Pitney, receiver of the New Jersey and Pennsylvania Railroad Company, Vice Chancellor Emery has ordered that a hearing in the application made by the receiver for permission to complete the railroad into Morristown be continued to January 24, in Chancery Chambers, Newark. The receiver asks permission from the court to issue receivers certificate to the amount of $30,000, that shall be a prior lien on the property.

SURGICAL OPERATION ON FISH.

Fish surgery is by no means an unbroken record of failures. On the contrary, and despite its attendant difficulties, some notable successes have been scored, says an exchange. Perhaps the most daring piece of work that has been performed at the New York Aquarium was the removal of a fungous growth from one of the fins of a five-foot shark, while the most difficult was the grafting of skin upon an eel. That the latter proved a slipper patient the reader will readily conjecture. Indeed, the holding of piscine patients while they are being operated upon is a serious problem, which must be solved by means of specially made boxes, soft wrappings, and like contrivances.

The most frequent successful operations are performed upon fishes whose air bladders fail to effect their proper functions. The chief cause of such defects is the too rapid removal of a fish from the water to the air, as when it is captured or removed from one tank to another. It is brought quickly to the surface with its mouth open. Its air bladder is charged to a greater or less extent with water, which enables it to maintain its specific gravity in deep waters. But the suddenness with which the fish is jerked out of its natural element prevents it from correctly adjusting the quantities of air and water in the bladder, and congestion results. When returned to the tank the wretched creature is unable to sink or rise at will, and is washed about by the movements of the water in a helpless condition.

It has been found that fishes injured in this way often are cured by a little gentle massage. The operator grasps the fish firmly with the *left hand by the tail, drawing it care*fully out of the water up an inclined board reaching into the tank, but allowing the head and shoulders to remain submerged. Massage is then commenced by the right hand, and generally, after a few minutes' action of the hand, the air is forced out of the bladder.

Massage does not always prove successful in relieving the trouble, however, and more drastic measures have to be resorted to. In the case of a deep-sea bass which had lost complete control of its air bladder and lay wallowing on the surface, quite unable to sink or swim, it was *recognized that a remedy must im*mediately be found if the fish were to be saved. The bass was taken from the water and a surgeon's needle inserted just behind the pectoral fin into the air bladder. The air was thus liberated and the patient was again able to control itself perfectly. A few days in a hospital tank sealed the slight puncture and effect a complete cure.

MORE INSANE IN JERSEY.

Dr. Britton D. Evans, the alienist and medical director of the Morris Plains State Hospital, says in his annual report that it would be unwise for the State to add to his institution, but that it would be wiser to build a separate institution in Trenton for the criminal insane. He declares it a duty to segregate the classes. The two State asylums for the insane, he says, are dangerously overcrowded.

An increase in insanity, although there is also an increase in the number of permanent cures, Dr. Evans says, will necessitate the building of more asylums.

The population of the Morris Plains Hospital is 2,060. Eighty per cent. of these are reported hopeless.

Dr. Evans thinks the hospital nurses underpaid. He says they have the meanest kind of employment, dangerous in the extreme at any time. The doctor emphasizes the importance of making an energetic fight against tuberculosis, recommending the use of tents instead of closed buildings.

The alienist says that idleness harms the patient, and advocates the introduction into asylums of useful occupations, such as printing and broom and brush making.

Something He Couldn't Define.

Every calling has its technical vocabulary, says Youth's Companion, and those who are familiar with it are often surprised and irritated at the difficulty other people have in understanding it. A writer in the New York World tells of an old horseman in Maine who had just run over a man, and was being sued for damages.

The court asked the defendant if he was driving fast. He answered, "I was going a pace." The court then said, "Now, *kindly tell the gen*tlemen of the jury just how fast you were going."

"Well," said the defendant, "I reckon I was going a clip."

"Well, will you tell the jury how fast a clip is?"

"Well, it's going a dite."

"Now, will you tell the jury how fast a dite is?"

"Well, a dite's a dite. Anybody knows what a dite is."

The Wish.

"I want some more chicken," said a little girl at dinner.

"I think you have had as much as is good for you, dear," rejoined her mother. "You can't have any more now; but here is a wishbone that you may pull with me. Whoever gets the longest end will have her wish come true. Why, baby, you've got it. What do you wish?"

"Some more chicken!" said the child.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

AN ACCOMMODATING MAN.

They were talking of Captain Philander Howe, who had died a few days before the meeting of the Old Salt Club, says Youth's Companion. "He was a good man as ever walked," said Captain Cosgrove, "but he was what I call too retiring in his disposition; always stepping out o' the way."

"Yes, he's right, there," said Captain Saunders. "Recollect how when Mary Latham was all ready to say yes if he'd give her the chance, he was too scairt to ask her, and so William James marched right up and carried her off under his very nose, he stepping out o' the way!"

"Certain I do," answered Captain Lowe, "and I do," answered Jane Willet at her cap for him and got him, because when that old aunt that brought her up said, 'Cap'n Philander, you've been here three times a week for quite a spell, and I understand from Jaen you've beaued her home twice from meeting,' he didn't have the sprawl to git up an' go, but just stayed there, numb as a log, till he stepped out, an engaged man!"

"Twas the same with naming the children," said Captain Cosgrove. "Five boys an' not one of 'em named Philander for his father and him, but all for her folks; and then when the girl came—the last one—he did say that if't had been a boy, he'd been meaning to ask her how she thought Philander'd do for a name. She up and named that poor helpless little creetur 'Philandy,' an' he just stepped out, 'stead of telling her he didn't like it."

HUGE EGG FOR MUSEUM.

The Brooklyn Museum, in the Eastern Parkway, has just obtained and placed on exhibition a great egg similar to those that figured largely in the fanciful history of the world, reports the New York Tribune. Most every school boy has read of the wonderful roc, the bird of ancient times which could pick an elephant up in its talons and carry him away to its young. At least, no reader of "The Arabian Nights" has failed to learn of this mythical bird.

The great egg is not a roc's egg, but it is one of the class of, egg which give rise to the epyornis, a bird that was about the size of the ostrich, but was heavier, and which is supposed to have lived in the era of early man. It could not fly.

Each egg of this ancient bird is as big as six ostrich eggs and equal to 148 hen's eggs. The shells are so hard that the natives formerly used them as bowls or water bottles. It is supposed that the bird was exterminated by primeval men. The men traced the birds to the sandy beaches, where they went to lay their eggs in the sun to hatch, and secured the prizes for food. Naturally, in the course of time the birds died off, as none was born to take the place of the old.

The food value of one of the mammoth eggs can be estimated. If the scientists are right in saying that a hen's egg contains as much nutriment as a quarter of a pound of meat, one epyornis egg should equal in food value thirty-seven pounds of meat—enough to feed twenty people for a day.

GAILY COLORED JAPAN.

Land is so scarce in Japan and the people so numerous that a farm rarely consists of more than an acre or two, states a writer in the Outing. These little farms are divided up into tiny fields. During the season of the year in which we made our journey, one of these fields is filled with sprouting barley, light green in color; another field—perhaps the next—with vetch, a lavender-colored, clover-like fodder; a neighboring field, with a dark green grass from the seed of which a lamp oil is manufactured; another with the pale yellow flower of rhenmardi; and scattered here and there, fields filled with what looked like a variety of lily—some white, some red, some yellow, but all equally brilliant.

Then to get the complete picture you must imagine patches of flowering azaleas dotting the roadside; towering, round-topped camelia trees breaking the sky-line with frequent splashes of bright green; usually in the shade of these trees, houses with white plastered walls and red-tiled roofs, about the more pretentious of these houses white plastered walls above which appeared a profusion of palms, roses and strange native flowers; and in the doorways of the garden the kimono-clad Japanese girls—the kimonos as many and as gaily colored as the garden that framed them.

I have traveled in but one other country that is so gaily colored; and that was some few years ago, when in the company of a number of other youngsters, and an evil-smelling magic lantern, I used to make frequent visits to the Land of Primary Colors.

When Trouble is Found.

Church—I see the subway cars have trials as well as the trolleys?

Gotham—Oh, yes, the trouble is not all on the surface.—Yonkers Statesman.

CALVIN THE MISUNDERSTOOD.

Probably no leader of a great movement is regarded with more general disfavor or with less comprehension than Calvin, says a writer in The Century. To many of us his name is a synonym for all that is sour and forbidding. We think of him as one who begrudged any pleasure, however innocent, to his fellow creatures; a grim, sour man who was never happier than when committing the souls of poor, frail human beings to an eternity among the damned.

Yet to the people of his own day such a view could have been nothing short of astounding. Among the men and women who lived in intimate, daily association with him, Calvin was a much singularly-loved man; one capable, moreover, of giving out a very lively and sincere affection on what must seem to most of us but small provocation.

He was not a scholar merely; he was a man of the world. He had traveled, and was familiar with the life of courts, was on terms of intimate friendship with many of the most distinguished persons of his day. He had a commanding *intellect, a liter*ary style which was the envy and admiration of the learned. He knew Latin well as he did theology, French as well as he did Latin. His grasp of a wide range of subjects, as well as his attention to details, were things to marvel at. Add to these an inexhaustible patience and a bulldog tenacity of purpose, a vivid human interest and an amazing capacity for work, and we begin to understand how it was that this penniless and sickly foreigner, who came to Geneva in the first instance so utterly unknown and without prestige as a figure in the records merely as "a Frenchman" ended by setting his stamp so ineffaceably upon the place that it remains there even to our day.

PERFUMED SILKEN ROSES.

Those who adopt the rose as a favorite flower will be very glad to hear of the perfumed silken roses. These may be made in different sizes and of different colors, but those of a delicate shade seem to be the most popular.

One kind of rose is made of pale pink satin, with sachet powder stuffed in its heart.

Young girls are very fond of wear*ing roses as hair decorations, and for* these small wreaths of white roses consisting of a dozen white blossoms, wired together. To scent the wreaths put them in a box in which a delicate sachet has been placed.

To bring out the color of the cheeks a delicate pink rose of silk may be worn on the side of the bodice. This will give a pretty effect if nestled in a bed of silver tulle or of silvered chiffon. Sprinkle its petals with attar of roses.

Jogging His Memory.

A small boy went into a South Boston drug store, wrinkled his face, rubbed his head and rubbed his left foot up and down his right leg in an effort to remember something that had escaped him, relates the Boston Record.

"Say," he said, "will you tell me the name of the place where we Americans have so many soldiers?"

"Port Sheridan?"

"Oh, no. It's further away than that."

"The Philippines?"

"That ain't just it, but it's somewhere round there."

"Perhaps you mean Manila?"

"Manila! That's right! I knew I would get it after a while. I want a bottle of manila extract for flavorin'. They're going to have ice cream.

A Treat for the Doctor.

A Philadelphian, who has since then fortunately regain his health, was last year the subject of an extended examination by specialists, according to Lippincott's.

"The examination seems to have delighted Mr. Blank," said the patient to one of the doctors, when they were alone for a moment, "for I have noticed that his eyes are positively beaming. I assume, then, that my case is not a grave one."

"Well," hesitated the physician addressed, "I hardly feel justified in saying that. But I understand from Dr. Blank that he is going to perform a number of interesting operations on you."

A NEW CAROCHON.

It is of stiff feathers arranged in pinwheel fashion. Rows and rows of these little quills are arranged in concentric circles, and the cabochon is sufficiently ornamental to allow the wearer to forego other trimming.

A clever woman can make one of these new rosettes at home. From an old millinery box countless unused feathers may be rescued from oblivion. These may be fastened on a foundation, beginning in the outer circle. In the center a jeweled button will look well. And there you are with something new for the upturned brim of your winter hat.

Not Curious.

"No," said the statesman, "I should not care to go to the North Pole, even if it could be done in comfort."

"But think of what a strange place it is. Whichever way you turn you are looking south."

"That's just it. I have had trouble enough with a solid south."—Washington Evening Star.

EDISON SEES GREAT DAY BUT IT'S LONG WAY OFF.

Thomas A. Edison has taken a peep into the future, and prophesies that the world will be a much better one, particularly for the poor man, 200 years from now. In an interview, published here, he says:

"In 2110, by the cheapening of commodities, the ordinary laborer will live as well as a man does now with $200,000 annual income. Automatic machinery and scientific agriculture will bring about this result. There will be no manual labor in the factories of the future. The men employed will all be superintendents, watching the machinery, to see that it works right.

"The work-day will be eight hours or less. It will be work with the brain, done in wholesome, pleasant surroundings. Less and less man will be put to work that is dirty or dull.

"The clothes of the future, by the way, will be so cheap that every young woman will be able to follow the fashions promptly, and there will be plenty of fashions.

"The aeroplane of the future will, I think, have but one lifting principle. A successful air machine must be able to defy the winds. If the Wright brothers' aeroplane had one-twentieth of its surface the wind would not affect it. The helicopter principle is the only way to rise above atmospheric conditions. By increasing the velocity of propeller revolutions the size of the machine can be diminished, and thereby we vanquish the hostility of the wind. A helicopter could have foot-size planes distributed on a 100 to 150-foot circle and controlled from the centre by wires.

"Society will have to stop this whiskey business, which is like throwing sand in the bearings of a steam engine.

"Among the many problems which await solution in the future, one of the greatest will be to get the full value out of fuel. The wastefulness of our present methods of combustion is tremendous."

PERTH AMBOY HOTEL TO GO TO NEW HANDS.

Perth Amboy, Jan. 4.—The Packer House, one of the oldest hotels in New Jersey, will change owners on January 15, nine years to the day since the present proprietor, Peter Norsesh, assumed charge. The new owner will be G. W. Crawford.

Mr. Crawford came here Saturday, preliminary to taking charge of the Packer House, and on that day the owner of the property, Mrs. Julia Peck, died at her home in New York. She was the widow of Rev. Aaron Peck, at one time pastor of the First Presbyterian church of this city. She is survived by her daughter, Mrs. Harlan G. Mendenhall, whose husband was also pastor of the same church. Mrs. Peck was a daughter of Stephen Manning, for many years a resident of this city, and she inherited the Packer House property upon his death.

LONDON'S OLD-TIME COOK SHOPS

In primitive times, the only places in London where the public could be entertained with food had been the cook's shops, writes Edmund Gosse, in Harper's Magazine. The famous East Cheap was a great thoroughfare down which the stalls of the butchers alternated with those of the cooks. You chose a joint at the flesh market, and you carry it next door to be cooked for you by a certain fee. If you wish for wine, you must bring that with you, for the cooks sold no liquor, although they seem to have provided, as time went on, more and more of the natural accomplishments of meat, such as bacon and sausages, pastry, etc.

This habit continued until well into the reign of Elizabeth, and so long as such an inconvenient custom prevailed there could have been no real comfort for any citizen who dwelt in the shires. Even the rich have had as much trouble with porterage and baskets as a country party has today at a picnic.

But about the time that Shakespeare came up to London, a remarkable change took place in the customs of the town, and the practice of public hospitality and entertainment was singularly facilitated. The nature of this change lay in the sudden developement of the tavern, and the consequent withdrawal of the cookshop. The worshipful company of Pastelers, the cooks were called, ceased to enjoy the monopoly of providing hot meals.

Very Likely.

The depot at Meridian, Tex. is about a mile from the business part of the town, says Lippincott's. One night a sleepy, weary traveling man said to the darky who was driving him to the hotel:

"Old man, why in the name of heaven did they put this depot so far from town?"

The darky scratched his head in thought and replied:

"Waal, boss, I's fo'ced to admit dat I hasn't give de matter s'flcient cognitation, but jes' jumped up fer a answer like dis. Is'pose dey done dat so as to have de depot as near as possible to de railroad."

A NOSE FOR NEWS.

The Genuine Newspaper Reporter is Born, Not Made.

"Poet we born, not made," said the retired newspaper man to the New Orleans Times-Democrat, "and I might add that reporters come into this world in much the same way. For instance, the 'born' reporter will get a story if there is one in sight, while he who only has what I would call a mechanical sort of training will skim over the same ground without ever discovering that anything out of the ordinary has happened. Not many years ago I was holding an important position on one of the principal journals of Chicago. It was one day put on the city editor's desk, and, wanting to test the ability of two new men on the staff, I assigned both of them to the same story. Of course neither knew the other was in the neighborhood, and you ought to have seen their respective reports. One of them was a column story that created a sensation from one end of the city to the other, while the other turned in about two 'sticks' of the driest stuff I ever remember to have read. I am satisfied that both the men covered the story to the best of their respective abilities. One of them simply had a 'nose for news' and the other didn't. As I said, reporters are born, not made by studying 'journalism' in the abstract. The natural born reporter is at home in a newspaper office, he can live on milk and can sleep soundly on the imposing stone. He sees little news in a dog biting a man, but he is quick to grasp the importance of an item telling about a man biting a dog."

POLYNESIA'S FAMOUS CLOTH.

The "Paper-mulberry" tree (Broussonetia papyrifera) is the source of the famous "tapa cloth" of the islands of the Pacific. This is a natural tissue and is derived from the inner bark, and after being torn off in strips is scraped with shells and beaten with a mallet until it resembles a soft, flexible paper, says the Strand Magazine. The individual strips are united by overlapping the edges and beating the fibres together, until large pieces of the tissue are formed.

It is said that "before Hawaii was swept with the wave of civilization, men and women were dressed in this natural bark-cloth 'tapa' or 'kapa.' " The dress of the women consisted of the "pa-u," or wrapper, composed of five thicknesses of tapa, about four yards in length by three in width, passed several times around the waist and extending below the knee. The dress of the men was the "malo," or girdle, and a foot in width and several yards long. A "kikel," or mantle, six feet square, was sometimes worn by both sexes. In former years these natural cloths were sometimes bleached to snowy whiteness, or variously dyed in colors, and even printed or ornamented, usually in checks or squares.

THE SHIPS OF YULE.

When I was just a little boy,
Before I went to school,
I had a fleet of forty sail
I called the Ships of Yule.

Of every rig, from rakish brig
And gallant barkentine
To little Fundy fishing boats,
With gunboats painted green.

They used to go on trading trips
Around the world for me,
For though I had to stay on shore
My heart was on the sea.

They stopped at every port of call
From Babylon to Rome,
To load with all the lovely things
We never had at home;

With elephants and ivory
Bought from the King of Tyre,
And shells and silk and sandalwood
What sailor men admire;

With figs and dates from Samarcand,
And squatty ginger jars,
And scented silver amulets
From Indian bazars;

With sugar-cane from Port-of-Spain,
With monkeys from Ceylon,
And paper lanterns from Peking
With painted dragons on;;

With cocoanuts from Zanzibar,
And pines from Singapore;
And when they had unloaded these
They could go back for more.

And even after I was big
And had to go to school,
My mind was often far away
Aboard the Ships of Yule.

Vogue of the Round Muff.

Round muffs are seen again and it is predicted that by another winter the rug muffs will be considered out of date. These round muffs are very broad and also very large round. In fact, there are no signs of the return of small muffs.

OUTWITTING THE BOLL WEEVIL.

The problem of the South at the present time is, first to raise cotton at all; and, next, to develop an early-maturing seed that will produce cotton of not less than one inch to one and one-sixteenth inch, on hill land, writes Harris Dickson in Success Magazine. If this problem can be successfully met, then the spinners of the world must go elsewhere for cotton to make their finest fabrics.

Earliness in cotton depends upon the structure of the stalk. This is the cotton that has short joints and begins to throw out fruit limbs near the ground. Always select a cotton that begins at once to throw out fruit limbs on which the fruit forms quickly, close to the stalk. The planter should go to the field himself, choose his stalks and keep those seed from them for planting. The production of any plantation may be increased from 25 to 30 per cent. without increasing the acreage, simply by paying close attention to the planting of better seed.

Cotton must be planted in wide rows, running east and west, so that the sun shines in. Hot sun is the best friend the farmer has in fighting the weevil. When the weevil lays her eggs in the square, the square turns yellow and falls off. If it falls in the hot sun, that square will parch and die.

There can be no such thing as "laying by" the crop and putting aside the plow. The plow and the picker must be running at the same time.

When the young cotton comes out, in the spring, it grows very rapidly. If the weevil is there, already, some of them may be poisoned with Paris green or arsenate of lead. This question has aroused much discussion, pro and con. If the punctured squares are picked off, that generation of weevil will be set back from two to thirty days—which often makes a difference of crop or no crop.

It may sound like a joke, but a swarm of children with a tomato can apiece, will pick off enough weevil, one by one, to save a crop. On a certain tract of seventy-five acres, at cost of $225, these little workers increased the production something like eighteen hundred dollars.

EXPLORATION OF CHINA'S WALL

It was in the year 1901 that I first undertook to explore certain regions of China which were practically unknown to the civilized world, writes Prof. W. E. Geil in Harper's Magazine. Months were spent in this expedition, studying the natives, learning their habits and customs, becoming familiar with conditions; all of which was a necessary preparation for the second visit, which was made for the purpose of traversing the entire length of the great wall—a feat never before accomplished by white men, so far as history records.

I started in May, 1908, from Shanhaikwan, my party consisting of Americans and Chinese. With pack mules heavily laden we crawled along the wall, forded rivers and streams and tramped steadily onward, until in September, 1908, we arrived in Suiyet, having covered a distance of nearly 1,800 miles. We followed numberless curves and loops, although as the crow flies the eastern and western ends of this great rampart are but 1,145 miles apart.

During seven months of exploration I discovered evidence of the existence of at least ten other walls, built at various times, and some of them probably erected before the great wall was conceived in the marvelously active, highly imaginative brain of that truly great ruler, Chin Shi Hwang.

DUTIES OF SECRETARIES.

The duties of a private secretary are of an interesting and agreeable nature, but few people know anything about the amount of work they involve, says The Book-keeper. The secretary must need be an A1 accountant, a capable correspondent, a good stenographer, of gentlemanly manners and refined appearance. His duties are regulated, in the main, according to the manner in which his employer's fortune is invested.

Suppose $5,000,000 is invested, two-thirds in municipal bonds of the first class, which are issued by the leading cities, and the remaining one-third in mortgages, real estate, mortgages and stocks, while surplus funds are invested in commercial paper. The municipal bonds require but little care, all the work being necessary being to collect the principal and interest as they become due.

Farm mortgages require a large amount of work. Where they are not secured through reliable correspondents, personal investigation is necessary. To provide against foreclosure, great care must be exercised in selecting farm mortgages, and experience in dealing in farm lands is a valuable acquisition.

Ability to pass on an ordinary abstract of title and a practical knowledge of legal procedure in connection with mortgages, foreclosures, deeds of assignment, releases, etc., is a pre-requisite.

FINDING OF LARGEST DIAMOND.

For twelve years the Excelsior diamond enjoyed its primacy, but on *January 25, 1905, the greatest dia*mond known in the world was found in an open-working No. 2 of the Premier mine, in the Transvaal Colony, South Africa, and from the finding to the cutting of this magnificent stone and its final disposal, its history is a most romantic one, writes Dr. George F. Kunz in The Century.

The day's work of the mine was over, and Frederick Wells, the surface manager, was making his usual rounds. Glancing along one side of the deep excavation, his eye suddenly caught the gleam of a brilliant object far up the bank. He lost no time in climbing up to the spot, where he had noted the glint of light. He had not been mistaken; it was really a brilliant crystal. He tried to pull it out with his fingers, and as this proved impossible he sought to pry it out with the blade of his pocket-knife. To his surprise the knife blade broke without causing the stone to yield.

Confident now that the crystal must be a very large one, he dug out the earth about it, thinking for a moment that, contrary to all experience in the mine, the stone might be attached to a piece of the primitive rock. When he discovered that this was not the case, he began to doubt that the object was really a diamond. He said afterward:

"When I took a good look at the stone sticking in the side of the pit it suddenly flashed across me that I had gone insane—that the whole thing was imaginary. I knew it could not be a diamond. All at once another solution dawned upon me. The boys often play jokes on one another. Some practical joker, thought I, has planted this huge chunk of glass here for me to find it. He thinks I will make a fool of myself by bringing it into the office in a great state of excitement, and the story will be told far and wide in South Africa."

He continued to test the stone on the spot, before proceeding further. Wells rubbed off the dirt from one of its faces with his finger, and soon convinced himself that it was not a lump of glass, but a diamond crystal, apparently of exceptional whiteness and purity. With the aid of a larger blade of his knife he finally succeeded in prying out the stone, and bore it away with him to the office of the mine. Here it was cleaned and, to the astonishment of all, was found to have a weight of 3,106 carats, more than three times that of any other diamond that has been discovered. Before many hours had passed the telegraph carried tidings to all parts of the world that the greatest diamond of this or any other age had been brought to light. Mr. Wells is said to have received a present of $10,000 from the company for his discovery.

T. M. Cullinan, founder and chairman of the Premier company and one of the great prize winners in the lottery of South African speculation, named the diamond after himself; but it is usually called the Premier, and several different names have been proposed.

Caterpillars Used for Food.

The natives of the upper Congo are very fond of certain kinds of caterpillars, gathered from the trees which these insects frequent during the caterpillar season, says The Wide World Magazine. They assert that they have a really delicious edible caterpillars, are very palatable when cooked in the proper way. Several kinds are eaten, ranging in size from small insects less than two inches long—which form clusters or nests in the branches of the trees, and are therefore easily gathered—to big, hairy monsters five or six inches long and proportionately thick. The way that these latter are held in the fingers and crawl over the hands and arms before being consigned to the frying-pan is anything but a pleasing sight.

AN INDEPENDENT WEEKLY.

L. FORCE, Editor and Proprietor.

Terms: $2.00 per year.

Plainfield, N. J., January 13, 1910.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

A three-fold interest is attached to the appearance of the comedian, Francis Wilson, in the comedy "The Bachelor's Baby" at the Criterion theatre next Monday night. This season Mr. Wilson comes to New York as author, stage director and chief actor in a three-act comedy that has appealed to those who have seen and heard it rather more for its genuine note of humanness—for a kindly, homely quality of humor, than for any of that farcical comedy with which Francis Wilson has been so long associated. It is something for a comedian who has scrambled to the heights of fame by and because of his versatility of his legs to develop naturally into a legitimate comedian of wit as well as humor by a persistent experiment in a better form of stage comedy. It is real progress to advance from the buffoonery of "Erminie" to the intelligent humor and likely reality of "The Bachelor's Baby."

Little Mary L. Clark, of Buffalo, N. Y., attended the matinee performance at the New York Hippodrome this afternoon, having made a special trip covering 850 miles in order to see the show. Little Miss Clark is the daughter of Thomas M. Clark, general manager of Norman E. Mark's publications, including the Buffalo Daily and Sunday Times, the National Monthly, etc. Little Mary Clark's visit to the Hippodrome was the fulfillment of a promise made to the child by her parents the 4th of July, on which day the little girl was badly burned while playing with fireworks, so that for months afterwards her life was despaired of. Mr. and Mrs. Clark returned to Buffalo after the matinee performance today, fulfillment of the promise made to their little daughter costing $150 for the one day's visit to New York and the New York Hippodrome.

The January number of the Burr McIntosh Monthly, the first in its new form, is on the news stands. It contains the usual range of fine pictures in considerable variety and reproduced in the manner for which this magazine is famous. The special color plates are unusually attractive, being reproductions of two of the works of Sorolla, the Spanish artist, who made such an impression last spring with his exhibition of pictures in New York, Buffalo and Boston.

With the dawn of the new year, the magazine world puts its best foot forward, and proceeds to fulfil promises made in enticing forecasts of good things to come. One of the most interesting of these 1910 publications is the January Lippincott's, which doesn't at all suffer by comparison with its attention-attracting Christmas issue. The complete novel is "The Heaven of the Unexpected," by Lucy Meacham Thruston.

"The Crime of a Central Bank," Hon. Charles N. Fowler, in the January issue of Leslie's, Geographically, politically, economically and practically the establishment of a Central Bank in the United States today is unthinkable; unless the sole purpose of starting such an institution is to serve some special interest to the incalculable and never-ending injury and cost of the American people.

The American Magazine by its astonishing articles on "Barbarous Mexico" has awakened throughout the country an intense indignation. In its January issue, the editors bring forward further and absolutely convincing proofs of the truth of their statements and they reaffirm that slavery is existing at the present moment in Mexico, that that country is rife with barbarous political persecution, that there is imprisonment for free speaking and that personal and political liberty is being suppressed.

It's the fit that counts in underwear today, since Paris still clings to the slim silhouette. Fullness and billowy frills seem gradually disappearing, and combination underwear is more in demand than ever. One of the most practical garments now in fashion is the combination corset-cover and knickerbockers. It does away entirely with all superfluous material and makes but one thickness at the waistline instead of two.—Grace Margaret Gould in Woman's Home Companion for January.

The salient article of the January Century is easily Walter Camp's chatty discussion of "Personality in Football," in which he asks and answers the pertinent question, "Are our boys trained to set up a false standard of leadership?" and shows at length what contributions to the real progress of the game have been made by such players and coaches as Lee McClung, Arthur Poe, John De Witt, George Chadwick, Tipton of West Point, Daly of Harvard, "and a host of others." It is a valuable and lively presentation of one of the absorbing questions of the day; and besides the photographs shown there are reproductions in tint of three stirring drawings by Leyendecker.

Everybody's January number opens with a poem "America," by Herbert Kaufman, of the type that our British cousins are used to calling "brag." Of course, when they make this accusation against us, they forget their own song, "Rule Britannia." And anyway, all prejudice aside, even those aforesaid cousins could hardly refuse to admit that if we must brag, we sure do well that we bragged in the lordly rhythm of this new "America."

The January number of "Success Magazine" opens with a big political feature entitled "The End of Campaign Lies," by J. C. Welliver. "Business Control of the Press, the Parties and the Government" is the second of a series of articles by Charles Edward Russell under the general title, "The Power Behind the Republic." How the negro faces the problem of marriage is shown by Harris Dickson in "The Negro's Idea of Marriage." "Fighting Faces of Our Senators," by Sloane Gordon is illustrated with interesting caricatures by Vet Anderson.

Scribner's Magazine for January is the first number of its 24th year—a year during which it will reach the largest audience ever held by a magazine of any similar class. During most of the coming year Theodore Roosevelt's great series on his African trip will be continued, and will include his elephant hunt, his journey 'round Lake Victoria Nyanza and into Uganda, culminating with his journey down the Nile to Khartoum, which he expects to arrive on March 15th, and thence to Cairo over the usual route.

If you are a fisherman you will be amused by James J. Carroll's story "An Understudy to Tantalus" which appears in The Red Book Magazine for January.

A passing glance at the January cover of the National Magazine shows the New Year's impress. The avuncular genius of America obeys the injunction regarding the correct treatment of coming and departing guests, and with one hand Uncle Sam welcomes the cherubic young New Year, while with the other he gently ushers out the Old Year, with a God-speed. The frontispiece of the January issue is a rare picture, never before published, showing the roadbed for the first railway construction in the United States.

BENEFITS FROM THE TROLLEY.

In traveling on those fast, prompt, roomy, modern cars, run smoothly, without jerks over a solid roadbed by courteous employes, it seemed to me that this thing was being done even better here than anywhere in big-to-do Georgia says a writer in Success. And I recalled, with humiliation, the obsolete conditions generally obtaining today among our Eastern trolley systems.

I stopped off wherever fancy dictated, and talked to farmers, storekeepers, professional men, transition officials and railway men—all sorts and conditions of people; but keeping especially on the alert for an experienced, intelligent and communicative conductor.

He was not hard to find.

"What's your line doing for this part of the State?" I asked him.

"Doin?" he echoed. "The line's simply making it! I've been pinning these interurbans ever since the first saw them, and I can tell you they've brought in a new day for the city, and for the village, and for the country.

"Take this section of the road. When the company was securing the right of way, four years ago, lots of the farmers were afraid of the idea, and asked so much for the lease that the company found it cheaper to buy their whole farms outright and be done with it. Today many of those same farmers are coming and wanting to lease their farms back again because they see what this thing is doing for their old neighbors.

"It was the same story with the small storekeepers," he continued. "They thought judgment day had struck 'em along with the interurban. And, at first, their trade did fall off considerable. But bit by bit they saw people's wants increasing. So village trade picked up. And then the city folks began swarming out of town and building homes along the new lines. They were awful glad to get into the country, and grew loyal to their new homes and traded with the local stores. The upshot is that the trolley has helped all village tradesmen except the electors."

"Let me tell you," he went on, rejoining me in twenty minutes, "we're doing more for the farmer than just to increase his wants; we're putting money in his pocket. Wherever an interurban line has gone it has, for one thing, raised land values from twenty-five to one hundred per cent. It has brought the farmer in touch with the briskness and system of modern commerce, and taught him to use business methods in his farming. It's given him a wider choice of markets. And he can get his milk, eggs, fruit and vegetables to town fresher. He receives his market quotations by rural free delivery and 'phone, and takes quicker advantage of high prices by means of us."

CITY FATHERS HEAR THE MAYOR'S MESSAGE

Many Suggestions and Recommendations Contained in Most Elaborate Report Ever Presented.

In the most pretentious annual message ever delivered to the Common Council, Mayor Charles J. Fisk as a meeting of that body Monday advanced many novel and original ideas for municipal government, in addition to suggesting many reforms and improvements for the taxpayer's benefit and to giving a thorough report of his administration for the past year. Chief among the theories he advanced during a talk that consumed almost two hours, was one which would change the plan of government under which would make a municipal executive responsible for the conduct of public business.

The Mayor criticized the laws governing municipalities and argued that they be fewer and more sane, declaring himself also for "home rule." At the same time, however, he urged that the accounts of all municipalities, at their own expense, be audited by the State. Civil service was also espoused as was excise reform and a number of other things.

An Idea of Government.

"If a mayor is to be held responsible for the running and regulating of all city departments and for executing the laws," said Mr. Fisk, "he must be given absolute and sole power to appoint the heads of departments and to remove the same if they do not do their full duty. He should be given full power and full authority and every department should be in charge of a single headed commissioner of the mayor's choosing, appointed for the same term as the mayor and accountable to the mayor. The mayor should direct how, when and where money should be spent; he should attend to all the executive work and the Common Council, purely legislative, pass the ordinances and make the appropriations. This is the only way a mayor can be held responsible to the people and I am of the opinion that such an arrangement would bring about the very results in the government of a city."

Statutes Need Revision.

In discussing at great length the present statutes governing municipalities, Mayor Fisk said:

"The laws of the State governing cities are cumbersome and unwieldy, many times contradictory and should be overhauled at once and passed with a debt limit and a limit to the tax rate but giving home rule and power to the municipality to manage its own affairs." He declared that "we are suffering under too much law and are hampered in the government of our internal affairs. What is needed is less legislation, fewer laws and more business common sense."

Auditing Accounts.

Along this line, among his suggestions was this:

"The State should create, in connection with the Comptroller's office, a State Auditing Department with power to enforce in all municipalities an uniform and correct system of accounting and reports." He advised that all municipal accounts be audited by such department at the expense of the municipality.

After Tax Budgets.

Discussing in detail what he considered the weaknesses of laws governing the assessment and collection of taxes, he declared that "there are many persons, particularly those of larger means, who evade the assessor, refuse to make a statement and although in a dozen other business or personal matters of taxes absolutely fair, honest and upright, when it comes to the question of taxes absolutely swear to barefaced falsehoods, making it almost impossible for the assessor to arrive at any just conclusion; therefore the honest, conscientious taxpayer suffers in comparison and must bear more than his or her fair share of the burden." Continuing he said that "if the larger property owner is to be relieved of his or her fair proportion on personal property, the mechanic or laborer should be entirely exempt."

"In the case of a workingman, whose family are dependent upon him for support, it hardly seems human to levy on all his property and sell him out of house and home, or arrest and commit him to jail until he can afford to pay." He said that he would enforce the law to the limit against the unscrupulous rich tax dodgers. The exhibition of a poll tax receipt as a requisite to the right to vote was also championed by him.

For Better Salaries.

Touching on local affairs, Mr. Fisk recommended that the work of street cleaning and ashes and garbage removal be let out to ten or twelve contractors in as many given sections of the city. He reiterated his demand for a larger police force, calling attention to the fact that some parts of the city are now unprotected and to the fact that his special message on this subject "was absolutely ignored" by the city fathers. More pay for the men in this and in the fire department were favored as well as more and modern apparatus for the latter department. More pay for the building inspector's department was also favored.

Organized Charity Workers.

"Considering the character of our people, with the large percentage of families in easy circumstances and the advantages they enjoy in this city," declared the Mayor, "there is no reason why Plainfield should not set the pace for every other city in the country in the real welfare of its citizens." In this connection and after enumerating the large number of local charities voluntarily supported he asks; "Is it not time to take account of our philanthropies and make up a general charity budget so that the people of Plainfield may know just what the total cost of such work is, and what part of it they should bear and get together for the common good. I propose to call a meeting shortly of representatives of all these activities to consider the matter."

Inasmuch as he was president of the State Excise Commission, the mayor's remarks on liquor licenses was given marked attention. After he had declared himself against any new licenses and that liquor license was not considered by him from the means of revenue, but only as a means toward regulation, he reported the illegal selling crusade in this fashion:

After Excise Violators.

"During the past year the city was very much troubled by dealers from outside the city sending or bringing in liquor and selling from wagons. This matter was closely followed up with the result that there were many cases taken before the grand jury and in every case indictments returned. All those on trial were convicted, with one exception when the jury disagreed in the county collected about $1,200 in fines. One case has been taken to the United States courts on the question of the rights of a dealer outside the State to sell or take orders in the State under the Inter-State Commerce Act. The result of this case will be awaited with a great deal of interest as the decision will probably settle definitely a long disputed question.

Drug Stores Escaped.

"At the same term of court, several cases of the illegal selling of liquor in drug stores were presented to the grand jury, but as the evidence was concerned, these all appeared to be good prima facie cases. The grand jury, however, on consideration, evidently must have considered otherwise, as they did not return any indictments. These investigations cost the city nearly $1,500. I am convinced the practice still continues to a certain extent and I shall take the matter up with the new license committee and see what can be done. The laws are so technical on the question of evidence, it seems almost impossible to fulfil the requirements of the court and secure a conviction without going to what would seem an unjustifiable expense."

Water and Sewerage.

Although the commission on municipal ownership of the water supply and control made an adverse report after long investigation and big expense, Mayor Fisk declared that the question must be settled and he asked: "Shall the city buy or condemn the present works and property or is it best to renew the contract with the water company for another term of years. He also discussed the scheme to join with North Plainfield in constructing and operating a joint sewage disposal plant, the expense of which to the city would be $121,500. The city's present plant cost in the neighborhood of $300,000, and the change is considered because of the demand to have the disposal beds outside the city limits and because the plant is becoming too small for the demands on it.

Mayor Fisk advocated that the public school auditorium be used for lectures and musical entertainments. He came out strongly in favor of an appointive board of education and for manual training in the public schools. The playground movement was also endorsed and a recommendation was made that a branch of the public library be placed in the Marsh building, in the business section.

For Civil Service.

Mayor Fisk came out flat-footed for an adoption of the civil service laws when he said:

"I am of the opinion that all appointees of the city, except the heads of departments, should be appointed or elected as provided by the statutes should be strictly under civil service rules and I seriously recommend taking the required steps as provided by the present statutes to bring this about in Plainfield at the earliest possible date."

Co-operation between the city authorities and the various civic bodies including the Board of Trade and the Merchants' Association was strongly advocated by the mayor.

Scores Public Service.

Public utilities was gone into at great length by the mayor in his speech, marked attention being given the P. S. C., Mayor Fisk saying in part:

"The officers of the P. S. C. from the president, Mr. Thomas N. McCarter, right down the line to the boy that sends the telephone in the local office are the most genial, polite, good fellows and as fine a lot as you could find in this State or any other State. But for all that, the corporation is not giving the city the service it is entitled to. The road beds on some of the local lines are in bad repair and the cars used on the local lines are in bad repair and the cars used on the local lines are old, worn out, discarded cars from other lines, repaired and repaired again, covered with a coat of new paint to make them look pretty, but like any old carriage, automobile or machinery that has served its usefulness, are candidates for the junk heap. The only satisfaction we have been able to get so far is reports of inspection. He demands that the company's franchise here be enforced."

Gratifying Endorsement.

In prefacing his remarks Mayor Fisk said:

"As the personnel of the incoming Common Council is the same as the body of the past year, and that a majority of the members were elected at the last city election to succeed themselves, is in itself a very gratifying endorsement of the way the affairs of the city have been managed. At the same time it makes it most important that each and every member of the governing body of this administration should realize the trust imposed in him by his fellow citizens, and not betray that trust, do all within his power to live up to his constituents that their confidence has been well placed."

The Mayor outlined the form of government and explained the character of the various offices. He also explained in detail the laws which regulate the duties of these officers and which restrict the powers of the municipal administration. How necessary funds are raised by State law for the conduct of various departments was outlined.

Opposes Bond Issues.

Continuing, Mr. Fisk said:

"In my judgment, no bonds should be issued during the present year for any public purpose, except in case of unforeseen emergency making it imperative. With respect to the further macadamizing of public streets, we should return to the method formerly extensively in use, which required those interested in seeking the macadamizing of a street to pay into the city treasury in advance of the adoption of the ordinance such an amount as would ordinarily be assessed on property benefitted, and then have the work done at public expense, after first applying the voluntary contributions of the property owners.

"This method saves the necessity of issuing any bonds, the very considerable expense of appointing commissioners, advertising, hearings in court, etc., fees of court officers and commissioners. It avoids liability of contest over assessments, and the possibility of failure to collect assessments when made and confirmed."

The total bonded indebtedness of the city at present, he said, is $594,000, but the net debt is $582,600.52. The floating debt at present is $23,000.

The tax question was gone into very thoroughly by the Mayor, who proposed changes in the laws and methods for the solution of the problem. Cheaper collection for the tax collector was recommended.

Finances Sound.

"The city has never been in a better and stronger financial position than it is at the present time. The treasurer's report shows that the general fund has a cash balance of $53,780.36 in addition to $18,121.92 in the contingent fund, and uncollected taxes for the past year $53,831.76, over ninety per cent of which will undoubtedly be collected, giving a practical working balance of over $100,000. All bills and claims have been paid or provided for."

After show how taxes had been raised and had been spent for the last ten years, the Mayor pointed out the causes of increased expenses in various departments.

Fire and Police.

Street improvements and repairs were recommended.

An eight-hour schedule and the establishment of a pension fund for the police were recommended. Better water pressure was said was needed for the fire department as was also better apparatus, some of which he suggested. More hydrants and call boxes were also favored.

Mayor Fisk attempted to show the rapid growth of the city by the statistics furnished the inspector's office. Measures for the relief of the poor and sick were also suggestions.

What has been done in the way of school work formed a feature of the message, the keynote of which was the recommendation for an appointive board of education.

A Branch Library.

In dwelling on the Library and its needs, Mr. Fisk announced that the board had saved $4,208.27. He also referred to the fact that a codification of all ordinances is now nearly completed.

License Restrictions.

"In excise matters the number of licenses in proportion to population should be limited by State law, there should be a uniform closing hour throughout the State when all saloons must be closed, the local authorities having power to fix an earlier hour. The minimum license fee fixed by State, the local authorities having power to make it higher if they deem wise. The licenses granted by a local board elected by the people with full power to refuse or grant. All other regulations should be left entirely to the municipality subject to the vote of the people.

The Refuse Nuisance.

"Some arrangement must be made to help the householder to get rid of all garbage and rubbish and other waste matter in some systematic way. If this cannot be done at public expense, it must be done by licensing a responsible contractor, allowing the contractor to charge the householder a reasonable price to be fixed by ordinance and compelling the contractor to make his collections regularly and thoroughly. For this purpose the city could be divided into sections and each section given out to the highest bidder, who would give a bond guaranteeing good service in accordance with rules laid down by the Board of Health. The city could provide a place where garbage and decayed matter could be buried and all rubbish burned, the ashes could be used for filling in low ground, thus getting rid of a number of mosquito and disease breeding holes. Flies and mosquitoes carry disease germs, particularly typhoid and malaria.

Garbage Cans.

"The householder should be educated and made to have all garbage cans or boxes covered, and all manure and decayed garden and vegetable matter should be kept in a pit well screened from flies until such time as it is removed and it should be removed not less than twice a week. For rubbish, papers, old boxes and such stuff, I would suggest the city furnish the householder and storekeeper with large bags or sacks in which to keep all such material and once or twice a week, as may be required, send around a wagon and gather them up.

Office For Assessors.

"In order that there may be no misunderstanding in regard to assessments in the future, I suggest that the Common Council provide the Board of Assessors with a proper office and arrangements be made to have one of the members act as secretary and be in this office certain hours during every day from May 20 to August 20, to meet taxpayers and take their statements, and that such member be allowed an additional compensation for his time. Also that arrangements be made for a revaluation of all buildings in the city and an appropriation should be made to permit the assessors to engage competent building experts for the purpose."

Y. W. C. A. OBSERVES CLASS ANNIVERSARY

The Monday Night Bible classes of the Young Woman's Christian Association observed its first anniversary by a banquet and celebration in the rooms of the association Monday night. There were sixty members present and an enjoyable time was had by all. Among the guests were Miss Charlotte Adams, of the Y. W. C. A. International Committee, of New York.

Miss Adams, during the evening gave an interesting talk. In the course of her remarks she said:

"The Bible is more closely related to human life than any other book. There are four measurements in life, length, breadth, height, and depth. Some people are living one quarter lives; it is possible for all to live whole lives.

"The biographies of the Bible never discourage us, but lift us to heights attained in no other way than by the study of the Gospels. The Psalms show us life's depths to which in time, we all descend. The history gives us its length and breadth, showing us the march of God through events. The Bible has an atmosphere of health and vitality, through which human life grows."

The committee in charge of the banquet was the Misses Elsie Goddard, Edna Brown, Miss Freeland, Miss Coddington. The committee was ably assisted by the Misses Dorothy Randall, Helen George, Nettie Steiner, Minnie Line, Bessie Conroy and Ruth Weinberger.

S. S. SWACKHAMER ADDRESSES MEN'S CLUB ON LOCAL OPTION.

S. S. Swackhamer addressed the members of the Men's Club of the First Baptist church, Monday, in an informal manner. Local option eventually proved the basis of an earnest talk by the speaker and he attempted to prove that local option is the only safe and sane plan for handling the liquor problem.

B. J. Phelps, president of the club, called the meeting to order and then presented J. Henry Crane, who introduced the speaker of the evening. After Mr. Swackhamer's talk, there was a social time and refreshments were served.

Boyd to Play in the South.

Charles Boyd, who played centre-field for the Plainfield Baseball Club, last season, and who is considered one of the strongest fielders and stickers in his class, has signed to play with the Lynchburg Club, of the Virginia League, for next season. It was through Ernest Dorflinger, of this city, who is now acting as scout for baseball players, that Boyd landed his new berth.

NORRIS WANTED HIS WIFE: SHE DOES NOT WANT HIM

Maybe Grafton P. Morris, a printer sometimes of Pennsylvania and again hailing from Connecticut, will leave his wife alone to pursue the even tenor of her way as a practical nurse and then again he may not, but in the latter event he will become the guest of the county for a period of sixty days.

Tuesday morning police headquarters was notified that Mr. Norris was creating a disturbance at the residence of Mrs. Knight, 1279 Park avenue. Patrolman Birmingham was despatched to the scene of the trouble and corralled Mr. Norris, who was shouting at the top of his voice that he wanted to see his wife and that quickly.

As it was not the first time that Mrs. Knight had been disturbed in a similar manner, she decided to have the disturber removed, hence her call for help. In the city court this morning Norris could give no reasonable excuse for his actions and Judge William Runyon imposed a sentence of sixty days, suspending execution of it if Norris would let his wife live in peace. Mr. Norris claimed to have supported the recreant husband for several years and believed that she had a perfect right to decide where she should live. The Judge coincided with her and warned Norris.

PASSED FORGED CHECKS

Clever Stranger Forged Clergymen's Signature to Get Money.

MERCHANTS ACCEPTED PAPER.

The Names of Rev. E. V. Stevenson and Rev. B. M. Bogan Were Used—No Clue to Swindler.

The signatures of two Plainfield pastors were forged to two checks on Saturday night and unfortunately they were both cashed. They were drawn on the City National Bank, and purported to be signed by Rev. B. M. Bogan, rector of St. Mary's church and Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace Episcopal church.

C. J. Field, a Park avenue newsdealer cashed one for $9, signed "B. M. Bogan," and James H. Blair, a haberdasher of Park avenue, cashed one for $10 signed "E. Vicars Stevenson." At the bank this morning it was said that no other checks originating from the same source had been presented.

It is not long since a check or two bearing the forged signature of a real estate dealer of this city were cashed by some too confiding merchants and it is evident from the description obtained from Mr. Blair that the same man is operating over an old, but profitable field. One merchant said this morning that it was almost impossible to tell when checks are good and when they are not. According to his experience checks are given to employees after banking hours and there is no recourse, if the merchant wants to do business but to cash the checks and hand over any change which may be coming to the holder of the check.

In this particular case if the signatures had been carefully scrutinized it would have become apparent that the name of Father Bogan was spelled wrong and the fraud would have been detected at once. But this did not apparently excite the curiosity of the man who cashed the spurious paper. Both signatures bear the marks of paper previously passed by the gang.

Strangely enough the improvised signature of the rector of St. Mary's read "B. M. Morgan" instead of B. M. Bogan, and still more strange neither of the clergymen have accounts in the bank upon which the checks were drawn.

ROUTINE BUSINESS OF COMMON COUNCIL

Aside from the reading of the message of Mayor Charles Joel Fisk, which consumed about one hour and a quarter, the Common Council at its adjourned meeting Monday, did little business. In the regular order of business, Mayor Fisk sent in the appointments of several special policemen, which were confirmed as follows:

Thomas J. McInerney, John J. King, Harry M. Stockton, Jeremiah Cash, Tucker Johnson, J. P. Stevens and W. H. Forristel. These call-men were appointed for the fire department and confirmed: Charles W. Townley, H. E. Hand, John McDonough, Robert T. Skinner and Jeremiah Griffin.

The resignation of John C. F. Payne, as a patrolman, after five years' service, was received and accepted to take effect on January 15.

The annual reports of the Board of Health and City Treasurer W. F. Arnold were received and filed, and a communication from the Board of Health stating that it had been determined that $7,500 will be needed for the coming year. This was referred to the finance committee.

A resolution offered by Mr. Buxton and adopted, authorized the finance committee to have 250 copies of the Mayor's message printed, and upon motion of Mr. Buxton the by-laws of the Council were made the rules of that body for the coming year.

President Tolles appointed Charles C. Randolph and Herbert Buxton as members of the Board of School Estimate to represent the Council during the year, and a resolution offered by Mr. Mygatt and adopted, confirmed the appointments.

All of the members of the Council, except Frank Randolph, were present at last night's meeting, but inasmuch as this was the third meeting of the body this month there was not a great deal of business to transact, the committees not having become sufficiently acquainted with a number of matters to be disposed of later.

Miss Mildred Wildey and Richard Waring Give Society a Surprise.

CEREMONY AT ELIZABETH.

Rev. Dr. Glazebrook Tied the Knot For a Popular Young Couple —Now On Honeymoon.

Society folk were greatly surprised today to learn of the marriage of Miss Mildred Wildey, daughter of Charles P. Wildey, proprietor of the Herald Square and Cosmopolitan Hotels in New York, and Richard Waring, son of Mr. and Mrs. Orville T. Waring, of Park avenue. The young couple went away quietly and were married Monday at Christ church rectory, Elizabeth, by Rev. Dr. Otis P. Glazebrook, the rector. Later Mr. Waring's parents and the bride's father were notified of the marriage through telegrams.

Mr. and Mrs. Waring are now enjoying a honeymoon, the destination being unknown. The bride is famous as a tennis player, having taken part with her sisters in some of the most important tournaments in this country also at the Plainfield Country Club. She has also been prominent in the younger social set.

Mr. Waring is also well-known here. He is a member of the Watchung Hunt club, and has taken part in the various meets of that organization. He is also a member of the Plainfield Country Club and other social organizations. It has been known for some time that Mr. Waring was attentive to Miss Wildey, and in fact, their many friends expected to learn of an announcement of the date for the wedding. On the other hand they gave all a surprise. The couple, it is understood, will reside at Petersburg, Va.

A STORY OF CANINE FIDELITY.

It is a touching story of canine fidelity which Enos A. Mills tells of his dog "Scotch" in "Wild Life on the Rockies," says Youth's Companion. Master and dog had been out on a four days' excursion on the bleak mountain tops, when a little above timber-line Mr. Mills stopped to take some photographs. To do this he had to take off his sheepskin mittens, which he placed securely in his coat pocket, but not securely, as it proved later. He goes on:

From time to time, as I climbed the summit of he continental divide, I stopped to take photographs, but on the summit the cold pierced my silk gloves, and I felt for my mittens, to find that one of them was lost.

I stopped, put an arm around Scotch, and told him I had lost a mitten, and that I wanted him to go down for it to save me trouble.

Instead of starting off willingly, as he had invariably done before in obedience to my commands, he stood still. I thought he had misunderstood me, so I patted him, and then pointing down the slope, said, "Go for the mitten, Scotch. I will wait here for you."

He started for it, but went unwillingly. He had always served me so cheerfully that I could not understand, and it was not until late the next afternoon that I realized that he had not understood me, but that he had loyally, and at the risk of his life, tried to obey me.

My cabin, eighteen miles away, was the nearest house, and the region was utterly wild. I waited a reasonable time for Scotch to return, but he did not come back. As it was in the afternoon, and growing colder, I decided to go on toward my cabin, along a route that I felt sure he would follow, and I reasoned that he would overtake me.

When at midnight he had not come, I felt something was wrong. I slept two hours and decided to go to meet him. The thermometer showed fourteen below zero. I kept on going, and at 2 in the afternoon, twenty-four hours after I had sent Scotch back, I passed on a crag and looked below. There in the snowy world of white lay the mitten in the deep snow. He had misunderstood me, and had gone back to guard the mitten instead of to get it.

After waiting for him to eat a luncheon, we started merrily toward home, where we arrived at 1 o'clock in the morning.

Scotch not returned. I suppose Scotch would have died beside the mitten. In a region cold, cheerless, oppressive, without fod, and perhaps to die, he lay down by the mitten because he understood that I told him to.. In the annals of dog heroism I know of no greater deed.

WEINBERGER CLOTHING HOUSE CHANGES HANDS.

Mrs. Max Weinberger, of Prospect place, has purchased the clothing business formerly owned by her late husband and more recently by Jacob Weinberger on West Front street, and will take possession on February 1. She owns the building where the business is now located and after February 1 will occupy the entire building.

Mrs. Weinberger is planning to remodel the store and later will announce the name of the new manager.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 16, 1910.

Topic.—Candles under Bushels.—Matt. v. 13-16. Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The topical inference is a paragraph from the Sermon on the Mount. In the preceding part of this sermon Christ has in what are commonly called "the beatitudes" described the characteristics of those who are members of the kingdom of heaven, here meaning His spiritual kingdom upon earth. In the paragraph before us He briefly, but most comprehensively, describes the relation of the members of His kingdom to the outside world under the two figures of salt and light. The figure of salt illustrates that His kingdom is to purify and preserve the world. But if the salt loses its savor it is good for nothing and is cast out and trodden under foot of men. In the east salt does lose its saltiness by exposure and by adulteration by mixing with other foreign substances and is then worse than worthless. So the church without the qualification described in the beatitudes can accomplish nothing so far as purifying and preserving the world are concerned. If it be Christless it will drive the world from Christ rather than to Him.

The second figure, that of light, is more pertinent to the subject suggested. The spiritual kingdom, or, rather its members are "the light of the world. * * * Men do not light a candle [lamp] and put it under a bushel [an eastern measure holding about a peck], but on the stand [lamp stand], and it giveth light to all that are in the house. Therefore let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father, which is in heaven."

Candles or lamps under bushels! What supreme folly! Why light a lamp to put it under a bushel? The bushel would but hide its light and therefore waste the oil that was being burned. Why should the disciples of Christ, therefore, try to hide the light of their godly lives and good works? Who thus would be led to God? No one, for light, to lead, must be seen. A covered lighthouse in time of storm would save no shipwrecked vessel. Nor do men act so foolishly in earthly matters. Lighthouse keepers see that their lights are shining their best in the midst of a storm. They desire above all things to turn approaching vessels from the rocks and shoals and direct them to a safe harbor. Yet many Christians put their candles under bushels. Some do so because of a false modesty. They may well keep the light from shining upon them, but never fear to let it shine to the glory of God. Others may have some doubts and are afraid to speak out and act out for God. Others still have a misunderstanding of Christ's words, "Let not thy right hand know what thy left hand doeth." In this instance Christ was warning them against the selfish motive that hardens men, but to ascribe our good works to God's grace and to let them shine for Him is a duty and not a deception. Let your light shine to the glory of God.

A Road Out of Ruts.

One good way to get out of ruts in Christian Endeavor meetings is to break away from the regular topic once in awhile and introduce some other subject which may be treated by one or by several Endeavorers, by the pastor or by a stranger, according to circumstances. There are interesting themes by the score. Try a discussion or even a description of the institutional church idea. Get some one from the Y. M. C. A. to tell about the work and plans of that institution. Make a special meeting to discuss some part of Sheldon's "In His Steps." Try also national evenings, if you will, as Irish night, Then you may have a Scottish night, with a social run along the lines of a Scottish soiree, the particulars of which any Scotchman will be happy to give. An English night may be tried, with English refreshments; so also a German night, a Dutch night, a French night, and so on. If socials be impracticable, then have a Scottish night with Scotch subjects. Take, for example, "Christ's Scottish Ambassadors, Knox, Livingstone, Drummond." Luther's life will fit into the German night and give ample opportunity for stereopticon views. Plan new things. Keep your eyes open for ideas. They are floating in the air all around you. Look for them.—Rev. H. P. Anderson in Christian Endeavor World.

Secretary Shaw's Surprise.

A pleasant surprise was given to General Secretary Shaw by the Endeavorers of the city of his home town, Hallsville, Mass., just before his departure for India and around the world. Not only the young people and the juniors, but the Sunday school as well, gathered at a reception in his honor and a beautiful jeweled Christian Endeavor pin, together with a sum of money, was presented to him as a token of the esteem and affection in which he is held by his friends and neighbors.

Hymn For C. E. Consecration Service.

"MY VOW IN PRAYER."
Blessed Master, I have promised;
Hear my vow in prayer.
Take this pledge of mine and seal it
Pledge of mine is only weakness.
This is strength indeed.
Strengthen me in fullest measure
As I need.
Let no worldly cares nor pleasures
Call my heart away.
Save me, Lord, and keep me faithful
Day by day.

Yale Corporation and Other Distinguished Bodies Represented —Learned Divines Officiate.

Funeral services for the Rev. Dr. William Rogers Richards, late pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, this city, and the Brick Presbyterian church, New York, were held from the latter church Monday forenoon. There were many mourners, including more than one hundred members and friends of the Crescent Avenue church, who occupied seats reserved for them at the church edifice.

There were also present members of the New York Presbytery and representatives of the Yale Corporation and Union Theological Seminary, ministers of other churches and personal friends of the dead pastor.

The services were conducted by the Rev. Robert Davis, assistant pastor; Rev. Shepherd Knapp, of Worcester, Mass., formerly assistant pastor; Rev. Dr. Henry vanDyke, of Princeton University, and former pastor, and Rev. Dr. George Alexander, moderator of the New York Presbytery.

In the pulpit also were the Rev. George S. Webster, of the Church of the Covenant, and the Rev. James M. Farr, pastor of Christ church, New York city. The pallbearers were the elders, deacons and trustees of Brick church. Yale Corporation was represented by distinguished alumni. At the conclusion of the services nearly all present filed by the casket. The burial will take place at the boyhood home of Dr. Richards at Bridgeport, Conn., at the convenience of the family.

On Sunday, Dr. Henry vanDyke occupied Dr. Richards' pulpit at Brick church, preaching the sermon that the late pastor had prepared for that day. At the conclusion of the sermon Dr. vanDyke made a touching reference to the life and character of Dr. Richards, referring to his work at Brick church. Dr. vanDyke will continue to serve the church as acting pastor until a successor to Dr. Richards is chosen.

RARE MUSICAL TREAT

Beethoven's Opus 16 in Four Parts Admirably Treated by McIntyre's Artists.

MISS MILLER SCORES TRIUMPH.

Saint-Saens' Serenade Finished a Most Delightful Program of Inspiring Music.

As the fashionable and representative audience which filled every seat in the High School auditorium, Monday, settled back in its chairs to scan the program of the fourth and concluding concert of the McIntyre Chamber Music Evenings, it was greeted with a pleasant surprise, for there was announced another concert which, for the personnel of the visiting artists, far eclipses anything Mr. Joseph McIntyre has ever attempted here. This is to be an Old Favorite Song concert and is scheduled for the evening of January 27.

The concert last night was a fitting climax to a successful season—the most successful, in fact, since Mr. McIntyre inaugurated these delightful evenings here. The program was replete with gems, instrumental and vocal, and the visiting artists and their most appreciative audience were soon in perfect accord, as the vociferous applause which followed each number attested. The quartet, an innovation in this series, played delightfully and its interpretation of Beethoven's exquisite Opus 16 proved an inspiration, for it but keyed the devotees of good music up to the highest pitch and prepared them for the many good things to follow. This quartet was composed of Mr. McIntyre, piano, and he never played better; Arthur Lichstein, violin; Otto K. Schill, viola, and Vladimir Dubinsky, 'cello. Later Mr. Lichstein was heard in "Faust's" Fantasie and an ovation was accorded him. As an artist he has few superiors and Plainfield is deeply indebted to Mr. McIntyre's persistence in engaging him for this concert, as it will be recalled he was to have appeared here earlier in the season but was compelled to cancel the engagement at the last moment.

Of course, chief interest centered in Miss Christine Miller, whose exquisite contralto voice was never heard to better advantage. She was particularly fortunate in the happy selection of her songs, for each quickly brought the audience to its feet with storms of applause. This was not Miss Miller's first appearance here, and fortunately he will not be her last, as she had been engaged for the Old Favorite Song concert.

The concluding instrumental number was a trio for piano, violin and 'cello, a serenade by that most gifted composer, Saint-Saens. It, too, was warmly received and in this number the trio did, perhaps, its best work of the season. The program follows: Beethoven's Opus 16, quartet, piano, violin, viola and 'cello. (a) Grave-Allegro ma non troppo; (b) Andante Cantabile; (c) Allegro ma non troppo: song group, Miss Miller, (a) Botschaft, Brahms; (b) Die Abloesung, Hollander; (c) In the Time of Roses, Reichardt; (d) Floda of Spring, Rachmaninoff. Violin solo, Mr. Lichstein, "Faust" Fantasie. Song group, Miss Miller, (a) A Summer Idyl, Coleridge-Taylor; (b) My Love and I, McDowell; (c) The Danza, Chadwick; (d) Sunshine, Ring, Hiles. Saint-Saens' Serenade, piano, violin and 'cello.

Those songsters who have been engaged for the "Old Favorite" song concert include Miss Miller, contralto; Dr. Carl Dufft, basso; John Young, tenor, and Edith Chapman Goold, soprano. There will be solos, duets, trios and quartets and altogether it will be a delightful evening of song, with the very best artists that can be procured to interpret them.

Business Facilities for the Farmer

BEFORE the introduction of the telephone, the farmer was isolated—cut off from the outside world.

Did he wish to know the market price of his produce? It meant a weary journey to town. The same weary, time-wasting trips were necessary did he wish to speak to a distant neighbor, consult the doctor, or to impart or receive any information outside his own household.

Now the farmer with a Bell telephone puts himself in instant communication with the town. He consults his doctor, converses with his friends, learns the market quotations and the news of the day, without leaving his house.

Every farmer should have a Bell telephone. Have you one? If not, ask our manager about it to-day. Rates are reasonable.

MOURN FOR DR. RICHARDS

Dr. Zelie Pays Tribute to Departed Minister at Largely Attended Meeting.

AT CRESCENT AVENUE CHURCH.

Memorial Service to Be Held By His Former Congregation—Reference at Hope Chapel.

The sudden death of Rev. Dr. William Rogers Richards, formerly pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, which occurred at his home in New York city, Friday, resulted in an unusually large attendance at the meeting held in the lecture room of the church Friday, under the auspices of the Young People's Association. Rev. Dr. Stanley White, secretary of the foreign mission board, was engaged to speak and there was no change in the program. W. Lester Glenney was in charge of the meeting.

Prior to the talk on missions by Dr. White, a few remarks were made by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor, relative to the death of Dr. Richards. He expressed the deep sorrow felt by all in the sad loss to the Presbyterian church as well as the cause of religion. He said that the news came as a great shock to him, and he was loth to speak of it until he was absolutely sure it was true. He asked the prayers of all present for Dr. Richards' family. In view of Dr. Richards' known interest in missions, Dr. Zelie said that it was decided to hold the meeting as planned.

Dr. White prefaced his talk by a few words of eulogy concerning Dr. Richards. He said that for more than twenty years he had been his companion in the work and when he was a member of this Synod he was brought in close touch with the departed minister. He referred affectionately to his untiring zeal and devotion to the cause of Christ and missions, and added that every member of the Presbyterian Board of Missions had experienced a distinct and severe loss.

Everyone present was deeply impressed with the words spoken and after Dr. White's talk there was a short season of prayer, during which many petitions were offered to the Heavenly Master in behalf of the bereaved family.

Dr. White brought a message to the church of the mission work in Korea and South America, more especially the latter country, from which Robert E. Speer recently returned.

The speaker referred to the increasing knowledge of the foreign countries where missionaries are at work, of the knowledge he himself used and the fact that missionaries are not now devoting so much time to tearing down other religions, but are using greater efforts in presenting the true religion of Christ.

Dr. White said that according to the reports brought back by Mr. Speer, together with other knowledge on the subject, India cannot be compared with South America for moral degradation. The country is steeped in the blackest sin and is bound down by superstition.

Investigations have been made to the Republic of Panama, Guatemala, Brazil and other central points, showing the great need for more work in mission effort. The speaker referred to the moral condition of South America, which he said he would not attempt to describe for him to explain before such an audience. In view of the conditions as found, Dr. White felt sure that the church has a great message to send to the people of South America. He gave a number of interesting facts which were obtained from Mr. Speer, showing the character of the priesthood in South America. The speaker said that he did not believe the Roman Catholic church in South America was representative of that church everywhere.

At the week of prayer service at Hope chapel Friday night, F. H. Andregg, who was in charge, made personal reference to the death of Dr. Richards. He was a close friend of the departed minister and spoke of him in terms of great affection, telling of his unfailing interest not only in the Crescent Avenue church, where he was pastor for eighteen years, but in the work at the chapel. Other remarks of an informal nature were made concerning Dr. Richards.

Following the meeting at the Crescent Avenue church, last night, the session decided to hold a memorial service for Dr. Richards at the church on Sunday night, January 16. The plans are not definitely arranged, but due announcement will be made giving the names of the speakers and other information.

The New York Tribune under the title of "Living Example," paid this tribute to Dr. Richards in this morning's issue:

"The death of the pastor of the Brick Presbyterian church, yesterday, ended a life of much sweetness and beauty and a public career of more than ordinary usefulness to the community. There are probably other ministers in this city who are better known to the general public, but it may be doubted if there is one who has labored more earnestly or more efficiently to do the real work of the pastor of a numerous, needful and exacting congregation. The church which was his is one of the historic churches of New York, and it is one which has not declined with age but rather has continued to increase in numbers and influence, in the variety and scope of its activities, and therefore in the demands which it makes upon its pastor's time and strength. How well Dr. Richards served it, as spiritual exhorter and guide, as intellectual instructor, as administrator of practical affairs and in the tender and intimate personal relationships of sympathy and consolation, cannot be told but must be deeply realized by those who had the privilege of association with him.

"The example of his life affords what should be a convincing answer to those who are quaveringly inquiring how the churches are to be filled and how the people are to be interested in them. Here was a preacher who sought adventitious aids to attract attention, yet who never lacked a great and deeply interested congregation. Here was a pastor who never indulged in exploits outside the limits of pastorale duty, yet who never was distressed by Christians from his parish. Here was a religious teacher who sought no new fantasies of faith and who discarded none of the vital and robust doctrines of his belief, and yet who never had occasion to lament the decline of faith or the failure of Christianity to hold upon the hearts and lives of men and women. His was a living example of the way in which to make the churches prosperous and Christianity a triumphant force in the world; and it will remain a living and potent example in his death as it was in his life.

Living among us many happy years,
He preached in life and word "Good will to men";
We knew his sweetness and his greatness—then,
As thousands know and see them now, through tears.
Our sorrow is as their's,—and yet one fears
To ask for him "the three score years and ten'
For him?" He never queried "Why?" nor "When?"
"Where is thy sting?" is all the cry one hears.

Ours is the precious memory of those days,
When boy, he seemed as well as priest and man.
His ready smile, his blue eyes, piercelling, and
His voice, that loved the tuneful song to raise,
We do not these forget, nor ever can.
He dwelt among us long; let us be glad!

WIFE'S DAILY RATIONS WERE TWO SANDWICHES

Because she had not had enough to eat for the past week Mrs. Anna Dilts caused a disturbance in the room she and her husband occupy

In court Saturday Mrs. Dilts and the scrap between the two was so violent that police headquarters was notified and Patrolman Flatley instructed to gather in the warring couple.

When the officer arrived on the scene of the conflict he found the room in disorder and a map of Hoboken engraved on the face of Charles Dilts, the husband. Broken crockery decorated the floor and other evidence of a mighty struggle were abundant.

In court this morning Mrs. Dilts told Judge Runyon that her food had consisted of two egg sandwiches a day for the past week and even that was grudgingly given. She would be very well satisfied if her husband would provide at least one square meal a day, but he didn't seem to be willing to give her enough money to buy the grub.

Dilts tried to explain that he was unaccustomed to housekeeping and to his wife was ill she did not care to eat much and anyway they had a good time drinking porter at a certain hotel previous to the row and both were slightly under the influence of drink.

Judge Runyon believed that the wife had cause to raise a rumpus so he fined her husband $5 and suspended sentence in her case. She will have had a good hot meal before tonight.

UNION'S FREEHOLDERS APPOINTS COMMITTEES

The Union County Board of Freeholders held its first meeting of the year, after organization, at the Court House, Elizabeth, Thursday, when several matters of importance were considered and committees were announced for the year by Director Cady.

In the past, Justices of the Peace have been attesting correct constable's bills. Freeholder S. P. T. Wilbur had this matter referred to the county attorney and prosecutor to ascertain whether this is right.

When Henry Winans built the Edgar road, he sub-let a portion of the contract to a contractor from Pennsylvania and after the latter was paid by Mr. Winans, he "skipped." Now Mr. Winans wants to be reimbursed. The bill amounts to between $500 and $600. A conference has been held with Mr. Winans, the county attorney and the road committee and it looks as though Mr. Winans will have to stad the loss.

These committees for the year were appointed, the Plainfield members being well remembered:

Collector's bond, Crane, Martin and Adams; publication, Robinson, Haviland; Randolph; discharge of prisoners, Adams, Robinson, Isbell; settle with county collector, Wilbur, Garretson, Randolph; lunacy, Meisel, Doane and Crane; public grounds and buildings, Krause, Smith, Crane; auditing, Wilbur, Smith, Jones; jails, Perry, Doane, Martin; stationery, Darby, Garretson, Swain; miscellaneous accounts and agreements, Garretson, Darby, Perry; legal questions, Martin, Adams, Thompson; appropriations, Smith, Crane, Swain, Krause, Jones; county roads, Krause Wilbur, Meisel, Smith, Haviland; Elizabeth drawbridges, Jensen, Martin, Haviland; Railway drawbridges, Gruener, Randolph, Thompson; special Elizabeth drawbridge, Haviland, Krause, Robinson, Jensen, Martin; legislation, Meisel, Krause, Wilbur; soldiers' headstones, Doane, Perry, Jensen, Adams, Randolph; sinking fund, Director Cady, Krause and Swain.

WALTER NELSON TO WED CLERGYMAN'S DAUGHTER

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Ruth Gardner, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. George H. Gardner, of New Market, to Walter Nelson, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Nelson, of the same place. No date has been set for the wedding.

Mr. Nelson is well known in local and collegiate athletic circles. He graduated from Rutgers College two years ago. While at college he was a star baseball player as catcher on the varsity ball team. During his vacation periods he did backstop duty for the local Y. M. C. A. team.

Nelson's ability as a catcher at college attracted the attention of the late Jim O'Rourke, owner and manager of the Bridgeport club in the Connecticut League two years ago, who gave the New Market athlete a position on his team. Owing to business interests Nelson quit the professional ranks and contended himself by playing on independent teams. Last season he played at Bound Brook.

Miss Gardner is a favorite in New Market social circles, in which she has been one of the leading spirits at her residence there. She is a teacher in the New Market public school and also actively engaged in society work connected with the First Baptist church, of which her father is pastor.

THEY KEPT WEDDING SECRET FOUR MONTHS

Another belated wedding announcement was made Friday, when Mr. and Mrs. Stephen H. Beeching, of Grandview avenue, announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Annette Palmer Beeching, to Charles Nathaniel Sebring, of Division street, the marriage taking place in Elizabeth on Sunday, September 5, but the name of the officiating minister is withheld by the couple.

Mrs. Sebring is a member of the choir of the First M. E. church, while the groom holds a clerical position with the New Jersey Central at the company's offices in Jersey City. The couple will take up their residence in Plainfield.

Borough Franchise Taxes.

The December report of Tax Collector George Brown, of the borough, showed that North Plainfield received $1,272.28 for franchise taxes last year, divided as follows: Public Service Corporation, $742.47; Plainfield Water Company, $344.40; New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, $185.41.

Rev. Henry N. Jordan, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, at New Market, has received a call to accept the pastorate of the Seventh-Day Baptist church at Leonardsville, N. Y. Mr. Jordan has the matter under consideration.

Plain Field Notes and Queeries

By Druid

Good morrow! doubtful stranger, good New Year!
Janus-faced hirsling of cold January veer!
What cheer wilt bring to me this time, I wonder?
Will February, mocking, snow me under
Till March shall smite me with his bitter blow?
April will find me still her Fool, I know.
Ah, if kind May will bring her blossomy boon,
And glow my heart into a radiant June!
Let July zephyrs waft their soothing balm,
And August's mellowing mood all greetings calm.
May sweet September's sunset solace spread
To gild October's gloom o'er summer fled;
Then, should November bring me wintry woes,
I'll hail December's Merry Christmas close.
(So we suppose, but, Lord! who knows?)

* * * *

One's main regret that Uncle Sam so complacently keeps on losing that grite of $1,000 every year on his second-class mail business, is that he doesn't make the odd three millions of a Christmas gift to the sixty millionaires and let us all fetch our own mail. Then there's his yearly deficit of $28,000,000 on rural free delivery. Free country, of course, yet taxpayers somehow have to fork out a pretty penny pretty often to pay for the various sorts of freedom we enjoy. Uncle Sam should set his genius to work to devise plans by which these deficits would have to be paid solely by those who luxuriate on second class mail stuff, and not by those who like it the better the less they get of it. In these latter days it costs more and more to buy the liberty of living. But the cry is: "Don't compel us to pay for smuggling in made luxuries; we demand the freedom to spend our pin money in ways that don't benefit our working folk brothers and sisters."

* * * *

Here comes the beautiful, beautiful snow in full feathery fall. So exquisitely soft, as it hardens your pole, so gentle in its fondling of us, so tonic and inspiring as it insinuates itself between collar and neck and evaporates in its progress down the tingling spine. How good housewifely it spreads its sheet over the beds of grass and absentee flowers. How droll its whim to blanket earth's floor with its snowy sheet as a carpet, which becomes a stretcher when you spy your feet between your eyes and the sky. The humour of Merry Christmas is delightful, when you tumble to it. Why do we call harmless October the "fall?" It's a shameful libel. But we do usually rise again and the leaves don't. Unless we are what they call "snow dunder."

* * * *

Among the cheapest and stalest newspaper "jokes" are those loaded on the back of our old bogey the sea serpent. The fanciful "joke" is that because the creature has not been sighted for years and a dime given confortable inside accommodation to perhaps a sea serpent a mile or two long, if he had not kindly offered himself in convenient instalments. If eels inhabit gentle rivers and giant eels the sea, if whales are a reality and not a delusion, if we dig up the bones and fossils of sixty-feet long amphibious creatures which we thoughtlessly say are extinct because we don't see them gallivanting off Coney Island, then none but a sheer fool can doubt the possible and probable existence in the deep sea and deep sea inhabitants as yet wise enough not to court acquaintance with mere two-legged midges who mistake themselves for godlings.

Of course the aforesaid sceptic on sea snakes knows all about the "extinct" dinosaur, so I need not describe it. Within the last two or three months sundry natives of British Africa have told of seeing a strange animal or animals in certain districts. The following is quoted from the correspondent of the "Sun." The creature is described as a huge monster, half elephant, half dragon, dwelling in the depths of the great swamps, and may be some kind of dinosaur seemingly akin to the Brontosaurus.

"On December 14, the dinosaur reasserted himself in the columns of the Bulawayo Chronicle. A correspondent of that paper declares that he has investigated the matter and has met two natives who affirm in the most positive manner that they have actually seen the dinosaur. Neither of these natives knew the other and both were shown separately a number of sketches, some wholly imaginary and others constructed from illustrations of prehistoric reptiles.

"Both natives immediately picked the same sketch as closely resembling the monster they had seen. Each, however, called the attention of the sketcher to the omission in his picture of what from their description would appear to be propulsory flippers.

"The creature is supposed to inhabit a lake between the rivers Lunga and Kafoe. Juding from the description given by the two natives it would seem to possess the head and tail of a crocodile, the horns of a rhinoceros, the neck of a python and the body of a hippopotamus, with the addition of propulsory flippers. Thus one specimen would in itself form a very fair mixed bag of big game."

CRUELTY CHARGES TRIED

Thomas Hand and Herbert Van Fleet Defendants in City Court This Morning.

MRS. VAN HOESEN PROSECUTES.

Judge Runyon Reserves Decision Until Next Saturday—Dog Was Chicken Thief.

The celebrated case of the N. J. S. P. C. A. against Thomas Hand and Herbert Van Fleet was tried Saturday before City Judge Runyon and after hearing witnesses on both sides of the question the judge reserved decision for a week. Mrs. Eva Van Hoesen, a member of the S. P. C. A., was the complainant against Hand and Van Fleet, and she was represented by W. A. Codington. Hand and Van Fleet were defended by Walter Heitfield, Sr.

According to the testimony given by the Kiely family, whose dogs were shot by Hand and Van Fleet, one of the dogs suffered with a great wound in the throat from Saturday, December 4, until Thursday, December 9, and it was on a charge of cruelty to this dog that Mrs. VanHoesen made the complaint. The animal was finally shot by Detective Sergeant John Flynn on the ninth of the month after a consultation between Mrs. VanHoesen, Veterinary Surgeon Carpenter and Sergeant Flynn.

Hand said that he had complained of these dogs for killing his chickens and on Sunday, December 4 he found two of Kiely's dogs killing a fat hen in his chicken house. Knowing to whom the dogs belonged he went to Kiely's house and tried to see James Kiely, the owner of the dogs, but as he was not at home he notified Mr. Kiely's son of what had happened. The son, so Mr. Hand averred, told him to shoot the dogs. Hand thereupon sent for his hired man Van Fleet, who came, and afterwards sent for his gun and some shells and the two started for the Kiely place on South avenue to shoot the dogs.

In the melee one of the dogs was killed after being shot twice while the other one shot in the throat was able to crawl to Guttridge's barn, several hundred feet away, where it remained in hiding until it was found on Thursday. This part is where the charge of cruelty comes in. The men who shot the dogs should have assured themselves of the animal's death before leaving the premises, Mr. Heitfield pleaded for leniency for the two accused men and Mr. Codington said he would be satisfied if the judge would find they had been technically guilty of cruelty and impose a sentence in conformity with that finding. Judge Runyon will decide the case and render his verdict next Saturday.

AGITATION BEGINS FOR NEW Y.M.C.A. BUILDING

A larger home is needed for the local Y. M. C. A., according to the ideas of some of the prominent members of the association. Since the present building was erected sixteen years ago the association has flourished to such an extent as to create a necessity for more commodious quarters.

There has been a live sentiment in the association for the past two years to dispose of the present structure and erect a more modern building, to compare favorably with Y. M. C. A. homes in the larger cities, but the ideas have failed to crystallize sufficiently to warrant a concerted movement in that direction.

Now it is probable that the matter will be broached at a near meeting of the board of trustees and until that body takes decisive steps nothing definite can be said.

The property, as it stands, including the land, is rated at between $75,000 and $100,000. The present structure cost about $50,000.

The P. H. S. basketball team will play the Bayonne High School five on Wednesday, January 12, at the local High School gym.

WILL VOTE ON SEWERS A FAREWELL "JAMBOREE"

Borough Sewerage Commission Ready for Election for Necessary Bond Issue

MAYOR MAKES APPOINTMENTS.

The Park Commission and Shade Tree Commission Are Named—Two New Call Men Are Announced.

The tracks are now cleared for the borough to have sewers and all additional legal steps are to be gone through at a speedy clip in preparation for the special election for the issuance of bonds. William J. Buttfield, chairman of the sewer commission, who was present at the session, informed Mayor Smalley and the Council Friday, that there was an understanding that the North Plainfield township committee was willing to establish the disposal beds at the Zvolnacw farm, which is located at the extreme westerly boundary of the township. The Township Committee will formally grant the petition at a meeting to be held at Watchung next Thursday afternoon.

Petitions to the committee and to the township Board of Health as prepared by Sherrerd Depew, Esq., counsel for the commission, were unanimously approved, and the documents will be submitted to the township authorities on Thursday. The petitions are identical in wording to the ones submitted last year. Mr. Buttfield explained the preparation of the new ones were necessary, in order to comply with all of the conformities of the law, relative to the establishment of sewerage plants. According to the law such petitions must be acted on in the same year as presented. The 1909 petitions were presented too late in the year for action by the township authorities, consequently they became invalid on January 1.

In order to rush matters along the Council authorized the commission to prepare petitions to submit to property owners in the borough for their signatures as soon as the township committee and Board of Health acts on the petition, in which permits will be granted for locating the disposal beds in the township. Six of these petitions will be prepared and circulated.

Before the arrival of Mr. Buttfield the Council confirmed the reappointment of the commission made by Mayor Smalley. The personnel of the commission is William J. Buttfield, J. O. Osgood, E. S. Boyer, John P. Emmons, C. L. Nicholl and Sherrerd Depew, of Newark, as counsel.

In the reappointment of the park commission, George T. Rogers, H. A. Bonn and Robert Clark, Jr., Mayor Smalley again advocated the establishment of a park in the western section of the borough along Greenbrook.

He also suggested that the borough purchase sites of land, which are apparently worthless, and utilize them for public parks. He called attention to a tract of land along Stony Brook, near the home of the late Colonel Wilson, which he believed was an excellent spot for a small park.

Mayor Smalley also landed the labors of the Shade Tree Commission and reappointed H. C. White and John Harrett to continue in that capacity.

Three new call men were added to the fire department, the appointments being George Hutchins, Claude Hann and William Hogan.

Permission was given the New York Telephone Company to erect two poles facing the properties situated at 150 and 185 Grove street.

In the miscellaneous business Councilman Stahl reported expenditures of $40 in the fire department for the month; claims amounting to $53.25 were ordered paid.

PLAINFIELDERS WIN OUT IN WILL CONTEST

Final settlement of the will of the late Stephen M. Wright, of Sea Cliff, L. I., who died in September, 1906, was made on Wednesday last. The will was contested by distant cousins of the testator, but the surrogate before whom the will was probated dismissed the suit of the contestants.

The legatees who will benefit by the will in sums upward of $50,000 each are H. J. Storrs, Electa Storrs Craft and Marie Louise Storrs, all of Kensington avenue.

Mr. Wright left an estate valued at almost a half a million dollars, and when the will was offered for probate the distant relatives who were not mentioned in the will began a contest which has lasted for the better part of three years.

The Chrysanthemum.

Last tribute of earth to the year's vesper glow;
A kiss of the summer flung out to the snow,
God's herald of winter; yet coming to bring
To the hearts of the faithful a promise of spring.

FAREWELL "JAMBOREE"

This Saloonkeeper Dispensed Liquor at Cut Rates on His "Last Night."

AND GAVE IT AWAY TOO.

Celebration Ended With Great Hilarity In Which Proprietor Is Punched By Rum-Crazed Guests.

Fred Hetterick made his exit from the retail liquor business at Scotch Plains in a highly satisfied style to the drinking element of that village Friday night. Hettrick's license expired at midnight and his emporium is closed today, because of the opposition he encountered in his effort to secure a renewal of his license in the Union County Court.

Realizing that he had little chance of getting a renewal, Walter L. Hetfield, Hettrick's counsel, withdrew the application Friday. This course will give Hettrick the privilege of filing another application, whereas if the application was refused the law would not permit him to apply for one year.

The closing ceremonies were noisy and exciting and many were the "woozey-woozey" heads in the village at daybreak this morning. Cut rates on all grades of stock prevailed and free drinks were thrown in for good measure every once in a while to keep things moving.

Fifteen cent whiskey was marked down, it is said to ten cents, and the cheaper grades to five cents per glass. Beer was passed over the bar at the rate of two and three glasses for a nickel, it is reported.

At 11:50 o'clock, ten minutes before closing time, the real excitement of the occasion came. There was quite a quantity of the fiery fluid left, and Hettrick announced that all who would stop and that unconsummed stuff would be given away scot free.

This was too much for "Red Noze" Pete and "Mike the Bite" from Grassland Cave vicinity, who with some other members of the "jag brigade" made a rush for a full barrel. After the bung had been driven in the receptacle was tapped there was a wild scramble from all parts of the bar room. "Pat the Itch," a tramp character, "got too fresh" in his efforts to get his share of the spoils, and a fight resulted.

The climax came when Hettrick took a hand with a view of restoring peace. The result was that he was bounced about the bar room like a ship on an ocean wave by his rum-crazed guests, and in the riot he was severely beaten.

At the close of the proceedings somebody put the lights out and the crowd dispersed. A few of the faithful, however, remained and divided the contents of the whiskey barrel.

Citizens of the village are highly elated over the outcome of the fight against Hettrick, which was headed by the Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, pastor of the Baptist church.

"MYSTERY PLAY" GIVEN AT HOLY CROSS CHURCH

Before an audience which completely filled the parish house of the Church of the Holy Cross Friday the Junior Auxiliary of the parish assisted by Miss Louise Bristol, Mrs. George Warner, wife of the rector, and a dozen boys from the choir gave a unique and interpretation of an old English Mystery play and judging from the comments made at the end of the play it was the best performance ever given in this progressive church.

Mrs. Warner rendered several violin selections which were appreciated and Miss Bristol added charm to the music by her splendid singing. Miss Bristol was heard in duets with Allen Diman, an alto in the choir, and their blended voices was particularly pleasing. Will O'Brien presided at the piano with his usual skill and if applause had been permissible all these musicians would have received encores.

James Lindsey who had charge of the scenery made a success of his work and was ably assisted by William Little, who had the electrical effects completely under his command. The working of the Bible story had been faithfully followed. Marjory Heaton represented Mary and Grace Wakefield took the part of Joseph, and both were admirably acted. The presentation of gifts to the infant Saviour was remarkably well done. Indeed the whole play in fact was a pleasing thing to see.

The P. H. S. basketball team defeated the alumni in a keen contest yesterday afternoon by the score of 37 to 36.

REV. DR. RICHARDS DEAD

Former Pastor of Crescent Ave. Church Dies Suddenly of Heart Trouble.

MINISTER HERE SIXTEEN YEARS

Member of Yale Corporation—Author of Religious Essays—Union Theological Seminary Trustee—Scholarly Man.

Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, who, for eighteen years was pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, and since that time has been pastor of Brick Presbyterian church, New York, died suddenly at his home in New York early Friday morning of heart trouble. The news of his death, which reached Plainfield later in the morning, came as a great shock to the many friends of Dr. Richards, who had known him for years. The sad report was received here by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, from the Presbyterian Board of Missions in New York.

Word of prayer meetings have been in progress at the Brick church, last week, and Dr. Richards was in charge of the meeting last night. He appeared to be in his usual good health and there were no signs of any trouble during the day. He retired feeling as well as usual, but early Friday morning he passed away suddenly and peacefully without any previous warning.

Dr. Richards was one of the foremost members of the Presbyterian church in this country and was recognized as a scholar of high attainments. He was a prominent figure at the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church, and served one term as moderator. He was also a leading spirit at the regular sessions of the Presbyterian Synod and in addition was an author of note. He was a member of the Yale Corporation, from which institution he was a graduate and also a trustee of Union Theological Seminary.

Dr. Richards became pastor of the Crescent Avenue church in 1884, coming from Bath, Maine, where he was pastor of a Congregational church. He succeeded Rev. Dr. Bliss here. His pastorate of sixteen years in this city was a noteworthy one and was marked by the continued growth and success of his church. During his residence here he was prominent in civic affairs and was a member of the Board of Education. His strong influence was felt in nearly every walk of life in this city and he was constantly sought for advice on various matters of a spiritual and secular nature.

Following the death in foreign lands of Rev. Dr. Malthie Babcock, who was then pastor of the Brick church, New York, Dr. Richards was prominently mentioned as his successor. Prior to this he had been mentioned for the presidency of Yale University. It was on May 14, 1902, that definite information was received that Dr. Richards would receive a call to Brick church. The matters was in the hands of Rev. Dr. Henry VanDyke, who was then the acting pastor of the New York church. He stated on the above date that on May 27 he would announce the name of the successor of Dr. Babcock.

On the evening of May 27, the congregation of the Brick church, at a meeting over which Dr. VanDyke presided, extended a call to Dr. Richards at a salary of $12,000 a year. The call was unanimous and after due deliberation, Dr. Richards accepted. He left Plainfield in the fall of 1902, when he entered upon his new duties at Brick church. Since that time his pastorate has been marked by great success. Dr. Richards endeared himself to his large congregation and there was a pronounced unanimity between pastor and people.

During his ministry, Dr. Richards wrote several books which have had a large sale. They included, "The Ways of Wisdom," "For Whom Christ Died," "God's Choice of Men," The Apostle's Creed in Modern Worship," and his last book was "The Lord's Prayer."

The New York University conferred the degree of doctor of divinity on Dr. Richards in 1892. He frequently delivered sermons at Yale University, where he was always a welcome visitor. Among his classmates at Yale were United States Senator Patton, of Michigan, and Supreme Court Justice Jenks, of New York.

Dr. Richards is survived by a wife, three daughters, the Misses Sarah, Anna and Marion, and two sons, George and Henry Richards. The last named is now a student at Yale University, while George Richards was graduated from there within the last few years.

MR. FOWLER GIVES HIS FINANCE VIEWS

In the form of facts and figures, Charles N. Fowler, of Elizabeth, representative in Congress from the Fifth District of this State, makes known in The Atlantic Monthly for January his ideas for "Essential Financial and Banking Reforms." The public has already in a measure been made familiar with Congressman Fowler's ideas while he was chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee of the House. But in The Atlantic Monthly article he presents his ideas in even more concise and effective form. He considers his whole subject under "governmental finance," "banking," "currency," "reserves," "unification of our banks," "savings." The United States Treasury should cease exercising all banking functions." It should be "relieved from the burden of maintaining $346,000,000 of United States notes on a parity with gold by the retirement of these United States notes." Two hundred million dollars, uncovered by gold, should be converted into gold certificates. The $600,000,000 silver certificates should be turned into one and two dollar certificates and silver dollars coined into subsidiary coin, and further purchase of silver for small coin ceased. National bank notes, now amounting to "more than $700,000,000, should be redeemed, not by the government at the Treasury, but by the banks themselves over their own counters." The government should not be engaged in the collateral loan business." The government should "accept the checks and drafts of national banks," its creatures, in "payment of all obligations due it." The government "should not draw a check on itself, but upon its banking agent."

In maintaining a currency to meet the demand of contracting and expanding business there should be provision for a reserve system and a currency which independently of each other contract and expand, and yet reciprocate to meet demands. "From an economic point of view," says Mr. Fowler, "our currency system has been no currency system at all." The basis of bank credit should be gold and of the bank reserve also, and "gold alone" in order to prevent inflation by the use of forms of credit. The forty-seven States furnishing so many kinds of banking should have uniform laws. It is also pointed out that a simplified, harmonious system should be evolved not only for the sake of economy and protection to commerce, but to prevent the use of the people's savings indiscriminately for speculative purposes. Finally, "geographically, politically, economically and practically the establishment of a central bank in the United States today is unthinkable; unless such a bank be created for the sole institution is to serve some special interest to the incalculable and never-ending injury and cost of the American people."

"POP" HARKINS CAN NOW ORGANIZE A FAMILY NINE

John J. Harkins, the new proprietor of the Nelson House, New Market, is about the happiest man in the State today. On Tuesday his wife presented him with a bouncing baby boy.

This is of more than ordinary importance inasmuch as it makes the eighth boy in the family. As it is well known, Mr. Harkins is fortunate in pitcher for the Brooklyn National League team and also for the Cleveland, and his day ranked among the best of the curveology artists. Leaving the big show he coached the Princeton pitching staff and later at Rutgers. Mr. Harkins claims the distinction of being the first player to introduce curves in central New Jersey.

Naturally enough all of his family—eight boys—were born with the baseball instinct and a number of them have already earned for themselves a reputation on the baseball diamond, and the rest including the latest comer have given promise of living up to the family's reputation.

With Pop Harkins at captain, and players who picked from the Harkins family alone, will be a possibility in the course of a few years.

Jimmy Harkins, who once covered the first sack for the New Brunswicks, of course, is slated for that position on No. 1. Harkins, Jr., is also a good first sacker but can play most any position on the team. William Harkins did the greater part of the twirling for the Catholic Club, of New Brunswick, last season.

"Pop" will be allowed to pick out any position he wants. He says that he can play some ball still, but unlike Bob Fitzsimmons he does not attempt to show up.

Local ball fans remember Harkins as the pitcher for the West Ends, of Somerville, in the old Crescent days.

"This fellow Cook," began Uncle Goshall Hemlock.

"Oh, let up on the North Pole."

"I don't blame him about the North Pole part of it, but I do blame him for scattering around a lot of low temperature figures and putting all our local reminiscences on the bum."

DUNELLEN PASTORS WIN

No New Liquor Licenses will Be Granted for That Borough Now.

JUDGE LYON SO DECLARES.

Clergyman and W. C. T. U. Offer Strong Remonstrance to Middlesex Court Against Application.

Charles Shafer wants a license to conduct a hotel in Dunellen, but after what happened in Judge Lyon's court at New Brunswick Friday, his chances cannot be said to be particularly bright.

Senator George S. Silzer appeared for the applicant, and asked that consideration be laid over for a week. Rev. W. A. Knox, of the Dunellen Methodist church, and Rev. Ernest O. Brown, of the Dunellen Presbyterian church, protested against this action. They said they had expected that the matter would be considered yesterday, and had come over for the purpose of protesting.

Rev. Mr. Brown handed in a petition of protest from members of his congregation, and Rev. Mr. Knox presented a similar one from his church, one from the Dunellen W. C. T. U. and others from private individuals.

Mr. Knox told the court that the place is not needed, that it is at one end of the town where there are few houses, and where its only source of patronage would be from employes of a factory. There are two licensed places in Dunellen now, the minister said, and he thought these sufficient. To establish another, he said, would add only to the trouble and expense of maintaining order in the borough.

"The court has already stated its policy not to grant new applications for license," said Judge Lyon, "and I cannot think that this will be an exception. Even before these protests were filed I had practically made up my mind."

Senator Silzer asked time to answer the protest before the court announced his decision.

"You may be laid over for one week," said Judge Lyon, "to give the applicant an opportunity to be heard. The opponents need not appear at that time. If after hearing what the applicant has to say I desire to hear the other side, the matter will be adjourned another week to give them the opportunity.

The place for which Mr. Shafer wants a license is the one formerly kept as a wholesale house by William Wyckoff, near the Levering and Garrigues Iron Works. Wyckoff got into trouble of late and was fined for selling at retail without a license which sentence was imposed by Judge Boorsem.

Rev. Mr. Knox told the court this morning that if necessary he could get a petition against the place signed by five quarts of the citizens of Dunellen. The court intimated that he needn't bother.

MRS. ISRAEL D. TEN EYCK, AGED SIXTY-EIGHT, DEAD

In the death of Mrs. Israel D. Ten Eyck, which occurred Thursday, the First Baptist church loses one of its oldest members. She was sixty-eight years of age and became a member of the congregation when a young girl, being baptized in the stream of water by the late Rev. Dr. J. J. Yerkes. Until ill health overtook her last July she was a regular attendant at the services. She was beloved by all who knew her and was noted for beautiful character. Death was due to pulmonary heart trouble.

The service was held at the home of her nephew, Frank Putnam, on East Second street, Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Owing to the absence from town of Rev. Dr. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, officiated.

Mrs. Ten Eyck was the daughter of Samuel Connett and Sarah Terry, and was born at Short Hills on October 15, 1841. Soon after birth her parents removed to this city and with the exception of a brief space of time she spent at Asbury Park last summer in an effort to improve her health, Mrs. Ten Eyck always resided here.

On October 15, 1861, she was united in marriage to the husband who survives her. There were two children by the union, a daughter, Mrs. Ida D. F. Miller, of New York, and a son, Charles Howard Ten Eyck, who died about twenty years ago. A sister, Mrs. Eliza Putnam, of this city, and two brothers, Henry and Frazee Connett, of San Jose, Ill., also survive.

During the latter years of her life Mrs. Ten Eyck assisted her husband while the latter was superintendent of the Industrial Farm.

"It is most exilerating to go scudding over the snow in your automobile," said the man who walks.

"Not scudding," said Mr. Chuggings; "skidding."—Exchange.

JEFFERY WINS THE FIGHT

"Bungalow Man" Defeats H. W. Marshall for President of Trade Board.

THE BALLOTING IS CLOSE.

Whole Jeffery Ticket Goes Through —Routine Busines and Annual Reports.

In the most exciting election ever held by that body, William Jeffery was elected president of the Board of Trade Thursday, defeating H. W. Marshall. Jeffery and his friends swept everything before them, the only real contest being on the chief office which went to "the bungalow man" by nine majority, he having received 50 votes to Marshall's forty-one.

Things started to liven up when Mr. Marshall, while in the chair, requested Secretary Herr to read a news article published in this paper yesterday morning containing a letter signed by Mr. Jeffery in which he said he had been informed that "the powers that be" did not want him for the place. After denying that he had been subject to any political influence as president, Mr. Marshall called on Mr. Jeffery for an explanation. The latter said that he considered it "uncharitable" for Mr. Marshall "to attack a member on the floor." During the argument between the two, Mr. Jeffery said that by the powers that be he referred to Mr. Fisk and his friends" and he quoted an alleged statement of Mr. Fisk's to show that the Mayor was opposed to him for the presidency. The sallies between the two were much enjoyed by the members, who once or twice broke out into laughter. Mr. Marshall denied that he had any intention of attacking his opponent, and at the outset referred to the latter as making an attack on him behind his back.

Mr. Jeffery's name was placed before the house by J. Fred MacDonald, while Edmund Rushmore nominated Mr. Marshall. In a short speech, Mr. Rushmore withdrew as a candidate and then named Mr. Marshall. After the ballot was announced, former Sheriff D. Frank Coriell was unanimously elected first vice-president as was F. A. Duttenhofer second vice-president, there being no opposition for either. In the same way, Eugene M. Laing, the veteran treasurer, was unanimously re-elected to his office. H. C. Runyon was unopposed and was re-elected by an unanimous vote as counsel. A viva voca vote was also taken for executive committeemen, after the Jeffrey ticket had been nominated. The new committeemen are Herman Schwed, chairman; J. Fred MacDonald, J. V. B. Vanderhoef and George M. Christian.

Through Edmund Rushmore, the chairman of the banquet committee reported progress during the business session. He suggested that the price per plate be $5, and this was agreed to by an unanimous vote. A. E. Force, chairman of the dust nuisance problem committee, also reported progress.

The trolley committee, through its chairman, Mr. Jeffery, put in a similar report. He explained that he had talked with the Mayor about the matter and had been promised copies of all correspondence between the city and the P. S. C. regarding its broken promises. J. F. MacDonald and C. H. Frost had been added as members of the committee, he said, adding that this committee intended to get after the corporation and compel it to put decent cars on local lines and run the manals to schedule. If the present ordinances are not sufficient to cover the matter, Mr. Jeffery declared that the committee would use its endavors to see that there were proper ordinances to make the P. S. C. perform its duty as the claim. Its general duty.

The reports of Secretary Herr, Treasurer Laing and Collector Sweeney showed that the total membership is now 233; that the annual receipts for 1909 were $556 and that there is still unpaid dues amounting to $124. Thirty-five candidates for membership were added to the roll last night and the resignation of two members were accepted. It was decided that suit should be brought against several who had not paid for advertising in that now famous "Plainfield As the Really Is" booklet which appeared during the Charter Day celebration.

After Mr. Jeffery assumed the chair as president, he made a few brief remarks. It was announced that former Councilman L. Spangenberg had "hired a hall" to deliver a speech on municipal history at Coward hall on January 11. President Jeffery made it plain that the Board would not be responsible for the meeting as it would not be held under that body's auspices.

Former President Marshall suggested the advisability of having some place where a stenographer would be in charge to answer questions as to Plainfield and to answer correspondence received by the board. He was appointed chairman of the committee to consider the matter with power to appoint other members.

BERGEN ON NEWSPAPERS

Noted Corporation Lawyer Gives His Opinion of the Public Press.

THEY DO NOD SOMETIMES.

But As a Whole He Considers That They Show An Admirable Degree of Accuracy.

Frank Bergen, general counsellor of Public Service, gave an entertaining talk before an Episcopal church Men's Club, Wednesday night, which was a continuation of what he had to say recently on Public Opinion.

Mr. Bergen said in part:

"Our politicians and editors in the tempest and whirlwind of their calling, sometimes find it difficult to sound and prove a current sentiment before endorsing it, but those who have more time to reflect are not so often mistaken. One of the wisest men in New Jersey said to me several years ago that if an editor had to wait until he knew what he was putting in his paper he could not get out a issue more than once a month; and another citizen of our State who stands high in public esteem, noticing a few days ago a kind word about the press in a report of my remarks in December, took me to task in a letter saying: 'I can hardly join in your eulogies for newspapers, nor do I believe as much in their influence as I used to. Nearly all of them are entitled to the curse that falls on him who loveth and maketh a lie; they seek not the truth but the lie that will sell and publish.' My idea is that the proper line of reform is to perusade people to discredit newspaper statements and avoid their influence.'

"I bow respectfully to this criticism, but will adhere to my opinion that when we consider the conditions under which newspaper men ply their calling, and the haste in which they not only collect and publish news but comment upon it, they exhibit an admirable degree of accuracy. Now and then it is true the newspapers get off the track—even Homer nods sometimes—and when they do the people refuse to follow them. The late Carter Harrison was elected mayor of Chicago seven years ago in a campaign in which every newspaper in the city was arrayed against him and the present mayor of New York was elected a few months ago by a large plurality in a campaign in which a very large part of the press of that city was in fiction of other candidates, and I venture to think that the event will prove that the election of Gaynor was one of the most beneficial things that has happened in New York for a generation. At times the people are wiser than the press.

"We have progressed so far in the art of government by public opinion that there ought to be a scientific study made of the nature and processes of that mighty force. There is plenty of alienists who, if well paid, will examine an individual intellect and tell no end of falsehoods about it in a will case or a murder trial, but no one, so far as I know, ever made a philosophical study of the rumors and disturbers of the public mind, or explained to us how good sense is distilled from the frude nations and nonsense that sometimes fill the air. But if public sentiment is a sovereign force—as Lincoln said it was—greater than statutes or constitutions or judicial decisions, there is nothing that should be studied with more profound attention than the opinion of the public mind.

"The opinion of our board of chosen freeholders, as the Latin would vox Dei est, surely is not true of every temporary passion that agitates the multitude. Lincoln knew better because he said that you can fool some of the people all of the time, and all of the people some of the time, but he was confident that in the long run somebody would discover and expose the deception, and that the final judgment of the people is sound. And Burke, the greatest philosopher among politicians and the greatest politician among philosophers, said: 'I am not one of those who think that the people are never in the wrong. They have been so, frequently and outrageously, both in other countries and in this. But I say, that in all disputes between them and their rulers the presumption is at least upon a par in favor of the people.'"

MR. TRAVELL'S CRUSADE AGAINST THE CIGARETTE

Superintendent of School Ira W. Travell, of Morristown, formerly a member of the Plainfield High School faculty, is one of the chief leaders in a crusade against the sale of cigarettes to boys in that town.

The agitation against the sale of "coffin tacks" resulted in an order issued by Chief of Police Halloway warning all storekeepers to desist in the practise.

Many boys who had been discovered smoking, and when questioned refused to furnish information to the crusaders, but since Chief Halloway's order the sales have been checked.

HEAR ARGUMENT FOR GASOLENE STORAGE

The councilmanic fire and building committee, of which Duncan W. Taylor is the chairman, arranged for a public hearing in the Council Chamber, Thursday, on the question of the storage of gasolene. The matter is the result of the application of the A. Martin Automobile Company for permission to install a gasolene tank of 10,000 gallons' capacity on the company's property.

An investigation showed that the city has no ordinance of any kind to safe-guard the interests of property owners in this matter and finally the committee decided to make a thorough and exhaustive investigation and learn the best possible conditions under which permission to install gasolene tanks can be given.

Mr. Taylor arranged to bring Edgar Allen here last night and give the councilmen and others his opinion regarding the handling of gasolene. He is an expert and is connected with the Hydraulic Oil Storage Company of New York and Detroit. He also presented a model of the Snell patents, which he explained in a lucid manner to the entire satisfaction of the councilmen. Despite the fact that invitations were sent to the owners of auto garages in the city and vicinity, Thomas Hanna, representing the F. L. C. Martin Automobile Company, was the only one present from the trade.

Mr. Allen explained that he had recently installed a tank of 500 gallon capacity at East Orange and another at Englewood. He had conferred with Edward Keith, chief inspector of the Middle and Southern division for the board of underwriters, and had received his statement over the proposition as illustrated by his system.

It was explained by Mr. Allen that in his opinion all gasolene tanks of large capacity should be placed under ground at least two feet, and surrounded by concrete at least six or eight inches in thickness all around. He said that he had not found a single ordinance covering this point. His reasons for this were that there would be a natural or artificial water course in the ground and the gasolene might come in contact with it. He said that liquid gasolene is not dangerous, but the vapor from it is highly dangerous.

Mr. Allen stated according to the Government reports, last summer more than one hundred gasolene tanks above ground were destroyed through the contact of electricity with gasolene vapor. This cannot happen with the Snell system, Mr. Allen said.

The councilmen as well as Mayor Charles J. Fisk, who was present questioned Mr. Allen closely on various points, and former Councilman W. S. Tyler also brought out many salient points by his questioning. Chief T. O. Doane, who had inspected the model prior to the hearing, expressed the opinion that it fully met all objections in the storage of large quantities of gasolene.

It is understood that the committee hope soon to have a suitable ordinance drafted, one that will cover the case fully, and which will provide for every possible danger. Judge William Newcorn, who is the counsel for the F. L. C. Martin Automobile Company, was present last night, but did not enter into the discussion.

FORESTRY MEN TO EVADE STATE LAW

A meeting of the State Forestry Commission was held in the State House Trenton Wednesday, at which protests were made by five property owners against carrying out of the property provisions of the law of last winter under which the forests are to be safeguarded against fires from railroads.

The commission had five protests before it, but dismissed four of them and gave the other property owner one year more in which to do the work. There were 280 property owners assenting to the workings of the new law, they seeing that it would save their property in many cases from greater destruction.

Under the law of last winter there must be cleared of small undergrowth a space of 100 feet adjoining a railroad and paralleling it as far as the forest land goes. Experience has shown that many forest fires are started by locomotives, and by cutting the trees back it is believed that less fires will originate in that manner.

Beyond the 100 feet from which all small growth must be cut there must be plowed every year a furrow ten feet wide.

Completing Church Organization.

The election of the consistory of the Netherwood Reformed church will take place on Friday night, January 21. The names of those elected to office will be announced on two Sabbaths and the officers will be ordained and installed at the service preparatory to communion, Friday evening, February 4, when new members will be received. The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be celebrated for the first time in this church Sunday morning, February 6, at 10:30 o'clock.

NEW LEAGUE IS FORMED

Anti-Food Trust League to Make Itself Felt Throughout the Country.

EXTOL ROOSEVELT'S POLICIES.

Ballinger-Pinchot Controversy Rehearsed—Some Suggestions.

Roosevelt and his policies and the cost of living, the formation of an Anti-Food Trust League and finishing with the Pinchot-Ballinger controversy, Miss Janet E. Richards, of Washington, D. C., interested some seventy-five women at the Hartridge auditorium Thursday afternoon. While Colonel Roosevelt was praised for his attitude toward the trusts and his forcing of the application of the Sherman anti-trust law his critics were severely scored. The Hepburn Rate bill also received consideration at the hands of Miss Richards, who seemed to have at hand facts to prove that the people of this country are being buncoed and made to pay for something they do not get.

Mr. Roosevelt, Miss Richards claimed is a history maker and it was his virile methods which caused the whole country to wake up and take notice of the wrongs under which the people of the country are suffering. The Tobacco Trust was characterized as a whipping post and an interesting story of the absorbtion of a tobacco factory in Virginia with the subsequent ruin of the town in which it was situated and the downfall of the man who had established the business was told.

The formation of the Anti-Food Trust League, Miss Richards said, was an established fact and the methods to be pursued by the members has the virtue of originality. It is a simple way of overcoming a great and crying shame. In Washington, where the league was formed, it has been decided to use the boycott in a novel way. The members will go without meat for a week and if necessary for longer, so that the Beef Trust will feel the power of the people.

The fight between Secretary Ballinger and Mr. Pinchot, which has been taken up the newspapers and other periodicals, Miss Richards said, before it is ended the country will applaud the contention of Mr. Pinchot that our forests should be preserved as was originally intended by the founders. The question of coal is a very important one and coal will be mined for a distance it has to be hauled to market. The price of this coal will be prohibitive, at least for the poor people. Therefore it is necessary that the coal producing lands nearby should be taken care of. Culm ought in a measure to be the source of coal as it does in Germany. Miss Richards will give another talk on current history on February 3 at the same auditorium.

PARK AVE. BAPTIST S.S. HOLDS ANNUAL ELECTION

The annual meeting of the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday-school was held Thursday in the Sunday-school, with Superintendent George E. Hall presiding. Reports of the past year's work were submitted by officers and committees, and showed the various departments of the school to be in excellent condition. During the year 1909 the receipts have been larger and the average attendance greater, than during any previous year in the history of the school; and the outlook for the new year is especially bright and encouraging.

Following the transaction of routine business, the meeting proceeded to the election of officers as follows:

Superintendent, George E. Hall; associate superintendent, Miss Florence G. Hawkins; superintendent elementary department, Miss Elmira H. Runyon; secretary, Martin R. Stuhlman; assistant secretary, Henry F. Cuming; temperance secretary, Charles F. Dayton; treasurer general fund, Joseph M. Hawkins; treasurer benevolent fund, Willard M. Maxim; librarian, E. Frank Vail; pianist, Miss Marion Hawkins; blackboard artist, Charles VanWinkle; orchestra leader, Arthur S. Mosher; superintendent Home Department, Mrs. D. M. Runyon.

The business session was followed by a social hour, during which refreshments were served, and a pleasant time enjoyed by every one. A feature of the evening was the fine music furnished by the new Victor machine which Superintendent Hall has purchased for the school.

No Wonder

"If you don't mind," said one of the guests, struck by a bright idea, "I'll eat this drumstick in primitive fashion. Fingers were made before forks, you know."

It was then that the table groaned.

THREE YOUNG VANDALS

Trio Admitted They Were Intoxicated When They Did Damage.

EACH GIVES $50 CASH BAIL

When Arraigned In City Court Prisoners Confess—To Be Sentenced Next Monday.

One of the most violent outbreaks of vandalism ever brought to notice of the police in this city was that committed early Sunday morning by three young men who amused themselves tearing out merchants and doctors signs and otherwise mutilating property. All three were arrested by Patrolman Charles Flynn and lodged in police headquarters, where upon confession of their guilt they were released upon depositing a cash bail of $50 each. They gave their names as William Hahn, of 302 East Second street; Theodore Merklinger, of 895 Sixteenth street, Newark, and the other Frank Tetlow, of South Bound Brook.

The offenses committed by the trio included the cutting and ripping of awnings at A. E. Gildes' shoe store; Shirley and Johnson's, The Paris women's shop, Weinberger's clothing store, George J. Finger's gents furnishing store, and tearing out the metal sign of Dr. David G. Aswell of 104 West Second street.

All three young men admitted being under the influence of drink, which they had obtained at a party on the night before in Charles Glazner's; it is said. They were making efforts Monday morning to reimburse shopkeepers whose property had been damaged to estimate the loss so that they could make it good. The money deposited at police headquarters will be disbursed according to the amount it costs to repair the damage and on next Monday morning Judge William Benyon will give the case further consideration.

This is not the first time that similar acts of vandalism have been committed in this city. On previous occasions screen doors have been cut from shop fronts, and eggs thrown and broken against front doors and tobacco juice spattered against show windows. These young men are not accused of the former acts, but they will be given an opportunity to clear up some of the things on their next appearance in court. Merklinger claims to be a college graduate, while the others are clerks employed in this city.

SPANISH WAR WOUND FATAL TO M'GAULEY

Hugh McGauley, aged 48 years, died Monday morning at Muhlenberg Hospital from pneumonia with which he had been ill for more than a month. His death is believed to be indirectly due to an injury he received while serving in the Spanish-American War, when because of an injury he lost a rib. He never fully recovered. He served during the war as a member of the 201st N. Y. Vols., and was a member of Camp Bagley, Spanish-American War Veterans, of this city.

Mr. McGauley was born in Ireland and had resided in this city for twenty years. He resided on West Front street, near Madison avenue. He was employed in the electric light department of the Public Service Corporation for several years. Three brothers, Patrick, Luke and Barney, survive.

BURMESE YOUNG WOMAN TELLS OF OPPORTUNITIES

About one hundred young women gathered in the auditorium of the Young Women's Christian Association Sunday afternoon to listen to Miss Yaba, a Burmese young woman who is completing her studies in this country preparatory to taking up association work in Burmah. Miss Yaba was attired in Oriental costume, adding the picturesque to the eloquence in her remarks of the need of Christianization in America.

Miss Yaba emphasized the need of Christian work in this country and contrasted the opportunities offered here as compared with those of her country. There is so much difference that it stands out prominently. Here the young American woman has opportunities all around her to do the Master's work while in Burmah, as in other countries of the far East, the opportunities have to be sought and when found are made the most of.

Miss Yaba's father as a boy received his earlier education in the public schools of this city and, she said, "I have the feeling of a strong bond of friendship for this place." Miss Dreuse sang several solos in keeping with the service and subject. There will be a meeting on Thursday evening at which Miss Isabel Arnold, of the Seminary, will speak to the members.

"FORGIVE AND FORGET" SAYS REV. MR. MUSSON

"Forgiving and Forgetting" was the topic of an interesting sermon delivered by Rev. J. W. Musson, pastor at the Temple Baptist church, Sunday night. Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors," were the words upon which the discourse was based. In part Mr. Musson said:

"In reading this prayer which we call 'The Lord's Prayer,' because Jesus give it to his disciples as a model, or a pattern of how they should pray, you will notice that the petition of the text for forgiveness follows the petition for daily bread.

"We see here a prayer for forgiveness, a condition of forgiveness and there is here a standard of forgiveness. First, Jesus teaches to pray, 'Father forgive us our debts.' Luke puts it thus, 'Father forgive us our sins.' So the sins means indebtedness to God. It means that we have failed to meet our obligations.

"So we should offer this prayer for three reasons, first, because we are debtors; secondly, we should pray this pray because no one can forgive a debt but the creditor to whom the debt is due; thirdly, that Jesus taught us to pray this prayer because God is willing to forgive.

"The selfish man tells you that everybody is selfish, while the generous person delights to speak of the noble generosity he finds in others. Forgive us our debts, as we forgive others. How solemn is this prayer. Our forgiveness of our fellowmen is absolutely essential to our receiving forgiveness from God. Nothing else will take its place.

"One of the signs or evidences that we have received forgiven is that we possess and display the spirit of forgiveness. We want God to forgive us fully. I mean by that we want God to forgive our every sin. Not only our small sins, but our great sins. Have we not provoked him in many ways? And yet has He ever refused to forgive? No! He says, 'Though your sins be as scarlet, I will make them like snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool.'

"Suppose God were to say to you, 'I will forgive every other sin that you have committed, but there is one sin of which you have been guilty, that I cannot overlook.' What a sad plight you would be in. One sin would shut you out of heaven forever. God says, 'I will blot them out of the book of my remembrance. I will not remember thy sin.'

"We must forgive and forget the sins of others against us. What do the Scriptures mean, then, when they say that God will not remember our sins? It means this, that He will treat us just as though we had never sinned. And that is just how we must forgive, or our professed forgiveness will be only a mockery and a sham. There are two ways in which we can cultivate the forgiving spirit. First, by keeping in mind our great need of continually receiving forgiveness from God, and secondly, never to speak of an offense when you say you have forgiven the offender. Let it pass."

CHIEF MEYER MAY NOT BE ELIGIBLE TO SERVE

Can a non-resident of the town be elected to a township office? This is a question that is raising ructions among the members of the Fanwood township fire department, and the question has been put up to the Township Committee and by them referred to Counsel W. L. Hetfield, Jr., for an opinion.

The trouble started over the election of Charles Meyer as chief of the department at the election held Tuesday night. Meyer, who was the B. & E. Co. candidate, defeated William Reynolds, Excelsior's candidate, by two votes in one of the hottest elections the department has ever held. Meyer being elected by a majority of two votes. After the smoke of the battle had cleared away, some of the members of Excelsior Company raised the question of Meyer's eligibility to that office on account of his being a resident of Somerset county and North Plainfield township, his house being just across the county line.

The question was put up to the Township Committee by Excelsior members and they reserved decision until they could get a legal decision on the question.

In case Meyer cannot serve it will be necessary to hold another election and if this should happen there will be some excitement as the B. & E. Co. members feel sore over the eleventh hour kick as they call it. Meyer has been a member of the department for eleven years, and has a large following of friends among the firemen.

Perhaps He Doesn't.

"Pa!"

"Yes."

"Why do they say 'he swears like a trooper,' or 'he swears like a pirate?' Why don't they use something more up-to-date?"

"What, for instance?"

"Why don't they say, 'he swears like an automobile fixer."—Boston Herald.

POSTMASTER EXPLAINS DELIVERY COMPLAINTS

Postmaster E. H. Bird a few days ago received an anonymous communication relative to the alleged poor mail delivery service along West Fourth street, where the writer complains that the residents have been receiving but one delivery a day. It is stated that the people living on Spooner avenue have been getting three deliveries a day, and adds that people living along the rural free delivery route get as much as one delivery a day.

In conversation with a reporter for The Star Press today, Mr. Bird explained that unusual weather conditions, heavy snow, ice, together with a heavy mail had compelled him to furnish but one delivery a day in some sections, but the regular schedule is now in force again. He said that it was impossible to deliver the mail on time or to get in the regular deliveries in all parts of the city during the holidays and since while the traveling was so bad.

Mr. Bird added that the people on Spooner avenue do not get three deliveries a day nor have they ever had as many as that. He simply asks the indulgence of the people while weather conditions are so bad. Quoting from a report of the Postmaster-General, Mr. Bird showed that the same conditions have existed in all parts of the country since the holidays.

THROWN FROM SLEIGH; SEARCH FOR A HORSE.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Medbury, of Denmark road, while sleigh riding on West Front street, near Grant avenue, Sunday morning, met with an accident when they were thrown out of the sleigh. They were driving William Callahan's horse, "Prince," when the animal shied at a trolley car.

The runners of the sleigh got in the trolley tracks and before Mr. Medbury could get the horse under control, the sleigh went over, throwing his wife and himself in the roadway. The horse ran away. Mr. and Mrs. Medbery returned home and notified Mr. Callahan, from whom they procured the horse and sleigh.

In the meantime, someone told William Dealman, of West Front street, that his horse had run away. His son, Walter, had gone out earlier in the morning for a ride. The elder Dealman was directed toward Bound Brook. He took a trolley car to the car barns then walked to Bound Brook and half way to Chimney Rock in search of the horse. After all his trouble he learned that the horse belonged to Mr. Callahan. After Mr. Callahan was notified of the accident, he started with another horse and sleigh for Bound Brook after the runaway horse. On the way out he met John J. Hines, friend, and asked him to go along. Just beyond Lincoln, the horse, which was being driven by Mr. Hines for a few minutes, got in the trolley tracks and that sleigh was upset and the animal went into a telephone pole. Quick action prevented another runaway. Later Mr. Callahan got the horse in a livery stable at Bound Brook.

Mr. and Mrs. Edsall Ill.

Seely Edsall, formerly of Sandford avenue, has been seriously ill since November 1. He does not seem to improve and there is little hope of his recovery. Mrs. Edsall has been detained at her home since the middle of October with rheumatism. Mr. and Mrs. Edsall are now living at Bloomfield.

Miss Conover Broke Arm.

Miss Emma Conover, of New York, and who is stopping with relatives at 16 Jackson avenue, is confined to the house with a broken arm which was sustained last Friday as a result of a fall in the house. She was attended by Dr. A. H. Dundon.

KAPP COMMITS SUICIDE

Former Plainfielder Ended His Own Life Without Known Reason.

A PROSPEROUS MANUFACTURER

Supposition That He Become Temporarily Insane—Some Years Ago He Had a Plant Here.

Edward Kapp, a former skirt and underwear manufacturer of this city, committed suicide by shooting himself in the head, on Saturday in a lavatory connected with the offices of Albert Sittner, 101 Fifth avenue, New York city. Mr. Sittner was the distributing agent for the product of the Kapp factory.

No cause can be assigned for the act, but it is believed by his business associates that Mr. Kapp became suddenly insane and ended his life while under the spell.

Mr. Kapp was for several years engaged in the manufacture of silk skirts in this city and occupied the old building on Watchung avenue near Fourth street. At the time of his removal in 1905, he was in partnership with Louis Herzig, and the firm name was Herzig and Kapp. The original business was the making of silk skirts for which the firm became famous.

With the advent of one Nat Levy the productions of the firm were added to and a fine line of women's underwear was manufactured. This new venture failed to prosper and the firm went into bankruptcy and finally removed to New York city, where a new and prosperous business was established, and is still in existence under the firm name of Nat Levy & Co.

When in this city Mr. Kapp and his family lived at the corner of Watchung avenue and Grandview. The news of Mr. Kapp's untimely end was received with many expressions of regret by the many friends he had made in Plainfield. He left here about September 1, 1905.

NEW YEAR'S THOUGHTS OF REV. MR. GOODRICH

The New Year's sermon preached Sunday by Rev. Charles L. Goodrich at the Congregational church was full of good advice for the coming year as well as a retrospective look into the year just closed.

Mr. Goodrich said in part: "Another year has gone never to return; each year is shorter than the last and swifter in its flight. Many writers have endeavored to describe the momentous flight of time and the teaching of all is that each year should teach wisdom.

"What have you taken out of the year just closed? What have you gleaned in all the past years? All the good things you have won from your toil are as nothing compared with the spirit which is in every man. Has that spirit increased in you? Have the years brought you to the spiritual reality? If so they have brought you more than you have lost.

"All you can take out with you at the close of the last year or your life is this spirit. How has it grown in you? The spirit of man is the meeting place with God. The fact that God and man are both spirits should bring them near and we men to make the acquaintance intimate and get the spiritual realities out of life. The inspirations of God are all about us. If we will we may get the warm, powerful impulse of God Himself. Let us recognize all the good impulses of our hearts, no matter what the call may be for the saving and the glory of our souls.

"None of us has attained to the beautiful heights of spirituality which are possible with a complete surrender to Him, whom I pray may be with us all during the coming days of this new year.

"As nasty a dig as I ever administered in my newspaper career in Virginia City," said Mark Twain, "was directed against a man named Ferguson.

"Ferguson, at Christmas time, invited me to see the presents he had given his wife. They were magnificent gifts. The man, of course, expected a write-up."

"Well, he wasn't disappointed. The next day, in a prominent place on the first page of the Enterprise I inserted this paragraph:

"'John H. Ferguson's Christmas gifts to his wife are being much admired. They include a diamond stomacher and many other beautiful specimens of cut glass.'"—Washington Star.

Local Birds Win Prizes.

The Kellerstrass Farm exhibit of white orpingtons at the Baltimore poultry show last week made a great winning by getting first, third and fourth on cocks; first, third and fifth on hens; first, second and fifth on cockerels, and first and fifth on pullets and first and second on hens. There were 130 white orpingtons on exhibition. The local birds were in charge of George J. May, late of South Plainfield.

BOARD OF HEALTH MAKES ITS REPORT

Prefacing the twenty-first annual report of the Board of Health, which was presented at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council last night, the president, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, submitted a brief statement. He called attention to the improvement in the quality of milk and ice cream supplied to the city, due to systematic and rigid inspections of the board.

It is further stated that one thousand properties have been visited in the house-to-house inspection, resulting in general improvement, and correction of defects in plumbing. It is urged that during the coming year some means be devised to do away with the present unsanitary methods of garbage collection and disposal.

A summary of the treasurer's report shows disbursements of $11,468.09 and the receipts the same. The Common Council appropriated $2,734.84 for the care of six cases of small-pox and this was all disbursed.

Health Board Work.

The general report of the, board is made by Acting Health Officer John O'Brien, and from it the following salient points are taken:

Dairy inspections have been more carefully followed up and milk analysis more complete than ever before. A general improvement in the standard of dairies. Great deal accomplished in inspection of ice cream supply, with general improvement. Isolation ward at Muhlenberg Hospital has been great help in caring for contagious disease cases. Nearly 1,000 properties inspected in the house-to-house plan and sanitary conditions improved.

Recommendations: That some means be adopted for controlling the collection and disposal of ashes and garbage that more room be secured for laboratory work; that plans be made to continue work of inspection of ice cream supply, accomplish some work on pus and sediment in milk, improve system of dairy inspection and milk analysis and test various disinfectants.

Vital Statistics.

Vital statistics: Marriages, 204; births, 428; still-births, 15; deaths, 289. Estimated population for past year was 21,000 and total number of deaths, 289, gives a rate per thousand of 13.76, the lowest for a period of thirteen years. Of these deaths more than half were persons over forty years of age.

There were 370 cases of communicable disease, with 34 deaths; 18 of which were taken to the hospital from out of town—11 scarlet fever and 7 typhoid fever; one of the latter died at no time during the disease epidemic. There were 57 cases of tuberculosis and 29 deaths. There were six cases of small-pox, two white and four colored. The six cases cost the city $2,734.84.

Sanitary Inspections.

In the house-to-house inspections 149 nuisances were found on 132 properties; the remaining 621 properties were found to be in good condition. During the year, 229 complaints of nuisances were received, and of this number 198 have been abated. There were several prosecutions for violation of the city ordinances. There were filed during the year 245 plumbing plans and 1,012 inspections were made.

The principal points brought out by inspections of ice cream plants showed that many improvements were made during the year. Milk and subsequent care of milk and cream used for this purpose, should come under the same regulations as those governing milk. The analysis of cream used in making ice cream showed averages of 16.3 per cent. fats and 2,119,441 bacteria per cubic centimeter.

The Milk Supply.

Supervision of milk supply has, as usual, been one of the most important duties of the department. System of dairy inspection and milk analysis has been greatly improved. Sample of milk for every retailer is analyzed once each month. Copies of rules and regulations printed on cloth are placed in every dairy. Present time it is estimated that about 8,000 quarts of milk is used daily in the city; 22 retail by means of wagon; 11 retail milk from stores and 32 retail milk from stores. There were 627 inspections of dairies, bottling places, creameries and stores selling milk. Of the 357 samples analyzed, 345 or 96 per cent., were below 50,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter.

In the opinion of the health officer, adulteration of milk is a thing of the past here. During the year, not one sample was watered or contained preservative, although seventeen of the 357 samples were below the standard of 3.5 per cent. fat in New Jersey. The number of scores below 60 per cent. was larger than in the previous year, due to many changes in the source of supply. The average score for 1909 was somewhat lower than that for 1908, but the conditions in the dairies are improving and a better record is looked for the coming year.

The Ice Supply.

During the winter of 1908-09, the weather was so mild that no ice was cut from Watchung Lake, the usual local source of supply. All ice sold here the past year was artificial, and was supplied from three sources: The Crystal Ice Company, The Plainfield Ice and Supply Company and the plant of the Milburn Electric Light Company at Milburn.

Mr. O'Brien says that in reviewing the work of the past year, he feels that although much has been accomplished, there is yet a great deal to be done. In proportion to the growth of the city, new complications arise and new lines of work become necessary, and in order to meet these, various changes have to be instituted and more progressive methods employed.

He states further that the experience has shown that a revision of the sanitary code is imperative, and this, among other things, will be an important task to be accomplished this year.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PRIZE A SILVER LOVING CUP

Superintendent J. M. Whiton, of the Congregational Sunday school, introduced an innovation Sunday at the regular session of the school, which is well calculated to stimulate the attendance and increase the membership. At least, those are the objects which Mr. Whiton hopes to accomplish. Honor Day in the school was something new and the development of the morning was a surprise to every pupil there.

No one knew just what the term "honor day" meant until explained by the superintendent. The regular session was shortened somewhat in order to give Mr. Whiton ample time to divulge the momentous secret. He did the explaining by inviting four of the pupils to come up to the platform and receive books for a special reward in faithfully fulfilling their pledges to the Sunday school funds. These were Florence Neilson, Edna and Clark Mundy and Carter Goodrich. For punctual attendance Nettie Steiner and Lester Allen received silver pins while Harold Mundy received honorable mention.

For best average in attendance an American Flag is given and the class which has been most successful in this competition has been that taught by Miss Stella Winkler. This class has been awarded the flag several times in succession.

The surprise of the day came, however, when a silver loving cup was presented to the school by Mr. Whiton. This cup will eventually go to some individual, but it will have to be won by one class at least three times before the pupil in that class can have it for a personal trophy. The idea here is to present to the class having the best average in punctuality and attendance at the end of the year the cup with the name of the class engraved upon it. If this class wins the cup three times whether in succession or not, then it becomes the property of that class. Then the pupil in the leading class having the best general average is to become the owner of the cup.

Of course there are conditions attached to the holding of the cup which will involve some work on the part of the boys and girls, but the trophy is worth working for. A committee comprised of Miss Mary E. Jackson, Mrs. D. F. Updike and James McClymont will have charge of the cup and will make the award each year. There was a very large attendance yesterday and every pupil of the school was interested.

After the awarding of the prizes M. W. Harris addressed the school taking for his topic "Real Honor."

NEW POSTOFFICE FUND RECEIVES $15,000 BOOST

The chances of this city getting its $100,000 postoffice building are brightening. A report from Washington states that Acting Secretary Charles D. Norton, of the treasury department, has recommended to Congress that an additional appropriation of $15,000 be made to the original appropraton.

Secretary Norton's recommendation has been referred to the Committee on Appropriations. United States Senator Kean, who has been pushing the matter, is confident that it will be endorsed and with a little more wailing local citizens will have their new postoffice.

The additional appropriation brings the amount up to $115,000 or within $15,000 of $100,000, the total sum required for the new structure.

PLAYGROUND FOR P.H.S.

And Perhaps for Others—Mr. Parker Submits Plans to the Pupils This Morning.

FINE CINDER RUNNING TRACK.

Baseball, Football and Other Sports to Be Conducted—

Cost About $20,000.

Andrew McClean Parker announced to the High School Monday the purchase of a tract of land running parallel to Crescent Oval which he will fit up as an athletic field for the school. This is something which has long been needed by the school and will be appreciated to its full value by the students, and Mr. Parker received the assurances of the students' approval by a hearty cheer after the announcement was made.

All the latest improvements, including a grandstand, will be added to the field, besides a running track built in the most approved fashion with a two-hundred and twenty yards' straight away track. Under the grandstand dressing rooms and shower baths and all the conveniences for the athletes will be found. The grounds will be loaned for the use of the local Y. M. C. A. when not in use of the High School boys.

Mr. Parker, who is a graduate of the local high school and in his presentation speech said that he had long known of the need of the field for outdoor sports and since his retirement from his profession of civil engineer had in mind this project for the benefit of the school.

He was chief engineer on the new Manhattan Bridge and only retired recently. Mr. Parker will deliver a lecture before the Men's Club of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church tomorrow night, taking for his subject, "The Manhattan Bridge."

It is understood that this field will be for the use of the public as a playground and is one which has long been under consideration by Mayor Polk and Mr. Parker, but no confirmation of the proposed consolidation with the Y. M. C. A. could be obtained this afternoon. It is understood that the new athletic field will cost $20,000.

FORT FISHER HERO SUCCUMBS SUDDENLY

Many Plainfielders who recall the appearance here on February 12 last of Brevet Maj-General Newton Martin Curtis, the hero of Fort Fisher," had an enviable reputation and record as a soldier, scholar and author. His height, six feet; six inches, was in contradistinction to Abraham Lincoln in 1856, when young Curtis, then a school teacher in Illinois, entered a railroad station where Lincoln was waiting. The latter, then as a lawyer, proposed to measure his height with Curtis, after introducing himself. Mr. Curtis proved the taller, whereupon Lincoln exclaimed: "He's ten feet taller than a rod, straight as an arrow, thin as a shingle and without a knothole." The two were firm friends thereafter.

When Gen. Curtis spoke here about a year ago, he told the above story, which many will remember. He was a member of many clubs; also the New York Commandery, Military Order Loyal Legion, where he was a familiar figure at every meeting.

NEW SPECIE OF BIRDS ON A VISIT TO CITY

The arrival of a flock of birds at fire headquarters on New Year's day, the species of which is entirely new to this vicinity, according to Chief Doane, presents a problem for local ornithologists to solve.

There are about a dozen of the feathered tribe in the flock. In size they are larger than a robin with a dark gray plumage and a white bill.

The birds have become very friendly with the firemen, who have been nursing their appetites by scattering crackers and crumbs on the snow-covered ground. The birds also feed on the berries on the English ivy vines on the westerly side of the fire house.

Chief Doane, who is familiar in a large degree with the birds who visit this climate, declares he is at a loss to furnish the names of the visitors, and he suggested to a Daily Press reporter that local students of the bird world visit fire headquarters for the purpose of identifying the species.

LEES APPEALS AGAIN

Has Not Yet Heard From Missing Wife—Believes She Was Kidnapped.

RECONCILED TO HIS FATHER.

Was Estranged Because of Wedding Out of His Rank—He Is Now Forgiven.

Victor Lees, the Orange caterer, who asked this paper to help locate his wife who he said had come to Plainfield on January 15, and from whom he has had no word since, writes again to say that now he is positive that his wife has been abducted and asks that the family of an Italian woman be looked up.

Mr. Lees is unable to give the name of the girl to whom his wife intended to pay the visit on January 15, nor can he give any information regarding the woman next door who runs a restaurant or a high class boarding house in New York city, all of whom he mentioned.

The photograph which Mr. Lees enclosed in his letter shows a good looking young woman and one who would seem to be smart enough to frustrate any attempt at kidnapping. However Mr. Lees thinks his wife has been either kidnapped or murdered and he wants to know which. He has recently received from his father in Germany a letter in which he forgives his son for marrying as he terms it "beneath his rank," and in which he says he will do all that a father should do for a son. Lees, Sr., according to the son's letter is a wealthy man, owning much property in both France and England, and the reconciliation with the son was the only thing needed to make the latter truly happy until his wife disappeared. He reiterates the statement that they have always lived in peace and happiness and can prove it by his many friends in Orange. When last seen Mrs. Lees wore a close fitting undercoat, black silk dress and white silk waist topped off with a picture hat in which were two large ostrich plumes. No woman answering the description given has been seen in this city so far as can be ascertained.

COURT HAS DISMISSED BANKRUPT'S TRUSTEE SUIT.

Judge Joseph Cross, of the United States District Court has rendered his decision in the case of Vincent W. Nash, trustee in bankruptcy for William H. Kirch, against The J. D. Lolzeaux Lumber Co. in favor of the lumber concern. This suit has been pending for the past eighteen months and involved a sum of nearly $1,400.

The suit was based upon a so-called preferential payment made to the defendant lumber company four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy by Kirch. Judge Cross' opinion makes plain some law on preferred payments. The fact that two amounts—$1,329 and $71.79—were credited on the lumber company's books to the bankrupt so long before the bankruptcy proceedings were started does not of itself constitute a preferential payment. The money was credited on a contract entered into by the parties to the suit for the building of a house known as the Wilson house on Clinton avenue.

Judge Cross dismissed the case in favor of the lumber company with costs. Coddington and Swackhamer represented the lumber company and Judge William Newcorn appeared for Nash, trustee.

Teacher Resigns.

Miss Grace Per Lee, of the history department in the Plainfield High School, has resigned to take charge of the department of English in the State Normal School, at Cortland, N. Y. Miss Per Lee was graduated from that institution some years ago and since was graduated from Syracuse University. She has had some years of successful experience. The promotion was unsought. While she has been in Plainfield only this year, Miss Per Lee has made her value felt and her departure is regretted. Her class will be taken in charge of by Miss E. K. Cumming, whose former work in the school has been successful.

BISHOP FOR 35 YEARS

Right Rev. Dr. John Scarborough's Consecration Anniversary.

FIFTY-TWO YEARS A PRIEST.

Ranks Third in House of Bishops—A Brief Sketch of an Interesting Life.

Almost seventy-nine years of age, the Right Rev. John Scarborough, bishop of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of New Jersey, has been fifty-two years in the priesthood and thirty-five years in the episcopacy. The thirty-fifth anniversary of his consecration falls today. He is the third oldest in point of service among the members of the American House of Bishops, including more than 100 prelates, of whom he is regarded as one of the most distinguished, and yet he insists each year that his anniversary shall be noticed only with the simplest of services, which he feels are in keeping with the simplicity of the life he has lived so long.

In accordance with the wishes of the bishop the people of his diocese have not arranged for any general observance of his anniversary, but his more immediate people, the members of Christ parish, Trenton, in which the episcopal residence is located, have insisted that they be allowed the privilege of commemorating in some way the elevation of one who has served so long, and services were held this morning in Christ church.

On the north coast of England, in Yorkshire, stands a bold headland jutting out into the sea. Here there still remains the ruins of a great castle, whose feudal lord took his name from the place. In the Saxon tongue "scar" meant "rock" and "borough" a "stronghold." Hence came the name of the place and of the leading family there. The ancient keep was destroyed by Cromwell's men, but was afterward restored, and again a much more modern house built down in the valley. The branch of the family to which the fourth Bishop of New Jersey belongs liver near the town of the same name, Scarborough, close to the North Sea. Bishop Scarborough's father was in the Government service and was attached to the Treasury Department. His duties called him to Castlewellan, county Down, in the north of Ireland, and it was here that the present Bishop was born on April 21, 1831.

He came to this country when but 10 years old in charge of his two older brothers to visit a sister who lived in Lansingburg, N. Y., and it was there and at Troy he received his early education. He later entered Trinity College, Hartford, from which institution he was graduated with high honors in 1854. Three years later he completed his course at the General Theological Seminary, New York, and on June 28, 1857, was ordained to the deconate in Trinity church, New York, and to the priesthood in St. Paul's church, Troy, on August 14, 1858, by Bishop Horatio Potter. His consecration to the Bishopric took place in St. Mary's church, Burlington, N. J., on February 2, 1875. In the nearly 100 years of the existence of the diocese of New Jersey there have been but four bishops— John Croes, 1815-1832; George W. Doane, 1832-1859; William Henry Odenheimer, 1859-1876; John Scarborough, 1875-1910.

WEST END ENTERTAINMENT

Heavenly Rest Young People Provide an Exceptional Program.

DRAMATIC WORK A FEATURE.

Following the Various Numbers Dancing Was Enjoyed—Mrs. Charles Borden Managed the Affair.

Before an audience which tested the seating capacity of the parish house the Young People's Society of the Church of the Heavenly Rest presented an entertainment last night which for genuine merit would be hard to beat here. The audience was composed principally residents of the West End, and they showed their appreciation by continued and hearty applause.

Mrs. Charles Borden, under whose direction the young people covered themselves with glory, was the recipient of complimentary remarks from the rector, Rev. Cortlandt H. Mallery, on the splendid success achieved by her charges. The dramatic work last night demonstrated beyond cavil that there are several young people in the society who have natural dramatic talent which with development will make names for themselves as high class entertainers.

The rehearsals for the entertainment were begun only three weeks ago, which shows the careful study and attention given to Mrs. Borden's tuteluage. It was a splendid performance from every point of view. Rev. Mr. Mallery in commenting on the efforts of the young people complimented them and their directress and extended the invitation for others to join the society. Several took advantage of the opportunity to apply for membership.

A prologue by Miss Sadie Wadhams was first on the program and was followed by violin selections by Miss Violetta Staples. A living presentation of "That Old Sweetheart of Mine," by William Shakespeare was the central figure, was next given, the sweethearts being the Misses Anna Hull, Marion Harris, Lillian B. Nicholson, Julia A. Lee, Grace Graves, Helen Sutton, Violetta Staples, B. Laramour, Carrie Quipp and Blanche Thorn, who was "Mary the Bride."

Richard Borden gave a recitation, "1492;" Miss Anna Hall and Jack Hall gave a clever presentation of "Daddy Hague and Auntie Priggins;" David Sutton sang a comic song in costume, which was followed by a sketch, "Let Her Shoot Him," by Lillian Nicholson, Grace Squires, and David Sutton. Miss Julia A. Lee gave a humorous reading, Miss Blanche Thorne and David Sutton, a sketch, "A Slight Misunderstanding." Miss Nicholson sang a solo and the entertainment closed with an epilogue by Juan A. Babcock, Jr.

Dancing until 11 o'clock finished the evening's pleasure. Owing to the failure of the orchestra to appear the Misses Nicholson, Ethel Sleight, Jennie Bennett and Grace Squires volunteered at the piano.

WOMEN HEAR ADDRESS ON MISSIONARY WORK.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, of the First Baptist church, having for its winter study "The Gospel in Latin Lands," listened to a paper of unusual interest on the "West Coast of South America," presented by Mrs. Albert L. Kennelly at their meeting yesterday afternoon in the lecture room. In describing South America as our nearest continental neighbor, Mrs. Kennelly said the west coast was as different from the other parts, as if an ocean instead of the Andes divided them. The conquest of the country by Spain under Pizarro was described and the Romish religion brought by them at the point of the sword was contrasted as an inheritance with the religion brought to this country by the Pilgrim Fathers. South America's need and North America's ability to help proved an interesting part of Mrs. Kennelly's paper.

In conclusion she quoted from a recent address by Robert Speer on "Our Spiritual Obligations to Latin America." He made the startling statement that twenty men from the United States had put more money in a certain copper mine in South America than all the world had given in 100 years for the evangelization of South America.

The paper was preceded by a devotional service led by Mrs. S. T. Wilson.

Summer Religious Conference.

The Presbyterian Board of Young People Workers will hold its annual summer conference at Pocono Pines, Pa., in August, the conference starting on August 1. A number of Plainfielders will be in attendance.

SALOONKEEPER CLAIMS HIS NAME WAS FORGED

Christian Gloecker, is anxious to secure the identity of the fellow who used his signature to a letter addressed to the Berry Detective Agency, New York, last December. Perhaps the person intended it as a joke, but Mr. Gloecker is having his troubles trying to explain to local lawyers that he is not responsible.

Last December when Mr. Gloecker was away on a hunting trip, the Berry Agency received a letter bearing Gloecker's signature. It was a request to the agency to send detectives out here to shadow Gloecker's saloon during the proprietor's absence.

The detectives came on and were one duty four days. Last month Gloecker received a bill from the agency for $40, representating a charge of ten dollars a day for services. Gloecker notified the agency that he did not know what the charge represented and declared that he had never asked the concern for assistance in the sleuthing line.

The detective people, however, had in their possession the letter bearing Gloecker's signature, and armed with this evidence they placed the matter in the hands of Harry C. Runyon, for collection. Gloecker declares he does not owe the bill, nor did he write the letter to the Berry people, authorizing them to send detectives to his place of business while he was absent from the city.

MRS. D. I. SMALLEY DIES AFTER YEAR'S ILLNESS

Following an illness of one year's duration, which developed into a case of Bright's disease, Mrs. Mary Smalley, of Craig place, passed away last evening. She was the widow of Daniel I. Smalley, a brother of Mayor Newton B. Smalley, who died eighteen years ago. Surviving are a son, Dr. Edwin Smalley, and a sister, Mrs. Fred Bird, who also reside in the borough.

Mrs. Smalley was the daughter of the late John and Sarah Brady, of Orange. In 1875 she married and came to this city where she has since made her home. Prior to illness overtaking her, Mrs. Smalley was a trained nurse.

The funeral service will be held at her late home Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. In compliance with a request made by the deceased a short time before her death, the Rev. W. M. Newberry, of Brooklyn, will conduct the service.

GEORGE M. COHAN'S "YANKEE PRINCE" HERE

Manager Sanderson of the Plainfield theatre announces George M. Cohan's musical comedy success, "The Yankee Prince," for one performance only, tonight. Tom Lewis, well known in this city for his impersonation of "The Unknown," in Mr. Cohan's "Little Johnny Jones," will head the cast of 75 singing and dancing stars. Those who remember genial Tom Lewis and those who don't have a rare treat in store for them.

Critics and theatre-goers throughout the country have pronounced Mr. Lewis's performance of Steve Daly in "The Yankee Prince" one that will live for years and years to come. The same big cast and production that was used during the New York, Boston and Chicago run of "The Yankee Prince" will be in evidence here.

New Buick Arrives.

The 1910 Model 17 Buick was brought out from New York last evening by Mr. Bender, the local agent, and it certainly is a handsome car. It is one of the largest, most powerful cars on the road today, and the general opinion is that such a car as that at $1,750 is a wonderful proposition.

CONVENT PLANS APPROVED

New Structure for St. Mary's Parish to Be Finished by September First.

MUSIC AND DRAWING SCHOOL.

Father Bogan Plans to Use Old Washington School for the Church Societies.

Bishop O'Connor, of Newark, has approved plans for a convent to be erected at Liberty and West Sixth street, opposite St. Mary's church, and work on the structure will be started within a month. It is hoped to take possession of the new building by September 1. The plans were selected from a half dozen or more submitted by well-known architects, and those prepared by A. M. De Meuron, of New York, were considered the best. His work has attracted considerable attention throughout the country, especially the Dunwoodie Semisary, at Dunwoodie, N. Y., which he designed and which cost a half million dollars.

The building will have a frontage of fifty-five feet on Sixth street and sixty-five on Liberty street. It will be three stories and in addition there will be a chapel for the Sisters. It will have accommodations for fourteen teachers and it will be a combination of a music and drawing school and convent. It will be of the latest type of construction and be calculated to meet every need of such an institution. The building will be of pressed brick and white trimmings to conform to the other buildings in St. Mary's parish. Father B. M. Bogan, as pastor of St. Mary's church, will have general supervision of the construction work.

Father Bogan is also making plans to use the old Washington public school building, which was purchased by the parish, and which adjoins the church property. This will be used as a parish building for the nine societies connected with the church. There are six good sized rooms in the building. It will be given to the young women's societies, another to the older men as a reading room and library, another for a young men's club, while the balance will be used as lodge rooms and for various meetings.

In this way all the various parish interests can be cared for under one roof, and with every convenience for the comfort of the parishioners. It is also planned to improve the grounds about the building and make it as attractive as possible.

COUNTRY CLUB ELECTS

Officers Chosen, Committees Named and Reports Read at Annual Meeting.

TOTAL MEMBERSHIP IS 761.

Income $18,995.90—Financial Condition Is Prosperous—Leighton Calkins Is Re-elected President.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Country Club was held last night at the Hartridge School auditorium. Leighton Calkins was re-elected president for the coming year, and the following were elected to the other offices: Vice-president, Joseph M. Shellabarger; secretary, James P. Murray; treasurer, S. Durell Lounsbery. The nominating committee for 1911 consists of Clifton Wharton, Jr., George T. Rogers and Percy H. Stewart.

The treasurer's report showed a total income of $18,995.90, and expenditures of $18,662.83, showing an excess income of $333.07, for the first time in several years. In addition to the regular expenditures from income, the club retired last year $2,500 of its floating debt, leaving only a small floating debt of $500. The clubhouse extensions cost $5,124.48, which together with the retirement of the floating debt was paid for by the sale of $7,000 of the new bonds.

Mr. Calkins in his report as president called special attention to the fact that the trustees had sold the $7,000 of bonds without making any general appeal to members to subscribe; and to the fact that nearly the entire floating debt had been paid off notwithstanding the fact that the addition to the clubhouse had cost $624.48 more than the original estimates and that it had been found necessary to expend about $814 for necessary repairs to the clubhouse foundations and sewage system. The total membership of the club is 761. The increase in income last year from membership and grounds' fees paid by visitors, was $2,007. The president stated that the club would be opened early in April, with John Hilton in charge again as superintendent and that a very active season was being planned both from the athletic and from the social standpoint. In his report he made particular mention of the efficient services of the chairman of the various committees during the past season.

After the club meeting, the trustees organized by appointing the following as chairmen of the standing committees for 1910:

House committee, George S. Clay; Green committee, R. S. Rowland; Golf committee, Willard Wadsworth; building and grounds committee, John P. Stevens; tennis committee, S. W. Merrihew.

The reports of the president, treasurer and committee chairmen will be distributed to the members in accordance with the custom inaugurated last year. From the showing made by the management last night, the club is in a better condition financially than at any period in its history, with its property in good repair and more valuable because of recent additions and improvements, and with every prospect of continued growth and enlargement.

SENATOR GORE CAN'T TALK TO TRADE BOARD

The following letter received from United States Senator Thomas P. Gore, by James E. Martine this morning explains itself:

"Mr. J. E. Martine.

"My Dear Sir:—I am pleased to acknowledge receipt of your favor of recent date and to thank you for the very kindly sentiments which it contained. You may feel sure that it would afford me great pleasure to visit your city and address your people if the pressure of official engagements did not render it impossible. I shall, however, indulge the hope that when the occasion shall again arise that I shall be in a situation to accept.

"You may feel sure that I remember you very distinctly and very kindly, and would be pleased to extend the acquaintance.

"With assurance of the highest esteem and best wishes, believe me,

"Very truly yours,

"T. P. GORE."

Senator Gore was asked to speak at the Board of Trade's annual banquet.

BROWN BADLY BUMPED

Falls from Delivery Wagon at Fanwood and May Have Fractured Skull.

HIS COLLECTIONS ARE INTACT.

Taken to Muhlenberg Hospital Unconscious and Is Likely to Recover.

Clifford Brown, aged 22, of 65 Orchard street, Elizabeth, a driver for James A. Hearn & Son, of New York city, was picked up unconscious at the top of Fanwood hill last night just after dark. He was discovered lying on his back in the road by a driver for R. H. Macy & Co., who was delivering goods in Fanwood. Brown was suffering from contusions on the head and body and from the indications had fallen from his wagon while under the influence of liquor.

County Physician Westcott, who was immediately summoned, decided that Brown's injuries were of a serious character and notified the Plainfield police, who removed him in the patrol wagon to Muhlenberg Hospital. Dr. Woolley attended the injured man there and this morning would not discuss the case.

Brown is a son of Chas. A. Brown, owner of the Elizabeth Cab Co., on Jefferson street, that city. His father has been notified of the son's plight and will see him today at the hospital.

When Brown was removed to the hospital Marshal Logan, of Fanwood, took charge of the horse and wagon. All the money which had been collected by Brown, including $75 in bills, was found intact, so that the story of a holdup by highwaymen is absurd, according to the police. At the hospital last night it was said that Brown had concussion of the brain, but stood a good chance for recovery.

On regaining consciousness this morning Brown stated that he remembers nothing of what happened to him after delivering a package at the grocery of Scheelen Brothers in Fanwood. He has no idea that he was "held up" nor that anyone struck him. He simply fell from the wagon to the street. The exact seriousness of his injuries has not been determined yet. Later developments will show them.

LAYMEN PLEDGE THEMSELVES TO CONTRIBUTE $25,000 FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS IN ONE YEAR

State Senator Ackerman Introduces Resolution Which is Quickly Adopted at the Laymen's Forward Movement Mass Meeting.

When Judge William N. Runyon stepped up his splendid voice to lead in the singing of the hymn "Blest be the Tie That Binds," Friday night at the meeting of the Laymens' Missionary Movement, more than three hundred representative men of the evangelical churches were present, and joined heartily in the singing. The meeting was held in the auditorium of the First M. E. church and was presided over by Charles W. McCutchen, who made the opening speech and introduced the speakers. A resolution was introduced by State Senator Frank O. Ackerman, which was unanimously adopted. Music was furnished by a quartet composed of A. H. Osmun, B. F. Tallamy, George H. Smith and Thomas McDonald.

Mr. McCutchen in his speech said in referring to the recent huge meeting in New York that the sight of so many men combined in the work of sending the gospel to the multitudes which have not yet heard of Christ was an inspiring sight to him and those who were there. He characterized the movement as the holiest enterprise ever undertaken. It means that the depths of human hearts have been roused to such an extent that it will not cease until the world has been evangelized and it will happen in our time.

This result is no more impossible than that the great Eastern nation (Japan) was born in a day. It only needs men and money. When Abraham Lincoln sent out his call for 75,000 men a million responded to save an imperilled nation. Is it too much to ask the same response to save the nations of the earth for Christ?

Miss H. McBee, who followed Mr. McCutchen said in part that in the town of Greensboro, N. C., in a recent meeting of laymen 1,556 men of the total population of 10,000 had registered as willing to uphold the movement now going on for the evangelization of the 900,000,000 people who have never heard of Christ. This is the largest proportion of any convention to register with the single exception of the New York meeting.

In Canada the movement has made splendid strides toward the figure set by the laymen of that country. In Toronto alone they have nearly reached in three years the goal set for five years and have raised their subscription for foreign missions from $140,000 to $370,000, and the individual offerings average nearly $5 per year.

Mr. McBee said that while in San Francisco during the recent celebration he had the pleasure of meeting Admiral Uriu, of the Japanese navy, who is a Congregationalist, and a fighting Christian. Admiral Uriu said that what his people needed was not denominationalism, but Christ. He was enthusiastically in favor of the Laymen's Movement and said he anticipated the day when all Japan would acknowledge the sovereignty of Christ.

Mr. McBee further said that because they were laymen they could work together without involving the churches as they were not officers.

Mr. McBee asked the audience to compare these figures with a table exhibited near the pulpit, which showed the contributions of the various local churches, a copy of which will be found below. He also said that while this country had but 2,-900 missionaries in the field we had 140,000 ministers at home and wanted to know if the men of this city thought that fair to the unconverted. We are simply asking you to share the light you have with the 900,000,-000 souls who have no light. He suggested that a committee be appointed among the laymen in each church to see that every man in the church be given an opportunity to follow Christ and proclaim Him.

E. T. Colton, who spoke on the opportunities of the churchmen to help in the work of Gospel spreading roused the audience to enthusiasm by his eloquent appeal for the heathen nations and said that we western people were largely to blame for the vices now running unrestrained throughout the Far East. American saloons backed up by American breweries were one cause of the degradation and the brothels were imported ideas in China.

Commercial supremacy is what these nations are looking for and we are doing our best to help that feeling along by introducing our own methods of amassing fortunes no matter how we get them. In exporting our products we have also introduced all the vices which a so-called Christian nation can devise. Prove a witness in Shanghai has the "great white way" beaten a mile, according to Mr. Colton, who says that the whole thoroughfare is lined with gambling palaces, dance halls and brothels. He told the story of a Chinaman who lived some two hundred miles up country, and who wished his son to receive the education which the country districts did not afford so he brought the boy to Shanghai. Hand in hand they walked through the streets of the cosmopolitan city looking for a proper place in which to lodge the lad. His impressions of the houses visited were discouraging, so much so that he was minded to return to his home. However, he heard of this Christian man had noticed that there was something more than restraint in the lives of the Christians who were working among his people and this was what he wanted for his son. it is our duty to show these people that our worship of Christ is not a fetich, and we must, if we would follow the Master's command take up the teaching of Christ on the world's scale.

Much is heard of attempting to keep out undesirable aliens from this country, but do you know that most of the undesirable things which have come to this country were brought here by Americans? It is so. Our students in Germany brought back with them rationalism. The knowledge of the underworld of France and the literature of that country came here in like manner and I think we say that that is the case with most of the evil which has been copied from abroad.

Mohammedanism and Heathenism must eventually succumb to the onward march of Christianity for it is Christ's purpose to which we have committed ourselves in the world. I have a strong presentiment of what will happen in the event of the discontinuance of the forward Christian Missionary movement. I ask you to treat Christ right.

At the conclusion of Mr. Colton's speech Senator Ackerman arose and offered the following resolution:

Be it resolved:

First. That as men representing the evangelical churches of this community, we hereby express our appreciation of the instructive and inspiring messages which we have listened and record our deepened conviction of the responsibility which rests on this generation to extend as far as possible to all non-Christians now living in every land, the knowledge of the ever living Christ.

Second. That we cordially endorse the Laymen's Missionary Movement as a means of arousing the men of America to their missionary obligation and privilege.

Third. That we suggest that in every local church a strong missionary committee of men be formed to co-operate with the minister in organizing and carrying forward a personal canvas with the purpose of inducing every member to become a regular and worthy supporter of the missionary work of his own church.

Fourth. That we pledge ourselves and call upon all Christian men of this community to support foreign missions by study, systematic giving and prayer.

Fifth. That we recommend to the churches of this community that the goal of their missionary giving for 1910 be fixed at not less than $25,-000, and that the amount be raised per capita as evenly as practicable so that it will be shown to be a spontaneous and general Christian movement.

Sixth. That the committee which called this meeting be continued, with instructions to co-operate with the local churches in carrying out the recommendations of this convention.

The figures representing the membership of the various evangelical churches and their contributions to foreign missions during the past year as displayed on the table mentioned above are as follows: Total membership in Plainfield and North Plainfield, 6,969; cost of maintenance, $86,320. Contributed to home missions, $28,581; to foreign missions, $16,959. Average contribution per member, $2.43. The membership is divided as follows: Baptist, 1,477; Congregational, 1,295; Episcopal, 1,040; Methodist, 1,289; Presbyterian, 2,158, and Reformed, 650. The average individual contribution to foreign missions was: Presbyterian, $3.37; Congregational, $2.55; Episcopal, $2.14; Baptist, $1.85; Reformed, $1.15, and Methodist, $0.83.

CENTURY MARK HIS GOAL

Robert Lowrie, of Dunellen, is Ninety-seven Years Old Next Tuesday.

NEVER "BROKE" IN HIS LIFE.

Settled at New Market in 1832, and Has Voted At Nineteen Presidential Elections—Native of Scotland.

When the clock struck the hour of midnight on Monday night, Robert Lowrie, Dunellen's oldest resident, as well as one of New Jersey's oldest citizens, will have entered upon the ninety-eighth year of his career. Although Mr. Lowrie is enjoying excellent health for a person of his great age, his approach to the century mark will not be marked by any celebration. He has five living children, fourteen grandchildren and fourteen great-grandchildren, a sufficient number for a good sized birthday soiree—but as he told a reporter in a three-hour chat, the other afternoon, he "never did believe in such rackets," so the relatives of Mr. Lowrie will comply with the octogenarian's wishes.

Mr. Lowrie has two more years to make the century goal and he entertains strong hopes that his life will be spared until the one hundredth milestone is reached.

A keen memory enables Mr. Lowrie to tell of the youthful changes made by Father Time in the flight of years and during his life he has noted some remarkable transformations in the swift march of progress. He remembers the ante-railroad era in the early days and the excitement and curiosity of the residents of this section when the first train of steam cars traveled over the Jersey Central; and he also recalls the days of the stage coach when passengers and mail route when Dunellen was a stopping point between New York and Philadelphia.

He feels especial pride in the fact that he voted in nineteen presidential elections. He graduated from the old Whig school into the Republican party and has always voted the G. O. P. ticket.

Only at the last November election he was among the first to cast his vote at the Dunellen polls. Party workers suggested that a man that can ride to the polling place in a carriage but he stoutly refused this proffered assistance, and insisted on walking.

As he emerged from the ballot booth and deposited his ballot he exclaimed to the election officials, accompanied by a vigorous stamp of his cane on the floor:

During his career Mr. Lowrie was thrifty and saving and he accumulated considerable valuable property which he now owns. At this time it is his proud boast, "I always had money and never knew what it was to be without a dollar."

Born at Stirlingshire, Scotland, February 1, 1813, Mr. Lowrie came to America when a young man, at nineteen in company with his brothers, James and George Lowrie, who also lived to ripe old ages, the former dying at 86 years, and George at 98 years of age. The trip was made across the Atlantic in an old fashioned sailing vessel and it took the craft nearly three months to make the voyage.

Four days after his arrival in New York Mr. Lowrie found himself at New Market, and it was in that village and Dunellen that he has spent all his days. Mr. Lowrie's description of his trip to New Market from New York seventy-eight years ago was an interesting narrative.

Accompanied by John Wilson, a sailor, who deserted the ship when it reached New York, the pair walked to Paterson. After remaining in the Silk City over night he decided to go elsewhere, so he again started out afoot. On the way he passed through Elizabeth, Metuchen and South Plainfield, finally reaching New Market. He walked all the way with the exception of the distance between South Plainfield and New Market, about one mile.

At that point he met a farmer driving a team of oxen, and this latter took his to New Market. When the tavern was reached the hotel now conducted by John Harkins), both alighted and refreshed themselves with a hearty meal and a pint of grog each. The landlord at the hostelry then was Landlo Blue, an Englishman.

New Market in those days, said Mr. Lowrie, was about as big as it is now. Mr. Lowrie decided to settle there and he secured a job in John Giles' wheelwright shop, which stood on the site of Jenner's brick house. The shop is now in the rear of the Jenner house, and the ancient landmark now used by Philip Jenner for the same purpose.

After working a time at Giles' wheelwright establishment, Mr. Lowrie took a job at Vail's saw mill, which occupied the site of the present grist mill. At that time the mill was the most important business centre in that village. In addition to woodsawing, a large clover cleaning industry was connected with the plant. There the farmers for miles around brought their clover to be cleaned in one hundred bushel lots and larger; then another adjunct to the mill was a hulling machine was also turned out in large quantities which was marketed in New York for ship calking purposes.

The low wages in those days did not hinder men from saving money. Mr. Lowrie worked at Vail's mill in New Market for eight years at fifty cents a day and his board. He loaned his money to his employer at interest during that time, and at the end of the eight years, he discovered that he had about $500, or sufficient to get married.

So in 1840 he led Sarah Coriell, daughter of Ira Coriell, to the altar. Five children blessed that union—Mrs. George F. Giles, Mrs. Emma E. Giddes, of Dunellen; Mrs. C. T. Hunt, of Stockton; Abner Lowrie, of Dover, and Mrs. David Giles, of Plainfield, who is dead. Mr. Lowrie first wife died and forty-eight years ago he married Susan Louise Harris, of Harris Lane, who died two and a half years ago. There was one son by this union, Elston Lowrie, who is living.

Soon after his first marriage Mr. Lowrie engaged in farming, which he followed chiefly during his remaining active years. He owned a farm on the site of the old "Eight Row," on West Front street, and his farmhouse was called by travelers as the "Half Way House," because of the central location between Dunellen and Plainfield. He was also owner at one time of the William Rice farm near Dunellen. It was for the murder of old man Rice that Lawyer Patrick is serving a life sentence in Sing Sing prison.

While in the employ of Vail's Mills at New Market, and in later years when he farmed for himself, Mr. Lowrie peddled flour, visiting Plainfield, Elizabeth, Newark, Rahway and New Brunswick. At that period Newark was boasting proudly over a population of 20,000.

The distinction of voting for nineteen presidential candidates is probably not enjoyed by another Jerseyman. Mr. Lowrie cast his first vote at New Market in 1836 for General William H. Harrison, the Whig candidate, who was defeated by Martin Van Buren, the Democratic nominee. Four years later he took party in the first Whig victory in forty years by voting for Harrison and Tyler in the memorable "Tippecanoe and Harrison too" campaign. The other presidential candidates for whom Mr. Lowrie voted for follow: 1844, Henry Clay; 1848, General Zachary Taylor; 1852, General Winfield Scott; 1856, John C. Fremont; 1860 and 1864, Abraham Lincoln; 1868 and 1872, General U. S. Grant; 1876, Rutherford B. Hayes; 1880, James A. Garfield; 1884, 1888 and 1892, Benjamin Harrison; 1896 and 1900, William McKinley; 1904, Theodore Roosevelt; 1906, President William H. Taft.

The most enthusiastic political meeting attended by him, Mr. Lowrie said, was in the first Lincoln campaign during the summer of 1860, at New Brunswick. At this gathering, he said, General Stockton addressed 10,000 people.

AUTO RUNS AMUCK ON GROVE STREET

A series of snorts and chug-chugs exploded by James F. Parker's automobile, while being driven through Grove street, by Mr. Parker's chauffeur, George Giddes, made a big commotion on that thoroughfare Friday afternoon. The machine was traveling toward West Front street, when the slushy roadway caused the machine to become unmanageable.

Chauffeur Giddes lost control of the steering apparatus and the auto skidded, jumped over the curb, and bolted across the lawn of Charles Mathews' property, situated on the corner of Grove street and Prospect place. The auto did not stop until it cleared the lawn and reached the gutter on the Prospect place side of the Mathews' property.

Considerable damage resulted to the front of the auto but Giddes escaped unhurt. The auto was towed to Barfuss' garage on Somerset street for repairs.

CHARITY CENTRALIZATION

Conference Held by Local Philanthropic Association Representatives.

A PLAN FOR CO-OPERATION.

Committee of Five Appointed to Issue Call for Meeting of All Heads of Various Charitable Institutions.

Representatives of several charitable organizations of the city held a conference with Mayor Charles J. Fisk in his office Friday, the purpose being to decide upon plans for bringing all charities of the city under one common head and conducting the same on a systematic basis.

The conference resulted in the adoption of this resolution:

"That the Mayor be requested to appoint a committee of five to assemble representatives of all the various agencies for social betterment and relief with a view to appointing a general registrar and promoting effective co-operation in the conduct of such work. It is understood that all the churches and private benevolent and fraternal organizations will be invited to take part."

In this connection the Mayor appointed Julius E. Erickson, Hugh F. Fox, Henry L. DeForest, Duncan W. Taylor and Rev. George A. Warner as such committee. It will be the object of this committee to get in touch with every society and lodge in the city and borough with a view to securing the greatest co-operation possible in the dispensing of charity.

Not all the various charities were represented last night, but there was a sufficient number to make a good start. Among those attending the conference were Miss Holly, agent for the Oragnized Aid; Miss Georgianna Smith and Miss Mebelle C. Phillips, of the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield; Miss Harriett Mattison, of the Board of Health; Julius E. Erickson, George P. Mellick, Henry L. DeForest, William M. Wherry, Jr., Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, Leon R. Thurlow, Councilmen Duncan W. Taylor and Frederic E. Mygatt, Hugh F. Fox, William S. Tyler and Mayor Charles J. Fisk.

At the outset Mr. Fisk outlined the plans drafted in his annual message for conducting local charities. He said that at present about $50,000 is raised annually for all charitable purposes in the city. This is raised every year by the same people. He declared he did no know of a place where people were more charitably inclined than in Plainfield, but the funds are not always expended judiciously. There are often times when charity is duplicated by the Charity Organized Aid and various churches. The Mayor enumerated the various charities in the city, with aims and means, as taken from his message. He then invited Mr. Fox to speak on the subject and offer such suggestions as might occur to him in connection with the question of charity.

Mr. Fox said that he did not think it would be wise to "pool" all charitable efforts in the city and feed the deserving from one fund, he was not sure that such a scheme would be feasible, but he believed that the community would measure up to any well defined policy.

He suggested that all undesignated sums be divided equally among local charities. He cited the fact that there is now between 20,000 and 30,-000 people in Plainfield and North Plainfield and yet it is safe to say that not more than one-fifth are regular contributors to charity. He thought it possible to hit upon a plan for the development of the social welfare of the people.

In this connection he referred to the medical inspection now required in the public schools, adding that these inspections often lead to the discovery of some disease or affliction among children that requires more extended treatment. In this case he said it might be well for the city to stand such expense, provided the parents are unable to pay for the treatment, and thus prevent a greater cost in later years.

This brought Mr. Fox up to the point of suggesting ways and means to Keep a complete and accurate record of every case of charity in the city. He more than once has the hospital keeps a record of the "pay" and "non pay" patients treated, but that someone is needed to look after the business end of the work. It was also shown that in many cases there are people who don't like to acquaint the Charity Organized Aid with all the details of charity work under their supervision.

Then the idea of a "central bureau" for information in charity work was presented. It was shown that the various organizations keep records, but the segregate there are deficiencies and it is hoped to meet these that a bureau was thought to be the ideal method.

It was suggested by Rev. George A. Warner that there are amateur social workers who, while doing good work, are often a hindrance in some ways. Yet they don't want to be deprived of the pleasure of raising and dispensing charity according to their ideas. This was admitted to be true. Mr. Warner thought it should compulsory for everyone to make a report to some designated head, and he suggested that the Mayor appoint a committee and have blanks sent out to be returned with all necessary information. This brought out the idea of having a registration bureau, the suggestion being made by Miss Mabelle Phillips.

It was the opinion of Mr. Tyler that what is needed is co-operation in relief. He suggested that all societies and organizations, lodges, even the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., be invited to co-operate in this matter and that a central secretary be employed to keep a complete record of all charities and what is done.

Another suggestion was that a "community Sunday," instead of a "Hospital Sunday" be designated for the purpose of raising funds. The question of how to reach people who don't give to the hospital or other charities seemed to be a perplexing one. It was then that the conference resulted in the adoption of the resolution given above, and the appointment of a committee. The committee will meet soon to take up its work and report later.

MAYOR'S CABINET MEETS

Line Rights Along Greenbrook Referred to County Attorney for Opinion.

ABOUT THE SANITARY CODE.

To Prevent Expectorating on Trolley Cars—Hear a Complaint Against Trolley Methods.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk and his cabinet met Friday afternoon and discussed several questions of more or less importance, including that of defining the banks of Green brook, which was brought up at a previous session. A communication was received from Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh in which he gave his opinion in the matter.

According to Mr. Marsh, no permit may be given for the erection of a building along the banks of the brook if it should in any way obstruct the course of the water. If the walls along the brook have been in position more than twenty years, that fact alone gives the abutting property-owners definite rights; otherwise it does not.

It was decided by Mr. Fisk to refer the matter to County Attorney W. R. Codington for an opinion as to county line rights. Nothing will be done until his opinion is received.

One of the most important matters discussed was that relative to enforcing the sanitary code concerning the prevention of spitting in trolley cars or public places. This section was read and a copy was given Chief of Police P. J. Murphy with instructions to see that it is enforced strictly. The code provides that any person or persons who shall violate the law shall, upon conviction, be punished by a fine not less than $2 nor greater than $100. Chief Kiely has been instructed to see that violators of the code are brought before the court.

There were several other matters discussed, but no definite action was taken at this time.

Mayor Fisk read a communication from the Public Service Corporation in reference to a complaint made to him by Arthur Murphy, relative to what he considered an injustice in the matter of transfers. Mr. Murphy claimed that he boarded an Arlington avenue car on Somerset street, near Front, wishing to transfer to the Netherwood car at the Watchung avenue stand. The conductor refused to give him a transfer, claiming that it was against the rules of the company to issue a transfer from his line on Front street to another city line. The argument seemed to resolve itself into a question as to whether Mr. Murphy boarded the car on Somerset street about forty feet from Front street.

The result was that he paid two fares in going from Front and Somerset street to Putnam avenue and Webster place. The P. S. C., is reply informed the Mayor that the conductor followed the company rules and that he was within his rights.

MR. AND MRS. WALTER EMMONS GIVE A SALAMAGUNDI PARTY.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Emmons, of 146 Somerset street, entertained a number of friends at their home last night at a Salamagundi party. At the conclusion of play it was announced that first and second honors were won by Miss Alice Bonwell, Mrs. A. B. Cole, A. B. Cole, James Andrews, Miss Sadie Line and Samuel Tevenor.

An amusing incident was the showering of a couple with confetti, in anticipation of their engagement, announcement of which will be made within a short time. During the evening refreshments were served, after which the happy affair terminated.

FORM BOARD OF TRADE

Frank R. Wynkoop Elected of Dunellen's New Civic Body.

STARTS WITH 126 MEMBERS.

Mayor Sanford, President Jeffery and Others Give Advice—The Officers Are Chosen.

Dunellen's board of trade was organized Thursday under the most auspicious conditions. The board starts out with an enrollment of 126 members which is 7 per cent. of the population of that borough. Assisting in the organization were President William Jeffery, J. W. E. Vanderhoef, George N. Christian and Professor A. S. Herr, of the Plainfield Board of Trade.

President Jeffery made a big hit in his speech to the Dunellenites and he was repeatedly interrupted by rounds of applause. One member of the board who occupied a seat in the rear of the hall became so enthused while Mr. Jeffery was making his address that he shouted: "You're O. K. Jeff, we'll have you for a governor some day."

The chief point in Mr. Jeffery's address was his advice to keep politics out of the organization. "If you will eliminate politics entirely, you are sure to achieve wonderful success," said Mr. Jeffery. The speaker also touched on a number of needed improvements in the municipality in which he declared the organization would be instrumental in demand. The remarks of Messrs. Vanderhoef, Christian and Herr were also enthusiastically received.

Mayor W. A. Sanford delivered a practical talk in which he predicted that the board is bound to flourish. He also declared that Dunellen is on the boom and that the population will be doubled in the course of a few years.

Frank R. Wynkoop, who acted as chairman of the meeting, was unanimously elected president of the organization. Mayor Sanford was nominated but he declined. The other officers selected were A. S. Todd, Jr., vice president; Dr. Thomas Hogan, vice president; Wilson S. Frederick, treasurer; executive committee, John H. L. Peters, George T. Schenck, Paul Reusch, Henry S. Garretson, S. D. Baerman. The auxiliary committees will be selected by the executive committee and announced at the next meeting. The regular meetings of the organization will be held on the last Thursday of each month.

PLAINFIELDER FIGURES IN UNUSUAL ACCIDENT

Harry Le Page Heaume, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel T. Heaume, of Dunellen avenue, who is in charge of the Postal Telegraph Company's office at Rodesia, South Africa, in a recent letter to his parents in this city, relates a collision between a train and a herd of elephants which created a lot of excitement among the passengers on the train.

The engine was derailed and the cow-catcher was all buckled and twisted back under the wheels of the locomotive as a result of the force of the collision. One large elephant became entangled in the train and did not get free for two hours, although several of the passengers tried to shoot the brute to death.

Mr. Heaume, who was a passenger on the train, said the collision was accompanied by a loud crash which terrorized the women on the train. The accident occurred in an elephant jungle in which the train was obliged to remain all night.

THE ABSTEMIOUS RABBIT.

A curious characteristic of animal life on the deserts of the Southwest was recently commented upon by a correspondent of the Los Angeles Times, who has discovered that rabbits, ground squirrels, deer, antelope, the mountain sheep, and any number of reptiles and insects live at great distance from any visible water. Most remarkable is the way the hare or jackrabbit goes without water, without a particle of green food in sight for leagues, says Youth's Companion, but only

You find him happy and fat, spending the day under a scrap of bush that makes little more shade than a fishnet. His skin is as porous as a piece of buckskin, and the heat is enough to evaporate every drop of blood in his body, if it were so much blood in a bag of skin. And all the time, too, he is evaporating water through his lungs by his breath the same as you do. Yet there he will sit all day until evening, when he will play for miles over the still fiery plain and run the sun a race to bed.

People may spend half the night dodging coyotes or hunting an alfalfa patch, to find himself fenced out, when he will be ready to run the sun another race, out of bed, apparently for pure fun. And when you hear him you will find a full flow of blood as the thoroughbred Belgian hare of a few years ago, that used to sit in his cage on exhibition and drink water and eat green feed every few minutes.

Has the reader ever seen a jackrabbit drink? I believe that in the thirty-three years I have been in California I have seen about as many jack-rabbits as any one and watched them closely, and I never yet saw one touch water. I have camped on the desert for days at the only water in many leagues, with rabbits about every night, but not one of them came to the spring. I have examined the margins of many a water hole on the same kind of ground, yet never found a track of one in the mud beyond where the grass grew.

Last summer we had a good deal of rabbits and no conception. They were so bold they would come in before sundown. Our ditches had the only water for miles, but never a rabbit could be seen drinking. I was irrigating sixty acres alone, and was up at daylight and on the ground again at dark, and the rabbits by the dozen were trying to get at the alfalfa, but for the three months of extreme heat the rabbits poured in on us from the dry hills I never saw one touch the water.

The cottontail is no rare on the driest parts of the desert that it is difficult to say with exactness what he does or does not do. But some thirty years ago, on the road from San Diego to El Cajon, some twelve miles, one could count a thousand any morning or evening in making the trip that distance, and there was miles from any spring, and at the spring never could a cottontail be seen drinking.

There was plenty of cactus, but I never saw one touch it, and in certain places it would have been eaten clean at the roots if they had eaten it. With this exception there was practically no green feed in summer or fall except the chaparral bushes, which they did not eat so far as one could see.

All old settlers can remember having seen the same thing in hundreds of places.

AN INTELLIGENT ECHO.

"Echoes," remarked the great traveler, "are queer things. They're queer for two reasons—their cause and the vast difference in their sounds. Science has explained why there are echoes, but it can't tell why one should reverberate with bass tones in response to a shrill tenor yell, while another reverses this or responds naturally."

"Then you've heard a number of echoes?" hazarded the young man, whose furthest trip from home was a distance of thirty-nine and a half miles.

"Rather! I recall one in Switzerland; the echo rolled for just four seconds, no more, no less. Then there's one in the Pyrenees that jumps six times, first loud and harsh, then low and soft, then loud again, and so on. There's one in the western part of Germany that holds a full sentence of seven words before releasing a sound, thus rivaling a certain echo in Afghanistan, which doesn't repeat until a minute and a half have elapsed."

"I'd like to hear a few of 'em," said the homestaying chap with a fine flow of wistfulness.

"Of course you would," responded the traveler encouragingly. "There are few things in the world more interesting than a good echo."

"You're right," said the other thoughtfully. "I ain't even been but a few miles from home, but I've heard one of the strangest echoes that ever was anywhere.

"Up in the little range yonder is a ravine. If you stand at one end of it and yell 'Jones!' the echo comes back, 'Jones? Jones? What Jones?'"

The great traveler looked musingly into space and was silent.—Richmond News-Leader.

STREET FAKER'S LITTLE GAME.

"Now, gentleman," said the street faker, after he had finished the preliminary argument and promised to do the card trick later, reports The Kansas City Times, "I am putting this show on strictly for advertising purposes. We are making an appeal to wise men. If there are any pikers or rubes in the crowd I won't detain them longer.

"As I told you before, these stones are the genuine Hot Springs diamonds. They are cut like diamonds, they look like diamonds and shine like diamonds. The one-carat stone will cost you twenty-five cents and every purchaser will receive as a present one of the half-carat stones. A present, mark you—one of the half-carat Hot Springs diamonds absolutely free!

The street faker paused a moment. There was a good crowd around him, but the crowd was timid.

"I'm not out here to beg you to take these goods," the faker continued, "I thought I was addressing intelligence. Who will be the first man?"

The faker gave the cue and a man pushed through the crowd. He laid down a dollar, took the stones and started to leave.

"Just a moment, stranger," yelled the faker. "You forget your change!"

"So I did," said the other, as he accepted seventy-five cents and walked away.

"Twenty-five cents is the advertising price," said the faker, as he got down to business with the rubes, "I don't want to short change anybody. Just a quarter of a dollar is all I want and you get the two Hot Springs diamonds."

Then the crowd, one by one, began to loosen, and within about ten minutes the faker had sold something like a hundred. Each man that was out like diamonds, looked like diamonds and shone like diamonds.

"It's this way," he said to an old friend. "The first impression the Yazoos always have is that I'm going to trim 'em for more than a quarter. They think I might pick their pockets or short-change them in the space of a second. When they don't come around quick I give my partner the office and then he braces through and lays down a dollar bill. Calling him back for his change is my stall to the crowd that I'm on the level. Any of 'em will fall for a quarter if they're sure that's all it will cost them; so after I pull that little trick all the good suckers are sure to get across with their money."

LOVE'S TRAGEDY.

"Daughter," said Stoxanbons, an anxious tone coming into his voice, as he led his only child to a seat, relates an exchange, "tell me, was not yesterday Sweben's last night?"

"He was father. Why do you ask?"

"Words passed between you?"

"Yes, father. A mere spat, hardly a quarrel. Why do you ask? Has anything happened?"

The expression of alarm on the girl's face deepened. "Yes, he proposed," she answered quickly. "Oh, father, has anything happened? For mercy's sake, don't keep me in suspense! If he has—"

"What reply made you daughter, to this proposal? Did you accept?"

The girl moaned. "No, father, I did not. I did not feel that I could in justice to him. But why torture me thus? Has his body been—"

The parent's face hardened. "Tell me!" he persisted, "did you give him any encouragement?"

"Oh, I don't know, I don't know!" murmured the girl, distressed. "Has he drowned himself—"

"You refused him, absolutely and positively?"

The girl shuddered. "Heaven help me," she said, "I did! He threatened to end it all if I didn't believe he would. And so this is the result! Oh, isn't it awful!"

"It is," assented the father. "I suspected that you had finally dismissed him when the news of what he had done came to me today."

"Father!" murmured the unhappy girl, "shall I be held to account for this awful thing?"

"I think not. You weren't obliged to marry him just because he asked you."

"But tell me, father, what has happened? Tell me! I have strength to bear it!"

"He has gone to work," said the old man, as he turned away.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

The Health of Urban New Jersey.

We confess to being puzzled as well as interested by an analysis which Mr. James Owen has made of the last report of the State Board of Health in New Jersey as it relates to the urban population. The object is one of common interest not only to the majority that earn a livelihood within the State and pass their days there, but to the commuting population; not only to medical men, but to laymen. Local pride is involved, and with easier access to New Jersey by the Hudson tunnels it is of little utmost importance that local pride should feel a stimulus to sanitary improvement in instances where the health statistics seem to reflect upon the government of a town. New Jersey's population is urban for the most part. We believe that in no other State are there so many dwellers in cities or towns in proportion to the whole number of inhabitants. Therefore if Mr. Owen deals mainly with urban statistics the explanation is obvious. In the State at large there has been a reduction of 2.3 per thousand in the death rate during the last twenty-nine years, or from 18.71 to 16.37. A table that will set rival cities exulting or explaining he reproduces:

City or Town.	Popu-lation.	No. of Deaths.	R per
East Orange	26,434	297	11.23
Bloomfield	12,468	145	11.62
West Hoboken	31,477	371	11.79
Perth Amboy	29,173	399	13.68
Millville	12,402	174	14.00
Kearny	14,683	212	14.50
Paterson	114,072	1,839	16.12
Town of Union	17,732	291	16.41
Bayonne	46,978	762	16.56
Montclair	17,332	291	16.79
Atlantic City	41,495	699	16.85
Camden	86,384	1,506	17.44
Bridgeton	13,508	239	17.69
Plainfield	19,709	358	18.01
Trenton	88,529	1,599	18.06
Hackensack	11,740	218	18.54
Long Branch	15,493	288	18.59
Elizabeth	63,861	1,194	18.70
Orange	26,885	513	19.08
Newark	298,177	5,736	19.11
New Brunswick	24,384	468	19.19
Jersey City	243,205	4,723	19.24
Harrison	13,711	264	19.25
Passaic City	43,861	808	19.30
Morristown	12,498	281	22.49
Hoboken	67,910	1,556	22.91

To those familiar with their location, topography and character of government some of these places seem to occupy the position in the list that is assigned as the report of the State Board of Health is unread except by proofreaders, doctors, undertakers and sanitary experts, it will excite surprise that detached, remote and mountain Morristown should be, according to these statistics, as unhealthful as the town of the State except Hoboken proper. West Hoboken is not a bad third as a health resort to East Orange, where Governor Fort lives, and Bloomfield, which should be salubrious if there is anything in a name. Why East Orange should be at the top and Orange in the rack we leave to their public spirited citizens, including the real estate interests, to settle. Mr. Owen has a suggestion that might pour oil on the controversy. He has noted that in Montclair, which as a health resort community ranks with, at least be bracketed with East Orange for salubrity, a report of the local health officer shows that 49 non-residents died in the Montclair hospitals, and he suggests that if these were not included Montclair's death rate would be 11.81 per thousand. The same explanation, we presume, could be offered in behalf of Morristown, Orange, Plainfield, Elizabeth and New Brunswick, in all of which there are public hospitals. But the trouble with the explanation is that it may act as a soporific upon the communities that should benefit themselves to make a better showing in the next annual report.

When Perth Amboy (13.68) and New Brunswick (19.19), both on the Raritan and both manufacturing places, are so wide apart in their death rates, as are those suburbs of Newark, Kearny (14.50) and Harrison (19.25), the health experts ought to be able to put their fingers upon some salient cause of the difference. In the case of Passaic, far down on the list, we should say that the very fetid and repulsive river that flows sluggishly through the town might be attributed its insalubrity in part. Newark also suffers from the same black infection. A study of the components of population in the large cities should explain the reasons for their high death rate. In 1900 Newark had 246,070 people, of whom 71,400 were foreign born and 6,700 were negroes. In Trenton, Jersey City, Elizabeth and Passaic there was and is a considerable proportion of foreign born and negroes. Considering the ratio in which many of them live, the nature of their labor, their necessities and their habits, it is not surprising that they contribute largely to the death rate. But eternal vigilance on the part of health officers is the price of hygienic excellence, and we have no desire to help authorities remiss in their duties over a stile.—New York Sun.

A County's Gain; A City's Loss.

In the latter part of 1908 and early in 1909 Mayor Fisk and other officials of Plainfield undertook to suppress the unlicensed sale of liquors. They hired detectives and secured abundant evidence against local druggists as well as several large department store in New York. All the cases were taken before the Union County Grand Jury, at the May term of 1909. Supreme Court Justice Bergen charged that it was their duty to find indictments.

The agents for the department stores were indicted for taking orders, delivering liquors and collecting pay therefor. All these indictments were successful, and those put on trial were convicted with one exception, the jury disagreed. The court imposed fines amounting to $1,200, which the county collected. A test case has been taken on appeal to the United States Court.

The druggists were not indicted. The fact that their cases were before the grand jury was believed to be sufficient warning to them, but Mayor Fisk says he is convinced that the practise of selling liquor in drug stores is continued to a certain extent. He does not say the same with other cities and other store sales. The investigations cost $1,500, and though Union county has received $1,200 in fines, it declines to help Plainfield bear any of the expense incurred in bringing violators of the law to justice.—Newark News.

TO BEAUTIFY ARMY POSTS.

Not to be behind Manila in its plan to beautify the city by straightening its lines, planting shade trees and other practical fol-de-rols, converting its waste spaces into well-ordered and beautifying parks, the military authorities now propose to direct their efforts to improving and beautifying the various posts and garrisons throughout the islands, so that visitors and Philippines will be impressed with the beauty and wealth of tropical foliage that satisfies the eye and pleases the senses, not only at Manila, but in other parts of the islands, as well, says the Manila Times.

Steps already have been taken in this direction already, many shade trees and other foliage having been planted at the various posts, particularly at Forts McKinley, Jossman and Zambanga, and arrangements have been made for a study of horticulture by a non-commissioned officer of the army at the Manila nurseries, which knowledge thus gained will be disseminated in an effort to make the various garrisons throughout the islands as attractive as possible.

The city nurseries are going their part toward the work of beautifying the islands, and are constantly growing those palms, ferns and other tropical plants which form an important part in the work. Many plants have been sent to the different military posts, and many more are being grown with all the skill and care known to the science of horticulture at this institution the military authorities, through the courtesy of the Municipal Board, will send a non-commissioned officer from the garrison of the coast artillery at Corregidor, whose duty it shall be to study horticulture and the methods employed by the city gardeners.

The city nurseries are raising thousands of plants, which are destined at some future time to adorn the city parks and military posts throughout the islands. The different bothouses are now filled with Philippine plants of all descriptions and degrees of age, which are taken out as occasion requires and transplanted in univiting spots all over the city, making them restful to the eye and a welcome addition to those little oases which tend to make the city attractive.

BOTTLES SHOW OCEAN CURRENT

Valuable information regarding ocean currents is obtained by means of bottles—inanimate scientific messengers that drift with the flotsam of the North Atlantic, sometimes following a straight line, some times zigzagging across the green water, at other times traveling in a semi-circle, says the New York Evening Post.

Ordinary bottles they are, corked and sealed with wax or pitch. Beer, vinegar or catsup they may have contained, but never an official bottles like those the Prince of Monaco used to throw into the sea years ago. They are dropped into the ocean by mariners, and contain forms furnished by the United States hydrographic office, which seeks enlightenment on all subjects dealing with the science of navigation. These bottle cards, as they are called, are printed in seven languages, and have blank spaces for the name of the vessel from which the bottle was cast and the vessel which picked it up, as well as dates and the latitude and longitude of the starting and finishing points of the voyage.

If a man finds a bottle on the beach and follows directions, he mails the paper to the hydrographic office, whose experts trace the path followed by the bottle, delineating this path on the map which forms a part of the regular chart given to navigators who furnish marine data to the office.

A star on the map marks the point at which the bottle was cast adrift, a circle the plnt of recovery, and a number is attached to indicate the order in the corresponding chronological list. The drift is shown as following the shortest possible route, except in the case of bottles whose path is made to conform to a certain extent to the accepted knowledge of ocean circulation.

In equatorial and tropical regions, where trade winds prevail, the drift is westerly, all bottles finding their way to the Windward Islands, the Bahamas, or the shores of the Caribbean or the Gulf of Mexico.

North of the fortieth parallel, or, to be more explicit, north of the latitude of Cape Race, the drift is driven by prevailing westerly winds in an easterly or east by northeast direction, going across the ocean to be cast upon the western shores of Great Britain or the coast of France. Between the two main drifts, or between the Windward Islands and New York, according to explanatory notes of the bottle chart, "lies a debatable region, crossed by many sailing and steamship routes, and within which in all probability are cast as many bottle papers as in other portions of the ocean. The recovery of such bottles, the chart says, is the needs of the hydrographic office furnishing but fourteen since 1888."

Confirmation of the circulatory movement was obtained through the course taken by bottle papers Nos. 122 and 145, with drifts of 3,120 and 5,520 miles and 6 and 8 months respectively, at the rate of 6.4 miles and six miles a day. No. 122 was cast loose by the German steamship Parnagua not far from Cape Finisterre, traveled down the Portugese and West African coasts to about the twenties parallel, and then moved across in a half-circle to the Caribbean, landing on one of the West Indian Islands. No. 145 started about midway between Nova Scotia and Africa, and was carried to a point north of San Domingo.

An interesting record of a long drift is found in the bulletin of the Arctic Club of America, dated January 20. A buoy that was driven ashore on November 3, 1908, at Soroe, Denmark, contained a notice to the effec that it had been set adrift on July 24, 1900, near Cape Bathurst, a point of Canadian territory that juts out into the Arctic Ocean.

GIFTS FOR PRINCETON.

University Receives Rare Documents for Its Library.

The library of Princeton University has received from M. Taylor Pyne, '77, a document of unusual interest regarding the early history of Princeton. It is a letter from Dr. John Witherspoon, one of the early presidents of Princeton and the only clergyman to sign the Declaration of Independence, to Colonel Henry Lee regarding the college expenses of his son, "Light Horse Harry" Lee.

The library has also received from J. A. Campbell, of Trenton, three documents relating to President Madison. They include President Madison's own copy of the famous alumni circular of 1825, calling for subscriptions for a general fund of $100,000; a letter to President Madison from Daniel Newell, who was managing the matter, and a receipt from Mr. Newell acknowledging payment on account of Madison's contribution to this fund. All three of these documents are docketed in Madison's own handwriting.

Flowers in Fashion.

The wearing of an artificial flower on a house gown is a revived fashion. Roses are the favorites. They are of satin. Many gold and silver ones are used. They are pinned at the top of the high-waist drapery. The artificial gardenia is now worn at the end of the long shawl revers on coats instead of on the lapel.

HUNTING FROM A TREE.

I need scarcely say that while my companion, with the help of the men, was trying to secure the live cub, I was keeping a sharp lookout, and soon had the satisfaction of seeing my first wild lion, writes A. R. Dugmore in Colliers' Weekly. Not one, but the pair, attracted, evidently, by the cries of the young one, they came within three hundred yards. A finer sight I have seldom seen than those two big tawny creatures. For a minute or two they watched us, then turned and disappeared; incidentally, I may add, so did most of the men, tall trees being considered the favored retreat.

Believing that the lions would return, we selected a tree with large horizontal branches from which I hoped to be able to use the camera, and there we proposed to stay. Unfortunately, the cub soon died from its violent struggles, so that we no longer had its growling to attract the old ones.

Just as we were about to take our places we were surprised to see the old lion and two lionesses appear about 400 yards away. The wretched men in their fight made such a noise that the lions would not come nearer, so I got back again and I was equally unfortunate. All day long I stayed in the tree, but nothing further occurred, and we finally decided to spend part of the night there in hopes of getting a shot.

Shortly after sunset, while we were eating our meal, the lions appeared once more. We could just distinguish them in the dim and rapidly vanishing twilight, but they were too far to fire at with any degree of certainty. In a few minutes darkness had set in and a darker night I have never seen. We sat in our uncomfortable perch in a state of great excitement, and soon we heard something approaching through the high grass; nearer and nearer it came, and the low, growling purr of the lioness added to our excitement.

I thought if I could get down to a lower branch I might be able to see a little better, and so as noiselessly as possible I got down to within about eight feet of the ground. Just as I reached this place the lioness or lion passed directly under me, but the darkness was so intense that I could see nothing. The men, who probably not more than twelve or fourteen feet away. We heard them continue their way up the bed of the stream, stopping once to drink at a pool, and that was the last we heard of the lions.

About 10 o'clock the moon rose, and as we were too tired to stay any longer in our uncomfortable position we started for camp, and it was not a particularly pleasant walk, as every bush assumed the form of a lion to our overwrought imagination. We were thoroughly glad to reach camp in safety and get a good night's sleep. Now that the roar of lions could disturb our well-earned rest.

TROUSSEAU SETS.

Fortunate is the bride who may hope to possess herself of one or more of the wonderfully beautiful trousseau sets which are the climax of lingerie loveliness.

A bridal set of comparative simplicity, but great attractiveness, has Van Dyke shaped valenciennes motifs from the round yoke of chemise and gown to which the skirt is attached with clustered pin tucks between each V. Van Dykes caught together with ribbon hold the chemise gown over the shoulder. Sleeves of the latter were finished with lace ruffles.

On skirt and drawers ruffles of the Van Dyke points are oddly turning. Large crescents of cluny lace are the distinguishing features of the waistband of each and edging of the same lace. Between the embroidery and lace of the deep skirt flounce soft ribbon is threaded in odd zig-zag fashion, emerging in the long looked for bow.

For the bride of unlimited means there are extremely handsome sets with trimming of costly Irish crochet and Venise lace. In these we see the quaint "Josephine" gown with square neck opening, drawn with three narrow ribbons. With the hipless figure still the mode "combination" is the watchword of fashion designers. Great is the ingenuity they display in the elimination of every superfluous gather or thickness of material.

A marvel of cleverness is the new three-piece combination of skirt, drawers and corset cover. One piece is made to do the duty for both skirt and drawers and is faultlessly attached to the corset cover without gathers.

HOME LIFE OF THE CZAR.

The first impression of the Emperor of Russia is of the gentleness and simplicity of his character, says London Tit-Bits. He is very kind and very slight, and his eyes, face and voice express a disposition that is unusually winning. In his delicate appearance and the quiet dignity of his bearing, however, there is no suggestion of any lack of physical or moral strength.

Perhaps there could hardly be a question of physical bravery in any royal case, since personal fearlessness is a part of royal training, if not inherent in royal blood. But no one could see the Emperor of Russia without realizing the spiritual force in his gaze and detecting a note of moral courage in his voice. To all who come near him he appears fully aware of the weight of his destiny, and to be bearing the awful burden with cheerful serenity, always looking at his great danger, and without wavering.

In meeting with strangers the Czar is, wherever possible, kindly and solicitous and entirely free from affection in the consciousness of his position. In this the Czarina resembles him, and also in a preference for the English language. Indeed, English is spoken exclusively by the Imperial family in its home circle.

Music is the Czar's favorite recreation, and he is himself a composer of no mean merit. He plays the violin well, and is very fond of an instrument called the balalaika. He often sings to this instrument, for he possesses a tenor voice of excellent quality.

The Czarina is also very musical, and a celebrated violinist once said of her that if she were in another sphere of life, and became a professional, she would win great fame.

The Empress is a careful, loving mother, and personally supervises the education of her four little girls who were brought up by English who were brought by by English nurses, with an abundance of exercise in open-air life.

The Czar is quite up-to-date in his liking for golf, though he does not devote much time to the "royal and ancient game." In the park of the Winter Palace there is a links, and Nicholas II. was himself guiding the ball when enjoying himself immensely. The "Autocrat' of All the Russias" has always taken an interest in agricultural matters, and another hobby of his is farming. Some photographs were taken some time ago showing the Czar in the act of giving instructions in the use of a newly-invented plow. In one of these pictures Nicholas II' was himself guiding the plow as it turned up the furrows.

The Czar is by no means what can be called deeply read, but he takes up literature in a desultory and lighter kind, and he is credited with the remark, "Were I not—well, what I am—I should be the greatest bookworm in the world." One of his hobbies is the study of occultism, while a memory which may be that of lions yachting, philately, and collecting birds' eggs. Many of the latter were collected by himself in his younger days, and at one time he was a most darling and expert climber of trees. Nicholas II. is also fond of tennis, and frequently plays a game in the evenings. His majesty is a great smoker, and continually seeks repose from his troubles in the soothing weed.

AMERICAN CATS IN FAR EAST.

In the land of the nabobs you may escape serious punishment if you shy a hair brush or bootjack at a couple of cats courting on the backyard fence. But you had better not kill a tabby, says The Pathfinder. The people of India have themselves no particular love for the caterwauling of Tom and Tabby, but they have the most exalted admiration and respect for the teeth and claws of these felines, this being due to the fact that they have done noble work fighting the bubonic plague by sticking their claws and teeth into the flea, that carries the flea that harbors the germ that does the bad work with man. These are American cats that are thus doing.

About a year ago the Salvation Army concluded that the cat of India was not equal to the occasion, that it was run down, and hence couldn't do much toward running down the rats that carry fleas, etc., so 50,000 cats were sent over on board steamship. Besides getting at once on the job and reducing the rats, the cats multiplied so fast that it is now estimated that there are more than a million of the purring creatures, in the land of the Ganges and Indus, which are of American ancestry.

Japan has taken the hint from India, and a few days ago, when the steamer Lichtenfels left New York, there was something doing in the hold, judging from the squalls that rose above the scream of the whistles in the bay. There were down there the same number of cats from Flowery Kingdom to vent their instincts on the rodents that infest it. There will be more to follow and in a short while 500,000 cats will have been shipped to the Mikado's people. America is becoming a veritable Dick Whittington to the countries of the Far East.

POPULAR GOVERNMENT.

In summoning some of the taxpayers to learn their views on matters being considered by the administration for the municipality's interests, Mayor Pisk did a wise and commendable act. Under our form of government officials are but the servants of the people and are supposed to act according to their wishes.

There are many matters now under discussion upon which there is a wide difference of opinion. Our tax rate is high and consequently there is the expected average of complaint. To make improvements, not absolutely needed, at this time would naturally send the rate still higher. This is the sole reason why there is strong objection to the administration incurring new obligations.

There is no sentiment for a municipal ownership of the water supply. Neither is there any for consolidation under existing conditions with a union, one borough would place a heavier burden for a time at least on the former's taxpayers. As to the abandonment of the present sewage disposal plant, which has cost the people a fortune, and the establishment of a new plant at a great outlay, the popular feeling appears to be that no immediate action is imperative.

The mayor's plan in getting the views of the people on these and other important subjects, we repeat, is praiseworthy. We hope that the meeting Wednesday will not be the last.

CAPT. KIDD'S LOOT IS AGAIN FOUND

Somers' Point, a bay resort ten miles from Atlantic City, is wildly excited because it is believed that the fabled treasure of Captain Kidd, of buccaneer fame, has been found. The excitement is not unfounded because of the fact that the supposed discoverers of the legendary loot are said to have made away with it. Old inhabitants, who really credit the belief that something of value has been discovered and made away with, think it possible that the treasure trove may have been the ship and coin buried by residents of the ancient seaport when the British vessels, during Revolutionary wars, were off the coast here. The more romantic choose to believe that the alleged recovered treasure was really the Kidd deposit, which has been searched for during the past half century along this portion of the coast.

The supposed recoverers of the treasure are believed to have carted it away during the heavy storm of Saturday night last. They left no clues on the cave within a few hundred yards of the home of County Judge Higbee and hundreds of curious townsfolk spent yesterday and today around the spot.

The uncovered cave had been bricked up with wide, over two feet in thickness, which shows the greatest care in construction. The top is covered with slabs of red and stone of a quality unknown in this locality, and believed to have been brought here along with the supposed treasure buried by Captain Kidd or others who sought its concealment. The bricks are a style similar to those known to have been brought here from England during colonial days, and both stone and brick are so old that they crumble to blows of picks now being used to discover the real extent of the cave.

So far as can be learned from the formal examination made today by Mayor John Campbell the cave is at least 150 years old. When the first discovery was made yesterday the signs left by the mysterious visitors showed that the cave had been opened and that the diggers had continued their work until they uncovered what is supposed to have been a chest or box, square and about six feet long by two feet wide. The box had been dragged to a wagon whose wheel marks were plainly visible, but trace of the vehicle was lost after it had taken to the main road leading to Pleasantville.

To Save Saucepans.

An easy way to keep enamel saucepans, pie dishes, etc., clean: Take a small piece of emery cloth, or a cloth well rubbed with sapolio, dampen it and rub all soiled parts; rinse well first in soapy water then clean water, when they will be found quite spotless and quite new.

New Fire Horses Arrive.

Two new horses for use in the Cranford fire department arrived yesterday afternoon and were at once put in service. It is hoped the new $6,000 firehouse will be ready for occupancy within a week.

"THE TWELFTH NIGHT" AT THE NEW THEATRE.

The presentation of "Twelfth Night," at the New Theatre, New York, Saturday afternoon disclosed several novelties which drew forth favorable comment from Shakespearean scholars. One of the most pleasing innovations for the singing by Viola of the little love song, which for years has been sung by Feste, the Clown. The departure, if it may be so termed, was made possible by the fact that Miss Annie Russel, who plays Viola, possesses a fine voice. In the text which has been handed down to posterity the song is given to Feste, but it seems most likely that Shakespeare's original intention was that Viola should sing the air. When Director Arnold found that Miss Russell could sing as well as act, he was delighted and assigned to her the melody. In fact, the change from Viola to Feste seems so uncalled for that there can hardly be any doubt that the change was made, not by Shakespeare, but by some stage manager forced to meet a sudden misadventure. It is probable that when Shakespeare wrote the play, the boy who took the part of Viola possessed a voice. In a later production the boy could not sing and the Clown was substituted. Shakespeare's intention, however, that this song should be sung by Viola seems clear. When she first proposes to serve the unknown Duke as a page, her chief qualification, as she puts it, is that she "can sing and speak to him in the modes of mankind." Yet at the moment when it would be most dramatically effective for her to touch the heart of the Duke with a song which "deals with the innocence of love," she is silent and the melody is given to the Clown, who is not in the Duke's service at all, but in that of Lady Olivia.

Another novelty in the production was the use of six instruments which in all probability have not been heard on the stage for over a hundred years. These were the small lute, the medium lute, the theorone or large lute, the vipi-de-kamboys, the recorder and the hautbois. These were played by six musicians who appeared in the Duke's palace and later in Olivia's garden when the Duke came to woo. When Elliott Schenck, the musical director, asked for these instruments, Hamilton Bell, the art director, had great difficulty in procuring them. Some were bought from antiquarians and others were made.

"The Twelfth Night" will be produced tonight, tomorrow night and Wednesday matinee and night.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF FORMER ASSEMBLYMAN

The funeral service of David D. Smalley, who died on Friday, was largely attended by friends and relatives at his late home on Manning avenue at 1 o'clock Tuesday p. m. Three clergyman conducted the last rites over the bier. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the first Methodist church, who was in charge of the service, made the opening prayer, and spoke words of condolence to members of the family.

There were numerous floral tributes from friends of the deceased and family. The offering of the Epworth League of the Grace M. E. church was a beautiful wreath while the Epworth League and Ladies Aid Society of the First Methodist church sent tributes.

Interment was made at Mt. Bethel, the bearers being David Weaver, William Bohl, Joseph Humble, Andrew E. Lutkins, Worth Coddington and Lewis Bird.

MOONSHINERS CAUGHT IN RAID ON DISTILLERY.

Bayonne, Feb. 2.—An illicit distillery was raided early yesterday morning at 20 Twentieth street, and Morris Decker and two assistants, Alexander Knopler and Louis Terness, were caught in the act, detectives say, of preparing to fill the vats with material for distilling. The trio were taken to Jersey City and will be given a hearing before United States Commissioner Rowe.

Two days ago Chief of Police Yare had his attention attracted to a truck headed with sugar. He saw it turn into West Twentieth street and decided to see where the sugar would be delivered, so he detailed Detective Lazarus to the case, and notified United States Revenue Officer Bechtold. The two men saw the wagon load of sugar with three men on it appear again on Broadway early yesterday morning. One of the men as sentinel got off at Twentieth streeet, the second at Avenue C and the third drove up to the house where the still was located and unloaded the sugar.

When the truck had gone away the detectives raided Decker's place and caught Decker and his assistants busily at work. They confiscated 10,000 pounds of sugar, 200 pounds of raisins and several gallons of brandy.

PLAINFIELD BEATS TROY

Carl Steiner excelled in the running high jump with a mark of 5 feet 1½ inches, and Chauncey Murphey was second. In the 12-pound shooting contest "Jack" Payne, the ex-cop, was first. He hurled the weight 29 feet and 7 inches.

The standing broad jump was the only event captured by the Trojans. H. Harris, covering a distance of 9 feet 10 inches. Chauncey Murphey, of Plainfield, tied R. Whitehouse for second, each covering 9 feet 7 inches. The summaries follow:

DR. CARROLL THOUGHT ALL WERE METHODISTS

At a meeting to further the Laymen's Missionary Movement in New Brunswick, Dr. H. K. Carroll, of New Brunswick, addressed the men upon the topic, "The call of the Laymen to the Missionary Enterprise." He is a prominent Methodist, and he was under the impression that his audience was to be entirely Methodistic in character. He had progressed well into his remarks before discovering his mistake, and he then said that he would continue his talk as he had planned to give it, because he thought the Methodists needed "stirring up" more than any one else. He said he had recently attended a meeting in this city where statistics were produced showing that the average per capita contribution on the part of the Plainfield Methodists was far below that of any other denomination.

Dr. Carroll read from a chart prepared by the Managing Board of the Methodist Foreign Missionary Society showing that of the 16,308 Methodist churches in the United States, there were 2,060 in which the total sum raised for foreign mission last year did not exceed $5.00, while in 1,726 Methodist churches not one cent was raised for this work. Nearly one-third of the Methodist Sunday schools in this country gave nothing at all to the advancement of foreign missionary work last year.

Dr. Carroll's talk was an appeal to the men of the church to organize for the advancement of this branch of service, and he pointed to the great work that has been done by the women of the Methodist church through organizing their forces. The speaker emphasized the real need that the church has for more of missionary interest and expressed the belief that when the men realize this fact they will awake to the privilege and opportunity that are theirs, and attaining to the world-view that the Master had, they will develop a Messenger Boy Missing.

Rahway, Feb. 2.—Wallace McCarthy, fifteen years old, a telegraph messenger, has been missing since 3 o'clock Monday afternoon, at which time his parents gave him an order to fill at a store. The order was not received, nor had the lad been heard from since. His parents are distracted, and friends are searching for the lad. He did not have much money, but was a great reader of tales of adventure.

Y.W.C.A. 'GYM' EXHIBITION

Young Women's Classes Give Their Mid-Winter Entertainment.

WON THE BASKETBALL GAME.

Miss Margaret Mosher, Physical Director, in Charge of Program —The Program a Well Varied One.

The mid-winter exhibition of gymnasium work by the classes of the Young Women's Christian Association, held at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, Monday, attracted a large number of friends, in fact the seating capacity of the "gym" was tested to the limit, it being necessary to use a large portion of the regular floor space.

The exhibition was concluded with a basketball game between the Y. W. C. A. and North Plainfield High School team of girls, and proved to be a most exciting contest in which the borough girls won out by the one-sided score of 26 to 4.

The first part of the program was devoted to an exhibition of gymnasium class work, opening with a grand march by the members of the various classes. This was followed with a military drill and dance by girls of the junior class, a mass drill, wand and dumb-bell exercises, by members of the Monday evening and Wednesday afternoon beginners' classes; bench folk dance, by the Tuesday evening advanced class; bar-bell drill, by the Wednesday evening advanced class; Indian-club drill by the Tuesday evening advanced class; Spanish folk dance by the Wednesday evening advanced class, concluding with a Swedish peasant dance by members of the Monday evening and Wednesday afternoon beginners' classes.

All of this work was under the direct personal supervision of Miss Margaret E. Mosher, physical director of the Y. W. C. A. and was thoroughly enjoyed by the spectators. The young women, not forgetting the juniors, did excellent work, showing marked improvement. All could realize the great benefit from the exercise, while the nature of the work was fascinating in itself.

The program was planned to exhibit the regular class work carried on week by week in the Y. W. C. A. gymnasium. The folk dancing was introduced into regular gymnastics as a form of play and good exercise, as a recreation and not to produce finished dancing.

Throughout the drill and exercises, the participants were applauded frequently, and it was the general opinion that the work shown was worthy of highest commendation.

In part second the basketball game was played. North Plainfield was too strong for the Y. W. C. A. girls, as the score of 26 to 4 shows. The borough five played well together and showed the benefit of frequent practice. Their guarding was the most perfect, while they played an aggressive game throughout. The ball was almost always near their goal. This does not mean that the association girls did not play well. They did the best they could under the circumstances, trying to hold the score of their opponents down.

During the second half, Miss Reba Kline, one of the Y. W. C. A. best players was obliged to retire from exhaustion and Miss Elizabeth Becker took her place.

The lineup:

Y. W. C. A.—Lona Becker, centre; Reba Kline, Elizabeth Becker, Anna Daly, forwards; Helen Southard, Ida Engelhart, guards; substitutes, Elizabeth Becker, Elvira Hoester. N. P. H. S.—Marjorie Hart, centre; Bessie Conroy, Helen George, forwards; Clara Smith, Hearlette Winn, guards; Nettie Steiner, Helen Hummell, substitutes.

Miss Daisy Day, of P. H. S., was the referee, and Miss Margaret E. Mosher was the umpire.

THE SEED.

Give me the children of the land,
And let me fill their days with smiles.
Let me but take them by the hand
And lead them where the sun beguiles.

Let me but have them for a space
And in their little hearts instill
The joyousness of Nature's face,
And with God's songs their spirits thrill.

Let me but teach them where to find
The blessings that were made for them.
And how in Service of Mankind
Is found man's choicest diadem.

Let me have these and I will give
For each back to my fellow men
A human flower that will live
And bloom a person citizen.

JOHN KENDRICK BANGS.

A reception was given Monday evening at the Pennsylvania Railroad Y. M. C. A., in Camden, to Joseph O. Thompson, road foreman of engines on the Amboy division, he having on Friday reached the retirement age of seventy years. A purse of $260 in gold was given him by the men with whom he has been associated for many years.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 6, 1910.

Topic—The model Christian Endeavorer. —John xv, 1-8. (Christian Endeavor day.) Comment by Rev. Sherman E. Doyle, D. D.

Twenty-eight years ago on last Wednesday, Feb. 2, the first Christian Endeavor society was organized at Williston Congregational church of Portland, Me., by the then pastor, the Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark. Its rapid growth and worldwide influence and its continued stability in spite of many false prophecies in the contrary, form one of the most remarkable events in the history of the Christian church. In the church and "for Christ and the church" it met a need that no period or the Christian centuries had been able to meet—namely, the interesting of the young people in the church. The church and the world owe a debt to the movement started by Dr. Clark, and it is a matter of earnest congratulation and thanksgiving to God that, in the years since this small beginning has become a great movement, its organization and worldwide, Dr. Clark's life has been graciously spared and that today he still stands at its head and after all these years is still permitted, under God, to direct this great organization with the same masterly ability that he has always displayed in his relation to this child of his young manhood now grown to gigantic proportions. As model Endeavorers let us fervently pray on this anniversary occasion that many such years may still be before him and his large, invaluable place be left in this great work, Mr. William Shaw.

A great movement needs great and masterful leaders, and Christian Endeavor has always had them. But a great movement needs a great rank and file. Generals alone never won a battle. They plan them and direct them, but success or failure depends to an incalculable extent upon the men behind the guns. Napoleon was a military genius unequaled perhaps in all history, but without the vast armies of soldiers behind him, who in their devotion were ready to die for him, he never would have won a battle and would have died an unknown Corsican. The Christian Endeavor movement has been and is what it is today as much because of its followers as because of its leaders. These followers, therefore, well deserve consideration for one anniversary, and from a practical standpoint what better idea could have been suggested than one to inspire them to become model Christian Endeavorers?

In a sentence it may be said that the model Christian Endeavorer is a Christlike Christian Endeavorer. No Christian can be an example, a pattern, a model, only in so far as he is like Christ. To the Corinthians (I Cor. ii, 1) Paul wrote, "Be ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ," or, in other words, "Follow me to the extent that I follow Christ." This is also the thought of Christ's parable of "the vine and the branches." He is the vine, and we are the branches. And only as we abide in Him and He in us can we bring forth good fruit or live a life that is worthy of imitation by any one else.

Filled with the spirit of Christ, the Christian Endeavorer will live a consistent Christian life, be true to his pledge, pray to God daily, and perform faithfully the duties and obligations assigned to him. Only such an Endeavorer can be a model in the real sense. The others are models in the sense that they are "a poor example." The "model" man in the Christian Endeavor anniversary, which is also our consecration service, let us consecrate ourselves as never before to an inward life full of Christ and an outward life ruled by and in Him. Endeavorers to perform faithfully all the obligations that we have taken upon ourselves in becoming members of the Christian Endeavor society. The results will be of inestimable value to ourselves and to the cause which we represent.

*On each Christian Endeavor anni*versary we should as model Endeavorers remember the "memorial fund," which was inaugurated at the fifth anniversary, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Christian Endeavor movement. The writer of these articles in his state convention at Baltimore conscientiously opposed the pledging of the state union definitely to attempt to raise an enormous amount of money for the purpose suggested, and in this one union it was voted down. But he does not oppose the movement itself as a purely voluntary effort to erect a suitable and substantial retirement office building in Boston, so as to perpetuate the international headquarters and to commemorate Christian Endeavor. This is now the openly declared purpose of the officers of the society. I would as a movement all Endeavorers if possible should respond, and what better time could be selected to make a special effort to do something toward this fund than upon an anniversary occasion? One dollar, or more, or less, offered at least be given as a token of thanksgiving for the blessings that Christian Endeavor has brought to us.

In the Heart of South Africa.

In South Africa Christian Endeavor among the Dutch speaking population is very strong. There are only three societies outside the Dutch union, and of these three the Bloemfontein English Endeavorers are the only English speaking group. They number twenty-six all told and for the past year have been supporting a native evangelist in Pondoland, who sends them regular reports of the work.

WIFE BEATER SENTENCED; DUFFY GETS SIXTY DAYS

Martin Duffy, of East Fifth street, was sentenced to serve sixty days in the county jail Tuesday by City Judge Runyon for beating his pretty young wife and his father, who is sixty-five years old.

The elder Mr. Duffy told the story in court this morning of how his son burst the door to the apartments last night and without warning commenced to maltreat his wife and when he interfered the son deliberately struck the aged man, giving him a black eye. Mr. Duffy said that he was sitting quietly by the fire and young Mrs. Duffy was reading at the table in the dining room when the unnatural son and husband careened in under the influence of liquor and started things.

Mrs. Duffy, who was in court, refused to add anything to the statement of her father-in-law. Duffy, in his own defense said he did not mean to do it, but Judge Runyon sized up the case and imposed a sentence which will afford Duffy time to think the matter over.

Our Telephone Monopoly Charges.

In its nature the telephone business must necessarily be a monopoly. It is a public utility that cannot well be duplicated in a community. The man who refuses to pay telephone should be able to connect with all other telephone users, not merely that number who are patrons of one of two or more separate companies. The fact that the telephone is a monopoly is a conclusive reason why it should be strictly supervised and controlled. Without such control the monopoly holds the public completely at its mercy. It can charge extravagant rates, it can give inadequate service, it can treat the public with insolence. The telephone monopoly in New Jersey is without restraint, and, taking advantage of its licenses, it has imposed charges on the public that are excessive and dishonest. Comparisons made with telephone rates charged in other cities of about the same population show that the Newark rates are high above all others, being five times greater than those of Rochester, nearly four times greater than those of Reading, Pa., which has a much smaller population, and nearly three times greater than those of Buffalo and Providence. The people are being squeezed out of their substance by the kinds of combinations that could be held in restraint by proper laws. Here is one form of imposition that can be corrected at once by legislation.—Newark Star.

The House of Mayors.

The conference of all the Mayors in New Jersey called for next Friday by Governor Fort will give an opportunity for an exchange of views on municipal governmental problems. The Governor has evidently been impressed with the conferences of the Chief Executives of the States at Washington, and believes that better understanding will follow a gathering of Mayors. There will probably be much talk regarding uniform legislation for municipal charters. The demand for home rule has been growing apace in the past few years, but there has yet been no substantial basis of agreement as to the best way in which to bring it about.

The announcement is made that some of the things to be considered will be the tax rate and debt limit; a uniform system of accounting, with an audit by the State, and the value of single-headed as against the chiefs to be appointed by the *Mayor with the consent of the Com*mon Council. Uniform legislation of this character would mean a practically uniform charter for all municipalities, allowing much latitude to govern itself according to the views of its inhabitants without being compelled to be going every little while to Trenton to get a special bill passed.

Such a general plan is desirable, but the difficulty will be in the details. In Jersey City, for instance, Mayor Wittpenn is in favor of single-headed departments, with appointive heads. The members of the Legislature from Hudson county, on the other hand, have a record for a resolution as being in favor of the election of all officials now elected and further extension of the elective system. They claim that the appointive plan is undemocratic Those who agree with Mayor Wittpenn hold that the appointive system concentrates responsibility and gives the people the opportunity to fix blame exactly where it belongs. This is the view that has been held in the cities where the commission form of municipal government has been adopted.

There is a somewhat similar divergence of views in Newark. This was shown by the action of the charter revision commission, when it ordered the city law department to draft a new charter. Some of the members favored the single-headed department plan, while others objected strongly. The result was a compromise, and on even the details of that have not yet been completed for submission to the Legislature.—Newark News.

Cash wages instead of checks will be paid the Pennsylvania Railroad operators, station agents and section men this month.

PARK IDEA MUCH ALIVE

Mayor Newton B. Smalley Puts New Interest in the Scheme.

COUNCIL HEARS PROPOSITION.

Park Associates and Property Owners Offer to Donate Land— Borough Asked to Macadamize Streets.

Mayor N. B. Smalley succeeded in resurrecting the plans for a borough park to skirt the winding stream of Green brook between West End avenue and Clinton avenue at the special meeting of the North Plainfield Council Monday, which was called to re-open a discussion as to the advisability of the scheme. All of the councilmen with the exception of Charles L. Nichols were present. The Park Commission was represented by George T. Rogers and H. S. Bonn. Former Councilman Robert Clark, Jr., who is also a member of the commission, was unable to be present owing to illness. A number of interested property owners were also in attendance.

L. D. Ayers represented the Plainfield Park Associates. Mr. Ayers made a proposition to the Council in which he declared that the Associates are willing to deed to the borough about twenty or thirty acres along Green brook, if the Council will agree to macadamize the proposed Park View waveway or other proposed streets to the extent of $1,500.

Mayor Smalley in an address strongly advocated the scheme. "I believe it would be money well spent, "said the mayor. "Today there is not a foot of public park ground in the borough and now I believe is a splendid opportunity to progress in this direction. I believe if the borough will start something in the park line that the city of Plainfield will wake up and do something. If the borough accepts the idea it is my purpose to urge the city to join in a general movement."

In his argument for a park, Mayor Smalley declared that the borough by acquiring the land in question will be able to save more than the expense it does to keep up the mayor explained by a map of the property as prepared by Ayers that the borough would be able to construct a shorter sewer route, instead of the present plans to pipe Greenbrook road. The pipes could then be run, he said, through Rockview or Willow avenues and a lower section of the proposed park site, and the saving on the sewer line would reimburse the borough for the expenses involved in the park project.

In order to get the matter in tangible shape a resolution was adopted by the council empowering, who are willing to donate land for the purpose, submit a proposition to the Park Commission and that the commission draw a contract for the adoption or rejection by the Council. When these formalities are compiled with another special meeting will be held.

Following Mayor Smalley's advocacy of the scheme an informal discussion which lasted two hours resulted in the resolution being adopted. In addition to all of the councilmen talking part William J. Dustfield, George T. Rogers, A. V. E. Vanderhief and Frederick Harrington gave their views on the matter, while Mr. Ayers supplied information from the maps.

ENGLAND'S LACK OF ICE.

Why are we so far behind other countries in the use of ice? asks the London News. In the United States this substance is so much looked upon as one of the necessities of life, towns the ice merchant delivers a large block every day as regularly as the milkman brings milk or the baker bread.

All perishable foods are kept on ice as a matter of course, and an American housewife would be bitterly ashamed if her butter were to appear at table in such a state that it had to be helped with a spoon.

All manner of delicious dishes and beverages, ice creams, frappes, sundaes, are made with ice or frozen milk as a principle ingredient, and not merely in the hot weather but throughout the year Americans consume iced water in fabulous quantities.

It is believed by some that this may be one of the causes of the American tendency of dyspepsia. But it has been observed that English people who have spent a year or two in the United States always regret the ice creams and the iced water. It has been stated, too, that the large consumption of sugar in the various elaborate iced beverages is partly responsible for the relatively small consumption of liquid among Americans, since sugar, as some dietary experts believe, discourages the taste for fermented drink.

Purchased Dr. Titsworth Property.

Clifford D. Manning has purchased the residential property on East Front street, opposite Westervelt avenue, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. T. Albert Runyon, and formerly known as the Dr. Titsworth property. The consideration was about $7,500.

HELD UP AND ROBBED

Joseph Stilzer, of Scotch Plains, Victim of Footpads

Near Fanwood.

PUT UP A GOOD FIGHT.

Money and Gold Watch Taken After Being Overpowered in Struggle by Highwaymen.

Another bold holdup was reported to the local police Monday at about 9 o'clock by Joseph Stilzer, of Scotch Plains. The crime occurred at about 7 o'clock, but the victim was unable, because of injuries to make it known sooner. Mr. Stilzer, who is a traveling salesman while on the road between Westfield and Fanwood on his home was suddenly confronted by three men with drawn revolvers who demanded his money.

Mr. Stilzer undaunted by the menace of firearms objected to being relieved of his possessions in so summary a manner and started in to fight, but he put up a good argument is testified to by the fact that he was severely beaten, but he says there are those who felt the weight of his fists and may possibly be identified by black eyes and other bruises. Fortunately for him they did not use the revolvers except as clubs or he would not have lived to tell the tale.

The men relieved Mr. Stilzer of his money and watch and made a getaway in the direction of this city. The police were notified to be on the lookout for the highwaymen, but up to press time nothing had been seen of any suspicious characters here. The amount of money said to have been taken from Mr. Stilzer is in the neighborhood of a hundred dollars, besides his gold watch.

"PRIVATE SECRETARY" BY AMATEURS MONDAY NEXT.

Tickets are now on sale at the Park Club and Randolph's drug store for the "Private Secretary," which will be produced by amateurs at the Park Club auditorium on the evening of Monday, February 7, at 8:15. Reports are to the effect that rehearsals are progressing to such good end that the finishing touches will be put on at a dress rehearsal on Friday evening of this week, when a few critics will be invited in to view the work of the company.

The "Private Secretary," who gets in wrong from the start, a green and unsophisticated curate, finds himself in so many funny situations that action has to take the place of words. The part is taken by Percy Wishart. He is ably seconded in his efforts by a funny vulgar tailor, a bluff roaring cantankerous uncle from India, and a sentimental spiritualistic aunt. The tailor's part is performed by Charles Kregar, The uncle by dia, and a sentimental spiritualistic aunt by Miss Dorothy Randall. The two fun loving mischeivous young men who get everybody including picted by Howard Roberts and William Little. They are ably seconded by two good looking high spirited girls, who enter into the fun. Miss Hart and Miss Nischwitz will portray them. Other members of the company are Mrs. Stead, a landlady, Mr. Marshland, Knox, a writ server, John, a butler; in the hands respectively of Miss Sinclair, Ira Vail, Arthur Woodruff and Russell Vail.

SCOTCH BREAKFASTS.

Women novelists are prone rather to dress their characters tastefully than to feed them liberally; but Dr. Redgill, in Susan Ferrier's "Destiny," dwells on Scotch breakfasts with a gusto worthy of Peacock, says the London Chronicle.

After proclaiming that Scotland is general is "a perfect mass of rubbish," and the cookery not fit for dogs, he adds: "But the breakfasts! That's what redeems the land, and every county has its own peculiar excellence. In Argyllshire you have the Lochfine herring—fat, luscious and delicious, just out of the water, falling to pieces with its own richness—melting away like butter in your mouth.

In Aberdeenshire you have the Finnan haddock, with a flavor all its own, vastly relishing, just salt enough to be piquant without parching you up with thirst. In Perthshire there is the Tay salmon, kippered, crisp and juicy—a very magnificent morsel—a foetle heavy, but that is very easily counteracted by a teaspoonful of the Atholi whiskey.

In other places you have the exquisite mutton of the country made into hams of a most delicious flavor.

Funeral of Chas. H. Ficke.

The funeral of Charles H. Ficke, who died Saturday night at his home on Duer street, was held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The services were conducted by Rev. John Duerschner, past of St. Peter's Lutheran church. The interment was in the North Plainfield cemetery.

"I hear your brother has become an actor. Is he a success?"

"Oh, yes. He began as a corpse, and now he has already been advanced to the role of a ghost."

PLAINFIELDER LANDS A CONSUL GENERALSHIP

Arthur DeBrigard, of Grant avenue Monday assumed the office of consul general to the United States at New York from the Republic of Colombia, South America. He was officially informed of his appointment by President Gonzales Valencia on Friday by cable.

Mr. DeBrigard served in the same position for six years, or until four years ago, when a change in the administration of Colombia took place. Nearly all his life he has been interested in the political affairs of his country, where he held several official positions.

The re-appointment of Mr. De Brigard is in a large measure due to a petition of leading merchants and importers of New York, who petitioned President Valencia to make the selection.

ENDEAVORERS TO HOLD MASS MEETING, FEB. 17

The local Christian Endeavor Union will hold its next mass meeting at the Temple Baptist church, Thursday evening, February 17, at 8 o'clock. Thus was announced at a meeting of the executive committee held at the Y. M. C. A. Monday. At that meeting the societies of the union will compete for a banner which is awarded to the society that has the highest percentage of its active and associate members present at the meeting. The banner is now held by the Temple Baptist Endeavorers, having been won by them at the last mass meeting.

Rev. Dr. F. W. Johnson, of Washington, Warren county, will be the speaker of the evening. The music will be in charge of Frank Stewart, who was chairman of the music committee of the State Endeavor convention, held here in October. The convention choir with Charles L. Lewis as director, will lead the singing and convention hymns will be used. At this mass meeting the Endeavorers will hear the final report of the treasurer for the State convention, William Latourette, and will dispose of the surplus from the convention.

HER CHILDREN TRUANTS; PUNISHMENT FOR MOTHER

Addie Richardson, colored, will have to pay a fine of eight dollars or sojourn as a guest of the county at Elizabeth for a period of twenty days for not sending her two children to school. Mrs. Richardson was warned the last time on January 14 to send her boy and girl to school or take the consequences.

At that time the excuse was offered that the boy had no shoes and the girl had scalded her feet. An offer of shoes for the boy was disregarded and during the month of January the boy attended school for one session and the girl for six mornings and five afternoons.

Miss Hall, the truant agent, in presenting the case to Judge Runyon this morning said that she had been threatened with violence at the home of the Richardson woman and did not think it safe for her to go there again.

Judge Runyon told the delinquent mother that she had been given every chance to obey the law and he would have to impose the penalty mentioned above.

GIRLS HOLD DANCE AT THE PARISH HOUSE.

Under the auspices of the Girls' Basketball Club, of the Church of the Holy Cross, a dance was given at the parish house, Saturday night, and a reception led by Miss Annie Johnson and Alden E. Moore. The interior of the parish house was attractively decorated with club pennants and banners. Refreshments were served during an intermission about 10 o'clock.

Miss Susan Bennett was chairman of the committee in charge and she was assisted by the Misses Laura Bristol, Ida Hummel, Emma Vanalstyne, Marguerite Shotwell and Edith L. Roberts, who also comprise the basketball team. The patronesses were Mrs. George A. Warner, Miss Iola Moore, Miss Miriam Carmen and Miss E. L. Roberts.

THIS JERSEYMAN HAS NOT SLEPT FOR 20 YRS.

Alonzo Wire, of Hackettstown, who, for twelve years was head of the police department, says that for the last twenty years he has not closed his eyes in sleep. He came near it, he says, several times recently, when he found himself getting drowsy in front of a hot fire, but when he would attempt to take advantage of it and lie down to compose himself for the long sought nap, sleep would flit away, and he would pass the night, as he passed so many others, in wide-eyed wakefulness.

He does not go to bed now, but reclines on a couch in the front room of his home, where, in the darkness he allows his thoughts to wander and confuse themselves as they will in the nearest semblance to sleep, of which he is capable. Neither Wire nor the physicians who have studied his case are able to assign a cause for the condition, nor can they explain why it is he has retained a state of robust health through all the years of insomnia.

The only result, at all noticeable from Wire's long-continued wakefulness has been a loss of weight in the last score of years, amounting to between seventy-five and eighty pounds. He used to weigh nearly 280 pounds, and now tips the scales at barely 200. Wire believes that a stroke of lightning he received thirty years ago might have something to do with his peculiarity, though it happened years before he first suffered with insomnia.

APPROVE SUGGESTED SITES FOR AN ARMORY

Members of the Board of Freeholders, together with General Denis O'Connell Collins, Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan and Lieptenant-Colonel Robert L. Patterson, visited several sites Monday afternoon at Elizabeth for the purpose of investigating their suitability for the proposed new armory which the State will probably erect there at Elizabeth.

Two of the sites, one at South Broad street and Rahway avenue and the other in Walnut street, seem to have met the approval of the party, but it is understood that no decision was reached yesterday regarding them. One of the party stated last night that in all likelihood the matter would be brought to a head today.

As soon as a site is procured Assemblyman Augustus W. Schwartz, of the Committee on Military Affairs, will endeavor to obtain an appropriation for the armory, which will be somewhere in the neighborhood of $100,000. The site to be purchased will not cost more than $25,000.

LOCAL GLOBE TROTTER REACHES SAN FRANCISCO

The Hamburg-American Steamship "Cleveland" with 700 American tourists aboard arrived at San Francisco at 6 o'clock Monday morning completing a trip around the world. In the party are Mr. and Mrs. James F. Buckle, Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Mali and Miss Addie Dietrich, all of this city.

From that port the tourists will come east by rail.

Under a strict interpretation of the customs navigation act each passenger landed here is liable to a fine of $200 for travelling between domestic ports in a vessel flying a foreign flag.

Recently, however, the government virtually agreed to remit the fines which would total $137,000, provided the steamship company would immediately protest to Washington, the amount then being reduced to the nominal sum of $1,000 on the understanding that the company would bring a test suit in the federal courts to determine the applicability of the law to this case.

WHOLE HAMLET MOVES.

The moving microbe has struck Evesboro, a small hamlet about three miles from Moorestown, and there are scarcely a half-dozen families who will not change places this spring. James O'Donnell goes to the Hagan farm, at Blackwood; Walter Garwood will move to the Chew place; Mrs. Hines is booked for the Mitchell farm, George Shepard moves from the Pidgeon farm to the Hammit place, and Bonson, now on the Hammit farm, will move to the Perkins farm, recently bought by Herbert Perkins; Herbert Alcott goes to his father's farm and Isaac Angelow will farm the place on which Mrs. Hines now lives.

SUFFRAGETTES OPEN WAR

The Campaign Against White Slave Traffic in This State Begins.

TO CO-OPERATE IN ALL CITIES.

Women Declare New Jersey to Be in Danger of Invasion—Steps to Prevent It Taken.

A campaign to prevent traffickers in white slaves who are being driven out of New York from beginning operations in this State was begun by the suffragists of New Jersey last Friday afternoon.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the State organization in the Free Public Library the legislative committee, which Mrs. Louis E. Hector, of Bath Beach, Brooklyn, is chairman, was instructed to draw up resolutions calling upon the Legislature to enforce such laws as may be on the statute books curbing the trade, and if these are inadequate to urge the enactment of laws preventing dealers in unfortunate women from carrying on their operations here.

The menace was brought to the attention of the committee by Mrs. Elizabeth P. Bardlett, of Arlington, who declared that New Jersey was in danger of invasion by white slave dealers if New York succeeded in rooting out the evil. She said that steps to prevent this could not be taken too promptly.

The other members of the executive committee agreed with Mrs. Bardlett that the danger was imminent, and the legislative committee was further instructed to have its resolutions ready to present to the Senate and Assembly within a month.

Arrangements were made at the meeting for an equal suffrage rally in the church of the Redeemer on February 24, the principal speaker at which will be the Rev. Anna Howard Shaw, president of the national organization. The committee in charge will be composed of Miss Emma Richards, of this city; Mrs. Ella Ilborn, of Arlington; Mrs. Elizabeth P. Bartlett, of Arlington, and Mrs. Emma Fiske, of East Orange.

Delegates to the national convention in Washington, April 14 to 19, were elected as follows: Mrs. Clara V. Laddey, president of the New Jersey Suffrage Society, of Arlington; Mrs. Amelia Du Bois, of Bayonne; Miss Emma Richards, of this city; Mrs. Ella Ilborn, of Arlington; Mrs. Ida Rilye, of Plainfield; Mrs. Emma Fiske, of East Orange.

At that time a master petition asking Congress to give women the right of franchise in every State will be presented.

New Jersey is expected to furnish 100,000 names to the document. Most of these have already been obtained.

There will be another meeting of the executive committe at the home of Mrs. Chandler Sexton, 172 Cleveland street, Orange, Thursday, when steps will be taken to organize suffrage leagues in cities and towns of the State that now have no organization. Plans will also be discussed for a series of meetings similar to the one in the Church of the Redeemer. Members of the committee hope to obtain the services of Judge Ben Lindsey, of Denver, and Rabbi Wise, of New York.

FITZGERALD'S MANUAL MAKES ITS APPEARANCE

"New Jersey's Valuable Book," Fitzgerald's Manual, has made its appearance in the Legislature for 1910, and the usual clamor for this little volume of information was apparent yesterday when Thomas P. Fitzgerald, the publisher and the dean of newspaper men in New Jersey, arrived at the State House with early copies.

"The Legislative Manual," as it is called, is a mountain of information, and a man who is a legislator without a copy of Fitzgerald's Manual would be like a court room without a law book. It contains the rules of both houses of the Legislature, the various committees, the names of all members and ex-members, biographies of all State officials, outline history of the State, constitution of the United States and New Jersey, biographies of the Governor, United States Senators and Congressmen, as well as legislators. It also contains the Governor's message, the election returns throughout the State, a list of county officers and the names of the legislative correspondents.

Removing Pinnacles.

Workmen are engaged in removing the old pinnacles from the cupola of the First Baptist church, and in their place will be used some other kind of ornamentation. These pinnacles have been in use since 1870 and an examination showed them to be affected by dry rot. They stand about sixteen feet in height and are made of slate and weigh nearly a ton each.

STATE'S CHARITIES HAVE COST $1,739,030

Governor Fort sent a message to the Legislature Monday embodying a report to him from State Auditor William E. Drake, showing the operating expenses of the eleven State charitable institutions for the year ending October 31, 1909, to have been $1,730,039.30, and of the schools under the State Board of Education's supervision to have been $281,189.07. The statement gives minute details.

Under the school money diversion law passed last year, the State schools will this year and hereafter be supported from funds heretofore distributed to local public school districts. The statement shows how much the annual loss to the districts will be.

The two consolidated statements go into every detail of expenditure. The totals for all purposes of the State institutions are: Morris Plains Hospital, $478,776.98; State Hospital at Trenton, $321,461.42; Epileptic Village, $12,592.51; Home for Feeble-Minded Women, $41,206.11; State Home for Girls, $62,555.06; State Home for Boys, $91,287.22; Glen Gardner Sanatorium, $76,151.65; Soldiers' Home at Kearny, $36,742.67; Soldiers' Home at Vineland, $12,592.51; State prison, $257,078.21; Rahway Reformatory, $146,728.23. Grand total for State institutions for 1909, $1,730,039.30.

State Schools—Normal School at Montclair, $52,174.79; Normal School at Trenton, $157,209.58; School for the Deaf at Trenton, $47,690.66; Manual Training School at Bordentown, $17,832.82; Farnum Preparatory School at Beverly, $6,231.21. Grand total, $281,189.07.

NEW JERSEY TO FREE SIX THOUSAND BIRDS

The New York State Fish and Game Commission this spring will liberate in different parts of the State, covering every section so far as possible, 4,000 English pheasants and 2,000 Hungarian grouse. A contract has been made with a firm of importers at Yardley, Pa., for the birds, with the provision that they be delivered at the time set by the State commission.

It has been found that these birds will thrive well in New Jersey. The birds which will be delivered to the State will be a specially selected lot, hardy, and of an age which will permit of their mating and bringing forth young this year. Their cost will be about $6 a pair, but it is expected that from each pair there will spring from eight to a dozen young birds, so that the investment will, therefore, actually represent $6 for every dozen or fifteen birds, which the State will own after the first season the birds have been at large.

Benjamin F. Kuser, president of the commission, will go to New Orleans to attend the national convention of Fish and Game Commissioners.

VOORHEES IS NAMED AT THE JOINT CAUCUS

In the joint caucus last night the Republican House and Senate majorities at Trenton unanimously selected Daniel S. Voorhees as their candidate to succeed himself as State treasurer. Mr. Voorhees was elected today at noon, when the Legislature met in joint session. His term is three years and salary $6,000 per year.

Senator Edward K. Mills, of Morris, the home county of "Uncle Dan," nominated the treasurer for the caucus support as soon as Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of Union, Senate majority leader, had called last night's gathering to order. Senator John D. Prince, of Passaic, seconded the nomination.

Majority Leader Walter E. Edge, of the House, moved that the selection be by unanimous vote and his motion upon being seconded by Assemblyman Thomas Gillen, of Essex, went through.

It is seldom that a great office is filled by acclamation so far as the majority caucus is concerned and the compliment is the more to be appreciated by Mr. Voorhees. After a symposium of praise for the treasurer and his work the caucus adjourned.

In joint session today notaries public whose terms expire this year were selected.

Democratic legislators nominated a man for State treasurer.

Late last night it was decided that City Collector Robert Davis, of Jersey City, would be the choice.

Water Wisdom.

It is better to wear loose clothing in cold weather, because the loose dress encloses a layer of warm air, which the tight dress shuts out. Wear cork or felt socks in the boots during winter months. Cold feet may be as harmful as wet feet. Don't forget that linen sheets are very cold, whereas cotton ones are warm. Cellular sheets are also excellent, being warm but airy at the same time.

The funeral services of Edward F. Randolph were held from the late home on Park avenue, Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, and were largely attended by relatives and friends. There were many floral tributes. Rev. Edwin Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, of which Mr. Randolph was a member for a great many years, conducted the services.

TAXPAYERS FREELY EXPRESS THEIR VIEWS CONCERNING AFFAIRS OF THE MUNICIPALITY

Summoned by the Mayor, Citizens Give Opinions as to What Should Be and Should Not Be Done for the City's Welfare and Mr. Fisk Gives His Own Ideas.

In response to one hundred invitations sent out by Mayor Charles Joel Fisk, representative citizens to the number of about fifty attended an open conference held in the Common Council rooms, Wednesday, when Mr. Fisk presented municipal matters of importance. Mr. Fisk touched on the questions of water supply, sewage and that of securing a site for the erection of a city hall.

Among those who entered into the discussion on the various topics presented were former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, William M. Stillman, Donald McInnes, State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, W. R. Codington and L. B. Woolston.

The Mayor was not pleased with the representation and when he began speaking at 8:30 o'clock there were less than fifty people present. Others came in later.

The Mayor's Remarks.

Mr. Fisk said at the outset that he was disappointed that not more people were present. He did not think it wise to get a fair expression of opinion on the questions he desired to present.

The first question taken up by Mr. Fisk was that concerning water supply. He said that the city's contract with the water company expired in 1912, but that it would be necessary to arrange for the terms this year, if the contract is to be renewed. He then reviewed the work of the water commission, composed of fifteen citizens, explaining that the report of the engineers showed that there was a question regarding the supply of water from the underground source. In dry weather the wells show a marked reduction in supply. The engineers estimated the cost of the plant, but there is no definite idea as to the income.

It was also stated in the report of the commissioners that if another company was formed and a new plant established one would probably draw upon the other. He thought that the company was willing to enter into a fair contract with the city. If condemnation proceedings were taken up with a view to purchasing the present plant, it would mean a large issue of bonds. Mr. Fisk said he would not like to state the purchase price, but it would be at least a half million dollars.

Sewerage Disposal System.

Mr. Fisk then took up the question of sewage disposal, telling the history of the present plant, also the work of a commission appointed to investigate other ways and means for disposal by joining with nearby municipalities. In his opinion the beds should not have been located where they are, although he added that he had voted in favor of the scheme. There was no doubt, he said, that the beds are a nuisance and a detriment to property interests in the West End of the city. He then explained that at first the filtration scheme was adopted and later abandoned because the soil would not permit of its success. Septic tanks were then installed and are now in use, but Mr. Fisk declared that it was only a question of time when other arrangements must be made for taking care of the city sewage. He favored a plan to join with North Plainfield and locate beds out of the city. In a short time it will be necessary to clean the beds at an expense of approximately $6,000, and within the next ten years it will be necessary to expend between $70,000 and $80,000 to make certain improvements.

If the beds are removed from the city, Mr. Fisk said that the present land would be available for building lots and would net the city a big income.

Site for City Hall.

Regarding the proposition to purchase a site and erect a city hall, Mr. Fisk said that yesterday a piece of property was offered the city, where the Friends meeting-house now stands, but later in the day the offer was withdrawn, the first price of about $50,000 being considered "too low." The owners would probably want $60,000.

Mr. Fisk called attention to the fact that the New Jersey Central wants to secure additional land along Third street so that the thoroughfare can be widened to correspond with North avenue. He said that the city has many valuable records and there should be a suitable place to keep them. He then went into an exhaustive discussion of taxation, adding that everyone should be assessed equal. As to personal taxes, he said that it is almost impossible to get at the right figures. Some people pay more than they should and others don't pay enough. This, he said, was due to the fact that proper returns are not made. The assessor is obliged to size things up according to his own judgment and then the property-owner goes before the county board and gets a reduction. The man who has property is constantly trying to get out of paying his taxes.

Some Other Topics.

Mr. Fisk praised the assessors, saying that he believes they are doing their best. As to the general sources of income to support the city government, Mr. Fisk said that the city receives $11,000 from saloon and hotel licenses, not such a large sum, while from outside sources, including franchise tax, the city's revenue amounts to about $32,000. In addition the Common Council assesses certain taxes for police, fire, lighting, maintenance of sewers, etc., for which the Council is responsible.

Reference was also made to the school tax, which is fixed by the board of estimate and the library tax, which is fixed by law. He said that the library directors could ask for $11,500, but had placed the figures at $7,500. He suggested that a place be opened downtown where mechanics and others could go and read, smoke, etc., explaining that not fifty people could be accommodated at the public library reading room.

As to the city's financial condition, Mr. Fisk said that it was very good. At the end of the year there was $52,000 in the bank and an equal sum collectable from 1909 taxes, while the floating indebtedness had been reduced from $84,000 to $22,000. Mr. Fisk then enumerated the expenses required for the various departments this year and said that he could see no reason why the rate should not be lower next year. He explained that the water company is in

DAVID D. SMALLEY DEAD

Death of Well-Known Justice of the Peace Due to Bright's Disease.

IN HIS EIGHTY-THIRD YEAR.

Served Two Terms in the Legislature, Representing Somerset County—Funeral Tuesday.

David D. Smalley, one of the best known citizens in the borough, as well as Somerset county, passed away at 6:30 Friday morning. Death was due to Bright's disease and complications. He had been ill for nine months and was confined to his room for five weeks. The last time he appeared on the streets was on Election Day in November.

Born at Smalleytown August 1, 1827, Mr. Smalley was in his eighty-third year. He was of the fourth generation of the Smalley family that emigrated from England and settled in the Passaic Valley in about 1650. Mr. Smalley was a farmer until 1884 when he gave up his agricultural pursuits and removed to the borough where he has since resided.

In politics Mr. Smalley was a Democrat of the old school and always voted the Jeffersonian ticket. In 1871 and 1872 he was elected to the Legislature representing Somerset county in the Assembly. During his resident in the borough Mr. Smalley was justice of the peace for about fifteen years. He was also a commissioner of deeds and also engaged in the real estate business.

During his career as a farmer Mr. Smalley raised hay in large quantities which he marketed in Newark. He also came from Smalleytown to this city in the early days and sold produce.

Surviving Mr. Smalley are three daughters and one son. The daughters are Mrs. Charles Major, of Jackson avenue, and the Misses Emma and Anna Smalley, of Manning avenue. The son is the Rev. David D. Smalley, of Port Jervis, New York. There are six grandchildren. Mrs. Smalley died four years ago.

The funeral service was held at his late home Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

JERSEY DEMOCRATS TO HONOR JEFFERSON

Ray E. Mayham, of Rahway, president of the Federation of Democratic Clubs of New Jersey, has sent an appeal to all the clubs affiliated with his organization to arrange for the celebration of Thomas Jefferson's birthday, which falls on Wednesday, April 13. The federation promises to provide speakers for such clubs as arrange to celebrate Jefferson's birthday.

Another sign of activity among the New Jersey Democrats comes in the announcement of Job H. Lippincott, chairman of the Democratic State Auxiliary Committee, that a conference of Democrats will be called for an early date in February to devise ways and means for a thorough organization of the State, with a view to party success in the approaching Gubernatorial campaign. The first conference of this kind was held in Trenton December 11 last. One of the principal purposes of this meeting will be to adopt a declaration of principles intended to represent Democratic ideas with relation to the State government.

Mr. Lippincott has sent a copy of the tentative Democratic platform, which was presented to the Trenton conference, to all those who attended that meeting. He requests that any amendments to the text of the proposed declaration be forwarded to the auxiliary committee headquarters, 772 Broad street, Newark, so that they may be assembled and presented to the forthcoming conference in systematic form.

In the Trenton conference the paragraph in the proposed platform which favored the direct election of United States Senators by popular vote stirred up a vigorous discussion, with considerable sentiment expressed against the idea.

SCOTCH PLAINS KICKS OVER TROLLEY SERVICE.

Workmen who live in Scotch Plains and work in the local shops, have complained to the Public Service Railway because the trolley car leaving there at 6:30 in the morning, going west has been discontinued, and they say they can get no satisfactory explanation from the company for its action in losing that particular trip which brought the men to Plainfield in time for the commencing of work at 7 o'clock.

The matter has been referred to the township committee and township counsel Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., has taken the question up with the railway with a view to having the trip restored or some adequate explanation given for its removal.

Sensitive.

"I couldn't get a box."

"Then we shall have to sit in the orchestra."

"I'm afraid so, my dear. Try it once. You can get just as poor a view of the stage if you sit sidewise."

EDWARD F. RANDOLPH, AGED 70 YEARS, DEAD

Edward F. Randolph, aged 70 years, of 1216 Park avenue, one of the best known residents and a prominent member of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, died Friday morning at Muhlenberg Hospital, following a short illness. His death was due to a kink in the intestines which developed a day or two ago. Mr. Randolph's wife has been ill for some time with heart trouble and her condition was reported today as being no better.

Mr. Randolph was born in this city and always lived here. He was employed at the Spicer Universal Joint Company's works on Madison avenue. He had been a member of the Seventh-Day Baptist church for many years and active in the work there. He was a man of strong Christian character and esteemed by all who knew him. He is survived by a wife and one daughter, Mrs. Frank Kellogg.

100 CARS ORDERED; WHERE DO THEY GO?

A contract for the one hundred new trolley cars of the latest type recently authorized by the Public Service Corporation has been placed with the Cincinnati Car Company. A representative of the latter concern was in Newark Thursday completing the details of the order and getting the final data for the specifications for the new vehicles, including the time when deliveries are to be made.

Contracts have also been entered into by the Public Service for a large addition to the Marion Power Station in Jersey City. A building 78x100 feet in dimensions and 77 feet high is to be added to the present structure. The addition will provide for 18,000 kilowatts extra capacity, which is equivalent to about 24,000 horse power of current for moving the street cars or furnishing light and power.

The E. Sanford company is already at work on the foundation work which consists of concrete on piling and the Hedden Construction Company will erect the building of brick and steel.

COUNTY W.C.T.U. ATTACK TEMPERANCE TEXT BOOK

The Union County W. C. T. U. executive meeting was held Thursday at the home of Mrs. Edward Wheeler, of Prospect street, Elizabeth, when several matters of considerable interest was taken up. A book entitled "A Text Book of True Temperance," published by the Hygeia company, was presented for inspection by Mrs. Peter H. Bennett, of this city, and received the condemnation of the women.

The spring institute will be held at Westfield in April, when among other topics to be discussed will be that of "Suffrage," "Scientific Temperance Instruction," and the "Loyal Temperance Legion," with a mattress sisters' silver medal contest in the evening.

Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson reported a new union for Plainfield, and that an L. T. L. will be organized at Cranford on February 4. Judge Vail was commended for recent saloon restrictions and Senators Kean and Briggs are to receive petitions favoring reform measures. The White Ribbon News, of New Jersey, a paper recently started by the State organization, was given attention and subscriptions were received.

BLACK HAND SCARE SCHOOL BOYS' PRANK

Scotch Plains manages once in a while to get into the lime light and this time succeeds with a "black hand" scare. Robert Jansen, the young son of Frank Jansen, of Park avenue, was the scared one and perhaps the perpetrators of the joke, if such it was, will be glad to know that if their identity were known they would receive the punishment they deserve for perpetrating it.

Master Jansen received a note duly signed with the symbols of the black hand demanding $5 which was to be deposited in a certain spot near the Episcopal church and failing to do so was threatened with kidnaping. Robert failed to make the required deposit and is still running around as usual. The affair is considered a prank of schoolmates, but considering the woes upon the black hand are so busy in the surrounding country it takes on a serious aspect and ought not to be repeated.

GATHERING OF M. E. FOLK

Dinner Marks Social Union of the Three Local Congregations.

DR. CARROLL TOASTMASTER.

Speeches Made by Ministers and Laymen—One Hundred Men and Women at the Feast.

For the purpose of forming a religious social union of the members of the three local Methodist churches a banquet was held in Vincent chapel of the First M. E. church Thursday. More than one hundred men and women from the First M. E., Monroe Avenue and Grace M. E. churches, attended the affair and enjoyed the excellent dinner and the fine addresses afterward. The idea was suggested by Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, district superintendent of the Elizabeth district, of the Newark Conference, and that much good will result is not doubted by those present.

After two hours was spent in enjoying the dinner, the speechmaking began. Dr. H. K. Carroll, of the borough, was the toastmaster, and he made a good one. In his introductory remarks he referred to Farmer Anderson, Gardiner Shoop and Truckman Kemble and about each he made a humorous remark, in speaking of their particular field of work.

Dr. Carroll praised Methodism in general and said that he was not only proud that he had been born an American, but that he was also a Methodist, a member of a denomination that holds a wide influence throughout the world. He referred to the strength of the denomination in the city and borough, of the harmony existing among the members and of the possibilities for greater usefulness in the work for the Lord.

There were six speakers in all, the three local pastors, Rev. James S. Swackhamer and W. J. Conroy and Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph. The assigned topic for the evening was "What Three Things Does Our Church Need?"

Rev. Dr. F. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, was the first speaker. He said that it was a rather risky thing to say what three things his church was in need of. Some might turn it about and suggest "What Do the Preachers Need?"

The speaker said that every Methodist Episcopal church is a unique church, and first, it needs a positive experience of the New Birth as taught by Nicodemus and enjoyed by St. Paul. In the second place, it needs a belief in the Holy Scriptures as interpreted by the twenty-five articles of religion as taught by the church, and thirdly, loyalty to the church as recorded in the Book of the Disciples. Then it will be possible for us at yore, to wear the crown and wave the palm.

In telling what three things his church needs, Pastor Shoop, of Grace church, said that his son, Hamilton, suggested arithmetic, biology and geography, which thought was not so bad. The first would help one to count their blessings, the second would help one to cultivate life in the fullest, highest and best sense, and the third would give the world as a whole.

Continuing, Mr. Shoop said:

"The three things needed for the highest efficiency of Grace church, are first, we need a vital sense of personal responsibility on the part of the membership of the church. We fall entirely short of knowing aside of indifference, irresponsibility and spiritual desuetude; with a glorious confederation of all the vital forces of the church for the triumph of the Kingdom of God.

"Secondly, I think Grace church need the assurance borne in upon them that the work of the Kingdom of God is a man's job. Our women of Grace church, God bless them, are high minded, consecrated and active and loyal. But the church must have for her highest efficiency, the broad statesmanship and business acumen, the high, grand note of earnest enthusiasm, the spirit of intelligent daring and the masculine virility.

"In asking men to consecrate their powers to the work of the church we are not taking them from the manly tasks of which they are worthy, to place in their hands the distaff! No! No! The church demands men for a man's work. The church needs the rich, cultured mulality of a Paul; the bold daring and fiery fervor of a Savonarola; the Dutch determination and God-like steadfastness of a Luther; the evangelistic grace and spiritual wealth of a Fletcher; the God, John Wesley, the heroic zeal and apostolic fortitude of an Asbury. All five of these types are hiding in the men of Grace church.

"The supreme need of Grace church is the delicious vision and sense of the gowing fire of evangelism re-kindled upon our altar. We need to witness with our own eyes the glorious triumph of the Christ in the conversion of penitent souls.

"'Tis not a cause of slight import the Master's work demands; but what might fill an angel's heart and filled the Saviour's hands."

Rev. Charles S. Kemble, the next speaker, gave as the three needs of his church, first, more people like it has at present; secondly, larger activity, and thirdly, an inspiring preacher to do his best. He laid great stress on the importance of the people encouraging the preacher to larger and better things, to preaching eloquent sermons, to encouraging him to study and research, to be a prophet and not a scribe. He said that if the people wanted short sermons they would get them, and in this connection he said that a friend of his declined to attend the dinner, because the meal might be worth a dollar, but it would not be like the merchants' association dinner where they had eloquent addresses. He explained that the man was a member of some other church.

"Methodist Unity" was a theme chosen by S. S. Swackhamer, and after he spent several minutes in a humorous vein, during which he had his audience convulsed with laughter, he became more serious and made a strong appeal to those present as well as the church in general to protest against the efforts being made at Trenton to secularize the Sabbath. He hoped all would rise in indignation and labor to protest.

William J. Conroy, of Grace church, the second layman to speak, said that the three things needed by the church was first, consecrated men, secondly, consecrated women and thirdly, consecrated children. He spoke of the great part the church has in caring for the children through the Sunday school and also deplored the tendency to desecrate the Sabbath. He said that he understood that the auto garages are open there all day Sunday and that it is the most profitable for the owners. He did not know whether it was against the law or not.

The last speaker was Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, who spoke of the advantage of the church people getting together. He also referred to the fact that Methodism is the only Methodist church, that its great progress was due to Providential leading. He spoke of the great development of the church in modern mission work, of the grand work being done by the Sunday-schools and added that he did not believe that the members half realized what is being done by the church.

Dr. Randolph said that he thought the office of pastor to be one of the highest in the church, one he would not swap for the place of bishop. He said that his heart went out to all pastors, knowing their troubles, but in his opinion there was nothing that gave greater satisfaction than to be with God on the job working for His Kingdom. He concluded his remarks with words of praise for his church and the great work she is doing.

The affair was brought to an end with the singing of "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," and the pronouncing of the benediction by Rev. W. F. Randolph, brother of Dr. D. B. F. Randolph.

The dinner was in charge of a committe comprising representatives from all three churches, of which Maurice E. McGrath was the efficient chairman.

ST. MARY'S ALUMNAE EUCHRE AND DANCE

Socially and financially the euchre and dance given by the Mount St. Mary's Alumnae Association Thursday at the Park Club was a great success Fully three hundred people were present. In the euchre preceding the dance forty-two tables were in use. The play was spirited and at the conclusion of the cards awards were made to scorers of the greatest number of points among the men and women playing. Presents were received by Miss Ethel Hudson, Mrs. Nash, Miss Anna McCullough, Miss Anna Daley, Mrs. C. Dineen, Mrs. C. Bowlby, Miss Bell Smith, Mrs. Dr. Smith, Mrs. W. J. Hudson, Miss Irene Duchesne, Louis Pentigill, William Hickey and others

The dancing, however, proved to be the feature of a wholly enjoyable evening. Parubeck's orchestra furnished the music for the affair, which continued until midnight. Refreshments were served.

The committe in charge was composed of Miss Irene Duchesne, chairman; Miss Theresa Snyder and Miss Ethel Chamberlain. They were ably assisted by Miss Kathryn Reddington, Mrs. A. G. Slevin, Mrs. A. Slevin, Mrs. Hillaire Blatz, Miss Lorette Nolen, Mile. Jaccard and Messrs. Andrew Kenney, Arthur Cannon, M. T. Moynihan, Leo Kenney and Louis De Brigard.

The dance was attended by friends from New York, Newark, Elizabeth, Somerville, Westfield, Raritan, Cranford, South Plainfield Fanwood Roselle, Bound Brook, Dunellen, Watchung and this city.

A More Appropriate Name.

Mr. Henpeck had hesitated a long time about doing this bold thing, but he felt that now was the time or never, says The Catholic Standard and Times.

"Dear," he said in a very timid voice, "I wish you wouldn't call me 'Leo' any more."

"Why not?" demanded his wife, explosively. "'Leo' is your given name."

"I know, my dear, but it makes my friends laugh when you call me that. I was thinking you might call me 'Job,' just for a pet name."

SANG GOOD OLD SONGS

Joseph Mc Intyre's Concert Heard by an Appreciative Audience.

THE ENCORES WERE FREQUENT.

Mrs. Gould, Miss Hussey, Dr. Dufft, Mme. David and Mr. McIntyre the Artists— The Program.

Never was there a better illustration of the popularity of old melodies than the enthusiasm evoked at the Old Favorite Song concert, given Thursday under the auspices of Joseph McIntyre at the High School auditorium. Encore after encore repeated the artists, who in their repertoire included those old songs which we associate with our earliest childhood, and which like old wine, seemingly improves with age. It was a brilliant, fashionable and appreciative audience which assembled at the pretty auditorium and throwing off that restraint so much in vogue among smart folk of today, entered so thoroughly into the zest of the songfest that the artists and their critics were soon in perfect harmony.

Two artists new to Plainfield made their debut here last night, Miss Ada Hussey, contralto, and Mme. David, harpist, added fresh laurels to their wreaths and each was accorded a warm welcome and assured of a cordial greeting should they consent to sing on a return visit. Mrs. Edith Chapman Goold, soprano; Mr. John Young, tenor, and Dr. Carl Dufft, baritone, all have been heard here before and all three are prime favorites. Each was in splendid voice and then too, the songs they selected appealed strangely to their audience.

The first number, a quartet, "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming," was splendidly rendered, and in consequence vociferously encored. Mrs. Goold was the first soloist of the evening and all of her songs were exquisitely sung. Both Kathleen Mavourneen and Robin Adair brought forth thunderous applause, and it was difficult to judge which was the more popular.

The duet, "Beware, Beware, She's Fooling Thee," sung by Mr. Young and Dr. Dufft, was immensely popular, and proved a splendid medium for demonstrating the tone worth of these two finished artists

Miss Hussey's group of three songs followed and the reception accorded each must have been gratifying to this artist, who has won many friends in the larger cities of the east and west. Mme. David came next on the program and she too played with a brilliance of execution that won for her round after round of hearty applause.

Mr. Young sang quite as delightfully as at yore, and that he is firmly established in the affections of Plainfield's musical visitories was attested by the reception accorded him.

In the opinion of many no musical season in Plainfield is complete without one or more appearances here of Dr. Dufft. Last night this most sterling artists was in capital voice, and two of the group of three songs he sang, "Beware, of All Those Endowing Young Charms," and "Heart Bowed Down" alone were worth the price of admission. Mrs. Goold and Miss Hussey in their duet, "See the Pale Moon," sang charmingly and the "Good Night," quartet from Martha, was a fitting climax to a delightful evening in harmony's realm. The program follows:

MEAT BOYCOTT CONTINUES; DECREASED SALES HERE

Local butchers report a big falling off in the sales of meat during the past two weeks. According to one prominent merchant his sales in that time has decreased between 33 and 50 per cent., the biggest slump being noticeable during the present week.

All of the markets report a shrinkage in sales. Interviews with about half a dozen of downtown dealers indicate that sales have decreased one-third on an average. This is evident that hundreds of Plainfielders are determined to go without meat diet until the prices take a drop.

While the sale of meat has been on the decline, the sales of fish have correspondingly increased. Grocers also report larger sales in canned goods than ever before which all goes to show that the populace would fare well in case of a meat famine.

In Essex county the boycott is on in earnest. Last night the members of the Essex Trades Council at their meeting in Newark voted to abstain from eating meat as much as possible until such time as the prices again reach reasonable figures.

The same conditions apply to Elizabeth in which city the butchers report a big falling off in sales.

To See Them All.

Lady (in modern book store)—I wish to see all of the latest books.

Salesman — Very well, madam. Will you kindly step on board this scenic railway?—Life.

LEAVES FOR ARABIA TO BE A MISSIONARY

Dr. Paul Wilberforce Harrison, Trinity Reformed's missionary to Arabia, is now on the way to his distant post. Dr. Harrison sailed at 11 Saturday morning on the steamship Berlin, of the North German Llyod Line from Hoboken, and is due to reach Bombay in six to eight weeks time. He made his departure from this city on the 7:55 a. m. train and a goodly number of the congregation were at the station bade Dr. Harrison goodbye and wished him Godspeed. The missionary was accompanied on the steamship by the Rev. John Y. Brock, Demetrie Farhart and Mr. French.

Dr. Harrison was formally consecrated to the missionary cause at an impressive service at Trinity Reformed church last night. The service was also of a farewell character and despite the storm there was a large number of members out to extend farewell greetings to their missionary.

It was the intention of the Rev. Dr. Zwemer to be present at the service but he was obliged to hasten to the bedside of his dying mother in the west.

The charge was given Dr. Harrison by the Rev. Dr. J. Preston Searle, of Rutgers College, and the prayer of consecration was offered by the pastor, Rev. John Y. Brock. Dr. Searle's address to Dr. Harrison was of an advisory character.

A congratulatory address to the congregation was delivered by the Rev. Stuart Nye Hutchison, representing the Newark Classis. "This church has become a world of power," said Dr. Hutchison. "A few years ago all of us maybe, did not believe in the imperialistic policy of President McKinley and Congress on the Philippine Island question, but this is the brand of imperialism we all believe in. Statistics show that churches that have not been missionary churches have been dead churches.

"Women," continued Dr. Hutchison, "spend more money for paper flowers every year than is expended for missionaries." The speaker also made reference to the big amount of money spent for tobacco by men. If tobacco money was set aside for the missionary causes a huge amount of good could be accomplished, said Dr. Hutchison.

The liberality of giving was also touched on by the speaker. He related a few interesting incidents which came under his personal observations where the humble give more in proportion to missionary and church work than the rich. In emphasizing that point the speaker declared: "Many of the rich down in Arabia will be very poor in heaven, and many of the poor down here will find themselves rich in heaven."

Greetings from Arabia were extended to the congregation by the Rev. F. J. Barny, a missionary, who is home in America on a furlough. Mr. Barney declared that the Arabians are sure to extend a warm welcome to Dr. Harrison as a medical man. People in Arabia want the American missionary and thye will be glad to greet Trinity's representative.

Dr. Harrison when he departed this morning took along with him a mail bag which was presented to him. In the bag were between sixty and seventy letters. Mrs. William A. Woodruff had this matter in charge.

Dr. Harrison was born in Nebraska, where he received his secondary education and graduated from the old Central University. For the last two years he has been house physician in the Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston. Dr. Harrison's church affiliations have been with the Congregational and Presbyterian denominations.

John C. Thom will be the manager of the local branch.

PRINTERS' ANNUAL BALL

Local Typographical Union's Dance Attended by Several Hundred.

MANY FROM OTHER TOWNS.

C. W. Francisco Starts the Festivities—Suhr's Orchestra Furnishes the Music—At Saengerbund Hall.

Plainfield Typographical Union, No. 399, gave the first ball in its history Friday night in Saengerbund Hall, North Plainfield, and if the attendance can be used as a criterion of the future of this organization it is rosy. More than three hundred couples danced to the music of Suhr's Imperial orchestra and the festivities were kept up until about half-past two this morning.

Representatives from other unions were present from Newark, New Brunswick, Somerville, Bound Brook, Elizabeth and New York and they all voted the ball one of the finest affairs of the season. An unique program was commented upon as a novelty. Promptly at 9 o'clock Chairman Clarence Francisco started the ball with a two-step and from then on it was one merry round of pleasure for the participants. Nothing occurred to mar the pleasure of the night. Refreshments were served during the evening.

The union will entertain the New Jersey State Printer League in this city on the third Sunday in April at which time arrangements will probably be made for an excursion to take place sometime during the summer. Financially the ball was a great success and the union is to be congratulated.

The committee in charge of the ball were: C. W. Francisco, chairman; M. A. Nichols and Frazes Charlesmagne Putnam. The officers are: President, Robert Emmett Scott; vice-president, C. A. Nichols; secretary-treasurer, H. W. Thomas, and sergeant-at-arms, C. W. Francisco.

DOANE HAS EXCITING VISIT TO PASSAIC

Fire Chief T. O. Doane, while on a visit to Passaic Thursday, for the purpose of giving information to the officials of that city, relative to the reorganized Passaic department, figured in an exciting runaway, but luckily he escaped injury.

While making a tour of the city, Chief Doane occupied a seat in Chief Decker's runabout. While crossing the Passaic river bridge a clip in one of the shafts of the vehicle broke and frightened the animal. The two officials were carried across the bridge at a breakneck rate of speed and when the horse finally was overdumped into a pile of barrels. The horse, which is one of the prize animals in the Passaic department, was considerably cut.

The thrills of the runaway, how ever, did not prevent Chief Doane from handing out some valuable pointers to the Passaic officials. In addition to the local chief the consultation board was made up of Chief Conway, of Jersey City; Chief Ashley, of Newark; Mayor Burd W. Spencer and the members of the Passaic Councilmanic committee.

During the day the visitors were entertained at General Spencer's home at dinner. A conference was held at which the four chiefs compared their ideas and the recommendations will be presented to the Common Council of that city, and it is possible that a department on the lines of the local system will be adopted.

On his visit to Passaic Chief Doane was warmly greeted by Assistant Chief Walter Gibson, who is a former Plainfield boy.

AT THE HIPPODROME.

The New York Hippodrome presents its several spectacles including the gorgeous Jewel Ballet and many scenic surprises. Amongst the latter may be mentioned the moonlit panorama of New York Harbor; the Cave of Gems; the Crystal Palace in the centre of the earth; a Maori Village introducing the tribe of wary natives in the wild "Hakas." The easlier part of the program includes a colossal circus made up of ten splendid arenic features including famous equestrians, clever equilibrists, acrobats, performing ponies and a caravan of comical clowns to amuse the children. An average of 10,000 people a day attend the gigantic shows at New York's biggest playhouse.

Case of Capacity.

Hopkinson Smith tells the story of the Southern slave who diagnosed the illness in her master's home.

"It's a case of too much watermelon," she said.

Thereupon she was informed with great dignity that there could be no such thing as "too much watermelon."

"Well," she retorted, "then there ain't enough boy."—Cleveland Leader.

FACES BIGAMY CHARGE

Mrs. Clarence Bunnell Causes Husband's Arrest on Serious Charge.

HE STICKS TO WIFE NO. TWO.

Printer Maintained Two Homes in Same Block in New York—

To Be Tried at Somerville.

"I love my wife, but I love this other woman more," said Clarence Bunnell, a printer, of 108 Fulton street, New York, when his wife and two sons and a mutual friend confronted him and the woman with whom he claims he has been married in North Plainfield August 1 last.

Bunnell came here on the date mentioned and was married by Justice Clark, and it is alleged that he represented himself as a single man. County Detective Owen Owens went to Trenton today to obtain a requisition from Governor Fort on Governor Hughes, of New York, for the extradition of Bunnell and he will be arraigned in the Somerset County Court at Somerville.

Although Bunnell is accused of having committed the crime on August 1, 1909, his relations with the other woman were not discovered until December 31, and then quite accidentally. Mrs. Bunnell No. 1, feeling lonesome went to her husband's office and finding him alone sat chatting with him for a while, planning for the good time they would have together on New Years' Day. When he had paid off his help he started home with his wife and on arriving within a block of their house Mrs. Bunnell thought something which she wanted from the drug store.

He agreed to wait for her in an adjacent barber shop as he needed a shave so she went to the corner and he went—not to the barber shop, but to a basement over a fruit store next door. When Mrs. Bunnell could not find him at the barber's she went into the fruit store thinking her husband might have gone there to purchase some fruit for the morrow. The fruiterer asked her to describe her husband and immediately said that a man answering that description lived upstairs.

Mrs. Bunnell ascended to the second floor and after her knock was confronted by a woman who asked "What do you want here?" Mrs. Bunnell replied "my husband," of whom she had caught a glimpse through the half open door. Then and there ensued claim and counterclaim for the over-married man, and the opening remark of this story was proved to the dishay of the rightful wife.

On returning to her home, which she did immediately, Mrs. Bunnell acquainted her two sons with the facts of their father's dedfection from his marital duties and the three with a friend of the family repaired to the home of the second wife and there Mrs. Bunnell offered to forgive her husband if he would return to her after making a settlement of a lump sum of money on the other woman. This Bunnell refused to do.

Mrs. Bunnell then took the matter up with the prosecutor of Hudson county, thinking it was in that county the marriage had been performed. Asst. Prosecutor McCarthy, of Hudson county advised her to consult Chief Weiss with the result that upon his advice Mrs. Bunnell swore out a warrant which was issued by Recorder Charles M. Dolliver, and Bunnell was arrested in New York Saturday.

The woman with whom Bunnell has become infatuated is Mathelile Lech, of North Plainfield township.

SNATCHED POCKETBOOK FROM A YOUNG WOMAN

Two youths on upper Somerset street, early Saturday night, snatched a pocketbook from Miss Reed, the eighteen-year-old daughter of Aaron Reed, of 10 Fritz place, as the young woman was returning home from town on a shopping trip, in company with her fifteen-year-old brother.

Miss Reed and her brother were walking and passed two boys apparently about sixteen or seventeen years old. As she was going ahead one of the boys snatched the handbag and with his pal dashed down Somerset street, and disappeared at Coddington avenue.

The young woman screamed for help but before assistance came the young highwaymen were off with their booty which consisted of about two dollars in change. Late in the evening Chief Weiss arrested two boys on suspicion. After searching them at the police station he decided they were not guilty and released them.

Co. K's Annual Inspection.

The annual inspection of Co. K will be held on February 21, under the direction of a regular army officer. The boys are putting in lots of hard work in preparation for the event.

JEFFERY PROVES CASE FOR WOMAN PLAINTIFF

William Jeffery, figured as the principal witness in an unusual case in the Fifth Municipal District Court in New York on Friday. About seven years ago Jeffery, through Joseph Essig, of New York, borrowed $500 from Mary Cambeis, also of New York. Jeffery gave a note for the amount and when it matured, Essig came out to this city, and secured the payment from Jeffery.

According to the testimony in the case Essig paid $300 to Mrs. Cambeis, telling her that Jeffery had gone to Europe, and would pay the remaining $200 when he returned. Mrs. Cambeis never heard anything from Jeffery, but while reading a newspaper one day, she noticed his name in a story sent out from this city.

She corresponded with Mr. Jeffery and he informed her that he was the man who borrowed the $500, explaining at the time, that he had repaid the money to Essig. Mrs. Cambeis, on becoming acquainted with the true facts in the case, instituted suit against Essig for the recovery of the $200.

Essig put up the claim that the debt was outlawed, but the court ordered that he pay the money to Mrs. Cambeis or go to jail. Mr. Jeffery, as the main witness, was present at the proceedings and offered in evidence the receipted note.

MR. BERGEN DECLINES $300 MONTH OFFERED

Attorney Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth, general counsel of the Public Service Corporation, who was appointed by Governor Fort as a member of the commission to codify the New Jersey statutes, has announced that it will be impossible for him to accept the position. Mr. Bergen explains that the pressure of other business will not allow him to give the commission work the attention it deserves and he also suggests that his position as a corporation lawyer would make it difficult for him to act on a commission intended to take up such revisions as are contemplated. The appointment with its monthly salary of $300 is still in the air as a result of Mr. Bergen's withdrawal.

Mr. Bergen was selected by the Governor to succeed Alan H. Strong, of New Brunswick, who resigned. George L. Record was also named to fill the vacancy left by the late George T. Werts. The third member of the commission is County Counsel Joseph L. Munn, of Newark.

The commission was appointed several years ago, but has made no report to the Legislature. Last year a big batch of bills, prepared by the commission and each revising various statutes was presented by former Assemblyman Young, of Essex, but were withdrawn when former Assemblyman William P. Martin criticised several of the proposed acts. It was suggested by Mr. Martin that action be taken on the bills until they had been fully and carefully gone over. As they were introduced during the closing hours of the session there was no time for this and Mr. Young withdrew them.

PLAINFIELDERS DRAWN FOR PETIT JURY DUTY

Well-known men were selected in the Union county court Monday for service on the petit jury, beginning next Monday. Among the Plainfielders chosen are Howard A. Colby, brother of former State Senator Everett Colby, who resides on Everett avenue; George H. Chapman, of West Seventh street; Lewis G. Timpson, of Hillside avenue, while Lewis DeW. Wiltse, the well-known baseball pitcher, was also chosen for duty.

Other Plainfielders selected today are Andrew G. Carpenter, Arthur Embury Smith, Charles Arnold, Frank Cullen and William Startup. Mr. Wiltse, although he has been making his home here, has not been in the city for sometime and it is doubtful whether he can be secured for jury duty.

Party for Miss Dow.

A party was given in honor of Miss Nellie Dow, of Somerset street, Saturday night. It was arranged by Mrs. Sparks, of Watchung avenue. There were guests from Newark, Elizabeth and Philadelphia. Dancing and games were the feature of the evening. About fifty guests were present. Music was furnished by Suhr's orchestra.

Health Inspectors Active.

Borough health inspectors visited all the bakeries in the borough yesterday and posted signs showing the rules and regulations of the department. The inspectors are also planning to visit butcher shops and all places where food supplies are sold.

SCHOOL'S BALANCE WOULD RUN STATE

Declaring that "as no former time have our school administrative forces had so large a sum placed at their disposal," and contending there is no truth in the reports of extravagance, State Superintendent of Public Instruction Baxter at Trenton, has issued a report in which he seeks to show that the schools of the State are managed economically.

"The total receipts for the year just passed were $21,964,419.88," he says, "and the total amount expended was $17,227,331.78, leaving a net balance of $4,737,088.10.

"So large a balance," he continues, 'proves the provident tendencies of the local boards of education and discredits the foresight of those who prophesied an era of 'reckless extravagance.'"

Without noting the criticisms that the State is poor while the school forces are rich and have on hand almost as much as it would cost to run the State government for a year, Mr. Baxter says:

"Of the $17,227,331.78, covering all classes of outlay, $11,583,201.30 was used for 'current expenses.'"

He then goes on to say that "current expenses" is the term which applies to the running of schools, including all salaries, car fare of students in the sparsely settled districts, etc.

Going into figures, Mr. Baxter says that if this sum which was spent for "current expenses" of the schools were divided by 424,534, the number of enrolled school children, the per capita expenditure for education would be $27.28. This expenditure divided by 309,661, the daily average of attendance, gives $27.40. Mr. Baxter says that last example is misleading except for the purposes of comparison.

Defending the course of study, Mr. Baxter says "we teach the three R's better than the old teachers, and much else that the youth of today needs to know."

The second largest item of expenditure, $4,996,877.38, was for buildings and repairs. Mr. Baxter says the seating capacity of the Jersey schools is 426,719, an increase of 21,422 over the previous year.

HIS SECOND IN SERIES ON 'WHERE ARE THE DEAD'

Continuing his series of sermons on the theme, "Where Are the Dead?" Rev. John Y. Brook, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, Sunday night took for his text Act 2: 27, and discussed at length the meaning of Christ's descent into Hades. Pastor Brook said that it was important to hold correct views on this subject, for some say that it teaches that there is a probation after death. Continuing Mr. Brook said:

"In one passage we are told that Christ at His death, immediately descended into hell. He explained that the phrase in the Apostle's creed, "He descended into hell," was found in the original Apostle's creed, but was later inserted by some church father and consequently the ambiguity in the creed is explained.

"Did our Lord really go to hell? Peter in his pentecostal sermon quotes some verses from the sixteenth Psalm and applies them to Christ and shows that these words refer to our Lord. Various theories have been advanced as to the explanation of these words. Calvin entertained the view that Christ actually went to the place of everlasting punishment as a part of His atoning work and that He had to bear all that sinners would have borne. Others state that He went down to the place of punishment to proclaim to the archangel of that place that His power was gone. Others have the idea that Christ went to the place of atonement to preach to the inhabitants.

"Was Christ really in hell, the place of atonement? To answer that question we must examine carefully the word translated hell in the text. In the American revised version is reads, 'Thou wilt not leave my soul in hades,' and in the seventeenth Psalm from which Peter quotes, it reads, 'Thou wilt not leave my soul in Sheol.' Now these two terms are simply original Scripture words—Greek words—left untranslated and transferred—to the English version. The word Sheol does not necessarily mean hell, the place of torment."

Numerous passages were quoted from Genesis, from Job and from David, proving that the word Sheol did not always mean the place of torment. Sheol, the pastor said, simply means the unseen world where departed spirits dwell and this world has two departments, and only two; a place for the just and the unjust. The soul of Jesus, when He died went to the unseen world not to the dreary portion of eternal torment, but to that other portion where all souls separated from the body are at peace with Christ, which is Heaven.

"There is no glimpse of probation after death in the Scriptures," said Mr. Brook. "Our destiny is sealed in this life. As the tree falls so will it lie."

The pastor will preach next Sunday night on the subject, "Where is Heaven?"

FIRST BRONZE STATUE CAST IN THIS CITY

The first bronze statue ever cast in this city is now on exhibition at the Hinman Bronze Works, 710 East Seventh street. It is an imposing work of art and was made for the L. L. Manning Marble Works to be used on a monument for the late P. V. Clark, of Newark.

In addition to this interesting casting there is also on exhibition a variety of beautiful castings, chief among which is a massive ornamental solid door for the Leeds Mausoleum at Woodlawn cemetery, New York. The statue weighs 1,300 pounds and the door more than half a ton. The public is welcome to inspect the products of the Hinman concern.

UNIFORM LAWS IDEA GAINING, BERGEN THINKS

Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth, who for fourteen years has represented the State in the fight which for twenty years has been waged for uniform State laws, is enthusiastic over the progress of the movement.

Mr. Bergen attended in Washington last week the conference held by representatives of forty States, including the governors of thirty of them, for the purpose of arousing interest in the movement. The convention lasted three days, and two sessions were held each day. The object of the gathering was not to take any definite action in the matter, but merely to rouse public interest. There have been nineteen previous conventions, but not one of them was as large or as enthusiastic as that which has just come to a close.

The object of the movement is to obtain laws governing certain matters of a civil nature rather than criminal. The question of divorce has been dealt with very sparingly, for, Mr. Bergen says, it is a matter upon which there is such a wide divergence of opinion that it has been deemed best to give it little attention.

The movement was started twenty years ago among the lawyers, but owing to the apathy of the public, there were few results until a few years ago. That the movement has not been fruitless is evidenced by the fact that in thirty-six States of the Union the same laws govern negotiable instruments, and in many the law is the same regarding sales, bills and receipts.

Many bills have been drawn up, the greatest care being used in their preparation, but because the public has not realized the importance of the proposition in many cases the labor of the greatest legal authorities in the country has been wasted.

"What we want," said Mr. Bergen last night, "is to have the public at large brought to the realization of what uniform law means to them, as well as to the lawyer. For instance, merchandise is shipped from New Jersey to California. While passing through each State it is governed by the laws of that State. How many times little if the consignment reaches its destination without any mishap, but should it be lost or misplaced, it depends on the laws of the State in which this happens what procedure will have to be taken in order to adjust matters. Yes, I look forward to the time when the movement for uniform law shall have been entirely consummated."

Besides Mr. Bergen, New Jersey was represented at the conference by Governor Fort, Chief Justice Gummere, Chancellor Emery and John R. Hardin, of Newark. The delegates are appointed in each State by the Governor. It was Mr. Bergen's fourteenth appointment as representative from New Jersey, and he is known to the other conferees as one of the most enthusiastic supporters of the movement.

It is hoped by those in charge to have a chorus of at least 100 voices. R. A. Laslett Smith, organist of the Crescent avenue church, will conduct the work and Howard M. Case, of the First Baptist church, will preside at the organ.

Those desiring to sing in this chorus should send name and address at once, stating the part they sing, to Dr. W. H. Murray, 710 Watchung avenue, or H. M. Case, 25 Craig place. The first rehearsal will be held in the Crescent avenue church Monday, February 7, at 8 o'clock.

ANTI-TREAT BILL BRINGS HERITAGE TO LIME LIGHT

Assemblyman Walter Heritage, of Swedesboro, Gloucester county, who has added to his reputation by introducing a bill to prohibit treating, the intent of which he means business, and that he will do what he can to secure favorable consideration for the measure. He admits that it will have some rough times.

"My idea," says Heritage, "is that this bill will be a big measure for the discouragement of drunkenness, for nearly everybody concedes that this treating habit is one of the most prolific causes of inebriety. If it were not for it, many a man would not drink half as much as he does. The fact is that very many drink after they have had enough, and the only reason they keep in imbibing is because they feel they must accept the invitation of somebody to have something. I want to say, too, that my heavy drinkers favor the bill."

Assemblyman Heritage is serving his third term as the member from Gloucester, and he has thus far done nothing to set the State on fire, but his anti-treat bill has quickly made him one of the marked men in the House.

He is a farmer by occupation, and his specialty is the raising of garden produce. He is a Quaker, and in manner is one of the mildest men in the Legislature. He is 65 years old. He is quiet, and has never been known to ask: "What'll you have?"

BAYONNE WANTS A NEW POSTOFFICE BUILDING

Providing for a $250,000 postoffice for Bayonne, Congressman Eugene F. Kinkhead, of the Ninth New Jersey district, has just introduced a bill in Congress. The text of the bill is as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase a site in the city of Bayonne, New Jersey, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building for the accommodation of the postoffice.

Sec. 2. That plans and specifications and full estimates for said buildings shall be previously made and approved according to law, and shall not exceed for site and building complete the sum of $250,000.

Provided, That the site shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than thirty feet, including streets and alleys; and no money appropriated for the purpose shall be available until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States.

The bill has been referred to the committee on public buildings and grounds.

"Bayonne needs a new postoffice," says Congressman Kinkhead, "and I shall do all I can to secure speedy action. I believe the business men and citizens of Bayonne will back me up in my efforts to show that the city is entitled to a new Federal building."

Conference Committee to Meet.

The committee appointed at the charity conference at Mayor Charles J. Fisk's office, last week, will meet Friday night at the home of Henry L. DeForest to devise ways and means for carrying the objects of that conference, that of getting in touch with all the societies and lodges in the city.

MORALITY AND BUSINESS

People Suffer Because Some Trusts Break Golden Rule Says Pastor.

REV. MR. HERRING'S SERMON.

Too Many Big Corporations and Individuals Governed by False Principle that "Business Is Business."

Rev. Dr. Chales E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian, Sunday night preached a special sermon on "The Golden Rule" and its application to present day business methods. He said in part:

" All things, therefore, whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so unto them, for this is the law of the prophets." The 'Law and the Prophets' is but another way of saying the Old Testament. The Golden Rule, then, is the message of the whole Bible.

"These words have been parodied into the phrase, 'Do others as they would do you if they had the chance, only do them first.' I fear that this is more than a parody. It is nearer the actual states of affairs in our business life.

"Instead of acting up to the measure of the Golden Rule, many men are governed by the principle that "business is business." They justify the use of this statement by saying, that business cannot be run on sentiment. It is true that a man cannot conduct his business as a sort of benevolent institution, but he should run it righteously, so righteously, that his Lord will approve it. The life insurance companies that were found to have betrayed their trust, probably acted on the principle that 'business is business.' The same might be said of the Sugar Trust. It is good business to buy low and sell high, but that is just what the men have done who have stored away the necessaries of life until the demand for these necessaries greatly increased the price. If the Bible code of morals is correct, then this kind of business does not pass muster with God.

"The Golden Rule is but another way of saying, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.' If you will look in the Old Testament, Lev. 19: 18, you will find that this is the measure of God to the Jews in their business life, and it is no less a message to us, for Christ reaffirmed it. He declared that this thought with the thought of loving God with all the heart is the sum of all Old Testament teaching. Imagine this motto on the walls of the Stock Exchange and on the walls of every business house, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.' Does it sound too ideal for business? Israel was not to hold it as an ideal to be realized in the future; they were expected to put it into immediate practice and when they failed so to do, the prophets uttered the judgments of God upon them. God's law for business men has not changed one particle.

"The Golden Rule means that a man should act in business on the principle of right, no matter what it costs. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as if position were reversed and you were in his place. How would you want him to act?

"Because certain great trusts do not live according to the divine standard of the Golden Rule, the people suffer. Let us make the matter more personal. Perhaps because we as Christian people do not follow it, we cause others to suffer."

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. JOSEPH R. HALL

The funeral services of Mrs. Joseph R. Hall were held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the late home on Central avenue, and were largely attended. Rev. George A. Mrs. Hall formerly lived in Brooklyn, from which place she removed to North Plainfield. Later she removed to Cranford and again removed to the city-in-law April. Her death was due to apoplexy and was sudden. RE-ELECT O. T. WARING

Plainfield Riding and Driving Club Holds Its Annual Meeting.

HORSE SHOW DATES ARE SET.

Board of Directors Membership Increased to Twenty—Mr. Fairbairn Heads Show Committee.

Orville T. Waring has been re-elected president of the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club, for the coming year. The other officers are these: Vice-president, Robert A. Fairbairn; secretary, L. G. Timpson; treasurer, Edwin S. Hopley.

The dates selected for the annual horse show are Thursday, Friday and Saturday, June 2, 3 and 4, which is a week earlier than last year, owing to the fact that Philadelphia is to have no show this year. This will also mean that the Plainfield show will be larger and better than ever, as a majority of the exhibitors who go to the Quaker City will come here. One prominent horseman said today, that the local show this year would almost be the nature of an international affair.

The club has increased the membership of the Board of directors from twelve to twenty, and although it is not yet ready to announce the additional names, it can be said that they will be men who are prominent in the horse show world. Robert A. Fairbairn has been named as chairman of the horse show committee, with power to appoint his assistants.

This will make a very busy season here in sports, as the steeplechase meet of the Watchung Hunt Club will be held on Saturday, May 28, and Monday, Decoration Day, May 30, and the card promises to be the best in the history of the club. Following the horse show, the annual bench show of the Plainfield Kennel Club will be held.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. HENRY L. HALL

Mrs. Ida Redford O. Hall, wife of Henry L. Hall, whose funeral was held at Newport, R. I., Monday afternoon, was buried at Hillside cemetery, yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Hall died at Newport on Saturday, the news of which caused a deep shock among her many friends here. Mrs. Hall had been ill for sometime and prior to leaving Plainfield underwent an operation and another more recently at Newport.

Mrs. Hall was born at Newport, R. I., July 17, 1865, and spent the early years of her life there. She was married to Mr. Hall at Newport, October 27, 1887, and lived there for the first five years of her married life. The couple resided at Fanwood for six years, previous to removing to the Netherwood section of the city nine years ago.

During her residence here Mrs. Hall was greatly interested in charitable enterprises. She was president of the Cup Bearers Circle, of the King's Daughters for four years, and during the past two years was president of the Woman's Exchange, her term of office expiring on the day of her interment at Hillside Cemetery.

The Exchange work absorbed a great deal of her interest and effort and she contributed greatly to its success by her untiring energy and perseverance. She was also actively associated with the Day Nursery and the King's Daughters' Baby Camp, and she was a regular attendant at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

Mrs. Hall was also a member of the Woman's Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital, in which connection she was very active and familiar and a regular visitor at the hospital. All of her charitable work was done quietly and effectively and anything approaching ostentation was carefully avoided. Her home life was charming; her married life ideal and she had a wide circle of friends both in this city and at Newport.

COAL HANDLER NEARLY CRUSHED TO DEATH

George Pace had a narrow escape from being crushed to death yesterday at South Plainfield while at work unloading a coal car at Ten Eyck's and Kelly's coal yards at that place. Only the prompt action of Pace's fellow employes who hurried to his assistance saved the latter's life.

While transferring the coal from the car into the pocket, Pace missed his footing and was pinned between the car and pocket and before he could extricate himself he was buried beneath several tons of coal.

Pace when rescued from the trap was in a semi-conscious condition. Examination by a physician disclosed that no bones were broken, but that one leg was badly crushed, in addition to numerous bruises about the head and body.

NOW SEARCHING THIS CITY

Victor Lees, of East Orange in Personal Quest of Missing Wife.

MAY BE KEPT A PRISONER.

All Other Clues Are Given Up Except ing the One in This City by Her Heart Broken Husband.

Victor Lees, the East Orange caterer, having failed to get any help from the police in his search for his missing wife, is in this city today taking steps to find the young woman. Mr. Lees states that all the clue he has is that his wife came up visit a girl friend who lives near door to an Italian woman who has a telephone in the house and with this meagre information he is looking for the one home thus equipped.

In telling his story Mr. Lees added some information which was not contained in his letters to this newspaper. He says that the girl whom his wife came here to visit exercised what would seem to be an hypnotic influence over his wife and this influence was primarily gained through gifts of various articles of wearing apparel and furniture in the home at East Orange. Mr. Lees also declared that, while he and his wife had always lived in perfect harmony in their twelve years of married life he thought that the influence of the girl in question had tended to estrange his wife from their humble home.

When his wife first met this unknown girl it was at a dinner party in Orange where Mrs. Lee went to help wait on the table. The two women became fast friends and the one for whom Mr. Lees is looking in order to locate his wife, importuned her to accept some clothing and the hat with which she is alleged to have come to Plainfield. Other gifts followed such as clothing and from this day until his wife left home, Mr. Lees, says, she has been under the influence of the other woman.

The failure of Mr. Lees to find his wife will entail much trouble for him. His father, who is a wealthy German, wants to see his wife and perhaps will settle an income on her together with that of Mr. Lees himself, and it will simplify matters if the woman can be found as it will mean the lifting up above any possible state of want of both people.

BOROUGH SEWERAGE NOW

Petition and Consent Must Be Signed by February 15 to Secure Action.

COMMITTEE OF FIVE BUSY.

Failure Sure if Property Owners Do Not Sign at Once—No Agents Names Wanted.

The Sewerage Commission of North Plainfield, consisting of J. P. Emmons, C. L. Nichols, J. O. Osgood, E. S. Boyer and W. J. Buttfield, having decided that the question of sewerage for the borough is a necessity and should be attended to without delay, have addressed the following communication to the real estate owners of the borough through this newspaper.

To the Owners of Real Estate of the Borough of North Plainfield:

The borough laws require that there shall be obtained consent of a majority (according to its assessed valuation) of the property owners before any system of sewerage can be constructed.

It is necessary also to obtain from the property owners a written application to the Borough Council to submit the question of such construction to the voters of the borough at a special election.

Forms of the required consent and application to be signed by property owners have been placed with the clerk of the borough at the office of the collector, 94 Somerset street, and also with the steward of the Park club, Washington avenue.

We believe that it will be generally conceded that there exists an imperative demand for the improvement in question for reasons of health, economy and development of the borough. If you are in accord with this view you are requested to call at either the collector's office or the Park Club, without delay, and sign the consent and application above referred to.

It is recommended that signatures be made as follows:

Every individual property owner should sign in person and not by an agent.

A married woman owning property in her own right should sign in person.

A corporation should, by resolution of the directors, duly authorize an officer of the company to sign its name on its behalf.

Property in the joint name of two or more persons should be signed for by all such owners of record.

PLAINFIELD BALL CLUB TO CONDUCT A DANCE

The Plainfield Baseball Club at its meeting last night made arrangements to hold a ball on Easter Monday night, March 28. The hall in which the event will take place will be decided on later. The committee in charge is John Martin, Adam Shott and Norman Barnes.

The question of a ball park for next season was discussed at length. It appeared to be the sentiment of the club that unless suitable grounds can be leased, a stock company will be organized, and a modern park erected.

Six new members were elected and several applications for enrollment were received and placed on file.

Climax Athletic Club to Dance.

The Climax Athletic Club will give a dance at Truell Hall Friday night. The committee in charge comprises J. P. Terry, F. P. Kelley. Music will be furnished by Charles Suhr.

Sesame Club Meeting.

The Sesame Club will meet tomorrow morning at the residence of Mrs. H. E. Chase, 916 Putnam avenue.

Art and Happiness.

Originality and individuality both necessary. "Premier Block" adv't. on Saturday. ***

LAWRENCE DOYLE DEAD

Popular Young Physician Succumbs to a Lingering Disease.

AT AGE OF THIRTY-ONE YEARS.

Gained Fame as a Ball Player—Member of K. of C. and I. O. F.—Funeral Services at St. Mary's Church.

Dr. Lawrence D. Doyle died at 2 o'clock this morning at the home of his sister, Mrs. Ulysses Force, 605 Richmond street, after an illness of several months. A coincidence of Dr. Doyle's death is that two months ago today the funeral service of his mother, Mrs. Mary Dagnell, was held at St. Mary's church, the former dying on December 4.

Dr. Doyle was in his thirty-first year and was a native of Asbury, Hunterdon County, where he was born on June 13, 1879. At one year of age his father, Lawrence Doyle, died and the family removed to this city in 1886.

Graduating from St. Mary's parochial school in 1896, Dr. Doyle entered Seton Hall College, at South Orange, where he studied medicine for three years. After taking a one-year course at Bellevue Hospital, in New York, he entered a New York medical school from which he graduated after four years of study.

At the conclusion of his studies Dr. Doyle located at Woodbridge, where he remained three years, after which he practised at Bound Brook until last September. Failing health induced him to go to Beloit, Michigan. After residing there for three months he came to a realization that his case was hopeless and returned to his home here in company with his mother, who had also gone there in the hope of benefitting her health.

While at Seton Hall Dr. Doyle gained fame and glory in baseball circles as a pitcher on the college nine. During vacation periods his popularity as a ball player soared to a higher degree in this city where he pitched on local teams.

His chief triumphs in local balldom was made when he was the star pitcher of St. Mary's team in the days of the city amateur league. Scores of hot battles for supremacy were waged on the old St. Mary's and Hope chapel diamonds in those days, and the name "Doc Doyle" was the battle cry to hundreds of local fans, schoolboys and grown-up folks, alike. "Doc" had a disposition that won him friends wherever he went and a host of his admirers in the local athletic world are mourning his death today.

"Doc" Doyle, as he was called by a host of friends, was always noted as a game and gritty player and that characteristic was prominent during the last two weeks of his life while he awaited the approach of death to end his sufferings.

While practising at Woodbridge he affiliated with the Knights of Columbus and Independent Order of Foresters of that town.

Surviving Dr. Doyle are two sisters, Mrs. William Townley and Mrs. Ulysses Force, and a step-father, William Dagnell, all of whom reside in this city.

The funeral service will be held at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's church when a solemn requiem mass will be celebrated. Interment will take place in St. Mary's cemetery.

"SALVATION NELL" HERE NEXT SATURDAY NIGHT.

Mrs. Fiske, America's representative actress, and her famous Manhattan Company, will present "Salvation Nell," the realistic play of the underworld life which enthralled New York for more than half of the season, at the Plainfield theatre Saturday night, Feb. 12. With unsparing truth, and an assurance born of actual experience, the author, Edward Sheldon, has written a play of slum life in the metropolis, whose truth and message strike home to every heart. Not in many seasons has the metropolis been so stirred as by this realistic presentation of life as it exists in the crowded centres of every large city. "Salvation Nell" has been fitly called a "divine comedy of the slums."

California Pastor for New York.

Rev. Malcolm J. McLeod, pastor of the Presbyterian church, Pasadena, Cal., has accepted the call to the Collegiate church of St. Nicholas' (Reformed), Fifth avenue and Forty-eighth street, New York city, succeeding the late Rev. Dcnald Sage Mackey, and will enter upon his new duties May 1.

Painting on View.

H. de Marceu's wonderful painting, "The Village Blacksmith," is on exhibition at Cowperthwait & Van Horn's, 73 Market street, Newark. The public is invited to see this superb work of art.

TRADE BOARD HEAD ON 'JOE' FRELINGHUYSEN

William Jeffery, president of the New Providence Township Circles on the Square, organizer of the movement of the Warren Township Circles and president of the Plainfield Board of Trade, in an address to Warren Circles at Mount Bethel last night stated that the time "had come when the farmers of Somerset county would organize to defeat Joseph Frelinghuysen."

"The appointments of county judge and prosecutor made recently by the Governor," said Mr. Jeffery, "undoubtedly upon the recommendation of the Senator, without reference to the character of the gentlemen appointed, were very unsatisfactory, and the kind of political cleaning which had been done in the township of Warren last fall should be extended to include the good Senator himself. I predict that the farmers of Somerset county will rise up against Mr. Frelinghuysen. He has missed a glorious political opportunity; one that will never again return his way."

Mr. Jeffery then discoursed freely on government and taxation and contended that the people were getting very little in the way of real road improvement or other advantages for the money which they were paying in taxes.

SKELLY IS INDICTED; WHEREABOUTS UNKNOWN

Louis Skelley, who for some time has conducted a news, candy and fruit store at 129 North avenue, has been indicted by the Grand Jury for illegal liquor selling. Skelly has disappeared and his wife says she does not know where he is.

Skelly's offense was aggravated because, it is alleged, he sold the "stuff" on Sundays when the legitimate supply of supply are closed. He had no license and the quality of the booze he is said to have sold was said to have been vile. When asked yesterday where her husband had gone Mrs. Skelley said that he was staying in New York for a few days and she was not certain as to the date of his return. Mrs. Skelley is attending to the store with the assistance of her aunt.

Constable Weaver sought Skelley as soon as the papers for his arrest were issued, but when he arrived at the store his quarry had fled. It is surmised that Skelley had received underground information of the intention of the authorities to arrest and so made a clean getaway. He lived with his wife in the rear of the store on North avenue.

SURPASSING CRUELTY, SOLD STARVING COW

A case worthy of the attention of the Humane Society occurred this morning and for downright cruelty, it is said, it surpasses anything recently seen in this city. Herman Mintz, a butcher, of West Third street, it is alleged, had sold a cow to a resident of the Netherwood section and when the animal was sent to the prospective purchaser's home this morning he refused to accept it saying that the cow was not in good condition.

On the way back to Mintz's shop the cow dropped in its tracks on Seventh street, and when Dr. Aaron F. Carpenter, who was summoned, saw the animal he declared it was dying from starvation, but could be saved if given food at once. This was not done and the cow was taken away by Theodore Glanier who said he would kill the animal.

Popack Goes to Jail.

Vincent Popack, forty years old, was sentenced to forty days in the county jail this morning by Judge William N. Runyon for being drunk and causing a disturbance at the blacksmith shop of John H. Stevens 209 East Second street, yesterday afternoon. Popack might have escaped with a lighter sentence had he not abused the police after his arrest.

DRUNK, MAD OR VENGEFUL

Attempt to Have Locomotive Sent to This City on Wild Goose Chase.

PSEUDO ENGINEER'S FREAK.

Train Despatcher Vanderhoef Wise to Game; Tries to Have Man Held—He Escapes.

Running hastily into the office of A. M. Runyon & Son a half hour after midnight last night, a man dressed in the garb of a railroad engineer or fireman, requested of Mr. Vermeule permission to use the telephone. He was apparently in a great hurry and said his engine had broken down between Central avenue and Liberty street and he wanted to talk with the train dispatcher at Jersey City.

He called up that official and reported his engine stalled and asked that another locomotive be dispatched to his assistance. The dispatcher evidently did not take any stock in the proposed engineer's story and wired Chief Kiely to have the man held. Captain Christenson, who was on duty, sent a patrolman to the office of Runyon & Son, but the man had disappeared.

Mr. Vanderhoef, the train dispatcher in Jersey City, said that it took a half hour to get into telephonic communication with this city when he attempted to get police headquarters at midnight. He believes the man who tried to play the trick on the railroad company was either a discharged employe or was demented.

The man is described as being about forty years old, five feet eight inches tall smooth shaven, and wore the overalls, jumper and cap of the regular fireman or engineer. No trace of him could be had after he left the office of the undertaking firm.

AUTO & CARRIAGE CRASH; MR. AND MRS. HARRIS HURT

An accident which nearly resulted seriously for Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Harris, of 935 Central avenue, occurred last night shortly after 9 o'clock at the corner of Seventh street and Central avenue. An automobile supposed to have been driven by A. R. Stevens, of 746 Grant avenue, collided with a carriage in which Mr. and Mrs. Harris were driving toward town. The latter were thrown violently to the ground and sustained severe bruises and their carriage was badly shattered. Some damage was done to the automobile.

The cause of the accident, as far as can be ascertained, is the high wall surrounding a garden at the corner where it occurred. Neither driver could see the lights of the other's vehicle. This is the third accident which has occurred at this point, all of which are attributed to the same cause.

ITEMS OF INTEREST FOR THEATRE-GOERS.

Owing to illness, Chauncey Olcott has been advised by his physician to go South for his health. Consequently his engagement at the Plainfield theatre on Monday night has been cancelled.

Manager Sanderson, after much effort, has secured Ruth St. Denis for Washington's Birthday, when she will appear in her classical and world famous dances.

Walter Damrosch and his famous orchestra on their silver jubilee tour will give a concert here on March 2.

Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske will appear in "Salvation Nell" at the theatre on Saturday night.

Shakespeare's Predecessors.

An interesting paper on "Shakespeare's Predecessors" was presented by Mrs. J. Sperry Hansen at the meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club in the Hartridge School Auditorium. A number of members supplemented the paper with accounts of dramatic writers preceding Shakespeare's time. An animated discussion on the subject, "When and How Should English Classics be Presented to Children" was led by Mrs. Morris F. Benton.

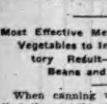
Most Effective Method of Canning Vegetables to Insure a Satisfactory Result—For Yellow Beans and Tomatoes.

When canning vegetables be sure that the mouths of the jars are perfect, also that the rubbers are firm and clean. Place the jars, covers and rubbers in cold water and bring to a boil. Many a jar of vegetables has spoiled because the cover and rubber were not sterilized. The following recipes will be found very reliable for canning green peas, string beans, corn, asparagus, etc., for winter use:



Green Peas.—Gather the peas when full, but tender; shell them, then wash and scald them in hot water. When well drained, throw into boiling water with a little salt, a sprig of green mint, and a pinch of carbonate of soda, and boil till tender, or from 10 to 15 minutes. Lift them from the pot with a perforated spoon, and place in jars placed upon straw in a pan of boiling water. Boil up the liquor in the kettle and fill the jars to overflowing with this, sealing immediately.

Canned Asparagus.—Into an asparagus boiler put salt water, and when this boils lay in it the asparagus, from which the bottoms of the scraped stalks have been cut. Boil gently until tender, but not broken. Remove carefully from the liquor, stand the stalks on end in fruit jars, boil the water hard, and fill the jars to overflowing, then seal immediately. Keep in a cool, dark place.

Canned Yellow Beans.—Remove the strings from the beans and cut into inch lengths. Cover with water and boil until tender, but not soft, then season with salt and pepper. Take the beans from the pot with a perforated spoon and put them in jars, standing in a pan of boiling water. Boil up the liquor in the kettle, and fill the jars to overflowing with this, sealing immediately.

Canned Tomatoes.—Scald the tomatoes and remove the skins, laying the vegetables in the colander to drain. Put into a porcelain-lined kettle and bring to a boil. Cook for 15 minutes, dipping off the superfluous liquor; season with salt and pour, boiling hot, into heated glass jars. Seal immediately.

Crab Rarebit.

Melt one tablespoonful of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour and cook thoroughly. Add two cups of cream in which has been dissolved a pinch of soda and cook until thick, seasoning with salt, red pepper and minced parsley. Then add one cup or more of chopped cooked crab meat. When the mixture is heated add two tablespoonfuls of Parmesian cheese and the same quantity of sherry. Arrange squares of buttered toast on a hot platter. Pour the crab mixture over them, sprinkle with grated cheese and serve piping hot.

Mayonnaise Without Egg.

Very few people know one can make a perfect tasty mayonnaise without any eggs. Place a teaspoonful of plain mustard, mixed with a few drops of cold water, in a small bowl. Add oil, not necessarily drop by drop, but still rather slowly, and stir vigorously all the while. As it thickens too much to handle comfortably, thin with lemon juice or vinegar. A little tarragon vinegar is always a great addition to any salad. After the mayonnaise is finished, season according to taste and discretion.

Delicious Breakfast Dish.

Take two or three lamb or veal kidneys, cut in small pieces, place in salt water for half an hour. Wash and put in clean water to boil. As soon as it boils pour off water, then chop or grind a large onion fine and brown in butter, add a cup of boiling water, put the kidneys in this and boil gently for half an hour. Salt and pepper to taste. Ten minutes before serving add a spoonful of tomato catsup and a little thickening. Do not boil kidneys hard and fast, as they will become tough instead of tender.

Small Cakes.

One pound of sugar, one-half pound of butter, four eggs, one-quarter pound flour. Cream the butter, add the sugar gradually and beat until light, then add the well-beaten yolks, then the whites beaten stiff, and last the flour. Roll very thin. It will be much easier rolled if thoroughly chilled before rolling on a well-floured board. This is a sand tart recipe and should be divided unless a large number of the dainties are desired.

Soft Gingerbread.

Half a cupful sugar, half a cupful syrup, half a teaspoonful cinnamon, one teaspoonful ginger, one egg, half a cupful melted butter and lard, mixed, one cupful of sour milk, half a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a little hot water and then put with the sour milk, add flour enough to make a stiff batter, pour on greased pan and bake half an hour in moderate oven.

Sweet Onions.

Peel two large onions and slice. Put in cold water; add one teaspoonful of salt in the water and let stand for half an hour. Then drain off. Pour over this one cupful of vinegar and a tablespoonful of sugar, mixed. Now ready to serve. This is delicious.

READY TO BUILD BRIDGE

But Union Freeholders First Want Approaches Filled in at Albert St.

In response to a petition signed by nearly all of the interested property-owners, Freeholder J. Hervey Doane secured the adoption of a resolution at the meeting of the Union County Board of Freeholders Thursday calling for the appointment of a committee to confer with the Somerset County Board for the purpose of building a new bridge over Green brook at Albert street.

The freeholders stand ready, it is believed, to build a bridge at that point, just as soon as the city and borough complete the work of filling in the street up to the point of the proposed structure. Freeholders Doane and Wilbur both favor the improvement, realizing that the people are obliged to cross the brook at West End avenue or go a mile further west to Clinton avenue.

The last bridge in that vicinity many years ago, but it was destroyed by floods. It is now proposed to erect a concrete structure there.

The sum of $22,000 was appropriated to the hospitals in the county, as follows:

Muhlenberg Hospital, this city, $5,250; Elizabeth General, $8,000; Alexian Brothers, $7,000; Summit Hospital, $2,000; new hospital in Elizabeth, $3,000.

Freeholder Doane also secured the adoption of a resolution providing for the suitable marking of the graves of soldiers of the Revolutionary War, in this county, which is in addition to marking those of Civil War veterans. Gen. Drake has been made an assistant supervisor of this work.

ANOTHER COUPLE SEEK JUSTICE HAND'S HELP

It cost $14 for Mrs. Cassie Brooks of North Broad street, and William Brokaw, of Newark, to get married at 2:30 Friday morning at Justice Hezekiah Hand's altar.

Mrs. Brooks and Mr. Brokaw came here to attend a social function from Somerville yesterday afternoon. They had intentions of returning on the 2:08 a. m. train, but they missed it.

Mr. Brokaw, however, solved the problem of their dilemma, by making inquiries for a clergyman or justice of a peace. "Judge" Hand's address of a record kind to the couple went to the latter's home on East Fifth street.

Ten minutes after their arrival the couple were united in the bonds of matrimony. The witnesses were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ross, of this city, who reside next door to Justice Hand.

When the ceremony was completed the bridegroom handed Justice Hand a ten dollar bill and also presented Mrs. Ross and Mrs. Hand with two dollar bills.

Hardness of Icebergs.

The hardness and strength of ice increases with the degrees of cold, and as icebergs come from the region of perpetual cold of an intensity difficult to realize it is readily seen how they can become "demons of destruction." The hardness of icebergs is something wonderful, even surpassing that of the "land ice" reported from St. Petersburg in 1740, wherein it is declared that "in the severe winter of that year a house was built of ice taken from the river Neva which was fifty feet long, sixteen feet wide and twenty feet high, and the walls supported the roof, which was also of ice. Before it stood two ice mortars and six ice cannon made on a turning lathe, with carriages and wheels also of ice. The cannon were of the caliber of six pounders, but they were loaded only with one-quarter pound of powder and with hemp balls—on one occasion with iron. The thickness of the ice was only four inches, and yet it resisted the explosion." Ice houses have also been built in late years in this country and in Canada which have stood for weeks, so, then, how strong must be the ice in masses hundreds of feet in thickness!—Pittsburg Press.

Helped Him to Hurry.

Prince Bismarck once told a story of the battlefield of Koeniggratz. The old emperor, then king of Prussia, had exposed himself and his staff to the enemy's fire in a very reckless fashion and would not hear of retreating to a safe distance. At last Prince Bismarck rode up to him, saying: "As a responsible minister I must insist upon your majesty's retreat to a safe distance. If your majesty were to be killed the victory would be of no use to us." The king saw the force of this and slowly retreated, but in his zeal returned again and again to the front. "When I noticed it," Prince Bismarck went on, "I only rose in my saddle and looked at the sky. He understood it perfectly and called out rather angrily, 'Yes, I am coming.' But we did not get on fast enough, and at last I rode close up to the king, took my foot out of the right stirrup and secretly gave the horse an energetic kick. Such a thing had never before happened to the fat mare, but the move was successful, for she shot off in a fine canter."

Tricks of Short Sight.

Not only the inanimate world presents itself in strange forms to the myopic. Humanity, for instance, is often revealed in somewhat inhuman guise. Thus, so far as ocular demonstration goes, the world to the shortsighted is peopled by men and women as faceless, sometimes even as headless, as the Lorseman of legendary fame. Indoors myopic persons get quite accustomed to talking with persons who have neither eyes nor nose. Out of doors the phenomenon is more striking because oftener repeated. At quite a short distance the face melts into the atmosphere and becomes either a cloud or, like H. G. Wells' invisible man, a nothingness. "I see the hat and the figure, sometimes the beard. I see the walking stick. If the hand is ungloved this stick is waving miraculously a little way from the sleeve edge, for the hand, like the face, has vanished."—Strand Magazine.

Charming Away Tigers.

No woodcutter will go about his task in the Indian forests unless he is accompanied by a faker, who is supposed to exercise power over tigers and wild animals generally. Before work is commenced the faker assembles all the members of his party in a clearance at the edge of the forest and erects a number of huts, in which he places images of certain deities. After offerings have been presented to the images the particular forest is declared to be free of tigers, and the woodcutters in virtue of the presents they have made to the deities are supposed to be under their special protection. If after all these precautions a tiger seizes one of the party the faker speedily takes his departure without waiting to offer superfluous explanations.—Calcutta Statesman.

NEW ORDINANCE ON WAY

Revised Rules for Hackmen, Expressmen, Cartmen, Motor Vehicleists and Peddlers.

THE COUNCIL TAKES ACTION.

Proposed New Law Adopted on Second Reading Will Become Operative in a Few Weeks.

The Common Council at a special meeting Wednesday adopted on second reading the new ordinance relative to the licensing and regulation of hackmen, peddlers, etc. The ordinance is a bulky document which took City Clerk James T. MacMurray twenty minutes to read to the Council.

Following its adoption a resolution was passed authorizing the city clerk to advertise the ordinance.

The ordinance is patterned much after the present law. Owners of hacks, expressmen, truckmen, cartmen, with one horse are required to pay a license fee of $5. For two horses the rate is fixed at $7.50.

The rate on motor vehicles was fixed at $10, the drivers to pay a license fee of one dollar.

Peddlers with horse and wagon, $25; peddler and hand cart $20; peddler on foot, $15.

The ordinance also provides that all persons receiving licenses shall deposit with the chief of police one dollar for a badge, the dollar to be refunded when the badge is turned in.

There was considerable discussion in relation to empowering the police board to revoke licenses in case of violations. The ordinance vests that power in the hands of the mayor and city judge. That point, however, will be decided when the ordinance is presented to the Council on its third reading.

Several of the changes noted which will effect the hackmen is that plates with the license number will be tacked in the vehicle opposite the seat. Numbers will also be required on both sides of the lamps. Instead of wearing buttons the hackmen will badges.

In the schedule of rates there is one change that will interest the public. Under the present ordinance double rates of fare have been in vogue after 11 o'clock. Hereafter the double fare rule will go into effect at midnight. This plan will no doubt be appreciated by passengers who leave New York city on the 10:20 p. m. train and also to theatre patrons.

Expressmen will also be required to wear badges, and plates will be tacked on the sides of the wagons giving the expressman's number and date of license. The same rule will apply to cartmen and truckmen.

Cartmen will be required to sign an agreement which will be approved by the street commissioner and transients and loafing will also be according to rules designated by the street commissioner.

Peddlers will not be permitted to twenty dollar fine and having their licenses revoked.

The new license fees is fixed in the ordinance to represent an increase of five dollars per year over the present rates. The fines for violations was increased from ten to twenty dollars.

The limitations in the hack ordinance remain practically the same with the exception that a portion of Hillside avenue, which was placed in the 25 cent fare limit.

STAR INDOOR TEAM WANTS TO PLAY HERE

Jack McGrath, manager of the Greater New York Indoor baseball team, which has in its lineup Christy Mathewson, the star pitcher of the New York Giants, and Hal Chase, the peerless first baseman of the Highlanders, is desirous of bringing his star combination to this city and engage in a contest with the Plainfield baseball team.

McGrath made the proposition to the sporting editor of The Daily Press, and the matter has been referred to Manager Ernest Dorflinger for attention. McGrath will be remembered by local fans as playing in this city a number of times on the All Nationals and other semi-professional teams from the metropolis.

Mr. Dorflinger entertains an idea that such a contest can be played here and that Saengerbund Hall is the ideal hall for the game. The opportunity to see Mathewson and Chase in baseball togs on the same team would no doubt prove a big magnet for local fans, and if arrangements can be made the game will be held.

Roman fever, so called, no longer exists. It was really a malarial fever with every now and then a malignant case. Since the Campagna has been drained and cultivated and old portions of the city where fevers of this nature were of more frequent occurrence have been demolished and new buildings with modern improvements put up, no one ever hears of Roman fever.

E. J. HERLICH WEDDED TO NEW YORK GIRL

Miss Grace E. Predmore, of New York, and who is popular in a large circle of friends at Dunellen and in this city, and Edward J. Herlich, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Herlich, of Dunellen, were united in marriage last week in New York. The ceremony was performed in the Church of the Holy Communion, Sixth Avenue and West Twentieth street, New York, at 7 o'clock, the ceremony being performed by the rector, Rev. W. P. Hill.

The bride was attired in a traveling gown of French blue broadcloth. Attending the bride's maid was Miss M. Elizabeth Herlich, a sister of the bridegroom. Miss Herlich was attired in a creation of raspberry messaline silk. William F. Herlich, a brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

After the ceremony the bridal couple was tendered a reception at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. A. Shaw, on West Eighteenth street. The bride is the daughter of John Predmore, of Barnegat, but for several years she has lived with her aunt.

Mr. and Mrs. Herlich are now enjoying their honeymoon at Old Point Comfort. They will make their home at Dunellen on its completion.

Fifty guests were present at the wedding and reception, from Plainfield, Dunellen, Newark, Barnegat, Brooklyn and New York.

MISS ANNA L. SPENCER, AGED 78 YEARS, DEAD

Miss Anna Louise Spencer, aged about seventy-eight years, died at Muhlenberg Hospital Friday morning following a second attack of pneumonia and pleurisy with which she was taken several days ago. She resided alone for many years in a house at Seventh street and Park avenue, which was owned by the Spencer estate. Yesterday morning neighbors found the aged woman critically ill and Dr. Norman Prebasco was called. He at once had the woman removed to the hospital, but the disease was in such an advanced stage that no hope for her recovery was entertained.

*Miss Spencer was one of nine chil*dren, her mother being Mrs. Ann Louisa Spencer. She died in 1881 and Miss Spencer was an executrix of the estate. The Spencer estate in Plainfield is valued at about $30,000 and in addition Miss Spencer owned considerable personal property. V. W. Nash, Jr., was attorney for Miss Spencer and the estate as well. There are two children surviving, Thomas Spencer, of Chicago, and Charles Spencer, who lives in the West. The former came to Plainfield Thursday to take charge of his sister's affairs.

LARGEST BUFFALO HERD.

On a stormy night, in 1871, a mud-spattered rider galloped into St. Ignatius, Mont., with the news that Walking Coyete, a Pend d'Oreille Indian, had shot his wife and fled over the mountains to the Blackfoot Country. The crime created a brief sensation in the white Indian village, but Walking Coyote was not apprehended, and for a time lived quietly among the Blackfeet. By and by, however, he wanted to return to his own people, but feared he would be punished for his crime. He talked the matter over with a trader.

"If you want to go back," said the trader, "you ought to do something that will make people forget all about the shooting. Now, there are no buffaloes over in the Fatland valley. Why don't you catch some calves and take them back with you? They'll cause so much excitement that the people will forget to punish you for shooting your wife."

The Coyote acted on this suggestion, and as a buffalo hunt was then in progress, he soon captured four calves and turned with them to St. Ingatius, writes Ernest Harold Bayes in Recreation. The result was about what the trader had predicted, and the Indian was never punished. The little buffaloes grew up, and when the two heifers were four years old, each of them had a calf, thus was started what afterward became the largest herd of buffaloes in the world.

In 1884 the Flathead buffaloes numbered thirteen head. At this junction C.A. Allard, who was ranching in the reservation, with a long had his eye on these buffaloes, finally persuaded his old friend and neighbor, Michael Pablo, to join him in a deal which involved the purchase of Walking Coyote's herd. The Indian refused to accept a check, it was necessary to get the money, something over $3,000, in currency. Walking Coyote, a Pend d'Oreille and Mr. Pablo told me how he and his partner sat by the side of the road counting this money, laying a dime on top of each stack of bills.

"We got it in small bills," said he, "and it looked like a pile of money to pay for buffaloes." Apparently fate had not forgotten Walking Coyote, for with the money received for the buffaloes he indulged in a short round of dissipation, which ended in Missouri where he was found under a bridge, dead.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 12, 1910.

Topic.—Bible texts that help me.—Ps. cxix. 97-104. Comment by Rev. Sherman E. Doyle, D. D.

The Bible is divinely designed to help men. It is not a treatise on science, philosophy or even ethics, but a revelation from God and of God, with the supreme purpose of telling men what they are to believe concerning God and what duty God requires of them. Moreover, the book itself is intended to help us to believe and to do God's will and desire. There is no Christian who has not found the Bible a book of helpfulness. In the One Hundred and Nineteenth Psalm, the longest of all the Psalms, having 176 verses, the psalmist speaks continually of the word of God, its greatness and its helpfulness. In every verse of this lengthy poem there is some word referring to the law of God.

In the paragraph selected for our especial study he speaks particularly of the helpfulness of the Bible. He begins by exclaiming: "Oh, how I love Thy law! It is my meditation day and night." Then he proceeds to tell why he loves it and meditates upon it. (1) It gives him wisdom. (2) By it he refrained from a wicked life and from evil ways. (3) In it he found the truth set forth and learned to hate evil. No doubt various parts of the Scriptures furnished the inspiration for these different reflections. Therefore, David seems to have had his favorite texts or particular portions of the law that helped him.

All Christians have without much doubt had special texts in God's word that have helped them. In meeting trial and temptation how many have found strength in Paul's words, "I can do all things through Christ that strengtheneth me." In overcoming temper and learning to control it how many have found strength in the words of Solomon, "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city." Amid life's adversities and discouragements how many have leaned hard upon Christ's promise, "Lo, I am with you alway." The fact of His constant presence has been a support to thousands in the Christian centuries. In want and distress many have turned to the Twenty-third Psalm and have found in the peaceful words of this, "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want." The dying have piled their heads upon Ps. xxiii, 4: "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me." They rod and Thy staff they comfort me." In the sorrow of bereavement help has always been found in the consolation of Christ to His disciples: "Let not your heart be troubled. Ye believe in God; believe also in Me." The Bible is full of helpful texts. Seek one for every necessity in life, and in them you will find "grace to help in the time of need."

To assure a successful meeting let each one recite a helpful text and explain how it has been helpful.

Many societies have splendid meetings, but no one ever knows about them except the members and a few of their particular friends. Every society should keep the notice of its meetings before the public in some way. The Sterling (Colo.) society does it by placing a card in the postoffice, in hotels and other public places, and that card the following is neatly printed:

What is it?

Where is it?
At the Presbyterian church.
When is it?

What's the attraction?

And good music.
Shall I attend?

An Endeavor Church.

Dr. Charles M. Sheldon, the world renowned author of "In His Steps," is building a new church in Topeka, and on a big arch over the main entrance is to be carved our Christian Endeavor motto, "For Christ and the Church." His is an Endeavor church if there ever was one.

AN "INFANT PRODIGY" WILL BE HEARD HERE

Probably not one person in ten is aware that within thirty miles of Plainfield one of the greatest violinists in the world has established his residence, and it is possible that those who do realize it, scarcely know how remarkable a man in many ways this musician really is.

Almost daily there is launched upon the world a so-called "infant prodigy" of some kind or other. A little master of the violin or piano, who does wonders at the age of six, and then when a year or two has passed is never heard of afterwards. It is rare indeed that these baby artists develops into something really great, and almost never does one of them attain the first rank, yet the famous Belgian violinist, whose name is now world known, Ovide Musin, was one of these wonderful children. *At eight years old he already show*ed such remarkable talent that his father sent him to the Royal Conservatory of Liege, and at eleven years of age he received the first prize for violin playing at the Conservatory.

Musin's knowledge of his art, aside from the mechanical performance, is remarkable. He knows the history of the violin from the very earliest days, and has ever shown the keenest interest in this side of his work. He himself owns a number of remarkable violins and bows of great age and value.

Plainfielders will have an opportunity on February 22 of hearing this famous artist, under the auspices of the Boys' Work Committee of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A.

WOMEN AS DOG NURSES.

There is not a year that passes that women do not discover some new profession for themselves. They have already invaded most of the fields which men have hitherto appropriated and now from London comes the news that they are becoming veterinary surgeoons.

There is in that city a hospital for *dogs, founded by Mrs. E. Leuty Col*lins, called the "Canine Nurses' Institute." This is run according to the most approved hospital system, except that it is conducted entirely by women. There are public wards and private wards in the institution, which is largely patronized by the rich. But little waif dogs are not refused, when they are ill, of course, and are permitted to repose comfortably in the wards.

This is an ideal profession for women who are lovers of animals and who are not strong enough to expend their energies in real hospital nursing.

ENJOYABLE BIRTHDAY SOCIAL AT HOME OF MRS. JOHN GILES

Mrs. John Giles, of Highland avenue, entertained a company of thirty-five guests at her home Friday in honor of her daughter Grace, whose birthday it was. Games and music filled up the evening's card of entertainment and refreshments were served.

Among those present was Mrs. Stehr, of Fanwood, and the Vroom brothers, of this city, who captivated the party with their playing and singing. John Consolic, of Cranford, also played and sang for the amusement of the company. The party broke up at midnight.

WANT PASTOR RETURNED

First M. E. Church Congregation Invites Rev. Dr. Chas. M. Anderson.

ANNUAL REPORTS WERE READ.

Individual Communion Service Is Favored—The Laymen's Forward Movement Is Endorsed.

Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, at the fourth quarterly conference held Wednesday received unanimous invitation to return to his charge another year. Complimentary remarks were made by many of those present concerning the work of Dr. Anderson during the past year. The wishes of the congregation will be expressed to the district superintendent who will use his influence to have them carried out by the presiding bishop at the coming session of the Newark Conference.

The reports from all the various departments of the church showed considerable progress during the year, this being particularly true in Dr. Anderson's report. He made a large number of calls and in other ways has stimulated interest in the work. There were also encouraging reports from the Epworth League, young women's societies, Ladies' Aid Society and Foreign and Home mission societies, summing up the work.

There was considerable discussion relative to the laymen's missionary movement and it was decided to inaugurate an aggressive local campaign in the interest of this work.

The question of introducing the individual communion service in the church was presented and a majority of the members were in favor of it. This matter will be referred to the official Board to be decided at the meeting to be held next Wednesday night.

It was announced that the Women's Foreign Missionary Society had decided to undertake the work of educating a girl in the foreign field and that was a source of much encouragement.

MINNIE MADDERN FISKE IN "SALVATION NELL"

For several months Mr. Sanderson has been engaged in efforts to induce Mrs. Fiske to visit Plainfield and present for the first time her successful play, "Salvation Nell." Inasmuch as Mrs. Fiske's time is usually booked only in the larger cities for one or more weeks stay, it has been difficult to induce her to accept a single night's performance. Luckily for Plainfield as interrupted the regular tour, and Mr. Sanderson hastened to New York and secured the prize for Saturday, Feb. 12, and for a single performance the production is so unusually large it requires two or more cars to transport the scenery, and a special wagon is necessary built to convey the scenery from the railroad to Plainfield theatre. Owing to the great amount of scenery and effects employed, it is impossible to give a matinee, so contrary to custom there will be no holiday matinee on February 22.

The production is said to be marvelous in its completeness of detail, as are all of Mrs. Fiske's productions, particularly the Bowery scene of the first act, and what the New York reviewers called the most wonderful street scene ever staged, that of the tenement five points, the scene of the third act. The Manhattan company of nearly fifty people supports Mrs. Fiske and both company and production are exactly as during the very successful New York run of the play last season except that the production is entirely new. This is a matter worthy of recognition in these days of shortened casts and curtailed productions for the road tours of successful New York offerings. Mrs. Fiske adds lustre to the American stage as she does to American womanhood and her engagement.

Clark Tourists in Honolulu.

The Pacific Commercial Advertiser, of Honolulu, Hawaii Territory, under date of Monday, January 24, contains an interesting account of the reception given to the Clark sightseeing party on arrival in that place on January 22. A copy of the newspaper has been received from James E. Buckle, who, with Mrs. Buckle, is with the tourists and is now on the last stretch of the journey from California. The newspaper contains several fine pictures of the tourists.

Dr. Thomas Travis to Speak Here.

The Young Men's Christian Association today sent out invitations for the annual dinner to be held Thursday night, February 24. The special speaker for that occasion will be Dr. Thomas Travis. He will give facts that were gleaned in six years of study in the conditions of the asylums and prisons of France, England, Australia and the United States. The result of his work is published in a book entitled "The Young Malefactor." Judge Lindsay has written the introduction to Dr. Travis' volume.

MESSAGE OF SOCIALISM

Rev. Dr. Herring Explains Cause of Gulf Between Socialism and Church.

THE CRY OF HUMAN NEED.

"Thou Shalt Love Thy Neighbor as Thyself," is the Political Creed—An Able Sermon.

Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring delivered an instructive discourse last Sunday at the First Presbyterian church. His theme was "The Message of Socialism." In part he said: "These are two great forces, whose purpose is to bless humanity; the church with the Gospel of Jesus, and socialism with its economic system. Socialism believes that our whole social and industrial system should be so reconstructed that private ownership of land should be replaced by public collective ownership, and that the State should be the one employer. All labor would thereby come under the control of one central power. Socialists believe that there is something radically wrong with our industrial system, in that it does not give all men an equality of opportunity. It is because of this great wrong in our social system that socialism has come into being. Great wealth and great power are in the possession of the few, and they "practically hold the life of the rest in their hands." There is "senseless extravagance" at one end of the social scale, and "poverty, misery and degradation" at the other end. No cartoon is more frequent in the papers than the one which pictures the common people as a helpless mortal in the power of some heartless giant who controls the necessaries of life.

"There has been a great gulf between the church and socialism, and for this reason, I believe, that they have misunderstood each other. Mr. Spargo, a socialist leader, said at a recent meeting of the Alumni Club of Union Seminary: 'Socialism, as nailing its theses, like Luther, at the doors of the Christian church, and this is what they say: "If a man says he is a Christian, and stands sponsor for that which steals the bloom from the cheeks of maidens; if he stands for the privileged few against the rights of the many; if in every-day life, he is denying his brother, he is denying his Lord! A large part of the sin of the world is due to the mal-adjustment of the social system."'

"This is what Lavelye, the Belgian economist, says: 'If Christianity were taught and used comfortably to the spirit of its founder, the existing social organism could not last a day.'

"The basic truth of socialism, then, is in accord with the teachings of Jesus Christ, but it does not contain the whole truth that is needful for the world. Socialists have criticized the Christian faith in this, that it has regard simply for the individual, and not for the social relations of men; that it does not interest itself in man as a citizen, as a member of society, and in his relation to his fellows in industrial matters. True, it is one of the glories of Christianity that it does concern itself with man's individual value in the sight of God; but if each man is of infinite value to "our Father," is there not the thought of brotherhood in that? Christ does not teach that the evil of the world will be remedied when the circumstance of men are changed. What is needed, is not simply an economic change, but a spiritual change in men. "To get men right economically, must first get them right religiously," Prof. Cairns, of Aberdeen, Scotland, speaks truly when he says: 'The crying need of our age is the industrial sphere is the deepening and diffusion of the sense of the common good.'

"The message of socialism is that the great need of the world has been caused by the selfishness of men; men who, if they profess religion, have not permitted it to touch their social life. Prophets of God are needed today, as in the times of Isaiah and Amos, to tell men that they have no more right to sin in their corporate life than they have to sin in their individual life. It is true, as Mr. Spargo says, that we cannot make men to be good 'when we don't care for the conditions that make them bad.' The church of God should be in the van of the fight against all social wrongs.

"Socialism is a great cry of human need. It is a call for justice; because it is a call for equality of opportunity, it has made an importation from Europe where the conditions of life are harder than in this land, but it is a call to the Christian church to preach the Gospel of social righteousness. When Oliver Wendall Holmes was asked his creed, he said: 'My creed consists of but two words; "Our Father."' Beecher said there was a whole theology in those two words. There is more. There is a whole system of sociology. There were social wrongs in our Lord's day, but He preached that the great need of men was not a change of circumstances, but a change of heart. I believe that this is the message that is needed for today. If there is real change of heart a man cannot but think of his brother and think of him in business as if he were in his place. That is the meaning of "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

LOST NOON-DAY MEAL AND INCIDENTLY HOME

Just as they were finishing their mid-day meal Sunday the Sinker family, residing on Rahway road, noticed smoke curling up at the corner of the house and upon investigating Mr. Sinker discovered flames pouring out of a second floor window near a chimney. In a few moments the entire room was ablaze and soon the entire floor was being consumed. Knowing that the house was doomed Mr. Sinker hastened to get his family out doors and notified the borough fire department and the smoke eaters from Scotch Plains.

The efforts of the firemen were confined to saving some of the furniture on the first floor because no water was to be had. The house was completely destroyed. The only water in the neighborhood was in the cistern and that was unavailable because it was directly under the kitchen.

The house was owned by W. W. Coriell, of Lincoln place and Duer street, and is said to be covered by insurance. Mr. Sinker's loss will amount to several hundred dollars on which no insurance was carried. It is believed that the fire started from a defective flue.

WHIST FOR CHURCH NETTED PARISH $150

The Charity Whist given by Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Geary on Saturday night for the benefit of St. Stephen's church was attended by about one hundred people, and the net result of the games including donations was $150. Prizes were offered at each table and the big prize, a silver loving cup, which was offered for the highest score was captured by J. K. Pettit, of East Orange. This cup was offered by Mr. and Mrs. M. McKenzie. After the playing was over light refreshments were served.

HINDU WOMEN'S PROGRESS.

From her role of half-toy, half-slave to man, penned up in the seclusion of the zenane (women's apartments), the women of Hindustan is rising to equality with men, writes Sahi Nihal Singh, in The Review of Reviews. India is daily getting anxious to accord to its women a humane and a just treatment. Sex inequality had decreed that while the widower was allowed to marry, even permitted to indulge in polygamy, the widow was forced to remain a widow. This injunction is no longer being faithfully obeyed. Widows of the highest caste are being allowed to marry.

Moreover, Hindus are making special efforts to establish homes where young and old widows are kindly treated and taught to be nurses, doctors, teachers and missionaries. The aim of these institutions is to inspire the widows to help toward the uplift of East India society and also to make them capable of supporting themselves instead of being charges on their relatives, as has been the case heretofore.

Polygamy was never very common in India, but today it is doomed. Today the woman of India is leaving the privacy of her apartments, going to modern schools for education, and entering the arena of public activity, to help along the evolution of Hindustan. Schools and colleges, especially designed for girls, and neighborhood centres meant for the advancement of women in their education are coming to be pronounced features of East Indian cities.

RAPID CUSHION MAKING.

Orange-colored linen in two shades and the coarsest mercerized cotton are the requisites for one of the most effective sofa pillows to be found.

A large square of the deeper orange is cut for each side of the cushion cover. From the centre of each is cut away a square representing about two-thirds oof the size of the cushion. Under this opening is inserted a piece of the lighter orange. The edges of the deeper orange are turned under, and along the place of joining is run a row of heavy outlining in black floss.

Nothing remains after both back and front are completed but the making of the cover and the slip stitching which shall hold in the pillow.

Quick work, indeed, but the most pleasing result, and for those who rate themselves as busy people far more satisfactory than the lengthy piece of embroidery.

Improving Pastor's Study.

Through the kindness of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church, the pastor's study in the rear of the church is being enlarged to more than double its former size. A new carpet will be laid on the floor and the wall papered and the wood work painted. The much-needed improvement is appreciated by the pastor.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE TO OPEN WAR HERE

The Anti-Saloon League will conduct a vigorous campaign in this city next Sunday, when several big meetings are to be held here, and there will be addresses by prominent temperance workers. At the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church in the afternoon, former Governor Glenn, of the South, will be the principal speaker. At the same hour a mass meeting will be held at the First Baptist church, where Judge Covington, of Georgia, will speak.

The campaign is in charge of Frank Burke, the head of the Anti-Saloon League of the State, and he will also speak here on Sunday. This is part of a plan of the league to carry its work into all parts of the State.

RECEPTION AND TEA ARE LARGELY ATTENDED

Mrs. Henry P. Henriques, of Myrtle avenue, and her mother, Mrs. William Barlow, of Prospect place, gave a reception and tea at the home of the former, Saturday afternoon. More than 250 guests invited and nearly all were present during the afternoon.

The parlors were decorated with palms, white carnations and narcissus and the dining room was decorated in green and white. During the afternon a fine program of music was given by the VanEpe Trio.

Mrs. Henriques and Mrs. Barlow were assisted in receiving by Miss Galdya Danbman, of New York. Those who poured were Mrs. A. C. Hartshorne, of Freehold; Mrs. George Howe, Mrs. Samuel Townsend and Mrs. John W. Murray, Jr., of this city. Mrs. Charles D Stillman served ice.

Those assisting in the dining-room were Mrs. William McCutchen, Mrs. E. C. Murray, Mrs. George A. Warner, Mrs. Willis West, Mrs. Charles Barlow, Mrs. W. S. Hobbie, Mrs. E. H. Hobbie, Mrs. J. W. McFee, Miss Kathryn Hartshorne, Miss May Murray, Miss Bernice Sharrett and the Misses Barlow.

PROPORTIONS OF BEAUTY.

If a woman be five feet five inches in height, her extended arm should measure, from tip of middle finger just five feet five inches, exactly her own height. A woman of this height should measure twenty-four inches round the waist and thirty-four inches above the bust.

The upper arm should measure thirteen inches and the wrist six. The calf of the leg should measure fourteen and a half inches, the thigh twenty-five and the ankle eight. From her thighs to the ground she should measure just what she measures from the thighs to the top of the head.

The distance from the elbow to the middle finger should be the same as the distance from the elbow to the middle of the chest.

From the top of the head to the chin should be just the same length as the foot, and there should be the same distance between the chin and the armpits.

The length of her hand should be just one-tenth of her height, and her feet just a seventh, and the diameter of her chest a fifth.

BIG ICE HARVEST AT WATCHUNG POND.

The ice harvest at the second pond at Watchung will probably break the record for the place this season. The ice houses which are nearly full now will contain about 24,000 tons and after that the ice will be stacked up outside the buildings. McDonough Bros. have about seventy-five men at work today cutting and stacking ice.

The first crop was of an average thickness of twelve inches and the later which is being cut now will average eight and a half. Mr. McDonough says this ice is pure crystal and free from snow.

CARPET ECONOMY.

When choosing a carpet, if you have to study economy, select one with a small pattern and of rather a light color. The small pattern cuts to a greater advantage, for there is less waste in matching the design as the breaths are sewn together, and when the wool begins to wear the light color will not contract so painfully against the string foundation as it would if it were many shades darker in tone.

There will be also economy in time in the lighter, well-covered carpet. Every thread and speck of dust will not show on it at all in the heavy reds and blues.

W. C. T. U. to Build.

The W. C. T. U., of Westfield, is to erect a $10,000 building on its property in Prospect street, that place. Recently a donation of $500 was given to the Union.

Kenneth Barron Christened.

Kenneth Barron, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin P. Hingle, of 124 Duer street, was christened Saturday at the residence of the parents. Rev. John Y. Brock, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, officiated.

SOME GOWNS SEEN AT THE CARLE SHOW

The women of Plainfield in whatever society they move are democratic and informal generally and always tastefully gowned, whether at private entertainments, sporting events, concert or theatre. As the beautiful gowns of the women patrons of the opera go far towards making that institution the social success that it is, so do the splendidly dressed women patrons of the McIntyre concerts and the Plainfield theatre increase the interest and enthusiasm and their own enjoyment in the best of music and the drama that can be secured for their pleasure.

The comfortable fur coat has set aside many of the exquisite evening coats worn earlier in the winter, but spring will bring them out again. Saturday evening at the Plainfield theatre, where Richard Carle appeared in Mary's Lamb, there were a number of notable gowns.

Mrs. Edwin S. Hooley wore a decollete gown of dark blue meteor crepe with inserts of Oriental embroidery on the bodice and finished about the square neck with bands of soft white lace. Her wrap was of biscuit color broadcloth, trimmed with black satin bands.

Mrs. A. G. Hooley was gowned in black simply made and wore a few beautiful jewels. Their guest also wore black and her beautiful hair needed no ornament.

Mrs. Frederick W. Yates wore under a black fur coat, a two-toned grey silk gown made empire with yoke and collar of point Venise lace.

Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton's gown was a white dotted black foulard, with deep square collar of heavy Irish crochet which terminated in small revers in front leaving the throat bare.

Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman, being still in mourning, wore black crepe dechine and heavy lace. Around the coiffure was a band of black ribbon held in black at one side by a black enameled butterfly.

Mrs. Frederic W. Butler wore a figured grey satin with yoke and bertha of white lace and a diamond brooch. Her wrap was black cloth with sable fox collar.

The gown worn by Mrs. Laurens H. Vanderpoel was a soft black directoire satin with very little ornament. Her guest wore pink silk trimmed with white lace.

Mrs. Leon Moran was simply gowned in a tailor-made suit of black chiffon broadcloth with a touch of Persian and lace embroidered in pastel shades.

Mrs. LeRoy Gates wore a visiting gown of black chudda cloth with yoke and collar of black applique over cloth of gold.

Black seems to be the "happy medium" among the informal as well as formal wear and the exquisite laces and oriental embroideries relieved it of all sombreness.

Society will be very largely represented at the Plainfield theatre, next Saturday, Lincoln's Birthday, when Mrs. Fiske and Holbrook Blinn in "Salvation Nell," a play in which this clever actress has scored a big hit.

CHINCILLA COATS.

Despite the costliness and increasing rarity of chinchilla, this fur is a favorite for the fortunate ones who can make use of it. In many long coats representing the limit of luxury the skins are placed horizontally at the lower part of the coat, forming a deep hem. The sleeves, too, are treated in this way.

Innovations in lining are always noticeable. Some of these chinchilla coats are lined with gray satin, and three accordion-pleated flounces of chiffon are added.

They are graduated in size, and are banded with a band of silver embroidered net.

A comfortable abundance of pockets of various sizes is to be found on all of the newest models. These are tucked away in the linings so cleverly that no bulkiness is evident.

A GIRL WITH STYLE.

It matters little to many girls who are always in the well-dressed class how they every flighty fashion vane whirls and veers. For them there are styles that are always good, conservative and dignified. And it is these girls who stand out pre-eminently in a class so far removed from that which flows in the little whim of fashion as the two poles.

The tailored suit is one of the set styles. It is always admirable. Skirts are narrow or plaited, quite five inches off the floor and cut with the least flare. Coats are slightly above the waist line and heavily stitched. The coats are innocent of trimming, mannish in cut with large pearl or fabric-covered buttons. Sleeves are full length, with a turnback, and straight stitched cuff trimmed with three smaller buttons.

The Robin Hood Hat.

An excellent little hat for everyday wear in the country is in Robin Hood shape, and is of velvet or felt. It is most seen in blue, green and black, and is trimmed with a single, upstanding, perky quill. The Robin Hood shape is distinct from all others has character and is a success. It is picturesque and certainly smart looking.

HOMEOPATHS MEET IN NEW YORK IN MAY

Homeopathic physicians all over the country are preparing to flock to New York city next May, to participate in one of the greatest celebrations in which the members of their school of medicine have ever taken part—the semi-centennial exercises of the New York Homeopathic Medical College. The college, which is represented by graduates in almost every State in the Union, and which draws its students from almost as wide a field, is planning to observe the completion of its fiftieth year with elaborate ceremony. Representatives of all the country's homeopathic colleges of America will attend, and it is expected that the occasion will bring together the greatest gathering of homeopaths that the country has seen.

The alumni association of the college is co-operating with the college authorities to bring back the graduates from all parts of the country. The former students will play an important part in the ceremonies. The first day of the celebration, May 31, will be devoted to the commencement exercises of the college, but the two following days will be given over almost exclusively to the alumni. They will attend a great public meeting on June 1, and will then scatter to various parts of the city, to hold class reunions. Each class from 1870 to 1909 will hold its own affair, while those in the decade from 1910 to '60 will hold a joint reunion. On June 2, the annual business meeting and banquet of the alumni will be held, with Dr. George Royal, of Des Moines, Ia., presiding.

Plainfield will undoubtedly be well represented at the semi-centennial celebration, for it numbers among its physicians six graduates of the college, some of whom will go to New York for the exercises and the reunions. They are: Dr. Daniel C. Adams, 46 Grove street; Dr. Jefferson C. Anderson, 405 West Fourth street; Dr. A. Bland, 114 Park avenue; Dr. Roger L. Cooley, Plainfield Sanatarium; Dr. Frank W. Cornwell, 192 East Front street, and Dr. E. L. Finch, 1106 Park avenue.

Flower Hospital, which is owned and operated by the college is the only hospital in the country owned and operated by a medical college and the combination has proved of the greatest advantage to instructors and students.

THE BEAUTIFUL LACEWING FLY

On almost any evening during the summer twilight the charming lacewing fly may be seen; its curious flight alone will suffice to identify it, says a writer in The Strand Magazine. Between the hedgerows of the lanes, in the garden paths, or along the woodland glades, it may be readily distinguished from the numerous moths that appear as the daylight declines.

The flights of the moths are very varied in character; some of the larger and dark-colored kinds sweep past at a tremendous pace, their movements are lost to view in the mind of the observer whether his eyes have not deceived him, while many of the smaller and pale-colored species flutter about like wind-tossed snowflakes. Between these two extreme methods, every grading of locomotion by flight may be observed.

Distinct from all, however, appears that of another insect. It is apparently travelling along a straight line, its pale, silvery wings extended wide and rapidly vibrating, but its progress is so slow and inbored when compared with even the slowest-flying moth that we are reminded of a traction engine moving along a road on which motor cars and cyclists are hurrying. This slowly-progressing insect is the lacewing fly.

Sardine Omelet.

Four canned sardines, free from skin and bone and chopping table-spoonful of butter, white pepper, three eggs, one teaspoonful anchovy extract, one tablespoonful cream or milk. Break the eggs into a basin, add the cream or milk and beat up well, add the sardines into same, dice, add these, with the anchovy, extract, and mix thoroughly. Season with a pinch of white pepper. Melt the butter in an omlet or small frying pan, pour in the mixture, cook well, and serve on the dish ready to set. Then form the mixture into a cushion shape or half moon. Brown in the oven and turn out quickly on to a hot dish. Serve at once.

Sensible Though Drunk.

Henry Harris, colored, of 142 West Third street, walked into police headquarters Saturday night, and asked to be protected from himself. Harris was intoxicated and knew it and rather than be taken by the patrol wagon thought it the better way to simply ask to be locked up. Judge Runyon commended him for his prompt realization of his condition as well as the sense he had in seeking protection and let the man go on his promise to not let it happen again.

Dutch Arms Banquet.

The Dutch Arms, the men's association of Trinity Reformed church, *has decided to give a banquet on Fri*day night, March 18, with the women of the church as guests. James C. Field is the chairman of the committee of arrangements.

ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN BY JUNIOR MISSION BAND

An instructive and altogether charming entertainment was given Saturday afternoon by the Junior Mission Band, of the First Baptist church in the lecture room. The members of the band, who have been studying and working for the past half year on Missions, presented a costumed representation of the various nationalities aided by the Home Mission Society. Mrs. Reuben Knox, who has charge of the band, interrogated them on the early settlment of the United States, and later imigration into it. The replies were made by members of the band in their national costumes. Miss Dorothy Lee represented the Spaniards; Katharine Sill, Catholic French; Elsie Moore, French Huguenots; Fred Hunt, English Cavalier; Everett Case, Pilgrims; Bessie Case, Puritans; Lucy Denman, Scotch; Lillian Fountain, Irish; Louise Sill, Quarker; Mary Buchanan, Hollander; Emmeline Manning, Swede; Claire Doremus, Italian; ate Hoffman, Russian; Emily Pilger, Hungarian; Elizabeth Wynn, Japanese, and Constance Harris, Chinese. Mabel Douglas acted the part of the German, assigned to Flora Krausse, who was detained at home by illness in the family. Margaret Bonnell told of the work of the Home Mission Society; Mrs. Arthur M. Harris read "A Colonial Christmas Story;" Rachael Smith recited "Paul Revere's Ride," and Mrs. Albert E. Kennelly read a leaflet "How to be Happy," by Mrs. Alice Freeman Palmer.

Appropriate music by the band was a feature of the entertainment. Miss Alice Drake being the accompanist. The selections were "Prayer for Peace," "Morning Breaking Waves Dashed High," "Italian Hymn" and "My Country 'tis of Thee." William Holmes of the church choir, sang with fine effect "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground," and Miss Elsie Moore sang very sweetly "The Bonnie Tea Party."

The dolls, aprons, linen scrap books and patch work quilt made by the members of the band to be sent to Ellis Island, were on exhibition at a table presided over by Mrs. Frederick S. Thompson.

A sale of fancy articles, cake, candy and valentines followed the entertainment, and chocolate and wafers were served. Miss Edna White was in charge of the fancy table and Mrs. George White and Mrs. Harold Sorrell managed the chocolate. Mrs. John McLoughlin and Mrs. Albert E. Kennelly had control of the costuming.

ASSEMBLY RECEIVES LOCAL OPTION BILL

The introduction of the local option bill backed by the Anti-Saloon League took place Monday in both Houses, Senator Gebhardt introducing the bill in the Senate and Mr. Ridgway in the House.

The bill is identical, throughout with the Plummer bill of last year. It provides that upon a petition of at least thirty per cent. of the voters of any city, town, township, village, borough or other municipality of the State, the County or Circuit Judge shall order a special election, to be held at least sixty days from any other election, in and for such municipality to decide whether or not licenses shall be issued therein. If the majority shall vote against license, no license shall be granted in such municipality until such vote is reversed, but if the majority shall vote for license, licenses shall be granted as before. After two years a new election may be obtained by either *side in the same way, whether li*cense or no-licens won before. The bill expressly excepts the serving of liquor in a private home, the use of wine for sacramental purposes, its sale by manufacturers outside of dry territory, and the sale by druggists for medicinal purposes.

MARRIED AGAINST GERMANY.

Royal marriages do not affect international relations as they once did, but they have their influence.

Royalty makes more fuss over its boys than its girls, yet Emporer William would be better off if he had more girls. He has female cousins, but it is more satisfying to a monarch or a commoner to marry daughters and granddaughters of a king or emporer than his cousins.

The Queen of Spain is Victoria's granddaughter, so Spain is a virtual ally of England. Portugal probably will become another ally through the marriage of Manuel, its king, with an English princess. England is represented in Norway, has prospects in Sweden, is related to Denmark and through Denmark with Russia and Greece.

The Queen of Italy inherits hostility towards Austria with her Montenegrin blood and has had her part in weakening Italy's ties with the triple alliance. Ferdinand of Bulgaria, though partly German, is related to Manuel and indirectly to Alfonso.

Europe is pretty well married against Germany. Edward has played his cards well. Daughters, granddaughters and nieces are cheaper than Dreadnaughts.—Chicago News

FIRE SCARE AT CHURCH

Pastor Dismisses Crescent Ave. Congregation at Morning Worship.

ON FIRE CHIEF'S ADVICE.

No Sign of Disorder When Rev. Dr. Zelie Makes Announcement —Cause of the Trouble.

A fire scare brought the morning worship in the Crescent Avenue church to an abrupt termination Sunday morning and resulted in the dismissal of the congregation at 11:30 o'clock by the pastor, Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie.

The prime cause of the excitement was the issuance of smoke from the register in the west side of the church. Shortly after the service had gotten underway, James E. Kimball, head usher, noticed the smoke, and immediately telephoned to Fire Chief Doane.

The firemen arrived at the church at 11:05 o'clock. Efforts were made to locate the cause of the smoke in the cellar, but the labors of Chief Doane were in vain. After a consultation with the trustees Chief Doane advised that Dr. Zelie dismiss the congregation. At 11:20 o'clock the service was brought to a close by singing the doxology.

While nearly every person in the congregation was aware of the pres*ence of the firemen, all kept their* heads and not even a ripple of excitement prevailed. After the dismissal the members of the congregation left the church in perfect order.

Chief Doane and the firemen remained on duty one hour after the service was concluded, but their efforts to discover the source of the smoke were fruitless. No traces of fire were discovered. Chief Doane, however, entertains the belief that the smoke was due to the burning of varnish in the register which was painted a few days ago.

TEMPERANCE SCHEME.

A great movement to restore the English public house to its traditional use as a place of ease, recreation and refreshment has been initiated in England, reports the London Express.

Lord Halsbury, the former Lord *Chancellor, presided over a gather*ing of peers, members of Parliament, clergy and others, at which it was decided to establish a True Temperance Association. The aim of the movement is to associate the moderate people all over the country who dissent from the extreme and destructive views of the irritable fanatic totalers, in a reasonable and sane policy of improving licensed houses by rendering them more like the Continental resorts, where the ordinary man feels no shame in sitting with his wife and children—and of thus reducing drunkenness.

Lord Halsbury drew a clear distinction between the methods of teetotal temperance and the aims of the True Temperance Association, in his introductory speech.

"The great aim of our organization," he said, "will be to try something which has not been tried yet in this matter—appealing to the will and the heart of the people, instead of resorting to mere means of repression. If you were to train up a whole body of abstainers, who were abstainers because they could not get drunk, they would not be men, they would be slaves.

"The view of the temperance party is to improve the public house out of existence, instead of improving it for the public use. They regard the public house as a disgraceful place to go to, and as a place which, if a man visited it, he should leave as soon as he had a drink.

"Is it surprising," asked Lord Halsbury, "that the public house should have become a mere drinking shop? It cannot be denied that such results have been produced. We want to alter all that, and to make every public house a decent place of refreshment and resort." This declaration was greeted with much applause.

"The very essence of this move*ment is to try to remove* the stigma which attaches to the public house," said Lord Halsbury. "It is very hard that a respectable man who lives in a village should be debarred from getting a drink and from friendly intercourse with other men simply because it is thought that to 'frequent' a public house marks him as a less respectable member of society. It is also a dangerous policy."

"The more open drinking is the better," said Canon H. R. Gamble, of Holy Trinity, Sloane street. "English people are not prepared to be dragooned into total abstinence, or into adopting the organized hypocrisy of total prohibition." He supported the scheme in the interests of free and healthy social life.

Accounting for a Condition.

"Why is it that we have so few great works of literature?" said the man with long hair.

"Perhaps," answered Miss Cayenne, "it is because so much of our literary talent is devoted to proving that literature is extinct."—Washington Evening Star.

CITY FATHERS' ROUTINE

Minor Matters Which Occupied Attention of Common Council.

MANY PETITIONS WERE HEARD.

Reports, Resolutions, Communications and Recommendations

Take Time of the Governing Body.

Owing to the fact that the Common Council had not held a regular meeting since January, there was an unusually large number of petitions of minor importance presented at the February session, Monday, and it required a considerable amount of time to dispose of them.

Interested property-owners asked the Council to vacate property on West Eighth street, between Central avenue and Division street, being an extension of Nott street, claiming that it had not been opened in twenty years, the legal time allowed for such improvements. The matter was referred to the street committee and later an ordinance complying with the request of the petitioners was introduced passed on two readings ordered advertised, and March 7 was fixed as the time for a public hearing.

Andrew D. Jennings, whose term as a trustee of the fire department pension fund, expired, was reappointed for a full term of four years, upon the recommendation of Councilman Duncan W. Tayler, of the fire and building committee.

The bonds of Tax Collector William R. Townsend, City Treasurer William F. Arnold and Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett were presented and referred to Corporation Counsel Marsh for approval, after which they will be filed.

A communication was received from the Board of Education informing the Council that Leander N. Lovell and William S. Tyler had been appointed as representatives of that body on the Board of School Estimate, and the communication was filed.

W. H. Siegland, of West Fourth street, petitioned for lights between Clinton and Hunter avenues; Rosa Frucht presented a bond required in connection with the removal of a house; both matters being referred to the proper committees.

The Public Service Corporation informed the Council that two lights had been located on Thornton avenue, as ordered. H. H. MacMurray and other residents of West Fifth Sixth, Seventh streets and Hobart avenue, petitioned for sanitary sewers and this was referred to the sewer committee.

Andrew McClean Parker, who explained that he had recently acquired considerable land on Randolph road, said that he wished to add his name to the petition for the improvement of that thoroughfare. This was referred to the street committee, as was also a petition from W. H. Abbott and others, asking that the building line be established on the south side of Woodland and Hillside avenues to conform to that on the opposite side of those avenues.

N. W. Randolph and others asked for two lights on Belleview avenue, near Park avenue. This was referred to the light committee. Petitions for two hydrants on Midway avenue, between Leland avenue and George street and a fire-alarm box at Leland avenue and George street, were referred to the fire committee with power.

Residents of Watchung avenue, between Hillside and Woodland avenue, petitioned for crosswalks; also that property owners be made to clean their walks of snow. The matters were referred to the proper committees.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk appointed John O'Brien, of the Board of Health; Dr. William H. Anthony, of the hospital and Robert McCormick, of the First National Bank, special policemen, and they were confirmed on motion of Councilman Charles C. Randolph, of the police committee.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported that he had granted fifteen permits during the past month. Overseer of the Poor A. D. Ayers reported all the house expenses for the past month to be $361.81 and outside expenses of $264.69.

Chairman Buxton, of the finance committee, presented four volumes of block maps of the city, prepared by Frank J. Hubbard, civil engineer, and a resolution offered by him and adopted, approved the same as the official city maps. In this connection H. C. Van Emburgh, civil engineer, was engaged for the year to make such changes as may be necessary from time to time.

A resolution offered by Mr. Buxton and adopted, provided for an appropriation of $21 to secure copies of certain laws to complete the file at the city offices.

Other resolutions offered by Mr. Buxton and adopted, authorized the city treasurer to make the sinking funds the following amounts: $950 on account of Darrow Avenue School; $1,400 on account of East End fire-house; $450 on account of the Donellen Avenue School, and $525 on account of the furnishing fund for that school; also authorizing the city treasurer to purchase the city bonds on account of school, new fire house, etc., for the various sinking funds.

On the request of Tax Collector W. R. Townsend, who advanced the money, Mr. Buxton offered a resolution, which was adopted, refunding to him $15.82, that being an amount overpaid by Miss Emily Hartridge.

Mr. Glosk, chairman of the street committee, offered several ordinances, which were adopted on first and second readings, ordered advertised an Monday night, March 7, was the time fixed for a public hearing on the several matters.

These ordinances include one to open and layout Stelle avenue from Union street to the George E. Fuller property; another changing the name of Donellen avenue, in the city, to that of Myrtle avenue, the name applied to that avenue in the borough; another accepting Thornton avenue as a public street from Park to Hillside avenues; another to vacate Byron place, on petition of L. V. F. Randolph.

Mr. Glosk also offered a resolution which was adopted, inviting sealed proposals for crushed stone, culverts, crosswalks, etc., to be opened March 7.

The Council approved the expenditure of $17.26 for the inspection of the auxiliary fire boxes in the public schools, and a resolution offered by him and adopted, provided for the expenditure of $150 to install a fire box in the new Darrow avenue school. Another resolution by the same member and adopted, authorized the fire and building committee to purchase a bale of sponges at a price not to exceed $2.50 a pound.

The fire and building committee, through resolutions offered by Mr. Taylor and adopted, authorized the fire and building committee to have the fire bells in the East End fire house lined with metal at an expense not to exceed $28.50, to be charged to the bond issue of No. 4 house, and to purchase fifteen rubber coats and twenty-one pairs of rubber boots for the call men in the department, and charged to the bond issue of No. 4 house.

On a motion of Mr. Mygatt, the president was requested to appoint a sewage committee of three, of which the president will be a member ex-officio, to take up the work of last year's committee. The appointments will be made later. Also on the motion of Mr. Mygatt the old consolidation committee was discharged.

BOROUGH SCHOOL BOARD WILL LOSE GOOD MEN

For the purpose of discussing the annual budget which will be presented to borough citizens for their approval or disapproval at the annual school meeting in the Somerset street school on Tuesday night, March 15, the borough school board will meet in special session next Monday night. There is considerable sentiment existing among borough citizens that the budget should be lowered and it is the understanding that the school board will make an effort to meet the prevailing ideas on the question.

The school meeting is likely to be one of the most important in several years as four vacancies are to be filled. The terms of Dr. James R. Joy, Dr. J. H. Cooley, Councilman C. L. Nichols and Robert Clark, Jr., expire. Mr. Clark has served one year in the board, having been elected last year to succeed J. Herbert Case, resigned.

If Drs. Cooley and Joy carry out their determinations the board will be obliged to elect members to succeed these citizens who have rendered excellent service during their administrations. Dr. Cooley is the dean of the board, having served twelve years, and Dr. Joy has served nine years. Both men have declared their intentions of stepping out at the school meeting.

It so happens that these men have served as chairmen of two of the most important committees. Dr. Cooley has been the head of the buildings and grounds committee for several years, while Dr. Joy has been of valuable assistance as chairman of the teachers' committee.

Jack Wearren in Havana.

Local friends of Jack Rearren, the local Jack Tar, who is on the U. S. Battleship Connecticut, have been receiving souvenir picture cards during the past few days from different points in Cuba. Wearren is now in Havana. His term of enlistment expires next month when he will return home.

Regulate Diet.

If one's face is too red, be careful of the diet. Take no hot drinks, but cooling ones. Don't wash the face with cold water except when you feel flushed. Lukewarm water is better. When going out in the sun wear a thin veil. Hot foot baths are also said to help in a case of this kind.

Friends Bid Farewell.

More than fifty friends gathered at the North Avenue station, Wednesday night last, to bid farewell to Franklyn Heath Merrill and daughter, Miss Dorothy Merrill, who left for Minneapolis to join Mr. Merrill, the well-known inventor, who is interested in the manufacture of a delivery wagon he has invented; also other inventions soon to be placed on the market.

ABOUT HALLEY'S COMET

Celestial Visitor Soon to Be Visible—Will Present Brilliant Spectacle.

ITS HISTORY SINCE A. D. 451.

Superstition of the Ancients—Orbit Discovered in 1682—At Its Best May 18.

Once again the pendulum is swinging into sight and within three months all eyes will be turned heavenward to gaze on the monster comet which bears the name of the man who first discovered that the brilliant mass of gas has an orbit of its own and would surely appear again even going so far as to predict the month and approximate day.

Halley's comee will be visible to the naked eye in April and May and in the early part of the latter month will be a morning spectacle, while at the end of that month it will be best visible at evening. The location of the comet will be found in the western heavens near the horizon.

Many superstitions are connected with the appearance of this comet, not the least of which is the belief that its approach heralds panic, disaster and pestilence to say nothing of death and destruction.

Edmund Halley, who rounded out his active career in the high office of Astronomer Royal, of England, was the first astronomer to recognize that the comet which he had seen in 1682 traveled the same circuit as those of 1607 and 1531. These three returns was the same comet at its feeblest. He did not recognize in his comet the great visitor of 1301, 1378 and 1456, but the identification was a triumph for his mathematics, a cold matter of equations. He was proud of the work, however, and he announced his discovery and predicted the comets return with unerring accuracy.

The superstitious dread which accompanied every re-appearance of this comet is told of in history. In the year 451 Attila and his hordes were sweeping out of Hungary in the long train of wagons hooded with hides, not men and women but demons, their leader no king or chief but Attila, the Scourge of God. The comet blazed the path to the fat weaklings of Rome and behind him lay a desert. And the trembling Romans believed that it was the comet that brought the destruction Attila wrought.

1068 showed England cowed before the onrushing Normans and Danes and attributing the invasion to the coming of the 1378: the comet again. Its threat across the sky and Holy Church is rent by a great schism. 1456: Hunyadi makes his last stand for Christendom and beats back the Turk at Belgrade, but Athens goes down, the Crescent floats above the Acropolis. The comet which Pope Calixtus is fondly believed to have fought with a papal bull. 1531: Pizarro sweeps down on the empire of the Incas. Christendom no longer fears its comets. The people look on it as a harbinger of good fortune. 1607: Jamestown is settled as the comet beams on the beginning of a new and greater empire. 1682: La Salle opens the Mississippi through a savage fallow waste, which is to be the granary of the world. 1759: The comet looks upon the Plains of Abraham where Wolfe and Montcalm fell equal heroes in the combat that decided the fate of America. This was the critical beat of the great pendulum

Halley was a poor boy, working in a soap factory in England. He was born in 1656 and was the son of a soap boiler in a London suburb. He was taken from his squalid surroundings by Dean Collet's noble charity and the boy was sent to Oxford when seventeen years old. Three years later he published a treatise on the planetary orbits and argued the sun's axial rotation. This was a surprise to all his friends as none knew of his study of the heavens in fact were ignorant of his predilection for astronomy. He showed that he had it in him to rise above ordinary and the tenacity to cling to a purpose once formed.

The question has naturally arisen as to the comet next spring—will it be a blaze of glory and wonder in the empyrean for all men to see or will it be an object of telescopic inquiry only? The comet has been most uncertain; sometimes it has stretched a flaming sword across the sky and at other times it has been but a thin wand among the stars. At any rate in whatever shape the comet appears it will prove that Halley's computations were correct even though they were made under great disavantages and with instruments which at the present day would seem to be mere playthings.

Latest advices from astronomical experts puts the date on which the comet will be most plainly visible as May 18.

WANT NAME FOR SCHOOL

Board of Education Invites Public to Suggest One for West End Building.

LECTURE FOR FEBRUARY 18.

Ovide Musin to Play on February 22—Bill for White Rats and Pigeons—Other Items of Interest.

The Dunellen avenue school which is now called the West End school, needs a name which must be in keeping with the names of the other public schools of the city and the Board of Education would like suggestions from the public as to the most acceptable and popular appellation Someone has already suggested La Fayette as being appropriate, using as an argument that had it not been for the Count the great American institutions would never have come into being.

This with several other matters came up before the board at its meeting Monday at which all the members excepting James F. Buckle were present. Reports from the medical and dental examiners were read and a shudder ran down the spines of the members of the board when Secretary Woodhull announced that more than three hundred exposed nerves were discovered in the teeth of pupils in two schools.

A communication was read from City Clerk J. M. McMurray announcing that Herbert Buxton and Charles C. Randolph were appointed by the Common Council to act with Messrs. Lovell and Tyler on the Board of School Estimate.

Applications were received from William Baker, of 262 Watchung avenue and John A. Kriney, of 361 Evona avenue, for positions as janitors. Both applications were filed.

The application of F. J. Hubbard for permission to use the High School auditorium for a violin concert on February 22 in which Ovide Musin is to appear, caused a lengthy discussion. The concert is to be given for the benefit of the Y. M. C. A. boys' department and the question which arose was as to whether such a function came under the head of "educational meetings" or merely money making. The McIntyre concerts, all of which were given in the High School, were cited as a precedent and on a motion of Mr. Tyler the required permission for the use of the auditorium was granted.

Mr. Woodhull said the board ought to be careful what they did as they were being subjected to criticism for some of their acts. Mr. Tyler said he did not care how much they were criticised as when they did was done with conscientious regard for their duty.

After a short discussion the bill of the Black & Boyd Mfg. Co. was ordered paid. This bill has been held up because the bronze lining of the water posts of the Washington School was worn off. The company promises to repair the damage as soon as the frost is out of the posts.

There will be a lecture given in the auditorium on February 15 by H. B. Winship, whose topic will be "Schools and Their Critics." The 740 questions made by the Senate Investigating Committee have been answered and the papers containing them will be forwarded to Trenton as soon as they have been revised by Dr. B. vanD. Hedges and Mr. Woodhull.

One of the bills passed for payment last night caused an inquiry. It was from a local dealer and was for thirty-two white rats and some pigeons. They were purchased for demonstrating purposes for the class in biology. The meeting adjourned at 9:30.

MR. AND MRS. ED. FEIRING GIVE CHARMING EUCHRE.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Feiring of Orchard place, entertained friends at a delightful euchre Monday. Thirty guests were in attendance and the decorations were green and white. After the card contests supper was served.

The games were highly enjoyable as well as productive of keen excitement. The winners of the woman's prizes were Mrs. Fred Todd, Mrs. McKeon and Miss Elizabeth Casey; the men who divided the prize list were John Kyle, John Carty and John Connolly.

Between the Acts.

Between the acts doth hubby fret
And soon declare
That he must go outside to get
A little air.

No use at all for wife to pout
Or cross become;
He needs fresh air and must go out
To gather some.

But there is surely something wrong
About the breeze;
For hubby comes back smelling strong
Of musty cheese.

THE PRIVATE SECRETARY

Clever Performance by Amateurs in Park Club Auditorium.

ACTORS WERE LETTER PERFECT

Percy Watson and Miss Dorothy Randall, the Stars—All the Company Good.

Amateur actors come and conquer, some of them leave reminders behind them, while others pass into oblivion and with reason. But the young people of Holy Cross church who interpreted "The Private Secretary" Monday in the Park Club auditorium, belong to the first mentioned class, and it is hoped they will not stop at the performance of last night, but that they will continue to add to their repertories and give other plays. Individually and collectively the performers were equal to the dramatic demands made upon them and acquitted themselves with an aplomb worthy of veterans.

A synopsis of the play is not necessary, neither is criticism of the individuals who performed so well the intention of this story, but salient features such as Percy Watson's conception of the private secretary, and Miss Dorothy Randall's splendid characterization of "Miss Ashford," should be given their need of praise. These two young people acted with a freedom from self consciousness which was refreshing, while they were ably supported by the whole company.

The absence of the need for a prompter was noticeable. All the actors were letter perfect; something unusual in an amateur performance, and during all three acts they were interrupted by applause by the large audience.

FAULTY CONSTRUCTION OF BUILDING ALLEGED

William J. Ford, of 222 East Fourth street, in a communication to the Common Council, Monday took occasion to complain of the methods and material used in the erection of a concrete one-story building on that street by Louis Van Nest. He alleged that the material had cracked, the side walls had bulged, making walking on that side of the street dangerous.

Mr. Ford said that he took the matter up with Chief Doane, who informed him that he was ill at the time the building was erected, and not able to give the matter his attention. Mr. Ford declared that in case of fire there would be serious consequences and he requested the Council to take the matter up. It was referred to the fire and buildings committee.

RESOLUTION OF RESPECT FOR MRS. HENRY HALL.

These resolutions have been passed by the board of managers of the Plainfield Exchange for Woman's Work, of which Mrs. Henry L. Hall was president:

The many friends of Mrs. Hall have been shocked to learn of her sudden death at Newport, R. I., on February 5, and in the Plainfield Exchange for Woman's Work her loss will be irreparably felt. She has been an earnest, tactful, capable friend of the Exchange. Taking the presidency at a critical time in its career, she showed rare executive ability in guiding the Exchange into a larger and more effective field, and yet with it all, her kindly nature created only friends for her in the board. She was an officer with whom it was a satisfaction for the other officers to work, and a woman whose loss to society, and to the interests of the Exchange in her heart, and who gave of her time to its cause.

It is the pleasure of the board that this expression of their sorrow and appreciation be entered on the minutes of the society, a copy sent to Mr. Hall and also published in the Plainfield papers.

The Scottish women's championship tournament will be held this year over the links of the Nairn Club on June 3 and following days. Miss Elsie Kyle, of St. Andrews, is the title holder.

The day of prayer of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Baptist church, will be observed at the First Baptist church, Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. All women of the congregation are invited and are requested to bring "The Helping Hand."

OWNERSHIP REFERENDUM

City Fathers to Have Voters Decide on Water Supply Question.

RESOLUTION FAVORING IT.

The Common Council Orders Corporation Counsel to Comply With the Legal Formalities.

Steps were taken by the Common Council at the February meeting, Monday, to prepare plans for submitting the question of the city acquiring control of the water supply, as exclusively announced in The Daily Press. Mr. Mygatt offered the resolution, which was adopted, that it is the sense of the Common Council that the question be submitted to the people for a vote, and that Corporation Counsel Marsh be requested to prepare such papers for consideration at the March meeting.

The idea is to have the matter in such shape that the election can be held the latter part of March or the first of April. Mr. Mygatt explained the importance of action at this time, and the matter having been discussed more or less by the members of the Council, they are prepared to vote in favor of the proposition.

Some little amusement was occasioned when the vote was taken. Mr. Buxton absented himself from the room for a few minutes, and it was the opinion that he did not care to vote, but simply was disgusted. Jacob Dunham was sent after him and returned within a few minutes with the absent member. He voted in the affirmative.

This action does not mean that the city will buy the local water plant, but simply that the people so decide condemnation proceedings will be instituted for the purpose of ascertaining the price at which the city can buy the plant if it desires.

FORT RIGHTLY FAVORS INCOME TAX REFERENDUM

Taking a stand diametrically opposed to that of Governor Hughes, of New York, with reference to the proposed amendment to the United States Constitution giving Congress the power to impose an income tax, Governor Fort Monday submitted to the Legislature a form of the amendment received from the Federal Government accompanied by a message strongly advocating its passage.

Governor Fort notes that there is criticism of the amendment on the ground that under it the income upon State or municipal securities may be taxed. He does not agree to this point of view, declaring that there is no merit in the charge that if the amendment is adopted and becomes a part of the fundamental law there will be a decrease in the value of municipal securities, or that Congress might, through such a tax, impair the power of the States, as argued by Governor Hughes. "Neither of these suggestions seems to me to have force," said Governor Fort. "Certainly, the Governor says, "Suppose one per centum of tax were levied upon incomes. Under such a tax the holder of a one thousand dollar four per cent. State or municipal bond would pay an income tax on forty dollars a year, which would amount to forty cents per annum.

"If the patriotism of our citizens and the interest of our financial institutions, who take and hold State and municipal securities, is at so low an ebb as to cause such a tax to affect the patriotism, the Governor says, "Such securities, we are indeed in an unfortunate condition in the Republic. No one can believe that such a condition exists.

"The inability to impose an income tax, if the necessities of the government require it, would amount to a national calamity.

"The Congress practically unanimously adopted and submitted this proposed amendment. It is vital to the safety and security of the Republic in time of need, and is without danger in time of peace conferred.

The Young People's Association of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will meet Friday night for mission study in three classes. The adult class will be taught by Miss Harriet Halloway, on South America; the class for girls by Miss Edna Brown, on Korea, and the class for boys by Howard McWilliams, on Immigration.

HOTEL PROPRIETOR SELL HIS BUSINESS

John Burns disposed of his business at the Hotel Kenesington Monday night when the Common Council by an unanimous vote favorably acted on his petition to transfer the excise license for the place to Alexander Riley, of Philadelphia. Mr. Riley took possession immediately. The consideration for the deal, negotiated by Ralph L. Morrow, is not known but is said to have been over $13,000. This includes only the hotel business, the hostelry being owned by John H. Campbell.

Since purchasing the business, a little over a year ago, from W. J. Paulson, of Red Bank, Mr. Burns has made an enviable reputation for himself as a man of business integrity and in consequence made a host of friends here. His place has been considered a model one. Mr. Burns and his family Monday removed to their old home in Flemington. He has amassed a fortune during the years he has spent in the business in various cities and will now lead a retired life.

FORESTERS TO FIGHT GREAT WHITE PLAGUE

Announcement is made by W. T. Bingham, of Elizabeth, representative of the Supreme Chief Ranger of the Independent Order of Foresters of New Jersey, that the Foresters have joined the ranks of the crusaders in the war upon the white plague and, with a membership of more than a quarter of a million, had decided to combat the disease by the establishment of an up-to-date sanatorium for the treatment of tuberculosis in its incipient stages. Foresters have just completed the purchase of 1,000 acres of land in one of the most desirable and healthful locations in the Adirondack Mountains.

Realizing the possibility of saving the lives of many of the members who might be stricken with this disease, providing they could receive proper treatment at the outset, Elbert G. Stevenson, the supreme chief ranger of the Foresters, determined to secure a site in a healthful giving region where the order could battle with the white plague. As a result the order has become the owner of one of the finest territories in the Adirondacks. Rainbow Lake, famed as a summer resort, is the spot selected. It is advantageously situated, directly on the order could battle with the white plague. As a result the order has become the owner of one of the finest territories in the Adirondacks. Rainbow Lake, famed as a summer resort, is the spot selected. It is advantageously situated, directly on the New York Central Railroad, two miles from the well-known "Paul Smith's" and about five miles from Saranac Lake.

The site includes the famous lake from which it receives its name and hundreds of acres of spruce, pine and hard wood trees. Rainbow Inn, which is included in the purchase, is a large hotel with fifty large rooms, and a large annex, both fully furnished ready for immediate occupancy. It is anticipated by Mr. Stevenson that within sixty days the sanatorium will receive its first inmates.

The purchase of the property has been made from a contingent fund at the disposal of the supreme executive, and the institution will be conducted from a fund that the executive will arrange for, without entailing additional expense upon the membership of the order.

This sanatorium idea is the second important fraternal feature that has been furnished the membership and their dependents by the Foresters. The Orphan's Home Fund, which was originated by the late Mr. Oronhyatekha, twenty-five years, the supreme chief ranger of the order, had for its purpose the care and education of the orphans left destitute by the death of their parents. Mr. Stevenson, who at the death of Dr. Oronhyatekha succeeded as supreme chief ranger, enlarged upon this idea so that orphans of a deceased father, even though their mother survived, could be cared for if necessary. He not only continued a Foresters' Home for the little ones now situated at Oakville, Ont., but arranged so that in worthy cases where the mother was so situated as to give proper care to very young children at her home, the order pays to her each month the sum that would be required to provide for the children were they inmates of the orphans' home. This permits the mother to keep her little family together, providing a home not only for the children but herself as well.

At present there are fifty children without parents, inmates of the home, while nearly two hundred young children remain in the care of their mothers at the expense of the Orphans' Home Fund. New Jersey has thirteen children as inmates of the home.

The Orphans' Home Fund is maintained by taking one cent each month from the regular court dues paid by each member. This small sum aggregates at this time about $24,000 a year.

CONFUSION.

When in the window of the milliner,
I view you with amazed bewilderment,
And may not know which end is front or rear,
Nor even tell, O Chaos! which may be
The top or bottom. Fruits and flowers strange,
And feathes heaped on feather, till they rise,
Like Ossa upon Pelion, piled, of old,
And then some, I am filled with wondrous awe—
My wildered senses reel and I would fain
Betake me to some Bacchanalian grot
Where snowy-aproned sagelites dispense
O'er slabs of rosewood or mahogany
The foamy, soothing essence of the hop.

But when I see you sat in perfect poise
Above my lady's face, when I behold
The subtle blending of her loveliness
With your strange shape of erstwhile mystery,
And all that once was dark is then made clear,
I strive in vain for words, articulate,
To voice the seething thoughts that crowd my brain;
I grope for language, that I may express
My wonder, but by tongue can only say:
GOSH!

REV. JOHN V. DOLL MAKES AN ADDRESS

The mortgage burning at the Grand Avenue Reformed church, Asbury Park, Wednesday night, was held on the anniversary of the founding of the local church, and was a dual occasion for rejoicing and congratulations. Several ministers took part in the exercises, including Rev. John Y. Brook, former pastor of the church, and now pastor of Trinity Reformed church, this city.

One of the best talks of the evening was by Mr. Brooek. He first spoke in a humorous vein and then offered his hearty congratulations at the payment of the church debt. He referred to the very pleasant associations with the church for two and a half years while he was pastor. It was in that church that he was ordained and during his pastorate accomplished effective work, helping the church in all departments.

Launching out on the line of what makes a modern and a model church, Mr. Brook said he did not think it was a church modeled entirely after the manner of the church in the last century, although there were probably some features that might be followed with profit.

"The model church for the twentieth century," he continued, "is the apostolic church of the first century. It is based on four foundations—prayer, liberality, brotherhood and the missionary spirit.

"The church should be pre-eminently a home of prayer for the pastor, the members, the Sunday-school, the afflicted, missions, etc. We could not have all things in common life in the olden days, owing to the changed economic conditions, but that would not hinder our liberality and tolerance of other people. The church is the whitest organization on earth today and should be first in men's minds. We ought to share our sorrows as well as our joys, no matter about the social scale, for we are all brothers. The missionary spirit is vitally necessary. The burning of this mortgage is no evidence of church spirituality. There are things worse than mortgages that can overtake a church—for instance, the lack of spirituality and the missionary spirit."

FOOD VALUE OF THE ABALONE.

The abalone is a clean feeder, so that its flesh is superior in soundness and wholesomeness to that of the oysters and other marine creatures which live near shore in water contaminated by many impurities. Besides this, the viscera of these creatures must be swallowed whole, while those of the abalons are quite separate from the muscular or edible part, and can be cut away by one stroke of a knife, says the Wide World Magazine. The weight of a fairly fresh abalone is two pounds, of which all but half a pound is good meat, the shell being very light. The meat is nutritious, being highly albuminous like that of clams, oysters, lobsters and shell-fish generally. Albumen is one of the chief elements of nutrition in milk, cheese, eggs, etc.

But the flesh, as it comes from the shell, is too tough to be eaten, whether uncooked, boiled, stewed or fried. The toughness needs to be partly eliminated by pounding and hammering it, but this did not render the meat really tender. No matter how long it may be boiled, the fish remains hard. After many experiments a Californian scientist named J. W. Gayetty, discovered that if the abalone is killed by electricity its flesh is rendered soft and succulent like that of an oyster. A company uses this method at an abalone canning factory at Cayucos, San Luis Obispo County, California.

This company owns several roomy, seaworthy boats, each carrying two Japanese divers, one of whom goes down for three or four hours and is then relieved by the other. The diver fears the abalones, with moss and seaweed attached to them, from the rocks and sends up the shells as rapidly as possible. Under ordinary conditions he can send up a ton of abalones in an hour. As soon as the boat comes to shore, the abalones it has wanted at once in the cannery, are thrown into a tank of salt water, the bottom of which is strewn with rocks, so as to resemble the floor of the ocean, and are kept there till they are wanted.

The flesh and juice of the abalone is pounded together, and the product acquires a flavor more delicate than that of the oyster. This "abalone food" may be stewed or fried, while the juice makes a good broth, soup or appetizer.

No Wonder.

"That man Wiggleworth is always howling about the street car service. Isn't that his voice I hear up in front?"

"Yes. And he's hotter than ever."

"Why?"

"Somebody pushed him on the car store."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

U. S. BASEBALL PROSPECTS BRIGHT

Baseball prospects for a strong team next season at Plainfield High are exceedingly rosy according to the dope furnished by Captain Harry Van Zandt. The players have received intimations from the baseball authorities that practise will start in the gymnasium within one week's time.

Captain Van Zandt, who has been the mainstay in the box for three seasons, will toss 'em over the plate again this season, while Terry is in line for sub twirler. Behind the bat will be Lidgate, who did fine work last season.

On first base will be seen Smith, a newcomer. Smith is a former Peddie star and his acquisition will strengthen the infield considerably. Nash looks to be the prime condition for second base and Clark will undoubtedly hold down third sack again.

There is likely to be a keen competition for the position of shortstop to fill Giddes' place, between Rifferts and Ricketts. Captain Runyon, Rifferts, Carpenter, Doane and others are candidates for the outfield.

P. H. S. FIVE SCORES AN EASY VICTORY

The P. H. S. basketball team defeated the Leal's five Friday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. with the score of 43-18. Both teams did a lot of bad shooting and failed to make many good goals. The High School had it all around Leals when it came to passing and some protection, while Leals exhibited. At the end of the second half the score stood 24 to 7.

When the second half was full under way the teams started to pick up and before the final whistle blew both teams did some fast playing. Morris distinguished himself by making the most goals and Doane played a great game at guard. Jewett played the best game for Leals seconded by Lawrence and Dallas. All through the game Leals showed lack of hard training and the game would have been much more interesting if the High School had had to gibht hard. The line-up:

P. H. S.—Forwards, Clark, Morris, Woodhull, Manley; centre, Lidgate; guards, Overton, Doane.

Leals—Forwards, Driscoll Hibbard; centre, Lawrence; guards, Dallas, Stevenson, Jewett.

Goals were made as follows: Morris 8, Clark 5, Doane 5, Lidgate 2; field goals, Manley 1, Jewitt, 2 field and 3 foul; Driscoll 1, Hibbard 1, Stevenson 1, Dallas 1, Lawrence 1 field and 1 foul. Time of halves 20 minutes. Referee, Line; umpire Doane; timer, Listman.

MIANTONOMO DANCE AN ENJOYABLE AFFAIR

Saengerbund Hall was crowded Friday night with a merry throng of dancers, the occasion being the annual ball of Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, Independent Order of Red Men. It was one of the most successful dances in the history of the tribe and the committee is highly gratified over the good showing.

In addition to a large representation of local members of the order and their friends being present there were delegations present from New Brunswick, Perth Amboy, Elizabeth, Newark and other towns.

The committee in charge was composed of Charles Hallowell, Charles Holstein, Frank Schopfer, George Ivins, Jere Griffen, Charles Meyer, Walter Wilson, George Forgerson, John Ludgate and Peter Sheridan.

The executive board of the Anti-Tuberculosis Society of Plainfield and North Plainfield met Friday and formally adopted the new constitution and by-laws, presented in connection with the plans for incorporation, and officers were elected for the coming year. The reports received were of an encouraging nature and showed increased interest in the campaign against tuberculosis.

These officers were chosen: President, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson; first vice-president, Dr. W. H. Murray; second vice-president, William Dutcher; treasurer, James P. Murray; secretary, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges.

THE HOUSE OF MAYORS

Heads of State's Municipalities Decides to Form an Organization.

CHARLES J. FISK PRESIDES.

Plainfield's Mayor Talks on Excise and Is Appointed Chairman of Most Important Committee.

The conference of Mayors of New Jersey held at the State House, Trenton, Friday at the invitation of Governor Fort, resulted in the decision of the executives of cities to form a, permanent organization which is to meet annually for the discussion of municipal matters. The Legislature is to be asked to make an appropriation of $500 to defray the expenses and to pay for the printing of the proceedings and such other expenses as may be incurred. The organization is to have no permanent president, the presiding officer to be chosen for each meeting.

An important feature of the session was the condemnation of the present Bishops' law by Mayor Mravlag, of Elizabeth. He declared the law was a dead letter act and was violated in many cities Mayor Charles J. Fisk, of this city, who presided over the meeting, agreed with the Elizabeth Mayor, and asserted that the excise laws are not only violated, but are put on the statute books to be violated. A resolution was adopted providing that the Legislative Committee draft a bill amending the present Bishops' law.

Mayor Crawford, of Montclair, wanted the conference to adopt two resolutions, one providing that local officers be elected by separate ballots, and the second that there be no party designations. He asserted the best men should be elected to office without consideration of party, but the resolutions were defeated. The Mayors also voted down a resolution to have the term of their office extended from two to four years.

Governor Fort appointed committees on organization, legislation, taxation and municipal boards. Mayor Fisk heads the committee on legislation.

Organization—Mayor Walter Madden, (Trenton); Mayor Andrew McBride, Paterson; Mayor Henry V. Crawford, Montclair; Mayor Waldo F. Sawyer, Vineland, and Mayor John Thompson, Avon.

Legislation—Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Plainfield; Mayor T. Frank Appleby, Asbury Park; Mayor Victor Mravlag, Elizabeth; Mayor L. M. Cresse, Ocean City, and Mayor Edward H. Flagg, Tiverton.

Taxation—Mayor Bird W. Spencer, Passaic; Mayor C. A. McFadden, Long Branch; Mayor William Cardwell, East Orange; Mayor S. H. Ladd, Vineland, and Mayor Thomas J. Scully, South Amboy.

Municipal Boards—Mayor Andrew McBride, Paterson; Mayor F. P. Stoy, Atlantic City; Mayor C. S. Ellis, Camden; Mayor William Howard, Rahway, and Mayor John J. Cain, Bayonne.

RICHARD BOYCE HAS A GOOD OLD HEN

Can local chicken raisers beat this record? Richard A. Boyce, proprietor of the Somerset Hotel has twenty-three hens and he is getting on an average of nine eggs a day.

One of Mr. Boyce's price layers is a Plymouth Rock, which he declares he would not sell for a ten-spot. This hen has laid eleven eggs in the last eleven days.

Two weeks ago the hen had its right leg broken by being run over by a wagon. At the time Mr. Boyce had intentions of killing the hen, but about one hour before execution time the Plymouth Rock started to cackle "like the old michief" as Mr. Boyce declared.

The latter decided that something was the matter and repaired to the henroost. There he discovered that the maimed hen had laid one of the largest eggs that he had gathered in many days.

As Mr. Boyce took the egg from the nest, amid the cackles of the hen, he muttered (and maybe the hen understood),

"Well, old girl, I won't chop your head off today. Keep on laying and you shall continue to live."

The hen has been laying ever since and te indications are that it will live to a ripe old age.

En Egg Within an Egg.

From Somerville comes one of the most remarkable productions in the shape of "hen fruit" that has ever come to the notice of poultrymen. R. M. Culp, proprietor of Grace Poultry Farm in that town, is exhibiting an egg which has another perfectly formed egg inside it. The outer shell measures 8¼ inches by 8 inches in circumference and 3½ by 2¼ inches in diameter.

The inner shell, which covers another egg perfect in contour is a fair sized specimen of a pullet's best efforts. Besides the egg inside the rest of the space between the two shells was filled with albumen.

BOARD OF TRADE LIVELY

Meeting Last Night Full of Enthusiasm and Projects for Local Improvement.

PRES. T. JEFFERY OPTIMISTIC.

Monument, for City, Better Train Service and More Light—Mayor Smalley's Suggestion.

Enthusiasm marked the regular meeting of the Board of Trade Thursday, and despite the weather Cowards Hall was comfortably filled. President William Jeffery presided for the first time at a regular meeting and he infused a part of his own optimism and vigor into the proceedings. If things pan out as Mr. Jeffery has them in mind Plainfield will soon assume an aggressive growth in civic righteousness and many of the things which are now lacking to make the city the most desirable place of residence will be supplied and "Greater Plainfield" will become an assured fact.

Some of the things in which the board is to interest itself at once are: To increase the membership to 500 before next Christmas; erect a monument to the soldiers from the community who fought and perished in the Civil War; have the local telegraph offices open to the public on Sundays for more than one hour; and supply the center of the city with electric arc lights so that passengers on the trains entering the city need not be forced to ask "where is Plainfield" on alighting from the trains.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield and Mayor Charles J. Fisk spoke briefly on subjects pertinent to the welfare of the city and aroused the members to long continued applause by their suggestions for local improvements.

The meeting opened at 8:25 and after the routine business had been completed announcement was made of the addition of twenty-nine new members to the roll. It was voted to send to United States Senator John Kean a letter of thanks and appreciation for his help in the matter of securing the new Federal building for the city. Among the other matters taken up was the suggestion of E. T. Barrows that the Central Railroad supply a better night service between Plainfield and New York. A letter was read by Secretary Herr from C. H. Smith, in which Mr. Smith called the attention of the board to the apparent unfairness of the giving of contracts for new school buildings to outside contractors and architects. Mr. Woolston declared that the local architects could give just as good if not better results, and he did not think the Board of Education should arbitrarily select foreign talent.

Charles A. Case's application for appointment as notary public to the board was read and laid on the table and several bills presented by Mr. Schwed were referred to the finance committee for scrutiny and payment.

At this point Mr. Jeffery vacated the chair and Mr. Coriell assumed the petition while the president read the report of the special committee appointed to look into the trolley matter. This report, which is of interest to every Plainfielder, will be found in another column. It was adopted after some little discussion between Mr. Jeffery and Mayor Fisk on the meaning of a paragraph relating to new cars. The Mayor finally admitted that the report was substantially correct.

George L. Frost, on request of the president, gave a figure for the rent of one of the rooms in the New Frost building and it was decided to place the matter in the hands of the executive for action. Coward's hall will hardly accommodate the increased membership and it is quite likely that the new room will be rented at $50 per month.

A. E. Force, chairman of the Civic Improvement Committee, announced that Herman Schwed and Eugene Laing were working with him and that they had managed to have Park Avenue cleaned up at least once. This committee was appointed for another year. It was announced that the annual banquet would be held on March 3 at Truell Hall, and after some discussion the price of tickets for the banquet was placed at $1.

Mr. Jeffery made a short speech before introducing the two mayors, and in it he recommended the improvements noted above. He said that the time was coming when we would have a greater Plainfield and it behooved the business citizens to bear the fact in mind that a stand still policy would not benefit the city. He urged the men of the board to see to it that no backward steps be taken and that they push forward with the purpose in view of making Plainfield the most popular and best known city in the State. Mr. Jeffery was frequently interrupted by applause. He said in reference to the monument, which he would like to see erected at the triangle near the Crescent avenue church, that he would appoint a committee of nine to start the project properly and this committee would be appointed as soon as he had conferred with the powers that be.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley, everyone sit up and take notice, he introduced a suggestion improving of the corner of Fr[illegible] Somerset streets. It was no less than the removal of an [illegible] and a detriment to the onward [illegible] gress of the city. He referred [illegible] cifically to a saloon which [illegible] that corner and its attendant [illegible] ances. He also mentioned the [illegible] nut stand on the west side and the bootblack stand on the east. All these things prevent to a great extent the traffic of the street to say nothing of the harm done to the merchants of the borough; the danger to women pedestrians and the general dilapidated appearance of the place. Boroughs between the borough and the city.

Mr. Smalley said he would like to see this main approach to the city made into a decent street. At present it is disgraceful. Some saloon licenses cost more than it benefits and this is one of them. It would be remedied by refusing a renewal of the license so as to put the property on the market, then, in the hands of the proper people a modern building could be erected, the obstacles on both sides of the street removed and beautified. The city's asset would be immense. Then refuse a license for that corner forever. The end would justify the means and the improvement would be so marked that the whole city would rejoice. The speech was received with tumultuous applause. He said he could have put up a saloon for the road beds.

"Fifth. That the people's interests could have been protected had the Mayor and the Council obtained a satisfactory written contract for the installation of the said new cars, on October 14, 1907, when they permitted the Public Service Corporation to double the tracks on East Front street and Watchung avenue.

"Sixth. That this committee met with the Mayor of Plainfield and three councilmen, Messrs. Charles Randolph, Gloak and Tolles, at the Mayor's office on January 11 at 8 p. m. This meeting was the outcome of two letters written to the Mayor by William Jeffery, chairman of this committee under date respectively, December 31, 1909 and January 7, 1910, copies of which are hereto attached, together with the copy of the letter from Mayor Charles J. Fisk, together with a written statement given to this committee by Mr. Fisk at the above mentioned meeting, stating his exact standing in the matter of the trolleys. The Mayor strongly urged the committee to see the Public Service Corporation and tell it that the people of the Plainfield would not stand for a continuance of the trolley nuisance and that if necessary the people would elect a new Mayor and a new Council to enforce the city's rights." The Mayor added that we, as private citizens, representing a civic organization of 250 people, could supply the public sentiment which he thought the Public Service Corporation most dreaded.

"Seventh. This committee believes that it is unwise for it to intervene in the Public Service situation in the premises; that the inability or failure of the city authorities in securing a written agreement has been the main cause of the continuance of the trolley nuisance, and the utter indifference of the Public Service Corporation to the frequent demands of the Mayor to place the new cars on the local lines is the outcome of a verbal agreement.

"Eighth. That this committee recommends the city authorities permit the Public Service Corporation to double track the local line and where streets are too narrow to permit it, to have return lines on other streets, eliminate all unnecessary switches and discontinue the obsolete methods now employed at various points in the city to return the cars; with reference especially to the switch at Somerset and Front streets, and the laying to of cars at the head of Park avenue; all this on equitable terms both to the city and the corporation.

"Ninth. That in the future the city shall have written agreements with the Public Service Corporation, without evincing any desire to gouge or to permit, through acquiescence and lack of practical business judgment, the Corporation to gouge the city.

"Tenth. We believe the present condition of the local trolleys to be intolerable, exasperating and unnecessary, and that it works a great hardship both on the commuters and those about town, and that only a revision of the present understanding between the city and the Public Service Corporation, based upon an up-to-date, business-like agreement, will give the people good trolley service and the Public Service Corporation an opportunity to make money.

"Eleventh. That we think it is the duty of the Board of Trade for Plainfield and North Plainfield to draw the attention of the city authorities to needed improvements and to any condition or situation, which is working harm to the people; but that it is not the business of the Board to undertake the work of the administration of the city's government or any part thereof, and that if the city is unable to induce the Public Service Corporation to treat Plainfield fairly and to adjust the existing obnoxious trolley nuisances, then for the city to coerce the company and enforce every possible provision of the franchise or ordinance of the city, and failing in this, to secure the repeal of the franchise and ordinances.

Following is the report made by the Board of Trade's trolley investigation committee at a meeting of that body Thursday night:

"First. That the Public Service Corporation, through Colonel Hines, about October 14, 1907, promised Mayor Charles J. Fisk and certain members of the Council of the city of Plainfield, at the Mayor's office in the presence of witnesses, to place new cars on the local trolley lines of this city.

Second. That the mayor accepted Colonel Hines' verbal agreement to that effect.

"Third. That the Mayor has been unable to get the Public Service Corporation to install the said new cars.

"Fourth. That the Public Service Corporation repainted the old cars, patched up the gears and put them back on the lines and partially fixed the road beds.

"Fifth. That the people's interests could have been protected had the Mayor and the Council obtained a satisfactory written contract for the installation of the said new cars, on October 14, 1907, when they permitted the Public Service Corporation to double the tracks on East Front street and Watchung avenue.

"Sixth. That this committee met with the Mayor of Plainfield and three councilmen, Messrs. Charles Randolph, Gloak and Tolles, at the Mayor's office on January 11 at 8 p. m. This meeting was the outcome of two letters written to the Mayor by William Jeffery, chairman of this committee under date respectively, December 31, 1909 and January 7, 1910, copies of which are hereto attached, together with the copy of the letter from Mayor Charles J. The Mayor added that we, as private citizens, representing a civic organization of 250 people, could supply the public sentiment which he thought the Public Service Corporation most dreaded.

"Seventh. This committee believes that it is unwise for it to intervene in the Public Service situation in the premises; that the inability or failure of the city authorities in securing a written agreement has been the main cause of the continuance of the trolley nuisance, and the utter indifference of the Public Service Corporation to the frequent demands of the Mayor to place the new cars on the local lines is the outcome of a verbal agreement.

...ARADE BALL AT THE PARISH HOUSE

A masquarade ball under the auspices of St. Faith's guild was given in the parish house of St. Stephen's church Thursday and was attended by about seventy-five couples. Many of the costumes were original and unique. Prizes were awarded for the two best costumes and were won by Miss Helen Borrup, as a baby and William Lamberton, as Uncle Sam.

The unmasking at 10:30 caused some merriment as the disguises were were so good that nobody knew who was who. The house rang with laughter when the disclosures took place. Japanese girls flirted with Spanish Dons and Dutch girls and Colonial dames vied with each other in capturing the noble cavaliers of the period of Louis XII.

Dancing continued until midnight to music furnished by Suhr's orchestra and the evening was voted one of the most enjoyable ever held in the parish house.

PUMPKINS AT $1,000 EACH.

"I saw a couple of pumpkins the other day, which the owner said was worth just $2,000," remarked Colonel Jew Chase, of Kirkville, writes a Macon correspondent of the Kansas City Star.

"They were ordinary Missouri pumpkins, worth, apparently, about twenty-five cents apiece, and I believed my friend was playing me for a tenderfoot. But when he got down to telling me the story I saw that his statement was founded on the facts."

"About fourteen years ago Mr. Keith, a banker of Sturgeon, Mo., lent a farmer $1,000 to invest in stocks. This investment turned out badly, as the farmer had had luck in other deals until he went broke. He just couldn't pay the note. Finally he went out West, and there he made a strike. Things began coming his way, and he was soon in better circumstances than he had ever been before."

"After the lapse of about thirteen years he returned to Sturgeon, bought him a farm and settled down again. The banker again presented his note, which by this time, had grown to $2,000, including interest. The farmer balked and called the banker's attention to the fact that the statute of limitation had run against the note, and that it was not collectable by law."

"The banker knew that was true; if the borrower didn't want to pay it he couldn't be made to pay it."

"One bay the banker drove out in the country with a friend, and they passed the farm of the man who had taken advantage of the statute of limitations. The farmer was standing in the field when the two men drove by. The farmer called the banker's attention to the fact that the pumpkins, and asked the farmer what he would take for them. The farmer said twenty-five cents apiece."

"The banker selected two of the pumpkins and had them put in his buggy. Then he fished around in his pocket for the fifty cents."

"'By Jorge!' he said, 'I haven't got a cent with me, what'r' I do?' "

"'Oh, you can pay me the next time you come along,' said the farmer.

"'No, I will just give you credit on that note.'"

"'All right.'" returned the farmer, carelessly.

"The banker pulled out the note, and in the presence of the borrower and the companion who was riding with him he made an entry crediting fifty cents on the note, and then drove to town. The same day his lawyer began suit against the borrower, alleging that a payment had been made, and that it brought the obligation again within the law. The banker collected every cent of the debt. No wonder he is saving those pumpkins."

THE MYTHICAL MILLIONS OF DRAKE TEMPT "HEIRS."

"A fool and his money are soon parted" is an old saying, and one which is proved true from day to day. News comes now from New Castle, Pa., that "members of the Drake family in Western Pennsylvania" are preparing to make a raid on the stored up millions (200,000,000) of the mythical money of the deluded Drake heirs would not readily put up good money to pay for "eminent" lawyers to journey across the big pond chasing a chimera. But that is just what they contemplate doing.

WHY HE WAS BEING WATCHED

Detective's Explanation Something of a Slur on the Ancient Old Dutch City.

During a period of political agitation a stranger arrived in Magdeburg, where, on applying to the authorities, he obtained a permit for the period of residence. He had not been long in the town before he became aware that his steps were being dogged by a man in blue uniform. He bore it for days, but at last came to the spy: "Sir, do you wish to drive me mad? Why do you pursue me in this way?" "I am a detective, and my instructions are not to lose sight of you," was the quiet answer. "Why, what fault have the police to find with me?" shouted the stranger in the greatest excitement; my passport is in order, here is my ticket of residence; I am a citizen of Berlin; why do you follow me about?" "It states in your passport," was the reply, 'that you were going to reside here for pleasure; that looks suspicious, as it is the first time anyone came to reside in Magdeburg for pleasure."

Wheat Older Than History.

Wheat belongs to the wholly distinct botanical family of the grasses. Its ancestral home is unknown, but so far as early narratives possess evidential value there seems some reason to credit its place of origin to western Asia. Wheat is older than the history of the man who has sown it from the beginning of the farmer's art. The earliest memorials record wheat as already under cultivation; many races believed it the gift of the gods. The misconception as to the origin of this cereal rendering the question may have been based upon a faulty recollection of a theory once proposed, namely that wheat was a cultivation derivative of the wild Triticum evaticum, a grass of the Levant. This grass was put under selective cultivation for a score of years and it responded to the effort in a considerable degree. It developed into a better grass, but grass it remained; it did not become wheat.

Salt Cellar in Olden Times.

During the latter part of the middle ages the salt cellar was the most conspicuous object on the table. It was always placed in the center of the long table at which the household gathered, my lord and lady, family and guests being at one end, and the servants and retainers at the other, and in this way one's social position was at once apparent, the "gentle folk" sitting above the salt and the yeomanry below it. Among the wealthy the salt cellar was of gold or silver. Benvenuto Cellini chased some for Francis I, that were of the most exquisite workmanship, and at the Louvre may be seen several rich specimens of salt cellars in faience, and the famous set made at Orion for Henry I.

The Oldest Family.

The Austrians are known to be the greatest sticklers for genealogy, many of the nobles tracing their descent back to almost the dawn of history. Even in Austria, however, it is generally admitted that the dukes of Norfolk represent the oldest family in the world. According to the most trustworthy authorities the Howards are of Saxon origin, the name in those days being Hereward. So far back as 957 there are trustworthy records of the family.

Obliging the Lady.

"I see you've got an automobile," said Citiman. "I thought you swore you'd never buy one."

"Yes, I did say that once," replied Subbubs, "but our new cook insisted that we must get one because her church is so far away from our house."

Natural Ink.

The River of Natural Ink is a natural curiosity said to exist in Algeria. It is caused by the junction of two streams, one of which drains a region strongly impregnated with iron, while the other comes from a peat bog and holds a large quantity of gallic acid in solution. The union of these two streams causes the iron and the gallic acid to combine, and thus produces a genuine ink.

FORESTERS TO FIGHT GREAT WHITE PLAG

Announcement is made by W. T. Bingham, of Elizabeth, representative of the Supreme Chief Ranger of the Independent Order of Foresters of New Jersey, that the Foresters have joined the ranks of the crusaders in the war upon the white plague and, with a membership of more than a quarter of a million, had decided to combat the disease by the establishment of an up-to-date sanatorium for the treatment of tubercular losis in its incipient stages. Foresters have just completed the purchase of 1,000 acres of land in one of the most desirable and healthful locations in the Adirondack Mountains.

Realizing the possibility of saving the lives of many of the members who might be stricken with this disease, providing they could receive proper treatment at the outset, Elliott G. Stevenson, the supreme chief ranger of the Foresters, determined to secure a site in a locality giving ideal climatic conditions. He decided upon the line of the New York Central Railroad, two miles from the well-known "Paul Smith's" and about five miles from Saranac Lake.

The site includes the famous lake from which it receives its name and hundreds of acres of spruce, pine and balsam trees. Rainbow Inn, which is included in the purchase, is a large hotel with fifty large rooms, and a large annex, both fully furnished, ready for immediate occupancy. It is anticipated by Mr. Stevenson that within sixty days the sanatorium will receive its first inmates.

The purchase of the property has been made from a contingent fund at the disposal of the supreme executive, and the institution will be conducted from a fund that the executive will arrange for, without entailing a dollar of additional expense upon the membership of the order.

This sanatorium idea is the second important fraternal feature that has been furnished the membership and their dependents by the Foresters. The Orphan's Home Fund, which was established by the late Dr. Oronhyatekha, for twenty-five years the supreme chief ranger of the order, had for its purpose the care and education of the orphans left destitute by the death of their parents. Mr. Stevenson, who at the death of Dr. Oronhyatekha succeeded as supreme chief ranger, enlarged upon this idea so that orphans of a deceased father, even though their mother survived, could be cared for if necessary. He not only continued a Foresters' Home for the little ones now situated at Oakville, Ont., but arranged to take worthy cases where the mother was so situated as to give proper care to very young children at her home, the order pays to her each month the sum that would be required to provide for the children were they inmates of the orphans' home. This permits the mother to keep her little family together, providing a home not only for the children but herself as well.

At present there are fifty children without parents, inmates of the home, while nearly two hundred young children remain in the care of their mothers at the expense of the Orphans' Home Fund. New Jersey has thirteen children as inmates of the home.

The Orphans' Home Fund is maintained by taking one cent each month from the regular court dues paid by each member. This small sum aggregates at this time about $20,000 a year.

CONFUSION.

When in the window of the milliner,
I view you with amazed bewilderment,
And may not know which end is front or rear,
Nor even tell, O Chaos! which may be
The top or bottom. Fruits and flowers strange,
And feather heaped on feather, till they goe,
Like Ossa upon Pelion, piled, or old,
And then some, I am filled with wondrous awe—
My 'wildered senses reel and I would fain
Betake me to some Bacchanalian grot
Where snowy-aproned saelfites dispense
O'er slabs of rosewood or mahogany
The foamy, soothing essence of the hop.
But when I see you set in perfect poise
Above my lady's face, when I behold
The subtle blending of her loveliness
With your strange shape of orstwhile mystery,
And all that once was dark is then made clear,
I strive in vain for words, articulate,
To voice the seething thoughts that crowd my brain;
I grope for language, that I may express
My wonder, but by tongue can only say:
GOSH!

[illegible] Ingersoll, Somerville, Bound Brook, Dunellen, Scotch Plains and other Reformed churches. The storm prevented the attendance of members from Mt. Horeb and Raritan.

Edward V. S. Phoenix, of Somerville, group leader for the Plainfield district, was in charge of the meeting, while J. J. Marsh, of this city, who is president of the entire district, made a few remarks urging the hearty and united co-operation of all Epworthians in the district that greater things might be accomplished the coming year.

The rally opened with a song service, in which the singing was led by a quartet, and Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, offered prayer. Mrs. Thomas MacDonald, soprano soloist, sang "These Are They," as an offertory. The address of the evening was by Rev. Dr. T. H. Bagawanath, pastor of the Washington Square, N. Y., church, New York. He is one of the most prominent divines in the New York Conference and the Epworthians congratulated themselves in being able to secure him.

Dr. Baragwanath took for his subject, "Prophets or Pensioners," and he delivered an interesting and practical talk. He said that the prophets of old were inspired by God to work for truth and righteousness and that was their chief aim. Today many seek to be pensioners of God for bodily benefits, instead of working for Him. The speaker said that God wants prophets.

"Why don't people come to church? is the question often asked," said the speaker. "Many say that business interferes with church attendance, while others say that the church is always demanding money and offer that as an excuse. There are plenty of people who would never go to church, creed or no creed, and as for the question, there is a Spanish Lutheran church near my church in New York, that is largely attended by the poor. Money is constantly demanded from them, and yet that edifice is always filled.

"The trouble we are living in a period of indifference when many persons would rather be pensioners than prophets. What we need is the old-time fire in the heart, the power to move men and things in the right direction. We take our vows at the altar and then seldom attend a service afterward. I am not so well acquainted with your territory here, but I think I do know New York. We have there what are called ecclesiastical barnacles, have a church of 200 or 100 consecrated Christian people than a crowded church every Sunday, which is nothing more or less than a procession. The church must provide work for its members. The strength of a church can be measured by the number of consecrated workers.

"When a person comes to me and says, 'What can I do?' I think there is some hope for that person. Many are content to do nothing and be pensioners. Some take their ease at home, others at the church. We need a baptism of fire on our young people. We must recognize the spirit of sacrifice before the world will be benefitted."

The speaker referred to the importance of common-place things in life and illustrated this by telling the story of an old mine owned by his father in England. It was given up as worthless and yet only within recent times it was discovered to be one of the most valuable in all England, radium having been found there. In conclusion he said that there was nothing so sweet on earth as helping others and he urged everyone present to become thoroughly consecrated to the Master's service.

A social hour then followed in Vincent chapel to which all were invited, opportunity was given those present to become better acquainted and a committee comprising Miss Helen Whitney, chairman; Miss Eda French, Miss Jane Bailey and Arthur Humble provided a pleasing entertainment which consisted of the representations of well-known advertisements by the young people, the audience being expected to guess them correctly. The following were presented:

Gold Medal flour, Miss Mildred Burnett; Dutch Cleanser, Miss Helen Edgar; Shredded Wheat, Miss Eleanor Stutsman; Pearline, Miss Mary Hannah Bingaman; Best & Co., the Misses Marion Ladd, Dorothy Lyon, Graenouts, Edward Brown; California Limited, Miss Helen Campbell; Corn Starch, Miss [illegible]house; Jell-O, Miss [illegible] and Fred Martin; Cocoa, Miss Lobenstine; Stockings, Charles [illegible]; Miss Ethel [illegible]

REV. JOHN T. DAVIS MAKES AN ADDRESS

The mortgage burning at the Grand Avenue Reformed church, Asbury Park, Wednesday night, was held on the anniversary of the founding of the local church, and was a dual occasion for rejoicing and congratulations. Several ministers took part in the exercises, including Rev. John Y. Brook, former pastor of the church, and now pastor of Trinity Reformed church, this city.

One of the best talks of the evening was by Mr. Brooke. He first spoke in a humorous vein and then offered his hearty congratulations at the payment of the church debt. He referred to the very pleasant associations with the church for two and a half years while he was pastor. It was in that church that he was ordained and during his pastorate accomplished effective work, helping the church in all departments.

Launching out on the line of what makes a modern and a model church, Mr. Brook said he did not think it was a church modeled entirely after the manner of the church in the last century, although there were probably some features that might be followed with profit.

"The model church for the twentieth century," he continued, "is the apostolic church of the first century. It is based on four foundations—prayer, liberality, brotherhood and the missionary spirit.

"The church should be preeminently a home of prayer for the pastor, the members, the Sunday-school, the afflicted, missioons, etc. We could not have all things in common life in the olden days, owing to the changed economic conditions, but that would not hinder our liberality and tolerance of each other. The church is the whitest organization on earth today and should be first in men's minds. We ought to share our sorrows as well as our joys, no matter about the social scale, for we are all brothers. The missionary spirit is really necessary. The burning of this mortgage is no evidence of church spirituality. There are things worse than mortgages that can overtake a church—for instance, the lack of spirituality and the missionary spirit."

FOOD VALUE OF THE ABALONE.

The abalone is a clean feeder, so that its flesh is superior in soundness and wholesomeness to that of the oysters and other marine creatures which live near shore in water contaminated by many impurities. Besides this, the viscera, or what we call the entrails, are swallowed whole, while those of the abalone are quite separate from the muscular or edible part, and can be cut away by one stroke of a knife, says the Wide World Magazine. The weight of a fairly fresh abalone is two pounds, of which all but half a pound is good meat, the shell being very light. The meat is nutritious, being highly albuminous like that of clams, oysters, lobsters and shell-fish generally. The strength of a church can be measured by the number of consecrated workers.

But the flesh, as it comes from the shell, is too tough to be eaten, whether uncooked, boiled, stewed or fried. The toughness used to be partly eliminated by pounding and hammering it, but this did not render the meat really tender. No matter how long it may be boiled, the fish remains hard. After many experiments a San Franciscan named J. W. Gayetty, discovered that if the abalone is killed by electricity its flesh is rendered soft and succulent like that of an oyster. A company uses this method at an abalone canning factory at Cayucos, San Luis Obispo County, California.

This company owns several roomy, seaworthy boats, each carrying two Japanese divers, one of whom goes down for three or four hours and is then relieved by the other. The diver tears the abalones, with moss and seaweed attached to them, from the rocks and sends up the shells as rapidly as possible. Under ordinary conditions he can send up a ton of abalones in an hour. As soon as the boat comes to shore, the abalones it has wanted at once in the cannery, are thrown into a tank of salt water, the bottom of which is strewn with rocks, so as to resemble the floor of the ocean, and are kept there till they are wanted.

The flesh and juice of the abalone is treated together, and the product acquires a flavor more delicate than that of the oyster. This "abalone food" may be stewed or fried, while the juice makes a good broth, soup or appetizer.

No Wonder.

for those of us who love old traditions, and the young ers divine t[illegible] affections between cold snow and hot plum pudding. But even in the case of feather-frozen city fathers it is possible to have too much of a good thing. Here we have been smothered these six solid weeks under a cold blanket, once white and dry, now wet and dirty, and are getting eyesore with the glare. How nice it would be if our city fathers would preach and distribute civic sermons on the fine art of making ends meet by adapting means to ends better than we generally do. In the charming weeks of October and November, when skies were bright, the breezes balmy and bracing, and our lungs glorifying in the change from stuffy September, our model citizens were darkening the air with smoke from their burning leaf piles. How if they had stored these and all other sweepings against storm time? Give the beautiful snow its nine day show, and then set in the chaste village of Gotham a brilliant example of how to get rid of its snowfall economically and quickly by each householder melting his patch by his own out door fire.

The high cost of living, or, as J. J. Hill, our wise man of the Northwest, aptly puts it, "the cost of high living." Either way the thing is a fact but not at all a stubborn one. We flatter ourselves that we—our noble selves—are anything but really superstitious. In silly, childish ways we too, of course, conform to two or three, just to be sociable. All the same, no hard-headed nation is quite so far gone as we are on the meat superstition. One would be disposed to forgive it if we had any meat worth being superstitious about. I except pork, our most excellent animal product, next after the despised rabbit, which, however, needs the aid of pork to complete its deliciousness. We have no juicy beef, our lamb is flabby, our mutton as raggy as the beef, and scrawny chicken is always a laughable proposition. Even when good enough mortify their flesh by a supposed anti-meat bill of fare for forty days. I have known intimately a goodly number of women and men of high and low degree who have flourished galore on fresh-water fare, seeming to thrive. So might it have done but for a sinful love of meats flavored by fire, burnt offerings more grateful to the nose than the palate, unless one lights on meats speckled with yellow fat all through.

We seem to hear less of the cry that this is the golden age for young men than we did during the Roosevelt campaigns. Someone writes that grey-headed youngish men are now in fashion in the business world. It was amusing in the 80's to read in all the papers accounts of "aged" prisoners of 55, and to note the almost contemptuous way young cub editors and space writers would refer to eminent public servants in their sixties as if they were Egyptian mummies. No longer to be tolerated. This pathetic phase of juvenilism was undoubtedly inspired by upstarts, who wanted the aforesaid "old" men's jobs. At last the papers have discovered that it is bad form to make believe that, while Englishmen in public life are in their prime at sixty and seventy, their American cousins are considered played out when fifty. It was a disgraceful libel on our finest men of note. I have been privileged to converse repeatedly with Americans of the first rank in their public and private walks who were over eighty and in full intellectual activity. One was in his ninety-seventh year. The lengthy letters of some of these notable men are in so exquisite a hand as to put to shame the scrawls of public men only half their age.

High time that the Times, and other papers behind the times, cry aloud and shout against the humiliating actions of the once flourishing New York church known as the late Dr. John Hall's. Since his virtual crowding out of its pulpit in his old age it has never been my luck about the house" and lately less than ever. We have listened to a succession of professional reviewers who have failed to revive its lost glories or even its vitality. The arts of singing men and sensational speakers do not draw an audience but not a congregation. Worthier ministers have been sandwiched between these, gifted preachers and genuinely zealous apostles and workers, of whom Dr. Broughton, of Atlanta, Georgia, is a noble example. We have thrilled under the power and charm of such as he. Very tempting offers were made to induce these survivals of the great days to desert their congregations and accept the bigger bribes of Fifth avenue. To their honor be it recorded that they declined with thanks. And now two good men in English pulpits have rejected the offer of a $20,000 yearly wage, with a furnish-

U. S. BASEBALL PROSPECTS BRIGHT

Baseball prospects for a strong team next season at Plainfield High are exceedingly rosy according to the dope furnished by Captain Harry Van Zandt. The players have received intimations from the baseball authorities that practise will start in the gymnasium within one week's time.

Captain Van Zandt, who has been the mainstay in the box for three seasons, will toss 'em over the plate again this season, while Terry is in line for sub twirler. Behind the bat will be Lidgate, who did fine work last season.

On first base will be seen Smith, a newcomer. Smith is a former Peddie star and his acquisition will strengthen the infield considerably. Nash looks to be in prime condition for second base and Clark will undoubtedly hold down third sack again.

There is likely to be a keen competition for the position of shortstop to fill Giddes' place, between Rifferts and Ricketts. Captain Runyon, Rifferts, Carpenter, Doane and others are candidates for the outfield.

P. H. S. FIVE SCORES AN EASY VICTORY

The P. H. S. basketball team defeated the Leal's five Friday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. with the score of 43-18. Both teams did a lot of bad shooting and failed to make many good goals. The High School had it all around Leals when it came to passing and some pretty team work was exhibited. At the end of the second half the score stood 21 to 7.

When the second half was full under way the teams started to pick up and before the final whistle blew both teams did some fast playing. Morris distinguished himself by making the most goals and Doane played a great game at guard. Jewett played the best game for Leals seconded by Lawrence and Dallas. All through the game Leals showed lack of hard training and the game was not by any means interesting if the High School had had to gfiht hard. The line-up:

P. H. S.—Forwards. Clark, Morris, Woodhull, Manley; centre, Lidgate; guards, Overton, Doane.

Leals—Forwards, Ingersoll, Hibbard; centre, Lawrence; guards, Dallas, Stevenson, Jewett.

Goals were made as follows: Morris 8, Clark 5, Doane 5, Lidgate 2; field 1 foul; Manley 1, Jewitt, 2 field and 3 foul; Driscoll 1, Hibbard 1, Stevenson 1, Dallas 1, Lawrence 1 field and 1 foul. Time of halves 20 minutes. Referee, Line; umpire Doane; timer, Listman.

MIANTONOMO DANCE AN ENJOYABLE AFFAIR

Saengerbund Hall was crowded Friday night with a merry throng of dancers, the occasion being the annual ball of Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, Independent Order of Red Men. It was one of the most successful dances in the history of the tribe and the committee is highly gratified over the good showing.

In addition to a big representation of local members of the order and their friends being present there were delegations present from New Brunswick, Perth Amboy, Elizabeth, Newark and other towns.

OFFICERS ARE CHOSEN BY PHTHISIS SOCIETY

The executive board of the Anti-Tuberculosis Society of Plainfield and North Plainfield met Friday, and formally adopted the new constitution and by-laws, presented in connection with the plans for incorporation, and officers were elected for the coming year. The reports received were of an encouraging nature and showed increased interest in the campaign against tuberculosis.

These officers were chosen: President, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson; first vice-president, Dr. W. H. Murray; second vice-president, William Dutcher; treasurer, James P. Murray; secretary, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges.

THE HOUSE OF MAYORS

Heads of State's Municipalities Decides to Form an Organization.

CHARLES J. FISK PRESIDES.

Plainfield's Mayor Talks on Excise and Is Appointed Chairman of Most Important Committee.

The conference of Mayors of New Jersey held at the State House, Trenton, Friday at the invitation of Governor Fort, resulted in the decision of the executives of cities to form a permanent organization which is to meet annually for the discussion of municipal matters. The Legislature is to be asked to make an appropriation of $500 to defray the expenses and to pay for the printing of the proceedings and such other expenses as may be incurred. The organization is to have no permanent president, the presiding officer to be chosen for each meeting.

An important feature of the session was the condemnation of the present Bishops' law by Mayor Mravlag, of Elizabeth. He declared the law was a dead letter act and was violated in many cities Mayor Cheetham, of this city, who presided over the meeting, agreed with the Elizabeth Mayor, and asserted that the excise laws are not only violated, but are put on the statute books to be violated. A resolution was adopted providing that the Legislative Committee draft bills amending the present Bishops' law.

Mayor Crawford, of Montclair, wanted the conference to adopt two resolutions, one providing that local officers be elected by separate ballots, and the second that there be no party designations. He asserted the best men should be elected to office without consideration of party, but the resolutions were defeated. The Mayors also voted down a resolution to have the term of their office extended from two to four years.

Governor Fort appointed committees on organization, legislation, taxation and municipal boards. Mayor Fisk heads the committee on legislation.

Organization—Mayor Walter Madden, Trenton; Mayor Andrew McBride, Paterson; Mayor Henry V. Crawford, Montclair; Mayor Waldo P. Lewis, Hoboken, and Mayor John Thompson, Avon.

Legislation—Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Plainfield; Mayor T. Frank Appleby, Asbury Park; Mayor Victor Mravlag, Elizabeth; Mayor L. M. Cressee, Ocean City, and Mayor Edward Mange, Long Branch.

Taxation—Mayor Bird W. Spencer, Passaic; Mayor C. A. McFadden, Long Branch; Mayor William Cardwell, East Orange; Mayor S. H. Ladd, Vineland, and Mayor Thomas J. Scully, South Amboy.

Municipal Boards—Mayor Andrew McBride, Paterson; Mayor F. P. Stoy, Atlantic City; Mayor C. S. Ellis, Camden; Mayor William Howard, Rahway, and Mayor John J. Cain, Bayonne.

RICHARD BOYCE HAS A GOOD OLD HEN

Can local chicken raisers beat this record? Richard A. Boyce, proprietor of the Somerset Hill has twenty-three hens and he is getting on an average of nine eggs a day.

One of Mr. Boyce's prize layers is a Plymouth Rock, which he declares he would not sell for a ten-spot. This hen has laid eleven eggs in the last eleven days.

Two weeks ago the hen had its right leg broken by being run over by a wagon. At the time Mr. Boyce had intensions of killing the hen, but about one hour before execution time the Plymouth Rock, started to cackle like the old michief" as Mr. Boyce declared.

The latter decided that something was the matter and repaired to the henroost. There he discovered that the maimed hen had laid one of the largest eggs that he had gathered in many days.

As Mr. Boyce took the egg from the nest, amid the cackles of the hen, he muttered (and maybe the hen understood).

"Well, old girl, I won't chop your head off today, keep on laying and you shall continue to live."

The hen has been laying ever since and te indications are that it will live to a ripe old age.

En Egg Within an Egg.

From Somerville comes one of the most remarkable productions in the shape of "hen fruit" that has ever come to the notice of poultrymen. R. M. Culp, proprietor of Grace Poultry Farm in that town, is exhibiting an egg which has another egg within it, and is finished in. The outer shell measures 8½ inches by 8 inches in circumference and 3½ by 2¼ inches in diameter.

The inner shell, which covers another egg perfect in contour is a fair sized specimen of a pullet's best efforts. Besides the egg inside the rest of the space between the two shells was filled with albumen.

BOARD OF TRADE LIVELY

Meeting Last Night Full of Enthusiasm and Projects for Local Improvement.

PRES'T. JEFFERY OPTIMISTIC.

Monument, for City, Better Train Service and More Light—Mayor Smalley's Suggestion.

Enthusiasm marked the regular meeting of the Board of Trade Thursday, and despite the weather Coward's Hall was comfortably filled. President William Jeffery presided for the first time at a regular meeting and he infused a part of his own optimism and vigor into the proceedings. If things pan out as Mr. Jeffery has them in mind Plainfield will soon assume an aggressive growth in civic righteousness and many of the things which are now lacking to make the city the most desirable place of residence will be supplied and "Greater Plainfield" will become an assured fact.

Some of the things in which the board is to interest itself at once are: To increase the membership to 500 before next Christmas; erect a monument to the soldiers from this community who fought and perished in the Civil War; have the local telegraph offices open to the public on Sundays for more than one hour; and supply the center of the city with electric lights so that passengers on the trains entering the city need not be forced to ask "where is Plainfield" on alighting from the trains.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield and Mayor Charles J. Fisk spoke briefly on subjects pertinent to the welfare of the city and aroused the members so long a continued applause by their suggestions for local improvements.

The meeting opened at 8:25 and after the routine business had been completed announcement was made of the addition of twenty-nine new members to the roll. It was voted to send to United States Senator John Kean a letter of thanks and appreciation for his help in the matter of securing the new Federal building for the city. Among the other matters taken up was the suggestion of E. T. Barrows that the Central R. R. of New Jersey supply a better night service between this city and New Yrk. A letter was read by Secretary Herr from C. H. Smith, in which Mr. Smith called the attention of the board to the apparent unfairness of the giving of contracts for new school buildings to outside contractors and architects. L. B. Woolston declared that the local architects could give just as good if not better results, and he did not think the Board of Education should arbitrarily select foreign talent.

Charles Case's application for appointment as stenographer to the board was read and laid on the table and several bills presented by Mr. Schwed were referred to the finance committee for scrutiny and payment.

At this point Mr. Jeffery vacated the chair and Mr. Corbell assumed the petition while the president read the report of the special committee appointed to look into the trolley matter. This report, which is of interest to every Plainfielder, will be found in another column. It was adopted after some little discussion between Mr. Jeffery and Mayor Fisk on the meaning of a paragraph relating to new cars. The Mayor finally admitted that the report was substantially correct.

George H. Frost, on request of the president, gave a figure for the rent of one of the rooms in the New Frost building and it was decided to place the matter in the hands of the executive for action. Coward's hall will hardly accommodate the increased membership and it is quite likely that the new room will be rented at $50 per month.

A. E. Force, chairman of the Civic Improvement Committee, announced that Herman Schwed and Eugene Laing were working with him and that they had managed to have Park avenue cleaned up at least once. This committee was appointed for another year. It was announced that the annual banquet would be held on March 3 at Truell Hall, and after some discussion the price of tickets for the banquet was placed at $5.

Mr. Jeffery made a short speech before introducing the two mayors, and in it he recommended the improvements noted above. He said that the time was coming when we would have a greater Plainfield and it behooved every resident of the town to bear the fact in mind that a stand still policy would not benefit the city. He urged the men of the board to see to it that no backward steps be taken and that they push forward with the purpose in view of making Plainfield the most popular and best known city in the State. Mr. Jeffery was frequently interrupted by applause. He said in reference to the monument which he would like to see erected at the triangle near the Crescent avenue church, that he would appoint a committee of nine to start the project properly and this committee would be appointed as soon as he had conferred with the powers that be.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley said everyone sat up and take notice when he introduced a suggestion improving of the corner of Front, Somerset streets. It was no less than the removal of an eye sore and a detriment to the onward progress of the city. He referred specifically to a saloon which decorated that corner and its attendant nuisances. He also mentioned the fact that stand on the west corner and the bootblack stand on the east. All these things prevent to a great extent the traffic of the street to say nothing of the harm done to the merchants of the borough. He also spoke for women pedestrians and the general dilapidated appearance of the great thoroughfare between the borough and the city.

Mr. Smalley said he would like to see this main approach to the city made into a decent street. At present it is a disgrace. The saloon licenses cost more than it benefits and this is one of the cases. It could be remedied by refusing a renewal of the license so as to put the property on the market, then, in the hands of the proper people a modern building in place of the present eyesore on both sides of the street removed and beauty take the place of ugliness. Then refuse a license for that corner forever. The end would justify the means and the improvement would be so marked that the whole city would benefit as well. The speech was received with tumultuous applause.

Mayor Fisk followed and in referring briefly to Mayor Smalley's suggestion said that the proprietor of the place in question was a public spirited man and one of the solid men of Plainfield as well as that one's best resorts in the city and he thought Mr. Smalley's plan would be difficult of accomplishment. "We must not think we are the biggest thing in the world," he said. Referring to the license question as compared with the tax rate Mayor Fisk said the city might grant licenses at a lower figure and have a saloon for every 250 people, but that is not the policy of a well ordered city. Comparing the taxes with those of twenty years ago, he said there was only a difference of approximately one cent per capita, as being five cents now and was four cents percapita twenty-years ago, and now we have no mud roads, we do have electric lights and sewers and things which were merely dreamed of in those days. He also said he would like to see a Chamber of Commerce formed here and all the civic organizations combined.

The following were elected to membership last night.

Messrs. L. K. Strouse Joseph Kingston, Walter S. Marder, Frank Weed, J. C. Field, T. S. Davis, H. A. Taylor, Wm. Taylor, Lewis, P. Frank Stone, Lamar Van Syckle, Sylvester J. Place, Thomas Jones, J. L. Watson, Jack Horner, H. C. Krebs, Frank Shaffer, W. De L. R. Anderson, A. C. Piedell, H. B. Macdonald, Francis Macdocia, John Hughes, Jr., D. Demolli, Charles J. Feller, Edward McCarthy, J. F. Lindsley, L. P. Scherrer, K. Rotteberg, A. B. Cantor, Peter Voorhees.

ROME AS A HEALTH RESORT.

Two important factors are almost always lost sight of in looking at Rome from a hygenic and climatic point of view, writes the Roman correspondent of The Medical Record. These are the Alban mountains. Rome is really a seaport; although the Tiber is not freely navigable to all vessels. The distance to the mouth of the river is a short fifteen miles, while an air line from the city to the sea reduces the distance greatly.

About the same distance on the other sides are the Sabine Hills, Mt. Socrate, the Alban Hills and farther north the spurs of the Apennines, the city itself being about 200 feet above sea level. There is not a better watered city in Europe. Rome as well watered, with its excellent drinking water and copious fountains in every piazza or open space. Nor is there a city that affords purer air, as might be expected from the topographical situation.

The winter climate is cold enough to make indoor fires comfortable, and we always have a stretch of about six weeks of unbroken cloudless weather in December and January—just crisp enough to be invigorating. The temperature of the summer months averages about 85 degrees in the shade, sufficiently low as all their forms and neurasthenia a winter in Rome is usually very beneficial, and you can be assured of being cooler all through the summer than in either New York or Boston.

The municipality evidently favors open air, whether for prophylaxis or treatment, and, realizing how many cases of incipient phthisis or those predisposed to it may be thus cured or benefitted, has established hospices in the hills for the climatic treatment and recreation of children during the summer months. These hospices are entirely gratuitous, the only requisites for admission being that the child must be between seven and twelve years of age and must have an attestation of poverty and a physician's certificate of vaccination.

Dr. Kirk to Speak Here.

Dr. Kirk, of Philadelphia, one of the foremost dentists in this country, will address the Plainfield Dental Society at its next regular meeting and banquet.

[illegible]

[illegible] Considered a Waste of Time to Consider Such [illegible]—Advises Enforcement of Franchise and Ordinances.

Following is the report made by the board of Trade's trolley investigation committee at a meeting of that body Thursday night:

"First. That the Public Service Corporation, through Colonel Hines, about October 14, 1907, promised Mayor Charles J. Fisk and certain members of the Council of the city of Plainfield, at the Mayor's office in the presence of witnesses, to place new cars on the local trolley lines of this city.

Second. That the mayor accepted Colonel Hines' verbal agreement to that effect.

"Third. That the Mayor has been unable to get the Public Service Corporation to install the said new cars.

"Fourth. That the Public Service Corporation repainted the old cars, patched up the gears and put them back on the lines and partially fixed the road beds.

"Fifth. That the people's interests could have been protected had the Mayor and the Council obtained a satisfactory written contract for the installation of the said new cars, on October 14, 1907, when they permitted the Public Service Corporation to take tracks down on East Front street and Watchung avenue.

"Sixth. That this committee met with the Mayor of Plainfield and three councilmen, Messrs. Charles Randolph, Gloak and Tolles, at the Mayor's office on January 11 at 8 p. m. This meeting was the outcome of two letters written to the Mayor by William Jeffery, chairman of this committee under date respectively, December 23, 1909 and January 7, 1910, copies of which are hereto attached, together with the copy of the letter from Mayor Charles J. Fisk together with a written statement given to this committee by Mr. Fisk at the above mentioned meeting, stating his exact standing in the matter of the trolleys. The Mayor strongly urged the committee to see the Public Service Corporation and tell it plainly "that the people of Plainfield would not stand for a continuance of the trolley nuisance and that if necessary the people would elect a new Mayor and a new Council to enforce the city's rights." The Mayor added that as a private citizens, representing a civic organization of 250 people, could supply the public sentiment which he thought the Public Service Corporation most dreaded.

"Seventh. This committee believes that it is unwise for it to interview the Public Service Corporation in the premises; that the inability or failure of the city authorities in securing a written agreement has been the main cause of the continuance of the trolley nuisance, and that the indifference of the Public Service Corporation to the frequent demands of the Mayor to place the new cars on the local lines is the outcome of a verbal agreement.

"Eighth. That this committee recommends the city authorities permit the Public Service Corporation to double track the local line and where streets are too narrow to permit it, to have return lines on other streets, eliminate all unnecessary switches and discontinue the obsolete methods now employed at various points in the city to return the cars; that we especially urge the double switch at Somerset and Front streets, and the laying to of cars at the head of Park avenue; all this on equitable terms both to the city and the corporation.

"Ninth. That in the future the city should secure written agreements with the Public Service Corporation, without evincing any desire to gouge or to permit, through acquiescence and lack of practical business judgment, the Corporation to gouge the city.

"Tenth. We believe the present condition of the local trolleys to be intolerable, exasperating and unnecessary, and that it works a great hardship both on the commuters and those about town, and that only a revision of the present understanding between the city and the Public Service Corporation, based upon an up-to-date, business-like agreement, will give the people good trolley service and the Public Service Corporation an opportunity to make money.

"Eleventh. That we think it is the duty of the Board of Trade for Plainfield and North Plainfield to draw the attention of the city authorities to needed improvements and to any condition or situation, which is working harm to the people; but that it is not the business of the Board to undertake the work of the administration of the city's government or any part thereof, and that if the city is unable to induce the Public Service Corporation to treat Plainfield fairly and to adjust the existing obnoxious trolley nuisances, then for the city to coerce the company and enforce every possible feature of the franchise or ordinance of

MASQUERADE BALL AT THE PARISH HOUSE

A masquerade ball under the auspices of St. John's guild was given in the parish house of St. Stephen's church Thursday and was attended by about seventy-five couples. Many of the costumes were original and unique. Prizes were awarded for the two best costumes and were won by Miss Helen Borup, as a baby, and William Lamberton, as Uncle Sam.

The unmasking at 10:30 caused some merriment as the disguises were were so good that nobody knew who was who. The fun was rang with laughter when the disclosures took place. Japanese girls flirted with Spanish Dons and Dutch girls and Colonial dames vied with each other in capturing the noble cavaliers of the period of Louis XII.

Dancing continued until midnight to music furnished by Suhr's orchestra and the evening was voted one of the most enjoyable ever held in the parish house.

PUMPKINS AT $1,000 EACH.

"I saw a couple of pumpkins the other day, which the owner said was worth just $2,000," remarked Colonel Lew Chase, of Kirkville, writes a Macon correspondent of the Kansas City Star.

"They were ordinary Missouri pumpkins, worth, apparently, about twenty-five cents apiece, and I believed my friend was playing me for a tenderfoot. But when he got through telling me the story I saw that his statement was founded on the facts."

"About fourteen years ago Mr. Keith, a banker of Sturgeon, Mo., got a farmer client to invest in stocks. This investment turned out badly, and the farmer had bad luck in other deals until he went broke. He just couldn't pay the note. Finally he went out West, and there he made a strike. Things began coming his way, and he was soon in better circumstances than he had ever been before."

"After the lapse of about thirteen years he returned to Sturgeon, bought him a farm and settled down again. The banker again presented his note, which by this time, had grown to $1,000, including interest. The farmer gently called the banker's attention to the fact that the statute of limitation had run against the note, and that it was not collectable by law."

"The banker knew that was true; if the borrower didn't want to pay it he couldn't be made to pay it."

"One bay the banker drove out in the country with a friend, and they passed the farm of the man who had taken advantage of the statute of limitations. The farmer was standing in the field when the two men drove up. He refused to pulled some large pumpkins, and asked the farmer what he would take for them. The farmer said twenty-five cents apiece."

"The banker selected two of the pumpkins and had them put in his buggy. Then he fished around in his pocket for the fifty cents."

"'By G..orge!' he said, 'I haven't got a cent with me, what?' I do?'"

"'Oh, you can pay me the next time you come along,'" said the farmer.

"'No, I will just give you credit on that note.'"

"'All right,'" returned the farmer, carelessly.

"The banker pulled out the note, and in the presence of the borrower and the companion who was riding with him he made an entry crediting fifty cents on the note, and then drove on town. The same day his lawyer began suit against the borrower, alleging that a payment had been made, and that it brought the obligation again within the law. The banker collected every cent of the debt. No wonder he is saving those pumpkins."

[illegible] breakfast table. [illegible] down ahead of the other [illegible] of the family and now buried in the morning paper, he paid no attention to the noisy greetings of his two boys as they romped into the dining room. Mrs. Blifkins' "good morning" was received in silence. The family was properly subdued. Finally, perhaps ten minutes later, Blifkins noticed that his wife was speaking to him.

"Hardly a good way to start the day," Mrs. Blifkins was saying. "It's getting to be a custom. I know you're not angry or cranky, but you might as well be; the effect is the same. You'll never gain the boys' confidence that way. You never play with them. You're always too busy, thinking or working. And I can't keep Billy at home because there's nothing here to amuse him. Why don't you come home early this afternoon and get acquainted? You can live if you miss your clum one afternoon."

So Blifkins went home at three o'clock. Billy, 4½ years, and Dick, two, were waiting for him on the front steps. They began to whoop like young Indians when they saw him get off the car.

"I'm going to play with you this afternoon, boys," Blifkins said. "You wait till I take off these duds and we'll have a time. We're going to get acquainted, we are."

Fifteen minutes afterward Blifkins had turned an old porch seat upside down in the back yard and was making it into a work bench for Billy and Dick. He next fetched from the basement a large tin box filled with all sorts of valuables, such as broken locks and keys, discarded buckles, bits of wire and other junk. It was a treasure box for Billy and Dick, and soon they were exploring its contents.

Just then Blifkins heard more Indian yells and turned in time to see three boys of Billy's age about to attack from the rear, over the fence.

"I won't play with you," Billy said. "I'm going to play with my papa."

"Well," said one of the boys in perfect good nature, "we're going to play with you, too."

"Why should we could come," one of the boys said.

"But your mamma didn't know I was—"

"Yes she did. That's why she let us come. We're going to—"

Four more boys and three girls, none more than five years old, now appeared, some from the front, some from the rear. They lined up around Blifkins and stared at him much as they'd stare at a giraffe at an elephant. It was a children's hour.

"Children," he said—Billy and Dick kept up their positions near their father—"children, I don't come home often in the afternoon, so I wish you'd go home now and—"

"Maw said—" one of the girls began, but Blifkins interrupted her.

"It doesn't matter what 'maw' said. This is my house and I wish you'd go home."

"We want to play with Billy," was the calm rejoinder.

"I don't want you," Billy said, sturdily supporting his father. No one was at all offended by Billy's candor.

The argument was here interrupted by the arrival of three more boys. Blifkins' backyard resembled a kindergarten. Blifkins appealed to his wife, who had come to the kitchen door.

"See here, Martha," he said. "I don't want to insult these children, but—"

"Don't worry, you can't do it," Mrs. Blifkins said. "I've tried it 50 times." I'd like to see you get rid of them."

Blifkins brought out his old speech, "Children," he said. "I don't come home often, so I wish you'd go home no said—"

"Maw said we could come over"—in chorus.

"Well, this is my house and I think—"

"I'm going to stay," one of the five-year-olds announced, and walked over to the tin box and began to examine what was in it. Blifkins, growing angry, took the boy by one arm, and led him gently but firmly to the front of the house and shooed him off the place. When he returned another boy had stepped just across the property line so that he stood on Blink's lot and cried shrilly: "I'm going to stay here. Maw said—"

Blifkins seized him by the collar and led him to the fence.

Then a very obliging little chap, announced: "Maw and I could come, but I'll go home and take a nap and come back."

The others, realizing at last that they weren't wanted, walked away grumbling. One turned at the front steps and called: "Billy, oh, Billy! Maw said—"

"Scat," said Blifkins, and the boy ran.—Kansas City Star.

Natural Ink.

The River of Natural Ink is a natural curiosity said to exist in Algeria. It is caused by the junction of two streams, one of which drains a region strongly impregnated with iron, while the other flows from a peat bog and holds a large quantity of gallic acid in solution. The union of these two streams causes the iron and the gallic acid to combine, and thus produces a genuine ink.

THE MYTHICAL MILLIONS OF DRAKE TEMPT "HEIRS."

"A fool and his money are soon parted" is an old saying, and one which is proved true from day to day. News comes now from New Castle, Pa., that "members of the Drake family in Western Pennsylvania" are preparing to make a raid on the stored up millions (200,000,000) of the mythical money of the estate of the late Sir Francis Drake.

It is evident that the newspapers have not yet penetrated to the confines of western Pennsylvania, or the deluded Drake heirs would not so readily put up good money to pay for "eminent" lawyers to journey across the big pond chasing a chimera. But that is just what they contemplate doing.

WHY HE WAS BEING WATCHED

Detective's Explanation Something of a Slur on the Quaint Old Dutch Town.

During a period of political agitation a stranger arrived in Magdeburg, where, on applying for the authorities, he obtained a permit or ticket of residence. He had not been long in the town before he became aware that his steps were being dogged by a man in blue uniform. He bore it for days, but at last he said to the chap, "Sir, do you wish to drive me mad? Why do you pursue me in this way?" "I am a detective, and my instructions are not to lose sight of you," was the quiet answer. "Why, what fault have the police to find with me?" shouted the stranger in the greatest excitement; my passport is in order, here is my ticket of residence; I am a citizen of Berlin; why do you follow me about?" "It states in your passport," was the reply, "that you were going to reside here for pleasure; that looks suspicious, as it is the first time anyone came to reside in Magdeburg for pleasure."

Wheat Older Than History.

Wheat belongs to the wholly distinct botanical family of the grasses. Its ancestral home is unknown, but so far as early narratives possess evidential value there seems some reason to credit the place of origin to western Asia. Wheat was the gift of the gods. The misconception as to the origin of this cereal suggested in the question may have been based upon a faulty recollection of a theory once proposed, namely that wheat was a cultivation derivative of the wild Triticum ovatum, a grass of the Levant. This grass was put under selective cultivation for a score of years and it responded to the effort in a considerable degree. It developed into a better grain, but grass it remained; it did not become wheat.

Salt Cellar in Olden Times.

During the latter part of the middle ages the salt cellar was the most conspicuous object on the table. It was always placed in the center of a long table at which the household gathered, my lord and lady, family and guests being at one end, and the servants and retainers at the other, and in this way one's social position was at once apparent, the "gentle folk" sitting "above the salt" and the yeomanry below it. Among the wealthy the salt cellar was of gold or silver. Benvenuto Cellini chased some for Francis I. that were of the most exquisite workmanship, and in the Louvre may be seen several rich specimens of salt cellars in faience, and the famous set made at Orion for Henry I.

The Oldest Family.

The Austrians are known to be the greatest "sticklers" for genealogy, many of the nobles tracing their descent back to almost the dawn of history. Even in Austria, however, it is generally admitted that the dukes of Norfolk represent the oldest family in the world, according to the most trustworthy authorities the Howards are of Saxon origin, the name in those days being Hereward. So far back as 957 there are trustworthy records of the family.

Obliging the Lady.

"I see you've got an automobile," said Citiman. "I thought you swore you'd never buy one."

"Yes, I did say that once," replied Subbubs, "but our new cook insisted that we must get one because her church is so far away from our house."

The Constitutionalist.

AN INDEPENDENT WEEKLY.

A. L. FORCE, Editor and Proprietor.

Terms: $2.00 per year.

Plainfield, N. J., February 10, 1910.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

"Seven Days," the new comedy which Wagenhals and Kempe produced at the New York Astor Theatre in November, is the season's success there. It deals with many up-to-date questions, woman's rights, divorce which is settled by the divorcee's falling in love and being married over again, a dash of spiritualism, and a burglar on the side, who hides throughout the play in many unexpected places, and finally assists in the denouement. "Seven Days" is bound to make a sensation, when it goes on tour.

One of the genuine treats of New York is "The Lottery Man," which enters upon its third month at the Bijou next week. This is the comedy which Alan Dale declared to be "the winner of the season," and it is a singular fact that every New York critic rendered a verdict equally as praiseworthy. The Shuberts, who are presenting this Rida Johnson young comedy, have made no mistake in selecting Cyril Scott as the star. They are to be complimented also on having surrounded him with a cst of more than ordinary calibre. The cast includes Mr. Scott, Helen Lowell, Louise Gallaway, Robert MacKay, Harry S. Haddield, Janet Beecher, Ethel Winthrop, Mary Leslie Mayo and Wallace Sharpe. The matinees are Wednesday and Saturday.

Prof. Lowie, of the American Museum of Natural History, Central Park and 77th street, this morning made a plastr cast of the head of Kiwi Amohau, leading chief of the Tribe of Maoris, now appearing at the New York Hippodrome. The plaster cast will be added to the New Zealand collection of the museum and later other casts will be made from the heads of several of the women of the tribe. Prof. Lowie, the chief, submitted to the operation of having the cast made this morning, until the wet plaster began to harden on his face, when he suddenly became impatient and would have destroyed the result had he not been persuaded by his manager, Wm. P. Whyte, who accompanied him to the Museum, to remain quiet until Prof. Lowrie and his assistants were able to remove the cast.

"Madame X," the impressive drama by Alexandra Bisson, that so thrilled all Paris, was given its metropolitan premiere at the New Amsterdam Theatre, New York, on last Wednesday evening. Henry W. Savage is the producing manager and that is one of the most brilliant in years, the roster comprising Dorothy Donnelly, William Elliott, Robert Drouet, Malcolm Williams, W. H. Denny, John McKee, Harry G. Bradley, Charles E. Verner, Frank Wright, Christian Blessing, Mary Mallon and many other players of high rank. Not since the days when Clara Morris, in America, and "the divine Sarah" Bernhardt, in France, so moved the hearts of the auditors, has a play been greeted as has "Madame X." Its dramatic thrill, tragic force and sympathetic appeal this drama of a mother's love has justly been put even a step ahead of such works as "Article 47," "Camille" and "East Lynne." Its tense realism and wonderful fidelity to truth set it apart as a veritable masterpiece of its kind.

ENGINEER'S IDEA ON WATER SUPPLY

In a lengthy communication to the Common Council, Monday, R. H. Hood, of Sidle avenue, an engineer of note, took up the question of the city voting on the question of owning its water supply. He advocated this strongly, claiming that in fifty years the city could own its plant through the issue of bonds.

He said that the citizens should be allowed to vote on these three propositions: First, the cost of the present plant; secondly, the advisability of condemnation proceedings; thirdly, the feasibility of building a new plant.

In the opinion of Mr. Hood a reservoir located on the Watchung hills is the proper thing, so that Plainfielders can obtain their water supply through gravity and not by pumping as at present. He said that there was no question but that Plainfield should own and control its water supply, instead of allowing a company to do so and sell it wherever it desired.

Regarding the question of improved sewage disposal, Mr. Hood said that he did not think the time ripe for action, in view of the new legislation constantly being enacted at Trenton. The communication was referred to the public affairs committee.

The senior class will give the junior class a dance in the auditorium on Saturday night, February 12.

LITERARY

Among the innumerable magazines which monthly flood the news stands it is interesting to come across one which, in its policy, is "quite unlike any other." This is the Wide World Magazine which publishes nothing but fact—no fiction or tales of imagination being allowed within its covers. But the "fact" is served up so attractively, and the stories of real adventure and strange experiences possess so potent an interest, that the fiction is not missed.

Scribner's Magazine for February has as a frontispiece a striking picture in colors of a modern locomotive running at great speed. It is one of several accompanying an article which describes the life of a modern engineer, by the artist, William Harnden Foster. Theodore Roosevelt's article shows his remarkable capacity for observation and for picturesque and vivid description. It is not a mere hunter's tale of travel, but Mr. Roosevelt has carried out the project as he saw it before starting—to associate each species of the large game with the region in which it flourishes. He reproduces the panorama of the life as he has seen it. Another article picture "A Buffalo Hunt by the Kamiti"—the buffalo being one of the most dangerous of African wild animals.

A cheery, optimistic tone is characteristic of Lippincott's Magazine, and the February issue is no exception to the general rule. The number opens with a long and incensely powerful detective story by that versatile genius, Carolyn Wells. The title to the tale is entitled "The Gold Bag," and it is fully up to the standard of its famous predecessor by this author—"The Clue," which has been one of the most successful books of the season.

The February Century opens appropriately with a portrait of the late Richard Watson Gilder, for twenty-eight years editor of the magazine, reproduced from the painting by Cecilia Beaux; and the first feature of the number is Mr. Gilder's last serious poem, "Love in the City." The magazine's tribute to Mr. Gilder includes memorial poems by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps and Charles T. Gregory, and conversation of his public activities as follows: "As Poet," by George Edward Woodberry; "As a Moral Force in Politics," by Henry van Dyke; "His Philanthropic Work," by Jacob A. Riis; "His Relation to the Arts," by Cecilia Beaux; "His Editorial Relations," by his associate editor, Robert Underwood Johnson. There are further tributes of appreciation and regret from President Taft, Frances Hodgson Burnett, John Burroughs, Helen Keller, Hamilton Wright Mabie, Andrew Carnegie and others who knew and loved the man and his work.

Some figures prepared from the 1905 anthracite coal output—practically all from Pennsylvania mines,—will convey an idea of where the country's hard coal renders its final accounting. In that year New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania consumed in round numbers 41,000,000, tons; New England, 8,000,000 tons; States west of the Ohio river, 7,000,000 tons; Southern States, 2,000,000 tons, and Canada, 2,000,000 tons. Only 40,0000 tons were exported.—From "Our Coal Supply To-Day," by Elliott Mitchell, in the American Review of Reviews for February.

Charles Dudley Warner once went so far as to say that no matter how objectionable the character of a paper may be, it is always a trifle better than the patrons on whom it relies for its support. I suspect that Mr. Warner's comparison rested on the greater frankness of the bad paper, which, by virtue of its mode of appeal is bound to make a brave parade of its worst qualities; whereas the reader who is loudest in proclaiming in public his repugnance for horrors, and his destation of scandals, may in private be buying daily the sheet which peddles both most shamelessly.—Francis E. Leupp, in the February Atlantic.

The February number of "Success Magazine" opens with a remarkable series of letters entitled "The Things He Wrote to Her," by Richard Wightman. "Where Business Brains Win," "Does Us All Is Not Quite Wise—As Yet," is the third installment of Charles Edward Russell's series entitled "The Power Behind the Republic." There is a timely and authoritative article by Louis Windmuller, late of the Orient, entitled "Our Chance in China." E. A. Van Valkenburg.

The Strand Magazine for February contains two serial stories, five short stories and six striking articles, besides several pages of those "Curosities" with which Strand readers have become so familiar during the last few years. A. E. W. Mason's exciting tale is entitled "The Murder of the Villa Rose," is continued and increases in interest as the complications grow. M. There has been a change in professionals at the Camden, S. C., course. W. C. Skelley, formerly at the Wilmington Country Club, has succeeded Jack Croke. The latter did not find enough business to suit him, judging by some remarks about a "lemon" he made on leaving.

ACCEPT ATHLETIC FIELD WANT HIGHER PRESSURE

Andrew Mc Clean Parker's Offer Welcomed by the City Fathers.

FOR PUBLIC PLAYGROUND.

No Action Is Taken on the Education Board's Plan for Playgrounds at the Public Schools.

The Playground Commission, through the secretary, Joseph W. Gavett, communicated with the Common Council at its February meeting, Monday, regarding the offer of Andrew McClean Parker to provide a fully equipped athletic field for the city for a nominal rent; also that the Board of Education had approved plans for establishing playgrounds at the Bryant and Franklin Schools.

In connection with the playground idea it was stated that $1,000 would be needed to equip these yards with steel slides, swings, sandboxes; also the services of an instructor. It is proposed to purchase the equipment from Spalding Bros., for $606, and the salary of an instructor would be $50 a month. The Council took no action regarding the playground idea, but after a meeting of the Council as a committee of the whole, it was voted to accept Mr. Parker's offer.

With all the necessary papers, together with maps, etc., as well as a lease prepared by Corporation Counsel Marsh, were presented. The offer of Mr. Parker is that the city shall have the use of the athletic field which will be located on Randolph road and Woodland avenue, for a term of ten years at the nominal rental of $1 a year, the city to provide for taxes and maintenance, after it is fully equipped. It was explained that the cost of the enterprise to Mr. Parker would be about $20,000. At the end of ten years the city has the option of purchasing the field and equipment for cost, with six per cent. added, otherwise it will revert to Mr. Parker or his estate.

The field is to be under the direct supervision of the Playground Commission, and will be for the use of the city in general, which includes the Plainfield High School, Y. M. C. A., as well as other local bodies. The commission will have the right to charge a revenue for the use of the field to be applied to its maintenance. The field comprises between twelve and fifteen acres.

Action was urged on the proposition last night for the reason that Mr. Parker is going away soon to be absent about two months and he was anxious to know whether the city would accept the proposition, so that he might go ahead and provide for the improvement and equipment.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk was invited to say a few words in explanation of the offer, which he did, and Former Councilman George A. Mellick, of the Playground Commission, spoke in favor of the matter. He said that all appreciated Mr. Parker's offer and he was sure that the commission would give the best of care and attention to the maintenance of the field.

FOR TAX EXEMPTION, DIVORCEES AND ESSEX.

Trenton, Feb. 9.—Essex's contribution to the bills thrown in the House hopper Monday night, while not highly important, were interesting in several instances. From Mr. Benjamin Bernard was designed to exempt from the collateral inheritant tax that portion of the estate of the late Amos H. Van Horn, of Newark, bequeathed for the purpose of public monuments or other memorial. Mr. Bernard would also, by another bill, raise the salary of the sergeant-at-arms in the Chancery Court at Newark, from $1,200 a year to $1,500, and by a third bill would permit divorced women to resume their maiden names once a decree nisi has been entered.

Mr. Minard, chairman of the Essex delegation, also offered three bills as his share of the grist. One of these would permit the Essex County Board of Freeholders to get around the difficulty that is confronting them in the way of sewer drainage at the proposed Essex Isolation Hospital at Soho. This measure provides for a connecting of the sewage and drainage of any county hospital with any sewer or drain now existing or hereafter to be constructed. Mr. Minard, by a second bill, would amend the title to Chapter 179 of the laws of 1899, relative to county boards, and his third measure was one put in last year by Mr. Clark, at the request of Adrian Riker, releasing the title of the state in certain real estate in Orange, of which Moses Bennet died seized.

Mr. Wohlfarth introduced a bill providing for the repaving of streets and highways in first-class cities and the mode of assessing the cost and expense thereof, and Mr. Klemm submitted a measure providing for the regulating, cleaning and repair of streets, sidewalks and public grounds in cities.

The official board of the First M. E. church will meet tonight after the prayer-meeting to decide about the individual communion service.

The Dunellen Council Demands Better Service from Watchung Water Co.

COMMITTEE TO MAKE FIGHT.

Mayor W. A. Sanford Defers Discussion on Sewerage Question Until March Meeting—New Tool House.

The Dunellen Council at its meeting Monday was slated to discuss the projected sewerage affiliation with North Plainfield, but on the suggestion of Mayor William A. Sanford, the matter was deferred until the March meeting. In making the suggestion Mayor Sanford stated that it was his wish that the full membership of the Council be present when the discussion takes place. At the meeting last night Councilman Fireman H. Gise was unable to be present owing to illness, and it was because of his absence that the matter was put over.

Mayor Sanford declared, however, in his remarks on the subject, that the borough should not hesitate when the proper time comes to take up its share of the contract with North Plainfield. "Sewers are necessary here," he said, "if you wish to see our borough expand, and whatever expense there is the money will be well expended."

Mr. Sanford referred to his presence at the recent meeting of New Jersey mayors held at Trenton. He declared that in his opinion the city of Plainfield would ultimately join interests with North Plainfield in the proposed sewerage system.

Water pressure occupied the attention of the Council for a time. At the recent fire at the Hall Printing Press Works the firemen were handicapped in fighting the flames owing to low pressure and on the recommendation of Fire Chief Wyhuskey the Council will make an effort to secure more efficient water supply from the Watchung Water Company. Councilman R. F. Bogardus was appointed chairman of a committee to place the matter before the water company.

The water company will be requested to place a dial in the engine house which will show the daily pressure. It will also be asked to furnish a telephone at fire headquarters. The Council declares that this is a necessity as when a fire occurs the water company can be notified to start its pumping engines and therefore save time.

A resolution was passed authorizing the erection of a storage house for tools to be built in the rear of borough hall.

CITY FATHERS RECEIVE LICENSE APPLICATIONS

The usual number of applications for liquor licenses were presented at the February meeting of the Common Council Monday night, and they were referred to the license committee to be reported on at an adjourned meeting on Thursday night, February 24, for action. All licenses expire March 1, hence the necessity of action this month.

The applications for saloon, hotel and wholesale licenses are as follows: Jerome W. Leary, Jacob Blimm, Jr., Ellsworth C. Westcott, George J. Weinman, Clark Brothers, Christian Gloekler, Henry Windham, Alexander Hotel Association; Alexander D. Findlay, Michael F. Watson, Frank Linke and the Eastern Bottling Company.

Just prior to the presentation of the licenses, the application of John Burns, proprietor of the Hotel Kensington, for a transfer of his license to the new proprietor, Alexander Riley, was received and was acted upon favorably, Chairman Clay, of the license committee, recommending that the transfer be made. Mr. Riley took possession of the hotel business this morning. He also presented Riley's application for a new license beginning March 1.

Abe Findlay, the well known golfer, says he could name six professional golfers whose combined wealth would exceed $1,000,000. Incidentally, Findlay does not name the fortunate sextet. He said:

"Take Donald Ross, at Pinehurst, for example. Ross gets $2 an hour teaching, and has three or four men to help him. He sells three thousand clubs during the season, and his regular bill is large. Just figure it up for yourself.

It is understood that both the Forest Hill Field Club and the Yountakah Country Club will seek new professionals next season. Tom Gourlay is at Forest Hill this present, while George Pearson's contract with Yountakah will expire on April 1.

Even at this early date plans are making abroad for the professionals. The Olton Golf Club has arranged for an open tournament for June 29 and 30, at which Braid, Taylor, Vardon, Herd, Massey and others will compete.

The second of the B. & E. Company's winter dances, which was held last night in Excelsior hall, was one of the most enjoyable the firemen have yet held. The hall was prettily trimmed and the friends of the company were out in force, to enjoy the last dance before the opening of the Lenten season. Naylor's full orchestra was kept busy responding to encores for the enchanting two step and waltz, and there was not a dull moment from 9 o'clock until 1:30, when Jimmy Sweet, Hose was played.

Fire breaking out on the hay-laden schooner Wilber E. Postles, of Camden, the boat was sunk in midstream to save E. G. Miller's lumber yard and several homes and dwellings. The Paulsboro and Billingsport fire companies were unable to save the boat on account of the high wind.

Originally the ruling applied to drug and cigar stores, but later druggists were told it did not cover cigar sales and this alleged discrimination angered the aliens. Thomas J. Boardwalk spectators crowded along the seaward rails of the promenade in Chelsea Monday to watch a successful fight put up by men of the crews of three big barges and a deep-water tug. Several tons of ice gathered on the sides of the vessels from turning them over by its weight. Fighting with steam driven through pipes from the tug's boilers, the seamen partly freed the endangered vessels from their dangerous coating of frozen spray and the Botilla started on up the coast just before nightfall.

A howl is going up in Atlantic City because of the increase in the gas bills since a monopoly was formed by the two rival concerns. The Business Men's League has to tackle the issue in a mass meeting of trying to get some of the yeast out of the combination's bills. The new consolidation promised the same pride of gas, ninety cents per thousand net, as was in force before the combination was formed, but many householders who paid the ninety cent rate when competition existed, have received bills for double their old bills.

DR. JOHN CHAMPLIN PRESENTS WESTERLY WITH A HOSPITAL.

Many Plainfielders who were formerly residents of Westerly, R. I., will be interested in the announcement of the opening of a new hospital at that place by Dr. John Champlin, who was a resident of this city here. At the annual meeting and banquet of the Association of Westerly Physicians, last Thursday evening, Dr. Champlin gave his colleagues a surprise, by stating that he had equipped a private hospital at his own expense for the use of the people of Westerly and any doctors in that section of the country.

Dr. Champlin then invited the physicians to inspect the place after the banquet. It seemed almost incredible that the hospital could have been built and equipped and kept a secret. This is Westerly's first hospital. Although built and equipped by Dr. Champlin the institution will be for the general use of the public. It will be known as the Westerly Sanitorium and any physician may bring his patients to the hospital or patients may have any physician they wish.

CASE GETS JUDGESHIP

Alvah A. Clark's Junior Partner Succeeds Judge Schenck

F. A. POPE NEW PROSECUTOR.

Senator Frelinghuysen's Suggestions Are Approved by Governor John Franklin Fort.

Judge Louis H. Schenck, who has served two terms as Judge in Somerset county at Somerville, has been succeeded by Clarence E. Case, who was appointed Monday by Governor John Franklin Fort. Judge Schenck was appointed first by Governor Franklin Murphy and was re-appointed by Governor Stokes. Each term was for four years.

Judge Case is thirty-three years old and was born in Jersey City. He received his education in Rutgers Preparatory school, and Rutgers college, graduating from the latter with the class of 1900. He studied law in and graduated from the New York law school and soon after his graduation entered the office of Alvah H. Clark at Somerville, where he practiced for a time. About five years ago Mr. Case became a partner with Mr. Clark and afterwards served a term as secretary to the president of the Senate. He took an active part in the last presidential election. His experience in the courts has eminently fitted him for the duties which he will assume as Judge of the District Court in Somerset county.

Frank Allen Pope, who succeeds John F. Reger as prosecutor of Somerset county, was born August 10, 1873, and is the son of the late Charles E. Pope, who was postmaster at Dunellen for twenty years. His mother was Louisa H. Todd, a niece of Rev. John H. Todd. His education was begun in the public schools and finished in the New Jersey Law School. He was raised on a farm at Martinsville and studied law while tilling the soil. He entered the law office of George W. Anderson in 1892 and was admitted to practise in 1896.

His practise ever since has been a successful one. He served as assistant prosecutor to James L. Griggs for two years and from this experience is qualified to enter on his duties as prosecutor for Somerset county.

TRADE BOARD TO TALK ON MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

Mayor Charles J. Fisk is anxious to push forward with all possible haste public sentiment for the proposed special election at which the question of municipal ownership of the water plant may be submitted to the voters. He sent Monday to President William Jeffery of the Board of Trade this letter:

"At a meeting of the Common Council held this evening, a resolution was adopted of which the following is a copy:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of the Council that the question of the adoptions of the provisions of an Act, entitled "An Act to enable cities to supply the inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water," be submitted to the citizens of the city at a special election to be held as soon as the necessary preparations can be made; and,

"Further Resolved, That the Corporation Counsel be, and is hereby, requested to prepare at or before the time for the regular meeting of the Council in March next, the necessary resolutions, notices, etc., for bringing about such submission, to the end that action may be taken thereon at such regular meeting."

"This is an important matter, and if I may suggest it would be well to call a special meeting of the Board of Trade, at which meeting you could invite the Merchants' Association, and members of the Plainfield Protective Association, and such other people as you may think proper to be present; and Mr. Myrant, chairman of the public affairs committee of the Council, having this matter in charge, will be very glad to present the matter for discussion. I suggest a special meeting of the board for this purpose, as it will probably take most of the evening to thoroughly discuss the matter. It should be done before the next meeting of the Council on March 7. The earlier date it can be arranged for the better."

MUST TAKE EXAMINATION

Local District Court Job Comes Under the Civil Service Law.

SERGEANT-AT-ARMS POSITION.

Judge Newcorn Says the Candidates Must Be Young, Ambitious, Sober and Capable.

The vacancy existing in the local District court has not yet been filled and up to the present time the right man has not appeared to fill the position of sergeant-at-arms left open by the resignation of Justice Hezekiah Hand.

The recent decision rendered by Assistant Attorney General Nelson B. Gaskill, which makes it imperative that the appointee pass the civil service examination will impose the duty on Judge William Newcorn of appointing a man who is qualified in competitive examination to fill the position. Judge Newcorn said this morning that he had not one in view at present, but that when the appointment is made it will be a man who is young, ambitious, sober and capable.

At present the work of the sergeant-at-arms is being divided between two constables in this city, Messrs. Weaver and Manley. The position has possibilities in it of an income for whoever gets the appointment. If followed up to its full opportunities the position will command as much as $100 per month, but it requires punctual and strict attention to the business. There is, therefore, a good opportunity for the right man.

TOLD OF MISSIONARY WORK IN SOUTHWEST

New Mexico, Arizona, Oklahoma and Texas comprised the territory presented for the consideration of the members of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist church at their meeting yesterday afternoon in the lecture room. The paper of the day had been assigned to Mrs. Martin J. Zook, who was called to relinquish its preparation when she was called West by the illness of her husband. Having returned, however, on her husband's recovery, she supplemented the story of "The New South West," given by Mrs. George Robbins, who read of the rapid growth of the section of the country, the increase in the population of Texas being 100,000 in a single month. She said that mission boards were awake to the situation, realizing that conditions were now stable and no outlay of time or money would bring larger results than their work done now in this rapidly changing section.

Mrs. Zook added an account of the thousands of foreigners employed in the mining and irrigation districts who need religious instruction and said these numbers would be greatly increased on the completion of the Panama Canal. She told also of the need of a training for those who frequent the health resorts of the West.

Mrs. Chambliss gave some statistics of the work of the Baptist Home Missionary Society, who claim that three-quarters of the baptisms last year in the United States were west of the Mississippi river.

Mrs. Reuben Knox, the president, led the devotional service that preceded the literary program.

Y. M. C. A. ORCHESTRA PROVIDES CONCERT

The thirty-sixth concert by the Y. M. C. A. orchestra, under the leadership of Martin A. Korff, was held at the association hall last night, and as usual, attracted a large audience. The orchestra was assisted by Percy Mygrant, cornetist, and the Young People's Choral Society, of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, of which William Holmes is the director, and Miss Conger was the accompanist. Mrs. A. B. Price, of Westfield, a pupil of J. E. Skiff, also favored the audience with vocal selections Mrs. Harry DeMeza being the accompanist. Mr. Mygrant took Mrs. Guy Bender's place on the program, the latter being unable to attend.

The choral society, Mr. Mygrant and Mrs. Price gave numbers in part first and second of the program and were obliged to respond to encore The work of the orchestra showed improvement, several difficult and well as popular selections being rendered in a pleasing manner. The program was concluded with a march, "Daughters of the American Revolution." Rev. Dr. C. E. Hornbeck, of the orchestra, made a few remarks during the intermission in which he made an appeal for a liberal offering.

HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS AS YOUNG THESPIANS

The senior English classes at the Plainfield High School presented two scenes from "Macbeth" at the high school this morning. The first was the "banquet scene," Harry Van Zandt taking the part of "Macbeth," and Miss Kathryn Moynihan was "Lady Macbeth." Those at the feast were Russell Miller, John Kenney, Arthur Johnson, Miss Van Winkle, Miss Gray. William Bullock and Clifford Vail were servants to "Macbeth."

The second part was the "witch scene." The witches were Miss Barbara Fleming, Miss Louise Andrews, Miss Katherine Phillips and Miss Meta Pennock. Osgood Sewall took the part of "Macbeth," with great success. He was dressed in Scottish kilts and delivered his lines well. The scene, a grewsome one, was realistic.

Within the next week the classes will present "Julius Caesar."

FURNITURE TO BE SOLD FOR CREDITORS' BENEFIT

From reliable sources it has been ascertained that the household furniture which was once the property of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Bache, will be sold at public auction next week to satisfy the claims of creditors of the pair.

Lawyer Martin B. Stutsman made an offer to settle the outstanding claims against Bache and his wife for fifty cents on the dollar and some of the creditors were wise enough to accept the offer and glad to get the money, but others whose claims were larger refused to compromise on this basis with the result that the goods will have to be sold to satisfy them.

According to Mr. Stutsman, the claims not yet paid together with the costs of suit and other incidentals amount now to about $1,600. The goods have been appraised as worth $1,700. What may be realized from the forced sale of the furniture can only be conjectured, but it is hardly likely that anything like $1,700 will be realized for claimants.

Mrs. Joseph Randolph Surprised.

Mrs. Joseph Randolph, of West Second street, was agreeably surprised last night by about twenty-five members and friends of Mispah Lodge, United Order Odd Ladies. The evening was spent playing games, after which refreshments were served. Mrs. Henry Frazee and Mrs. Dodge arranged the affair.

MAYORS ARE NOT UNITED

Executives of Municipalities Much Divided on the Excise Problem.

SOME WANT "OPEN-SUNDAY."

General Conference of the House of Mayors to Be Held at Trenton on March 4 to Consider Suggestions.

That the Mayors of New Jersey, who recently met at Trenton with Governor Fort for a discussion of municipal problems, are far from being a unit in favor of more liberal excise laws, particularly in the matter of the sale of intoxicants on Sunday, was manifested at Trenton yesterday at a meeting of the Legislative Committee of Conference.

The executives of the seaside resorts and of the larger cities in the upper end of the State are demanding an "open Sunday" law of the present Legislature. They say it is impossible to enforce the Bishops' law, and that the latter enactment is making hypocrites in all parts of the State. This view is not shared by other Mayors, who feel that the State is not yet ready for an "open Sunday."

Noah Gutter, of Newark, submitted a draft of a bill designed to give cities power to regulate the liquor traffic. This would enable the municipalities so desiring the right to permit the sale of liquor on Sunday and also permit Sunday sports. This draft is considered to be a little broad for the committee, and it is not likely that it will be included in the final report and draft of a new liquor law.

There will be a general conference of Mayors on March 4, at which time the committee will make its report.

It was decided to refer to Assistant Attorney General Nelson B. Gaskill the questions calling for a uniform system of municipal accounts. A bill providing for the appointment of all city officials, except Mayor and members of Common Council, and a bill for a municipal debt limit are also considered.

The debt limit proposal has been approved by the committee, and it is now expected that the features of the Commission on Municipal Government report made in 1908 will be approved and drafted into a bill for the Legislature. The committee favors House bill No. 155, now in the Legislature, on the question of home rule of cities.

State Auditor William E. Drake attended the conference and outlined to the Mayors different systems of municipal accounts, giving the merits of each. When Mr Drake had ended the committee discussed in detail the various proposals which he had laid before them, some of which will be embodied in a bill to be prepared.

There were present Mayor Charles J. Fisk, of this city; Mayor Mohn, of West Hoboken; Mayor Mraviag, of Elizabeth, and William J. Vance, representing Mayor Haussling, of Newark.

SPEAKERS' CONTEST AT THE HIGH SCHOOL

The Alumni Association of the Plainfield High School will hold its annual meeting in the high school auditorium Monday night. An event of unusual interest will be a speaking contest for which the association offers prizes of $20 in gold. The list of speakers will be announced soon.

A member of the association has this to say about the lack of interest on the part of former graduates: "It is a source of great regret that so few of the alumni have joined the association. The total enrollment is only one hundred, almost one-eighth of the number who have taken their diplomas in the school. When we realize that any graduate of the school who pays only one dollar a year is eligible for membership, we must accuse the other seven hundred either of gross neglect or what is worse, utter indifference.

"Alumni, if the high school has been of any value to you in your preparation for the work of life show your appreciation to it by joining the association, whose object is to further the interests of the school. The dues may be sent to Franklin S. Smith, 470 Washington street, New York city."

BOARD OF TRADE AND THE HACK ORDINANCE

President William Jeffery, of the Board of Trade, has addressed letters to both Mayor Fisk and City Clerk MacMurray in relation to the proposed new hack ordinance. Mr. Jeffery expresses the hope that the ordinance has not passed the point where an amendment or clause cannot be inserted in favor of the hackmen so that the double fare charge may date from 11 o'clock at night instead of midnight.

Mr. Jeffery argues that from information obtained from authentic sources very few people come to Plainfield on the 10:30 train, averaging about eight persons and of these hardly more than three use hacks to reach their homes. He further says that the hackmen ought to be given preference over these two or three persons because they are subjected to the high prices of living just as are the other people of the city.

Mr. Jeffery feels that in this instance the Board of Trade should be represented at the special meeting of the Common Council on next Saturday night in order that the question may be debated. He also wants to know whether it is not in order for objections to be entered before the third reading of the ordinance.

CALL TO ENDEAVORERS SOUNDED IN UNION CO.

Purdy F. Benedict, president of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union, has issued an interesting circular letter to all the county Endeavorers, calling on them to put forth greater efforts during the coming year. The Endeavorers are now beginning their thirtieth year of work and Mr. Purdy calls attention to the fact that all over the world Endeavorers are striving to gain new members and new societies, so that when the State convention is held at Atlantic City next year, there will be one million new members and ten thousand new societies.

"Cannot we, in Union county, do our share this year for our Master?" says Mr. Benedict. "A special campaign for new members and new societies is urged. Any information needed in regard to this campaign can be obtained from the chairman of the forward campaign committee, of Union county, W. D. Newton, of Summit, or the secretary, Frederick L. Mintel, of Rahway.

"At this time we must give careful thought to the bill before the State Legislature, which if passed, will legalize the selling of liquor and the playing of baseball on Sunday.

"Rev. Dr. Johnson, the superintendent of Sunday Observance and Christian citizenship of the State Union, will explain this further on Tuesday evening, February 15, at 8 o'clock, in the Central Baptist church, Elizabeth. LECTURE AT MT. ST. MARY'S

Miss Carey's Graphic Description of the People of Finland Heard.

FINN SUPERIOR TO RUSSIAN.

Praise Given to Finnish Diet for Educating the Poorer Classes —Now All May Learn.

There are comparatively few people who include a visit to Finland in a trip to Europe from this country, and a great deal of the information given the audience in Mount St. Mary's College, most have been received with surprise by the majority of those who had the opportunity of hearing her. In describing some of her impressions as an experienced traveler in Finland the lecturer emphasized the striking superiority of the Finnish peasant over his Russian brother across the border.

She paid a high tribute to the upright character of the Finns generally, her remarks that their many sterling qualities were concealed from the casual tourist under manners that are not calculated to assist those of his countrymen who are endeavoring at the present time to make the grand duchy of Finland a popular resort with holiday travelers. In speaking of the educational and philanthropic institutions in this northern corner of European Russia, Miss Brenton Carey pointed out how great was the progress that had been made in recent years in the social development of the people under the enlightened rule of the Finnish administration, and how striking is the contrast in these as well as in many other respects with the present day condition of things in Russia generally.

A lot of person moistened their fingers with their lips before picking up stamps and this the postoffice department say was a direct way of carrying germs to the counters, which in many cases were made of wood and held the germs.

The lecturer spoke in high praise of the work that had been accomplished by the Finnish Diet, the national parliament, in the educating of the poorer classes. Education which formerly was within the reach of the very few is now a possibility for everyone, even for those living in the more remote rural districts. The country is gradually being covered with a network of schools of every description and further, farmers and peasants, cultivators of the soil, are being encouraged to obtain the latest scientific knowledge at the various agricultural institutions, requisite to the carrying out of their farming operations in the most up-to-date intelligent manner.

The people of Finland are further making strenuous efforts to put down the evil of intoxicating drinks in their country, and in this direction especially, the Diet has done much to assist them by the passing of bills restricting the sale of alcohol, and also by giving its hearty support and co-operation to every private organization which has for its object the stamping out of the evils of drunkenness in the country. The lecturer pointed out that whilst Finland forms a part of the great Empire of Russia, the Finish people are not directly under the government of the Czar. Nicholas II. is not the emperor but the grand duke of Finland, and the Finnish people are subject to the laws of the constitution given to them by the Swedish government in 1782. Alexander I., the Russian emperor, on annexing the Swedish province of Finland in 1809 in accordance with the terms of the treaty of Friederikshamm, swore to faithfully uphold the fundamental laws of the country.

With this knowledge it is possible to understand that the prison system of Finland should be separate and should differ so entirely from that of Russia. The lecturer related several interesting incidents in connection with her visits to some of the State prisons in Finland and she spoke with enthusiasm of the idealistic aims of the Finnish prison authorities who endeavor rather to reform the wrongdoer than to simply mete out the just punishment for the crime, and that in the choice of prison governors, chaplains, wardens and other officials the greatest care and discrimination are shown in the selection of those men and women who are to be entrusted with the spiritual and temporal control of thier fellowmen.

When a new penal code based on the Italian system was introduced in Finland a few years ago, a prison commission was sent out to study the prison systems of Europe. It also paid a visit to this country and many of the ideas borrowed at that time from foreign states have since been put to practical use in the new prison buildings in Finland, and today many of these prisons are models of what such places should be.

In concluding a highly interesting lecture, Miss Brenton Carey spoke of the prominent position which is held by the women of Finland in the social and political life in their country. In Finland the franchise has long ago been extended to women and it is yet to be proved that the Finnish people have made a mistake in admitting women members into the national parliament. They have up to the present proved themselves eminently fitted to be entrusted with the interests of their electors and they never fail to command the respectful attention of the other members of the Diet to the speeches which they are now and again called upon to make.

We agree with the lecturer in the remarks which she made as to the influence of climate on character and it is perhaps due to the conditions and strenuous exertions of the Finnish people to overcome the depressing physical drawbacks of a northern climate that have given them the necessary strength of character to progress in the face of many and varying difficulties.

SELLING THE STAMPS THE GUMMY SIDE UP

As a precaution against the spread of disease germs the Plainfield postoffice employes are delivering postage stamps to purchasers face down on the counter. Postmaster Bird received orders to this effect from Washington on February 4.

Heretofore the clerks have been in the habit of handing the stamps out with the gummy side on the bottom, which, according to Mr. Bird, is a bit unpopular with local stamp buyers and numerous kicks and objections have been made.

The measure is taken because of the many complaints from health boards and from individual physicians throughout the country that when the stamps are pasted across the counter with the gummed side down they pick up many germs which are licked off by the persons who put the stamps on envelopes.

A lot of person moistened their fingers with their lips before picking up stamps and this the postoffice department say was a direct way of carrying germs to the counters, which in many cases were made of wood and held the germs.

ARRESTED FOR SELLING CIGARETTES TO MINORS

Mrs. S. Goldstein, who keeps a little notion and grocery store at 522 East Fourth street, was haled before City Judge William N. Runyon Saturday to answer a charge of selling cigarettes to boys. William Harrison, a colored boy about thirteen years old, was the smoker to whom other and wiser dealers had refused service, but when thought Mrs. Goldstein would furnish the nickle narcotics if she did not know it was against the law. Sure enough, Mrs. Goldstein has only recently opened her little place and was entirely ignorant of the law relating to the sale of tobacco to children.

She told the Judge that only her limited knowledge of the business and the law was responsible for the sale, but that in the future she would be more careful. She was discharged.

SKIRTS ARE WORN LONG.

There is confusion in the minds of many concerning skirts. There is so much talk about smart gowns being five inches from the floor for evening and nearly six inches for morning, that one wonder if there is any hour in which the long graceful skirt is worn.

The strict decree of fashion is this: Skirts five or six inches form the ground for street wear, skirts that sweep over the floor in a round train for the afternoon, and skirts five inches from the floor for the evening.

This is the decree! Everyone does not have to abide by it, but numbers of women will accept it in part, if not in whole. They may not have every evening gown made short, or every afternoon frock long, but they will assuredly have one of each kind to show they know what is being done in the world of fashion.

ARITHMETIC CONFERENCE

Principal Savitz Talks on Mathematics to County Principals.

TO MAKE SOME TESTS SHORTLY.

Aim Is to Make Course Interesting and Practical—More Time for Teaching Composition.

At a regular meeting of the Union County Principals' Association was held at the Van Court Inn, in Roselle, the subject of "Arithmetic in the County Course of Study" was again under discussion. The superintendent, Dr. J. J. Savitz, strongly impressed upon the principals the importance of making the work in the lower grades very concrete. The aim of the whole course is to make the work interesting and practical. Pupils are to be trained in mathematical judgments of everyday life, such as judging the weight of objects, the lengths of lines, the volume or capacity of vessels and tanks of various shapes and sizes. While attention is given to this direction, many ideas are to be trained in speed and accuracy in the fundamental operations have been suggested. Dr. Savitz gave to the principals a series of tests in addition, subtraction, multiplication, division, and the simpler processes of fractions with instructions that these tests be given in all grades from the third or fourth through the eighth. The tests are to be given during the present month and the results tabulated and recorded.

It was determined to extend the county examinations to the sixth and seventh grade. Heretofore, the examination has been given to eighth grade pupils only. It is believed that the extension of the examinations to the sixth and seventh grades will result in greater uniformity in the work of the county schools.

There was a vigorous argument as to whether or not the teaching of technical English grammar was out of place in the grades. There seems to be a movement on foot to devote more time to the teaching of composition as it is thought to be of more practical utility to a majority of the pupils than the work in technical grammar. The high school teachers, however, complain that the pupils come to them now with too little knowledge of English grammar to do the best work in Latin and the modern languages. It was decided this year to make but one set of questions in English and that to cover both grammar and composition.

ONE DOLLAR, PLEASE FOR THE STATE GUARD

A bill for the benefit of the National Guard, imposing a tax an nearly every male citizen between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, of $1 a year, on the grounds that they are, under the Federal Constitution, the reserve of the army, will be introduced in the Assembly by Assemblyman Duane E. Minard, of Essex, a major of the First Regiment. The bill was drawn by Major George T. Vickers of the Fourth Regiment, and has been submitted to and approved by the New Jersey National Guard Association.

Under the Federal constitution, Mr. Vickers contends, all able-bodied men between the ages of eighteen and forty-five are members of the militia of the State, the National Guard being the organized branch, those not members of the guard constituting the reserves. It is the duty of the assistant adjutant-general to keep a record of the members of the militia, and his records now show something like 550,000 names on the list. Mr. Vickers also holds that they are subject to the orders of Congress, the Dick law notwithstanding.

It is with the maintenance of the National Guard, however, that Mr. Vickers' bill will have most to do. It will provide for a yearly tax of $1 on every member of the militia, those serving in the National Guard being exempt from payment of the tax. The money thus obtained is to be devoted to the support of the National Guard, the State being relieved of this burden.

The money obtained from this source, Mr. Vickers maintains, should his bill become a law, will be more than ample to meet the expenses of the guard. It will not alone provide for maintenance but will also be enough to pay for repairs and construction of new armories and leave a snug balance for the improvement of military roads, otherwise, the good roads of the State. Provision, of course, will be made for the collection of the tax.

Didn't Have to Beg.

"I thought you two had quarreled?"

"So we did."

"Did he beg forgiveness on his bended knees, as a man should?"

"Well, no dear; not exactly. The fact is, he couldn't; I was sitting on them!"

"Oh!"

Action to Be Taken at Adjourned Meeting of North Plainfield Fathers Friday Night.

Charles L. Nichols has tendered his resignation as a member of the North Plainfield Council after years of highly valued service. His action is due to the fact that his physician ordered him to give up all business cares. Accordingly he has gone to California for an indefinite stay.

Before his departure on Wednesday, Mr. Nichols sent his resignation to Mayor Newton B. Smalley. It follows:

"Inasmuch as I am leaving the borough for an indefinite period, I think it would be greatly to the benefit and interest of the Council to have a successor to my seat elected to fill my unexpired term. "Thanking you, Mr. Mayor, and all the gentlemen of the Council for all the courtesies extended and regretting the necessity of my leaving you, I am, sincerely and respectfully yours, C. L. Nichols."

Mayor Smalley declined to discuss the matter today when asked for a confirmation of the resignation beyond saying that Mr. Nichols had resigned. Formal action will be taken at the adjourned meeting next Friday night when resolution thanking Mr. Nichols for his services and regretting his resignation.

Mr. Nichols is a Standard Oil man and is a vestryman of Holy Cross church. His services to the borough have been in many capacities, but his work in the Council has attracted the greatest attention and commendation.

DR. J. HERVEY BUCHANAN AT HEAVENLY REST CLUB

The Men's Club of the Church of the Heavenly Rest was entertained by Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan in the parish house Thursday and the largest gathering of members in the history of the club was on hand to listen to the doctor's discourse and the strains of the orchestra of which he is the master mind.

Dr. Buchanan spoke for half an hour on the subject of "Antitoxin" as used in the cure of diphtheria, and explained the way the remedy works. The toxic poison of the disease after getting its seat in the throat works downward and the antitoxin works upward, thus when the two elements meet in the human system the disease is killed because of the superior strength of the remedy. The lecture was listened to with consuming interest and when Dr. Buchanan declared that the Plainfield Board of Health was the equal of any board in the country he was greeted with applause.

The music of the "Bunch" also was highly appreciated and applauded to the limit. Three new members were added to the roll last night bringing the total membership up to 103.

A Sad Mistake.

"Give me a ham sandwich," shouted the traveler at the depot lunch counter. Two seconds later he complained to the attendant. "That was the worst sandwich I ever had. No more taste than sawdust, and not big enough to see."

"You've got yer ticket," returned the attendant contemptuously; "this here's yer ham sandwich."—Human Life.

BOYS OBSERVE BIRTHDAY OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN

The boys' Lincoln Day celebration which was held at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday was in every sucess a and close to one hundred and fifty boys, twelve years of age and over, were present. The leading feature of the observance was an interesting talk to the boys on the life of Lincoln by Captain Herbert B. Saunders, of Scotch Plains.

Captain Saunders held the attention of the youths for half an hour. He held Lincoln out as a type of manhood that all boys should try to emulate. Following Captain Saunders address the boys sang a number of patriotic songs.

The boys were also entertained in the gymnasium where a number of Y. M. C. A. athletes displayed their prowess. A basketball game will be played this afternoon. The affair was under the supervision of C. William Bingeman, superintendent of the boys' department.

P. S. C. TO ABANDON ITS PLANT MARCH 1

The Public Service Corporation has decided to close down its West Second street plant March 1, as the power is now served from the big plant at Metuchen. This will mark the abandonment of an important local industry. It was originally built by the Plainfield Electric Light Company and used by that concern until the Public Service Corporation acquired the property.

During its existence it has been under the management of the several men, including the late William Moore, William McClure, who remained with the P. S. C. for a time after the change, and more recently by Ralph Hache, of Bound Brook, who went to Woodbridge.

The P. S. C. has been gradually transferring the mechanical part of the plant to Metuchen, until at present it is not used at all. The trolley current for this division is supplied by both the Metuchen and Cranford plants and is found to work more satisfactory. The company will continue to occupy the property, it affording a good place for storage purpose for electric supplies.

The abandonment of the plant, also means that on March 1 the fire-alarm whistle will go out of business, the company having notified the Common Council to that effect, and other arrangements will have to be made before the first of the month for notifying the call men of the department.

TO HONOR WILLIE KEELER

Local Ball Fans to Give Banquet to Famous Diamond Star.

BEGAN CAREER IN THIS CITY.

Celebration to Be Held at Hotel Iroquois Monday Night, Feb. 21—Prominent Speakers for Occasion.

Plainfield ball fans who cheered "Wee Willie" Keller way back in 1891 and '92, in the days of the old Crescents, when he pasted the ball against the outfield fence by his timely wallops, and who since that time has glittered as one of the biggest diamond stars of the country, will have an opportunity to greet their former hero again in this city on Monday night, February 21.

It is the occasion of the "Willie Keller Banquet," which will be held in the Iroquois Hotel. The tribute to Keeler is being arranged by the old time fans and admirers of the great player of later days, which includes a score or more of boys who at that time watched his performances through the knotholes of the fences. A big time is assured to all who attend the testimonial and the committee in charge of the feast has fixed the rate at two dollars per plate.

Jerome Leary, proprietor of the Iroquois, has promised a "bang-up feed." In addition to the "inner fixin's" several fine speeches are sure to be heard. City Judge William N. Runyon will act as toastmaster, and Samuel St. J. McCutchen, a former star player on the old Y. M. C. A. Crescents, will also be present. An invitation has also been extended to William P. McLoughlin, sporting editor of the New York World, to be present. Arthur Irwin, who twenty-five years ago was a star, will also make a speech. Members of the old Crescent nine will also be on hand to join in the celebration.

Eyes of local ball fans have been focused on Billy Keeler since he graduated from the Crescents. Keeler played here in 1891 and 1892. During the latter part of the latter season his fine work here attracted the attention of the management of the Binghamton (N. Y.) club of the Eastern League. At the close of a game in which Keeler has been the star, although he is nearing his thirty-eighth year, he still has confidence that he can travel in fast company for several years.

Without exception, Keeler has always enjoyed the distinction of being the most scientific player in the professional baseball world. He is also counted on as a timely batter and one of the surest fielders in the business.

The committee in charge is John G. McLaughlin, William N. Runyon, George Johnson, John J. Kenney, Ernest Dorflinger, Y. W. Nash, Jr., William R. Cass, G. E. Firstbrook.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE AT MONROE AVE. M. E.

The fourth quarterly conference was held at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church Wednesday. Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, district superintendent, presided. Various reports for the past year were received. The Ladies' Aid Society reported through its new president, Mrs. Ira Van Arsdale, that three-fourths of the $100 pledged for the church had been raised, and the balance would be secured on a birthday social to be held on Washington's birthday.

The Epworth League reported that it had raised $100 during the year and had given support to the various benevolences and the native missionary in Africa. The trustees reported the financial condition of the church to be excellent, that all bills are paid and there is a balance in the treasury.

It was not necessary to extend an invitation to Rev. Charles S. Kemble, the pastor, to return next year, as that was done at the second and third quarterly conferences.

TO REVIVE THE OLD DANCES.

A movement looking to the revival of certain forgotten dances is under way. One of those that may come into favor again is the sarabande. Others are the passepied, galliard, and pavane.

The pavane is one of the oldest examples of the ceremonial dance, and the name under which it has descended to us was derived from the old French word peacock. It came, of course, from the spreading of the cloaks, mantles, and rich garments by those who danced its slow, stately measures.

The galliard is a pleasing contrast to the stately pavane. It is a lively dance—often done in Elizabeth's day, "gay and dispos edly"—which is a typical and early example of a dance of skill, shown in the agility demanded by the various steps. It is of Roman origin, and was in those days in double time. In the classical English form, however, it is in triple time. The galliard, it is interesting to remark, is the "cinquepace" of Shakespeare.

The word "sarabande" means noise and is of Arabic origin. The characteristic dance bearing this title dates back to Spain of the twelfth century, and was performed alone, or by groups, with bells or castanets. It was originally given by women only and was of a wild character; but after crossing the Pyrenees it was transformed by the French into a noble and solemn measure. It was Cardinal Richelieu who danced the sarabande with bells on his ankles to win the favor of Anne of Austria.

A large crowd and spirited bidding marked the Special Master's sale of the Stephen Pangborn estate which was conducted by John H. Van Winkle, Esq., at Boyce's Hotel, the borough Wednesday afternoon. The sale consisted of four properties which were owned by Pangborn at the time of his death about twenty-five years ago. According to the terms of his will the property remained in the name of Mrs. Pangborn, who died about three years ago. A collation was served in the dining-room, before a surprise party to the guests. Without the slightest hint, a large pound cake, attractively iced was brought in. It bore this inscription: "Betrothed—Elsie M. Rimmer to John Brander Slorah." This was followed with best wishes to the couple, and Rev. L. R. Howard offered a toast.

AT TRADE BOARD DINNER.

C. J. Fisk to Be Toastmaster at Affair to Be Held at Truell Hall on Thursday, March 3.

William G. McAdoo, promoter of the Hudson tunnels; State Senator Edmund Wakelee, of Bergen county, and Assemblyman Mark A. Sullivan, of Hudson county, will be the speakers at the annual banquet of the Board of Trade to be held at Truell Hall, on Thursday night, March 3. The tickets for the banquet will be out in a day or two and the committee will now go ahead and arrange the other details. The price of the ticket this year will be $5 and the committee assures the public that nothing will be left undone in making the affair a success. SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS AT THE FESTIVE BOARD

Edgar F. Sheppard and his class of young men, of the Sunday school of Trinity Reformed church, gathered around the festive board in the primary department of the school Thursday and did justice to a fine spread provided by Mrs Johnson, stewardess of the Park Club. The class had as its guests Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor; Frederick E. Smith, superintendent of the Sunday school, and Horace J. Martin, assistant superintendent.

The election of officers for the ensuing year occurred after the dinner and resulted as follows: President, Elmer B. Gayle; vice-president, George Cole; secretary, A. R. Waldron, and treasurer, Gustave Miesner. The speeches which followed the election were made by Rev. Mr. Broek, Mr. Sheppard, Mr. Smith and Mr. Martin and were in the nature of good cheer to the young men and were filled with thoughts for character building, which made visible impressions on their hearers.

The feeling of comradeship existing between the young men and Mr. Sheppard was evident from the attention paid to his every word and that the feeling is reciprocated there is no possible doubt. No better illustration of this could be had anywhere and as someone put it "wouldn't it be a great thing if other classes in other schools could get together under the same conditions and thus promote that feeling of confidence and love which leads to the greater love of the Master?"

The evening thus spent was a profitable one for all those present and great credit is due the committee having the banquet in charge, which was Edward C. Boneyman, Charles Doeringer and Elmer E. Gayle. The other members of the class were Russell Doeringer, Chester Harriman, A. R. Waldron, Russell Perine, Gustave Meisner, Leslie Crane, George Cole, Walter Dennis and Merrill Higgins. The party broke up at 11 o'clock. The room was handsomely decorated with flags.

A Bowl for Nuts.

A bowl for nuts is in the form of half an English walnut. It is of silver-plated ware, lined with a gold wash, and there is a glass inner bowl which exactly fits into the huge shell. This may be taken out and polished and prevents scratching of the gold lining. The outside of the silver bowl is decorated with leaves and twigs, also of gold and it stands on four little feet of stout twigs.

Celebrated Birthday.

Walter Dennis, of Watchung avenue, celebrated his twentieth birthday on Thursday night by entertaining a number of friends. Thirty guests were present and an enjoyable time spent.

"Yes," replied Mr. Sirius Barker, "the American eagle is mighty lucky. Any bird that isn't good to eat has a right to congratulate itself these days."—Washington Evening Star.

FUTURE CENSUSES TO COST MUCH LESS

It seems highly probable that New Jersey is about to hold its last census taking under the old and present system, and that in 1920 entirely different conditions will exist, through which all the present red tape operations will be done away with and the State saved at least three-quarters of the cost that falls upon the government. That is to say that should the proposed system now be in use in this State, instead of the large amount that is estimated this year's census taking will cost, the expense would be reduced to about one-quarter of what it will cost this year.

The system which it is proposed to install in this State is the same as now in force in the State of Massachusetts. There one supervisor has complete jurisdiction over the whole State. He is at the head of a permanent bureau of census, and has full charge of all the work. The plan is to have a sort of skelton system, whereby upon short notice the branch can broaden out and the work carried on with much greater accuracy and speed, not to mention the large sum of money saved.

The plan of having each State in the Union adopt the system has been discussed much at the nation's capital, and seems to have found great favor with the country's lawmakers. However, it is impossible to force any State to adopt the system except through the legislature, but there is no doubt but what in time it will be used throughout the country with a saving of something like $10,000,000 every ten years, or an average of $1,000,000 a year.

WILL DR. WILSON RESIGN PRINCETON PRESIDENCY?

The Daily Princetonian, an undergraduate publication of Princeton University, published an editorial today voicing sentiment of the undergraduates in the gradual school controversy. This comes before an important meeting of the Board of Trustees this afternoon. The editorial write conferred with both Dean West and President Wilson in reaching his conclusions, so what he says is thought authoritative. The editorial says in part:

"Dean West believes in a college entirely composed of graduates. He sees the matter primarily from the graduate student's standpoint. President Wilson, after the experience gained in watching developments at Merwick since its foundation has changed his ideas on this point and now thinks that upper classmen should be allowed to live in the same college with the graduates. This does not mean that they should in any sense dominate the college, but that the few undergraduates who might so desire might be allowed to live there.

"A fair-minded observer would say that Dean West's report had the sanction of the trustees, whether or not they have ever adopted it as a body. Mr. Proctor's ideas upon what the proposed college should embody are gained from this report. He overlooked the fact that central location was as essential in the plan as first outlined and that subsequent experience at Merwick has convinced President Wilson and a majority of the committees of both faculty and trustees that it is, more than ever, necessary.

"Rumors of resignation have been plentiful, but we sincerely hope that there is no need for even a thought of such a thing on the part of any one."

Faculty, alumni and undergraduates of this institution are aroused to a high pitch of interest and are somewhat apprehensive as to the outcome of the meeting. It is thought likely that President Wilson's resignation will be discussed, however.

SUNDAY SCHOOL AFFAIR AT FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

The Sunday-school of the First Baptist church held a novel social and entertainment Thursday, which was largely attended by members and friends of the school. The price of admission was an orange and in this way nearly a barrel of the fruit was received to be distributed today among the charities of the city.

The first part of the evening was devoted to an interesting entertainment, entitled "What Doheeny Done," being extracts of the story of that name appearing in Everybody's Magazine, portrayed in shadowgraph. The arrangement was by Miss Pauline Denton, who took entire charge, and read the story. The various characters were taken by the following: "Doheeny," Howard Armstrong; "Mulcahy," Russell Bird; "Hennessey," Gideon Fountain; "Hippo," the hypnotist, Robin C. Brown; "The Girl," Miss Evelyn Hillman.

A social then followed during which refreshments consisting of crullers, cheese and coffee were served. The affair was in charge of Mrs. Harold Serrell, Mrs. Frank W. Jones, Mrs. Lewis Matlack, Mrs. F. H. Thompson, Mrs. Walter C. Dobbins, Mrs. John G. MacLaughlin, while they were assisted by other officers and teachers of the Sunday-school. An enjoyable part of the entertainment was the piano solos by Miss Ethel King and Miss Evelyn Hillman, and they were obliged to respond to encores.

HEART-BROKEN HUBBY HUNTS FOR MRS. LEES

There is just one more chance left that the clue started here may result in bringing to light the whereabouts of Mrs. Anna Lees, the missing wife of Victor Lees, of East Orange. It is this: Mrs. Lees came to a house in Plainfield, where there was a baby, and told how she had planned to make a trip to Germany, but was detained on account of illness. This woman had a daughter who met with an injury to her arm. These facts have come to light through investigations made by the husband of the missing woman.

Mr. Lees is confident that if the doctor who attended a woman or the two women, mother and daughter can be found, he will be able to locate the house and thus get on the track of his wife. In order to aid the doctors of this town in remembering the case Mr. Lees said that a doctor from New ark, whose name he does not know, was called in consultation with the local physician.

Mr. Lees hopes that with this to guide the memories of Plainfield physicians some one of them will remember the circumstances and divulge the address of the people whom Mr. Lees is endeavoring to find. The despairing husband is now searching the tenements in New York for the Italian woman who bought the house from the woman who was too ill to take her trip to Germany.

Softly the trembling tapes of the night
Glow from the altars of their wonderland.
Each seems the candle of an acolyte
Lit in the darkness by a priestly Hand.
Lo, these be worlds, and our world to their sight
Is but a candle burning in the night!

FIRE ALARM IS WANTED

Public Service Serves Notice on City That Whistle Must be Abandoned.

MARCH FIRST THE DATE SET.

Church Bell Will Be Used Temporarily—Alarm Only Needed to Summon Call-Men.

The fire and buildings committee of the Common Council, at its meeting Friday, received a communication from the Public Service Corporation to the effect that it would shut down its West West Second street plant on March 1, and would not supply steam for blowing the fire whistle after that date. It also called attention to the fact that the company had notified the committee that it must make other arrangements about the whistle and this must be considered as a final notice.

The committee discussed the proposed change, and definite action will be taken at a special meeting of the Common Council on February 18, at which time the new back ordinance will come up for third reading.

As to the proposed method of giving fire alarms, it has been suggested that tappers be placed in the homes of firemen, and that a tapper be attached to one of the bells of the city churches to give alarm. If it were not for the fact that the call-men have to be informed of every alarm, the city would do away entirely with a public whistle or bell of any kind. This will eventually be done as the department grows and less call-men are needed.

It was reported that the amended building ordinance is now about complete and the committee is awaiting the return of Corporation Counsel Cook, to which the Council needs on the legal points connected with the ordinance. After this is done the ordinance will be presented to the Common Council for action.

The committee also considered last night the numerous petitions referred to it at the last Council meeting regarding hydrants, fire-alarm boxes, etc., and discussed questions pertaining to a re-arrangement of the fire-alarm system at headquarters and throughout the city.

OFFICIALS DISCUSSED GREENBROOK PROBLEM

Mayor Charles J. Fisk and the heads of the various departments held a conference in his office Friday afternoon, and took up routine matters, the business of most importance engaged the attention of those present, and the session was naturally a short one.

Mr. Fisk stated that as yet he had received no answer to his letter to County Attorney William R. Codington, regarding certain questions about Green brook, but as there was no hurry the latter had probably not given the matter prompt attention.

The city is desirous of ascertaining definitely the dividing lines of the brook, with a view to allowing certain improvements to be made; also to determine the question of responsibility as to bringing about a more sanitary condition of the brook. All of the heads of departments with the exception of Chief Doane, attended Friday's conference.

U. S. FARMERS IN CANADA.

It is not necessary to dwell for long upon the physical prosperity that is being enjoyed by Americans who have moved into the Canadian Prairie Provinces. They would not stay there if they were not doing well. Though bread and butter are great social and political acclimatizers the fundamental contentment of the American in Canada is the product of something more than growing thirty bushels of wheat to the acre, and seeing his land multiply in value. For your American abroad is nothing if not intensely patriotic. He carries the Stars and West pocket and Old Glory in the other. Wherever an opportunity arises he sings, "My Country 'tis of Thee," and if an opportunity does not soon arise, he quickly makes one. I have joined scores of times in singing at first verse of that sonorous hymn to the tune which some of my friends believe has been appropriated by England for what they supposed was a parody on the junior national anthem. There must be something extraordinary in the political atmosphere which reconciles the immigrant from below forty-nine to life in a foreign country. For the American does not live by bread alone.

The truth is, of course, that when Americans come to Western Canada they don't find it a foreign country at all. In soil, climate, transportation, agricultural machinery, currency, social observances—in everything except the outward political forms, the differences which they thought would be tremendous are only trivial. In most cases they are in favor of the adopted land.

TO REQUIRE LICENSES FOR ALL MARRIAGES

Assemblyman Kissam Monday introduced a bill in the House at Trenton, requiring all persons presenting themselves before any authority to be united in marriage to first present a marriage license secured five days before the date set for the ceremony. The present law requires only non-residents to secure marriage licenses.

The Kissam bill would require residents to secure licenses from the county clerk in the county where the contracting parties reside. The bill further provides that a false statement made in reply to the questions of a clergyman shall constitute a perjury.

Another Essex measure by Mr. Minard would put the kind upon which the Montclair Hotel stands back into the limits of the borough of Verona. It will be remembered that the land was originally a part of Verona, set off by legislative enactment before the hotel was built. Verona wants the hotel as a source of tax revenue.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

No Room for a Sanatarium.

Bishop McFaul undertook to locate a tuberculosis sanitarium for the treatment of patients of all denominations on Benning Mountain in Hopewell Township, Mercer county, just near enough to Trenton to be easily accessible and yet distant enough to give the patients the benefit of fresh air and country life. The site selected is something like that at Glen Gardner, but of somewhat lower elevation. It is an excellent place for a sanitarium.

The community was aroused. The Hopewell Township Committee was called together. A public hearing was given on Bishop McFaul's application and the opposition of the inhabitants was so strong that the committee was about to render an adverse decision when the bishop asked leave to withdraw his application. This was granted, and the proposed sanitarium will not be built until there is a change of sentiment among the people. This may be long delayed, for it will have to be based upon a better understanding of tuberculosis and less apprehension as to the danger of infection from such an institution.

As has already been said, nobody wants a tuberculosis sanitarium in his home city or near his dwelling. Yet there must either be sanitaria where consumptives can be isolated and cured, or else a much larger number of centres of infection in all the homes wherein consumptives may dwell. Summit doesn't want a sanitarium, Lakewood doesn't want a preventorium. Hopewell will not have a tuberculosis hospital. If no place will tolerate them, what is to be done?

The bill introduced in the Legislature by Assemblyman Crosby is in the right line, though it may need a few modifications. It provides that before patients may be segregated and treated for tuberculosis, or any hospital or institution is established for such purpose in New Jersey, the State Board of Health must be applied to for consent, and such consent be given in writing. The Hopewell case makes it evident that the power to authorize the building of a sanitarium or preventorium ought to be lodged with some competent and disinterested authority. The local officials do not dare act against local public sentiment, however prejudiced and unwarranted. The State should have power to decide for others, even as it has the authority to decide upon the location of its own sanitarium.—Newark News.

Threading Needles.

There are women who are so sensitive about growing old that they stop sewing in public as soon as they begin to find it hard to thread a needle. But difficulty in threading a needle is not limited to the aged. Here is a hint which will make the task easier. In threading a needle hold the needle firmly between thumb and first finger. The thread is held in the left hand with a short end extending from between tips of first finger and thumb. The knack lies in pressing the two thumb joints hard together, keeping thread taut, when it will be found to go easily into the eye.

The Seniors of the P. H. S. defeated the Faculty five in an exciting contest in the High School gymnasium on Friday afternoon by the score of 41 to 29.

WARNS CORPORATIONS TO SUPPLY INFORMATION

That the United States government is in earnest, and that Jersey corporations do not relish giving to the federal government the inside secrets of their business, is apparent by a letter which has been received here from the department at Washington telling Deputy United States Collector of Internal Revenue Spencer to warn the corporations that they are slow and that the government will be after them if they fail to have the returns of the businesses in Washington by the first of the coming month.

Mr. Spencer is directed to remind the corporations, stock companies, etc., that they cannot escape the penal portion of the statute by failure to give the required information so that the income tax on corporations may be figured and levied. As many corporations have Jersey homes, the failure of so many of them to comply with the federal statute would indicate that there is likely to be a legal contest as to the constitutionality of the new law.

Here in Trenton there are many corporations, many stock companies and many stock firms, associations and insurance companies, and to expose to the federal government the gross incomes and the net earnings is not relished. But the warning sent out to Mr. Spencer is as follows:

"The commissioner of internal revenue calls attention to the provisions of section 38 of the act on August 5, 1909, which requires all corporations, joint stock companies, associations and insurance companies, subject to the special excise tax therein imposed, to render the prescribed return of their gross and net incomes for the calendar year 1909, on or before the first day of March, 1910, and to the penalty imposed by the eighth paragraph of section 38 for neglect or refusal to render such returns, or for rendering a false or fraudulent return. Blank forms for making the required returns will be furnished by the collector of internal revenue.

THE BUTCHER'S COMPLAINT.

The butcher is cutting a large porterhouse. He raised his heavy cleaver. "Say, lady," he began, "please," said the feminine purchaser, touching the spot indicated with her forefinger. Down came the cleaver. She drew her finger away just in time to escape losing it. The butcher turned pale.

"Just see that," he said. "Half a second more and you'd be short a finger, and it wouldn't be my fault either. Why do all women point at meat, tell me that? They all do, though, it's just as easy to tell the butcher what you want. We have the sharpest tools we can get, and we know how to use 'em. We can't afford to spend our time watching women's digits, and the wonder of it is that there isn't a little pile of them here every evening when we close.

"Yes, I know we all point. I don't know why I do, but I do. I know it's dangerous," said the purchaser. "That steak will be enough, since I have the chops for tonight, but will you please trim off all this fat?" and she drew a slender forefinger over the porterhouse directly under the uplifted knife.

FRIENDS WELCOME.

The field of friendship is a wide one, and all our neighbors, both near and far, should be candidates for admission there. The appearance of solitude, the passing satisfaction, empty of everything save chill formality, have larger possibilities behind them we are wont to imagine. At any rate, to believe so, honestly and conscientiously, is an indication of an active faith, and is a far wholesomer than the suspicions that do their utmost to master us. It is only through this belief that we shall bring ourselves in contract with some of the finest issues of life and come to understand the unities and harmonies of existence. Nevertheless, it is well to bear in mind the important fact that man is not our only friend and neighbor. Neither patience nor investigation is necessary to the discovery that all things about us are capable of inviting neighborliness and dispensing it; those who are wise enough to take advantage of the hospitality that is constantly proffered. The towering trees (though they do not seem to tower so high as they did when we were younger) the humble, creeping vines, the delicate flowers that spring up in a night, casual and ravishing, the whole movement and hush of nature in her vigorous and flustered moods, belong to neighborliness in the most significant and authentic sense. It is something of a relief to discover that we need not depend entirely on man for companionship—though beyond all doubt the best of this kind are to be treasured in whatsoever relation or condition they are found.

BOROUGH SCHOOL BUDGET

Voters to Be Asked to Approve an Appropriation of $20,000.

IT IS LESS THAN USUAL.

Board Wants for Current Expenses $16,187; Manual Training $1,912, and for Repairs $1,900.

The North Plainfield Board of Education at an adjourned meeting held Monday for the purpose of preparing the budget for the coming school year, unanimously decided to submit the following at the annual school meeting on Tuesday, March 15: For current expenses, $16,187.50; repairs, $1,900; manual training, $1,912.50, making a total of $20,000.

This amount is a reduction of $4,625 from last year's budget. The schools next year will cost the borough almost exactly what they did five years ago, the amount of the budget at that time being $19,840

The budgets for the past five years were as follows: 1905-6, $19,840; 1906-7, $21,830; 1907-8, $24,900; 1908-9, $21,200; 1909-10, $24,625; 1910-11, $20,000. The low figure for 1908-9 resulted from the receipt of two portions of the railroad tax.

The board ordered the payment of $2,000 on a note for $3,325, which was authorized by the voters on June 28, 1906, and which is due next year.

WHATSOEVER CIRCLE HAS VALENTINE SOCIAL

The Whatsoever Circle of The King's Daughters of the Park Avenue Baptist church, gave a valentine social at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Dayton, of East Sixth street, Monday night. The house was elaborately decorated in keeping with the sentiment of the day. A profusion of hearts and arrows mingled with the soft light of candles lent a charm to the occasion.

Vocal and instrumental music and games combined to make a pleasant time for everyone. Miss Elmira Runyon won loud applause for her prescription for mending a "broken heart," while G. W. V. Moy received first honors for "matching hearts." Miss Cora Brokaw and Harry Runyon showed their skill by capturing the honors for shooting with "cupid's dart."

A postoffice from which each guest received a valentine afforded much amusement. Mrs. Wheaton S. Lowry was mistress of the postoffice assisted by Mrs. Harry C. Runyon as assistant. Refreshments were served during the evening. A silver offering which netted the circle a substantial sum will be devoted to charitable work in this city.

After good night songs with Henry C. Runyon at the piano, the guests departed with many words of appreciation for the circle which had given them such an enjoyable evening. The committee in charge of the social comprised Mrs. Harry C. Runyon, Mrs. Wheaton S. Lowry, Miss Elmira Runyon, Mrs. Louise Lagren, Miss Olive DeLany and Miss Ida Patterson.

FORGOES HIS TRIP ABROAD.

New Glen Ridge School Head Cancels Vacation to Study Position.

H. W. Rockwell, of Oneonta, N. Y., who has been appointed superintendent of the Glen Ridge public schools to succed Dr. Eugene E. Mr. Rockwell is a graduate of Brown University, class of 1903, and taught in a private school one year. He was principal of Gilbertsville High School one year, and was appointed principal of the Oneonta High School in 1905 and made superintendent the next year.

Keeping Record of Attendance.

A special effort is being made to secure the prompt attendance of workshippers at the First Baptist church, Sunday mornings. The hour is 10:30, and a record of the attendance was kept a week ago Sunday with the following result: "At 10:20 there were 23 persons present. As the organ prelude continued and during the next five minutes 87 more arrived. During the doxology and the invocation 31 persons entered. While the first hymn was being sung 49 took their seats. The last half of the congregation, 150, was all in attendance by 10:45. Of the above number, about 300, there remained to communion 212 persons."

PICK UP RUNAWAY BOY TO TALK CIVIC MATTERS

Ernest Koenig, of New York, Tells the Court a Straightforward Story.

ALLEGED CRUEL TREATMENT.

Will Go Home With His Mother Who He Said Drove Him to Run Away by Undeserved Whippings.

Ernest Koenig, a fourteen year old boy was picked up Monday wandering around the streets evidently seeking a place to roost. He was directed to police headquarters by a citizen and there, after considerable questioning, it developed that the youngster had run away from home. He told a story of cruelty suffered at the hands of his mother, who is a widow, and said that whatever went wrong in the house he was blamed for, and he had made up his mind to see away from it all.

Of course, he was honest about it all. He told where he lived, 260 East 72d street, New York, and that he was a pupil of public school No. 158, and that he stood well with his teacher and in fact loved her, because she was kind to him. Furthermore he volunteered the information that he was not the kind who wanted to run and hunt scalps, but he did want to earn his own living and be independent.

Ernest has two sisters and one brother and no matter what happens to disturb his mother he (Ernest) gets whipped for it. Only Saturday she gave him an awful whipping for absolutely nothing, he says, for it was the two sister who created the rumpus in the house for which he was punished. So just because he could not stand it any longer he made up his mind to escape it all by a journey into the heart of New Jersey. By the same token Ernest is a Jersey boy. He formerly lived at Hackensack and while his father was alive everything was serene, but since the family moved to New York nothing has gone right.

"The dime which I took from my mothers' pocketbook is what got me here," said Ernest Tuesday. "and I am sorry about that, but I don't want to have to stand all the spankings that are handed out in our family."

Judge William N. Runyon, who questioned the lad, got his little tale of woe and then gave some fatherly advice. He told Ernest to see his teacher and the principal of the school and tell them of the terrible trials he was subjected to at home and without doubt they could save him from further cruelty. The youthful boy promised the judge to do just as he was advised and felt a good deal better after he had separated himself from the story of his wrongs.

EDITORS DECIDE TO END FREE "BOOSTING"

Members of the New Jersey State Editorial Association in annual session at Trenton Monday resolved that too much space is being taken up by press agents for theatres, magazines and other affairs of this kind and it was decided that in the future these persons should receive less consideration in the matter of complimentary notices, even where passes and like emoluments accompanied the write-ups.

The editors also resolved that the railroad companies ought to resume the old practice of advertising time tables in the newspapers, the consensus of opinion being that such time table advertising was a benefit to the general public. The Legislature will be asked to enact a law compelling the railroads to so advertise their train schedules.

LOCAL MEN TO SPEAK AT TRADE BOARD DINNER.

James E. Martine and S. S. Swackhamer have been secured as additional speakers for the annual banquet of the Board of Trade on March 3, with a view to representing the city. Their toasts will be of a local nature and they will follow the other three speakers, William G. McAdoo, State Senator Edmund Wakelee and Assemblyman Mark A. Sullivan.

The tickets for the banquet have been issued and are selling rapidly. The committee in charge, of which Edmund Rushmore is chairman, has about completed all details for the affair.

The Powers' Farm is Sold.

John Powers, of West Market, has sold his farm to George A. Steinmetz, of Perth Amboy, as well as all the contents of the house, farming utensils, etc., and possession was taken last Saturday. Mr. Powers was born on the farm, just sold, which is located on North Brunswick avenue, between New Market and South Plainfield, and has lived there for the past fifty years. His father lived on the same farm several years prior to that. Mr. and Mrs. Powers will make their home with their daughter, Mrs. P. F. Maguire, of 1236 Park avenue.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY OF Y.M.C.A. IS ACTIVE

At the regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Young Men's Christian Association in the parlors of the building Monday afternoon, Mrs. James E. Kimball, the newly elected president, was in the chair. She gave a brief outline of the work which is planned for the coming weeks and before the regular business was considered an *invitation was presented to the wo*men from the committee in charge of the annual dinner to be present at the close of the dinner to hear the address of the evening, Thomas Travis, Ph. D., now of Montclair, will speak on some phases of "The Juvenile Delinquent."

The meeting was devoted almost entirely to the discussion and the report of Mrs. F. J. Hubbard, chairman of the boys' work committee. Since this committee was appointed equipment costing $50 has been added to the boys' rooms and other little articles added to make the place more social and comfortable, such as sofa pillows and rugs, have been placed there.

This committee is in charge of the Ovide Musin lecture-recital, which will be held in the high school auditorium on February 22, for the benefit of the boys work. The program as submitted is in the form of a short "Causerie" on the "violin," its ancestors, celebrated instrument makers of Cremona and Brescia. Great players and composers, illustrated by stereopticon views and interspersed by musical selections for violin by Ovide Musin, piano accompaniment by Joseph McIntyre. There will also be a number of other artists to assist in illustrating the work of some of the great composers. Reserved seats may be obtained at Armstrong's drug store after 8 o'clock Thursday morning.

OBLIGED TO CLOSE SALOON FOR A MONTH.

Trenton, Feb. 16.—Because he is charged with having violated the law regarding the drawing of window screens, Kasmire Papaiski, of 801 Lamberton street, had to suspend business in his saloon yesterday and must keep the place closed at least a month. When his application for a renewal of license came up last night the Excise Board decided to postpone action on it a month, so that the alleged violation of the law *could be more thoroughly investigat*ed.

Another unusual matter coming before the board was a report that a new concern, the Enterprise Bowling Company, proposed conducting business here without obtaining a city license. It is understood that the company intends to sell beer in quantities in excess of five gallons, relying on the United States law for authority.

The city grants retail licenses which prohibit the sale of more than one quart at a time, and wholesale licenses which permit sales ranging from one quart to five gallons. Sales in excess of five gallons are authorized only by the federal government, and by a law under which the business of breweries is conducted.

The contention has been advanced that any concern having government authority can sell beer in quantities greater than five gallons without taking out a city license.

Miss Sarah Smith, of Newark, who has been visiting friends here for several days, has returned home.

PARK AVENUE BAPTISTS TO HEAR REV. MR. MAGUIRE.

The Park Avenue Baptist church has secured Rev. G. R. Maguire, of Cleveland, Ohio, to supply the pulpit on Sunday at both services. Mr. Maguire is said to be an eloquent preacher and one who has been successful in building up a large church in Cleveland. He is highly recommended by Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, who, prior to removing to this section, was pastor of the Euclid Avenue Baptist church in Cleveland. *It is said that Mr. Maguire is anx*ious to live near New York and the Park Avenue Baptist church may have the opportunity of securing him as a pastor.

HOLD YOUTHFUL THIEVES

Two Boys Confess at Hearing That They Stole Several Hundred Dollars.

CLARK ROGERS THE VICTIM.

Joseph Penrose and Charles Bogue, of New Market, Held for Grand Jury—Spent Stolen Money.

Joseph Penrose and Charles Bogue, the youths who were suspected of having robbed Clark Rogers, of New Market, of sums of money on three different occasions lately, were arraigned before Justice of the Peace William Smith, of Middlesex county, Monday afternoon and held to await the action of the grand jury.

Both Penrose and Bogue confessed the crime and gave a very vivid account of the good time they had had spending the money. They traveled to Philadelphia, Harrisburg and intermediate points and squandered their ill-gotten gains in riotous living. Their checks, amounting to $140, they did not use as that would have added the crime of forgery to the less serious one of grand larceny of which they are accused.

Penrose, who is the elder of the two young men, said that after stealing the first check, amounting to $40, the second venture easier and the third and last time proved their undoing. Mr. Rogers suffered at the hands of the boys to the extent of several hundred dollars, the fruit of three thefts and while he was not positive of the identity of the thieves he was suspicious enough to have done considerable sleuthing on his own hook. Finally his suspicions amounted to certainty and he caused warrants to be issued for the two lads who were arrested yesterday by Constable Pierce, of Dunellen. Penrose is nineteen and Bogue seventeen years old, the latter having a widowed mother who is frantic over her son's predicament. They were taken to New Brunswick this morning.

SUED FOR WIFE-THEFT BY BOUND BROOK MAN

William C. Van Doren, superintendent of the fire alarm system at Bound Brook, has begun a suit in the New York city courts to recover $50,000 damages from Stephen R. Ryan, a wealthy resident of Watertown, N. Y., for the alienation of Mrs. Van Doren's affections.

Ryan recently was successful in an application to compel Van Doren to give security for costs on the ground that he was not a resident of New York. The bond was to be given within five days, but Mr. Van Doren's mother died in the meantime, and he did not file the bond until the time allowed by the court had expired. Then he did not counsel for Ryan refused to accept it, and Van Doren was compelled to apply to Judge Platzek to compel the defendant to accept the security tendered. Judge Platzek granted the motion.

Mrs. Van Doren is said to be about twenty-five years old and the mother of a year-old baby. Ryan is said to be prominent in Watertown and is sixty years old.

Van Doren's lawyer said Mrs. Van Doren was a Watertown girl and that she went to New York when she was a visit to her people. Ryan, the lawyer said, met her in a public park when she was wheeling the baby in a carriage and stopped to admire the child.

Soon after he began writing letters to Mrs. Van Doren, and finally she left Bound Brook, after she had returned to her husband and went back to Watertown.

The evening was spent in playing games of all kinds, and there was also a program of vocal and instrumental music, after which refreshments were served.

MR. CASE NOT ELIGIBLE

Senate Holds Up Governor's Appointment for Somerset Judgeship.

BILL TO CHANGE THE LAW.

Assemblyman to Introduce Measure to Permit His Confirmation—Pope Approved as Prosecutor.

In executive session Tuesday, the State Senate, at Trenton, was prevented by law from considering Governor Fort's nomination of Clarence E. Case, of Somerville, to be judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Somerset county. State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen presented Case's name, in place of the present incumbent, Louis H. Schenck, and the Governor approved of it.

The law, however, requires that to be eligible to the county judgeship, one candidate must have been a counselor for three years. Here the snag was struck for former Congressman Alvah A. Clark's law partner did not fill the requirements in that respect. Consequently, the confirmation by the Senate was held up. It is understood that a remedial measure for Mr. Case's benefit will be introduced by Assemblyman W. W. Smalley. As it is considered a very serious matter to make judges of lawyers who have not held their counselor papers for the brief period of three years it is said to be a question whether Mr. Smalley will have influence enough to get his bill through the Assembly.

The Senate confirmed the Governor's appointment of Frederick A. Pope to be prosecutor of the pleas in Somerset. He succeeds John F. Reger.

MORE EXCISE MEASURES INTRODUCED AT TRENTON

Assemblyman Olwell, of Hudson last night in the House introduced four excise bills that he believed would cure all defects in the traffic and would meet the approval of a majority of the people of the State.

They provide for Sunday sales under restrictions among other things. They are entered as House 241, 242, 243 and 244, and all were referred to the House judiciary committee, of which Colonel Walter E. Edge, of Atlantic City, is chairman.

They provide, in brief, respectively, as follows:

241—Repeals Senator Hillery's "jag law," or act for the prevention of drunkenness, passed last year.

242—Makes it a misdemeanor for anyone under the age of 21 to represent himself as over that age in order to get a drink of liquor.

243—Makes it unlawful for any person holding a license to sell liquors in quantities in less than one quart to serve such liquors to any minor under 21 years of age; first offense, fine of $100; second conviction, fine of $200 and forfeiture of license.

244—Makes it legal for any licensed hotel-keeper to serve liquors in the dining rooms at meals to guests on Sunday.

DON'T CROWD GUESTS.

Entertaining when houses are small is a problem that confronts many a hostess. Nor does she always solve it with the happiest results.

Some girls, because they cannot entertain all their friends, never entertain at all. They take all the hospitalities they can get, making excuses of cramped quarters for doing nothing in return.

Others pay off their debts, but care nothing for the manner of payment. They crowd their tiny house until the walls fairly bulge and the temper and clothes of their friends are alike ruined. Nobody has a good time, but the hostess does not bother herself about that.

Still others make the fatal mistake of deciding their receiving hours. They invite all their guests for one day, but at different times. Not only does it seem to push one set of guests out that the rest may be accommodated, but it is sure to create heartburning, especially if the line be drawn on class or sets.

The one wise course is to give several small affairs and thus get around your friends by degrees. Never invite more than your house will hold comfortably, if you wish to be thought a successful hostess. It is usually safe, however, to include in your list for everything save a dinner or luncheon about a third more than you expect to come, as that is the accepted proportion of regrets in the gay season.

PAYS A TRIBUTE TO ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, delivered an eloquent sermon Sunday morning on the topic, "Lincoln, the Man Who was Not Afraid." The doctor portrayed the real picture of Lincoln, recalling interesting incidents in his life during the Civil War, all tending to show that not once was he afraid of the outcome.

Dr. Chambliss dwelt upon the fact that Lincoln was a man of God, that he was a man of prayer and that he often prayed that the question of slavery might be settled once and for all. He referred to his lovable character, and that despite the clamorings of politicians and critics, he adhered steadfastly to his principles and his plans as outlined when elected to the Presidency.

Y.M.C.A. QUINTET BEATS THE CRACK HARLEM FIVE

Y. M. C. A.'s basketball five added another victory to its credit on Saturday night, when the locals took into camp the crack Harlem Y. M. C. A. aggregation by the score of 38 to 20. Superior team work counted in favor of Plainfield. The visitors also put up a fast game, but the locals were too speedy for them. The lineups:

Plainfield—Aaholm, Collier, forwards; Linke, centre; Foster, Miner guards.

Harlem—Jameson, Schoff, forwards; Winckler, centre; Klein, Holter, Maeder, guards.

The N. P. H. S. scored a 29 to 24 victory over the Y. M. C. A. "Seconds" in a game which was marked by rough house tactics. The lineup:

Y. M. C. A.—Manley, Whitte, Lidgate, forwards; Hoagland, centre; Naylor, Ulmer, guards.

N. P. H. S.—Conroy, Stine, forwards; C. Smith, centre; Dunning, H. Smith, Becker, guards.

LOCAL FANS TO DINE 'WEE WILLIE' KEELER

Plans for the banquet to be given in honor of Willie Keeler, the former Plainfield baseball star, now of the New York American League club, are progressing satisfactorily. The affair will be given at the Iroquois Hotel, Monday night, February 21. A telegram received yesterday from Willie Keeler, followed by a letter when John G. MacLaughlin, chairman of the committee, received today, gave assurance that the crack ball player will be here.

Mr. Keeler says that he will be glad to greet the old fans once more and will consider it an honor to be the guest of his friends here on February 21.

Judge William N. Runyon will be the toastmaster, and among the speakers will be Samuel St. John McCutchen. The committee in charge of the banquet comprise John G. MacLaughlin, chairman; Judge William N. Runyon, George Johnston, George E. Firstbrook, John J. Kenney, V. W. Nash, Jr., and William R. Cass. Tickets may be had from any of the above named persons or at Schreiner's drug store.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MISS AGNES OPDYKE.

The funeral services of Miss Agnes Opdyke, daughter of Henry B. Opdyke and the late Miriam Whiton Opdyke, were held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home of her uncle, John M. Witon, on Central avenue, and were largely attended by relatives and friends. Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, officiated.

Miss Opdyke, who was thirty-three years of age and a native of New York, resided on Farragut road, this city, when a girl. She was graduated from Radcliffe College, Class '04. Prior to that time she was registrar at the National Cathedral School, in Washington, and following her graduation she held a similar position at Barnard College, New York city, for four years.

A year ago last spring Miss Opdyke gave up her position in New York to undertake trade school work in Boston under Miss Marshall. A severe attack of nervous prostration compelled her to relinquish her work last November and she gradually failed until the end on Friday night. She was a young woman of strong character, talented and was loved and admired by a host of friends and acquaintances. She is survived by her father and two brothers, Henry Opdyke, of New York city, and Howard Opdyke, of Schnectady, N. Y.

TRUE TEMPERANCE TALK

Arthur Brisbane Speaks to New Jersey Editors on Liquor Problem.

"PROHIBITION FOOLISH DREAM."

Whiskey a Drug Not a Drink and Should Be Classed as a Poison Says Journalist.

Arthur Brisbane, editor of the New York Journal and the highest salaried newspaperman in the world, delivered an address before the New Jersey Editorial Association at a luncheon at Trenton on Monday, which in his interesting and instructive talk was devoted to the liquor problem; his keynote being "Prohibition versus True Temperance." Mr. Brisbane when a boy, was a pupil at the old Jackson school in Fanwood township, and he now owns the site of that school.

In his speech to the Jersey editors Mr. Brisbane said:

"First, I think I shall talk about prohibition as opposed to real temperance.

"Editors of newspapers, coming in contact through their reporters and in their own experience with the drink question, actually know the facts. They have no excuse for leaving uncontradicted the false statements of the advocates of free whisky, which means whisky drunkenness.

"And they have no excuse for leaving uncontradicted the honest and earnest but false and ignorant statements of the prohibitionist who would, if he could, turn over to himself and whose work, unrestricted, results also in whisky drunkenness.

"Briefly, I believe that the producers of light natural wines and light beers, very low in alcoholic strength, are the real workers for temperance.

"And the producers of whisky, gin and other alcoholic poisons are the creators of drunkenness.

"There is as much difference between light beer and whisky as there is between tobacco and opium.

"Admit that beer is a bad thing if you like, and admit that tobacco is a bad thing if you choose, but you must also admit that beer drinking, just as the tobacco smoking of America is better for a race than the opium smoking of China.

"There is as much difference between light wines and gin as there is between coffee and cocaine.

"If you should prohibit the use of tobacco in this country you know perfectly well that men's nerves would crave and would have some substitute. Forcing out tobacco you would force in opium, morphine, cocaine or some other harmful drug.

"Absolute experience has proved in every prohibition state that when prohibition drives out the use of the light beers and light wines, that cannot be stopped, but bootlegger, or the 'blind pig' owner, prohibition at the same time forces upon the community the use of whisky and the other highly alcoholic poisons.

"You cannot have prohibition; you can have true temperance. The solution of the problem is to discourage in every way the sale and consumption of whisky, gin, etc., and to encourage the sale, under decent, cheerful conditions as in France and Germany, of the relatively harmless light wines and beers.

"I would put a government tax of $1 a bottle on highly alcoholic spirits and I would put a prohibitive license upon the sale of whisky and the other alcoholic poisons, whether they be sold by the glass over the bar, or by the bottle in the grocery store where brisk 'home trade' develops the secret drunkard.

"Let any man who chooses sell light wines and light beers containing seven per cent. or less of alcohol—such drinks do not make drunkards, unless the drunkard finds it easy to shift alcoholic to whisky. Let light native wines and beers be sold in restaurants, in beer gardens, freely. Let the owners of such places deposit as a guarantee a sufficient sum of money, $1,000 or more, with the authorities; let that sum be forfeited to the detective or other who shall prove the possession on the premises—regardless of its being drunk or sold—of any stimulant containing alcohol in excess of seven per cent. A plan like this could be carried out. It would mean true temperance, not the drunkenness, and it would mean dealing sanely with men as they are.

"Prohibition is the foolish, impossible dream of the well meaning theorist. There are two kinds of prohibitionists; those who have always been drunkards, and those who of course do not understand the subject they are discussing. And there are prohibitionists that have been drunkards, that have reformed, and they all know perfectly well that it is whisky that makes the drunkard, and that if they had never touched anything but light beer or wine, or had never known whiskey, they would not have been drunkards first and prohibitionists afterwards.

"Class whisky in the public mind and in legislation with opium, morphine and cocaine. Whisky, is a drug, not a drink.

"Class the light wines and beers where they belong, mild stimulants, and valuable foods, when taken in moderation.

"Don't curse your State with the hypocrisy of prohibition, the open or secret defiance of law and the substitution of temperate beer drinkers for drunken whisky drinkers.

GOVERNOR FAVORS INTER-STATE BRIDGE

Gov. Fort sent to the Legislature Monday at Trenton, the report of the New Jersey New York River Bridge Commission recommending that the bridge be built from 179th street, New York, to the Jersey shore. He fixes the cost at about $8,000,000, and hopes that New York State will join in the project and make it an inter-State affair. The commission favors this site because lower down the river the cost would be two or three times as great.

Another message gives the text of two letters, one from Secretary of State Knox urging the New Jersey Legislature to modify the laws against diversion of Jersey water for twenty years so give needed water to the military port at Sandy Hook. The other is a letter from ex-Mayor McClellan complaining of the unneighborly conduct of New Jersey in refusing to allow the Borough of Richmond the use of New Jersey water until the new supply for New York city can be completed. The Governor failed to make any recommendation on either of the letters.

The third message transmitted the report of the State Tuberculosis Commission showing that only 121 patients could be housed at the State Sanitarium at Glen Gardner, whereas 3,749 persons died of the disease last year, with the recommendation that the Legislature appropriate funds for the building of cabins at the sanitarium, $5,000 more for converting a farmhouse in to a hospital there, and that $25,000 be appropriated to the use of the State Board of Health to educate the people to a due regard for preventing consumption.

BUILDERS OBJECT TO NEW 'LIABILITY BILL'

L. B. Woolston, Philip Jahn, James Hanson, Ira N. West, John Abbott and C. W. Krausse, representing the Master Builders' Association, attended the hearing at Trenton yesterday relative to the Employers' Liability bill, introduced by Senator Harry V. Osborne, of Essex county. There was a large delegation of interested people from all parts of the State.

The Master Builders' Association is opposed to the measure as to a majority of its provisions. They do not believe that Senator Ernest R. Ackerman's bill has had a fair trial and are willing to have that remain in force at present.

However, those present at the hearing yesterday did not have much of an opportunity to speak, as the hearing was taken up almost entirely in arguing the legal phases of the bill. The Plainfield delegation did, however, succeed in entering a protest against the measure.

YOUTHFUL BURGLARS ARE LODGED IN JAIL

Abe Penrose and Thomas Vogue, twenty and eighteen years of age respectively, are in the Middlesex county jail, at New Brunswick, charged with robbing Justice Clark Rogers, of New Market, of $100 in cash and bills last week. The pair, it is said, has also confessed to ring the principals in a number of robberies at New Market and Dunellen during the past year.

Penrose returned to New Market on Saturday and surrendered himself to the police authorities. He also furnished the information that resulted in the capture of Vogue at Jersey City this morning.

UNION POSTOFFICE THIEF GETS 5 YEARS IN PRISON.

Abram Van Leeders, of Newark, has been sentenced by Judge Reilstab, of the United States District Court, to one year in Essex County Penitentiary for forging a money order. John Wilson was given five years in Atlanta Penitentiary for breaking into the postoffice at Union. John Oudenieke, of Hoboken, got eighteen months in Mercer County Jail for fraudulent use of the mails.

Want Flag on Eagle Rock.

Patriotic organizations of Montclair are interested in the proposal to place a large American flag at the summit of Eagle Rock, in Eagle Rock Park, adjoining Montclair. It is proposed to fly the flag from a steel pole 300 feet in height. The proposal has been placed before the Essex County Park Commission, whose consent is necessary before the plan can be carried out. The flag, if placed on the pole, could be seen by ships entering New York Harbor.

MRS. O. H. P. BELMONT NOT INVITED BY THEM

No invitation has been extended Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont to speak at or even attend the meeting to be held by Mrs. Richard Stevens to consider the formation of a New Jersey branch of the Equal Franchise League. Mrs. Stevens, interviewed at her home, Castle Point, Hoboken, explained that Mrs. Belmont had not been included, because she did not like Mrs. Belmont. She qualified this statement at once by explaining that she did not like the ideas for which Mrs. Belmont stood. Mrs. Stevens further explained that she thought the English suffragettes had gone too far and had adopted methods that she could not countenance. To add to the interest of the interview, Mrs. Stevens explained that it was he husband, rather than she, who was interested specially in the equal franchise movement. However, she asserted her belief that every woman should have a vote, especially in school affairs.

Mrs. Florence-H. Mackay will preside, it is expected, at the meeting to be held at Castle Point. The meeting was to have been held February 10, but was postponed until February 25.

"No, Mrs. Belmont will not be here," said Mrs. Stevens, "for the very simple reason that she was not been asked, nor will she be asked. "Why? I don't like her. No, don't say that. That wouldn't be nice. I don't say I like her. You may know I'm not a suffragist, but my husband is taking a great interest in the movement. You see, he can't be one, so I've taken his place."

"You do not like Mrs. Belmont's ideas on equal suffrage?"

"No, I do not. There are other people whose ideas and methods I cannot approve. I think the suffragists in England have gone altogether too far."

"Don't you like the stand Mrs. Belmont took in the shirtwaist makers' strike?" was the next question.

"Mrs. Alexander took great interest in the shirtwaist makers," was the only reply Mrs. Stevens gave to this. Mrs. Alexander is a member of the Stevens family.

"Don't say Mrs. Belmont will be here," was Mrs. Stevens' final caution, "because she will not. Miss Richards, president of the Essex County Woman's League, and Mrs. Campton, of Newark; Mrs. E. V. Sexton, of Orange, and Mrs. Clara Laddy, of Arlington, will make addresses."

DR. VANCE SCORED PEARY AS EGOTIST

In a sermon on the topic, "Christ's Glorious Infamy," Rev. Dr. James I. Vance, of the North Reformed church, Seventy-second street and Avenue A, New York, occasioned considerable surprise his views of Commander Peary Sunday morning at his church, and those opinions were far from flattering for the man to whom is accredited the discovery of the North Pole. Dr. Vance, who is well know here, compared Peary's self-glorifying heroism with the Christian heroism of Frederick Evans, the lad who crawled 600 feet through a crevice in an Indiana coal heap to rescue sixty men imprisoned under it.

"If, as Commander Peary says, the Esquimaux are a race raised to assist him in the discovery of the North Pole, what is going to become of them now?" Dr. Vance asked. He continued: "The egotism and self-glorification of Peary are strikingly illustrated in his magazine articles on the subject. In the first of the first instalment the pronoun 'I' occurs 186 times, while 'my' and 'me' are to be found many more times. He continues in the same strain in the second instalment.

"It takes a long stretch of the imagination, went on Dr. Vance, "to conceive missionaries coming back from foreign lands with magazine articles recounting their exploits, ready for the printer. Imagine David Livingston, that interpid explorer, with such a lurid tale as that of Peary."

The minister then compared the brave deed of the little Indiana breaker boy who, at the peril of his own life, crawled beneath thousands of tons of coal ready to fall upon him at any second, in an effort to save the lives of many men. The deed was done and the lad had carried a pipe safely to the men, he was and was asked what he wanted as a reward for his heroism. He replied, Dr. Vance said, "I'd like to learn to read."

"That is the kind of heroism Christianity stands for," declared Dr. Vance. "Maybe some of these days the world will learn what a real hero is when it sees one. Christian heroism is not spectacular or exploited for self-glorification. Sometimes it is unconscious of its own glorious quality. This heroism, too, endured sacrifices and hardships, but they are only incidental, and the true Christian does not use them to create glory for himself."

"Do you like my new hat?" asked Mrs. Brooks.

"Yes, indeed," replied Mrs. Lynn, "I had one just like it when they were in style."—Lippincott's.

OUR FRIENDS IN HEAVEN SUBJECT OF HIS SERMON

Rev. John Y. Brock, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, preached on this theme in his series of sermons on "Heaven" Sunday to a large congregation. The subject was: "Our Friends in Heaven—What Are They Doing?" The text was taken from John 12:26. In part Mr. Brock said:

"When we think of heaven we not only know that God, our Father, Jesus our Saviour, and the angels created as ourselves, will be there, but we are also interested in our friends, those who are done of our bone and have been redeemed. The number of the redeemed must be very great. The composition and cosmopolitan character of the people is also wonderful. In the society of heaven the elite of the universe are numbered.

"The Bible does not satisfy any curiosity as to how we shall be occupied when we reach heaven, at least not in specific details. Many a one has regretted that Lazarus after he came back to earth told nothing of his experience. Heaven will not be a huge singing school although we are told that the redeemed are continually before the throne and praise Him night and day. There is good reason to believe that the redeemed will be largely occupied in following out favorite occupations here on earth. Heaven is a place for sanctified people. The only occupation of sanctified people is to do the will of God. We want a heaven, a service to complete our imperfect service here on earth.

"We will undoubtedly rekindle the friendships which we have here formed. We believe not only in the continuity of life, but in the continuity of love as well. The redeemed are thinking much of the scenes of this earth. I cannot believe that those whom we have loved long have forgotten me, do not think about us, or do not know what we are doing.

"The great joy of heaven will be the constant communion with Christ. We shall see with our very eyes the Man of Sorrows; the nail prints, and the wound in His side; look upon His blessed face; hear His voice; touch His hand, and be forever with the Lord."

WOMAN FROM WESTFIELD BANISHED FROM THE CITY.

Mrs Hattie Mollinger, who says she has no regular home, will keep clear of Plainfield in the future or spend a term of sixty days in the county jail. The woman was arrested Saturday night while in the company of John Stewart, of 702 West Third street, and William Ryder, of 684 West Third street. The trio were raising a disturbance near the corner of West Front and Somerset strets and a crowd was gathering when Roundsman Higgins and Sergeant John Flynn came along and took them in.

In court Monday morning Ryder explained to the Judge the cause of the loud talk, telling how he was trying to persuade Stewart not to accompany the woman to Westfield. Judge Cannon suspended the sentence of sixty days over the woman's head and authorized the police to arrest her on sight.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

If you use alcohol lamps, chafing dishes, curling tongs and self-heating irons run by alcohol be sure that you buy the right kind. The pure grain alcohol is costly and the fumes of wood alcohol are poisonous. Get the denatured kind, which costs only about 40 cents a gallon.

In using an alcohol lamp, be sure that it is filled with alcohol or some non-inflammable substance or your woodwork may be ruined through a bad conflagration. Asbestos plates are excellent for this purpose, or an old marble top table.

In preparing ingredients for a vegetable, boil in the shells, and remove and peel with great care that they are not broken.

To insure a carefully aired house in winter, see that at least one window in each room is slightly down from the top during the time it is being occupied. The merest fraction of a inch will be enough to let in fresh air without making a draught.

DATES FROM FEUDAL TIMES

Rod Used in Driving Oxen Is the Original of Present System of Land Measurement.

The origin of the rod, pole or perch as a lineal and superficial measure has been traced to the rod, pole or goad used to urge and direct a team of oxen pulling a plow. So it came about it was used as a convenient and handy land measure in feudal times by the lords in allotting plots of land for agricultural purposes to the villeins and others, says a writer in the Builders' Journal.

One rod wide and 40 long (i. e., one furrow long, deep) built up a quarter of an acre. The furlong, or four poles wide and same depth—i. e., 40 poles, one acre—was a convenient length for a furrow before turning the plow. Of course these lengths somewhat varied in different parts of the country where soils and agriculture varied, but gradually the slight variations grew less and finally the present accepted statutory acre was evolved.

Gunter's chain of 66 feet (ten square chains to the acre) was invented by Rev. Edmund Gunter (1581-1626). He was a professor of astronomy at Gresham college, London, and ingeniously adapted it to facilitate decimal calculations in land measurements. The use of rod in superficial measurements of brick work and lineally in hedges, ditches and fences followed as a convenient existing measure.

PECULIARITIES OF THE EYES

Some Optical Effects Which Are Not Generally Understood—How to Look at Stars.

If one places a pin head up close to the eye and directly in front of it instead of seeing the pin right side up it will appear inverted. Also the head of the pin appears transparent and things may be seen as easily through it as through a sheet of talc glass, the head appearing simply as a large round cloud. If it is placed somewhat closer no pin or head can be seen at all.

If one gazes into a very dark room and puts a lighted candle near the side of one eye very pretty and peculiar effects are observed. A tracery, forming a regular network, can be easily detected, and this is merely the shadow thrown by the candle on the retina of the eye of the small capillary blood vessels between the retina and the candle.

If one looks to the side of a dim star in the heavens the star appears a great deal brighter than direct vision makes it appear. This is because the light in the indirect view falls on what is known as the "yellow spot" or point of keenest vision. As this is not put directly behind the front of the eye the side glance is necessary. Some people can see stars that way that they cannot perceive at all on direct vision.—Sunday Magazine of the Pittsburg Dispatch.

Pope as a Witness.

Pope, like Garrick, made but a poor figure in the witness box. He was cited to appear in defense of Bishop Atterbury when that prelate was tried for high treason in the house of lords in 1723. "I never could speak in public," he told Spence afterward, "and I don't believe that, if it was a set thing, I could give an account of any story to 12 friends together, though I could tell it to any three of them with a great deal of pleasure. When I was to appear for the bishop of Rochester in his trial, though I had but ten words to say, and that on a plain point (how the bishop spent his time when I was with him at Bromley), I made two or three blunders in it; and that notwithstanding the first row of lords (which was all I could see) were mostly of my acquaintance."

Martin Luther's Room.

The chamber of Martin Luther at Wartburg has fallen into a state of ruin. Admirers who have visited the Ritterhaus of Voburg, where the Elector Frederick the Wise offered asylum to the reformer, have allowed their zeal to exceed their discretion, and, vandal like, have carved their names with their pocket knives on the table, and chipped off bits from the bedstead, so that to restore it would necessitate making it anew.

The same has happened with the plaster on the wall, and the famous ink stain has disappeared completely. It is high time that measures should be taken to make an end of these scandalous depredations. — Jenaer Volksblatt.

Modest Missionaries.

There are many missionaries whom no board of missions is supporting; many who are not the recognized and salaried agents of any of the churches. Whenever to any home the gospel of life and light is brought, whoever the messenger may be, a missionary service has been rendered; and the missionary spirit may be shown as truly by the father of the family who tries to be brave and cheerful under difficulties as by those who carry to China or to India a better code of ethics, a higher order of morality, a more exalted standard of precept and practice.

No Engagement.

"Have you finished enumerating the things you won't do?" inquired Mrs. Housekeep.

The prospective cook admitted that she had.

"Then perhaps you'll specify the things you can't do. Then I can tell if we can get along together."

The prospective cook decided right there that they couldn't.

EVERYTHING IN CANDIES!

HOW DOE SAVED HER FAWN

Instance of Wonderful Maternal Intelligence Told by a French Writer and Traveler.

The following anecdote is related by M. X. Raspail. It is worthy of comparison with the most remarkable of instances of the same kind:

The author one day perceived a doe in full flight before two dogs in the Aigle woods that form a part of the forest of Chantilly. The doe was accompanied by a very young fawn which appeared quite exhausted and ready to drop. The mother, doubtless well aware of this, slackened her pace and presently stopped close to some thick bramble bushes. She remained some time there with lowered head as if awaiting the onset of her pursuers.

Suddenly an idea seemed to strike her, and with a butt of the head she tossed her fawn right into the middle of the thicket. Then first advancing gently as if to make sure it was well hidden, she soon set off by rapid bounds in front of the dogs. The latter barking close upon her heels, she made a sudden bound and thus drew them far from the spot where this incident occurred. The howling of the dogs became fainter and fainter, the valiant animal having doubtless led them two kilometers away into the Canardardiere peat bogs, where the dogs often lose the scent.

In fact later they were seen returning to the village in an exhausted condition, while the intelligent mother doubtless returned to the bushes to find the little fawn she had so cleverly hidden and placed in safety.

RECOGNIZED AS A STATESMAN

Candidate's Scheme at Once Seen to Be the Production of a Master Mind.

"Our end of the town is completely without police protection," said the aldermanic candidate in a lively speech. "Elect me and I promise to have this section of the city literally swarming with police."

The next night he was denounced by the opposition as a four flusher and asked to outline his plan for securing proper protection.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he began at the following meeting, "I was called a bluffer by our friends, the opposition, last night. I now propose to show you how I will make good in my promise. First of all I will start the movement for more police protection by hiring two new cooks. Let every man of family in this audience hire one cook and keep her and we'll need an explosion not to keep the cops out of our territory!"

Pandemonium broke loose. A new Bolivar had appeared in their midst and at the election his rival was swamped into oblivion.

The Usefulness of "Central."

The telephone subscriber has come to regard "central" as an ever-available bureau of information. The score of the ball game, the latest election returns, the location of the big fire the light from which can be seen on the horizon, and even the exact time, are all points on which the long-suffering operator must be posted.

The other day, according to the Operating Officer of the Chicago Telephone Company, a man called up a suburban exchange, and said, despair in his voice:

"My wife has gone out, leaving word for me to cook the spinach for dinner, but I do not know how long to boil it."

The operator switched the subscriber to the supervisor, who had been to cooking-school, and she promptly told the man all he needed to know about the treatment of spinach.

A Ceremony Denied.

A Vienna merchant who had spent the summer on vacation at Altenberg, after reaching home sent an oil painting of the Madonna to the authorities of the vacation resort, with the request that it be placed in the springhouse. He asked also that a priest be requested to officiate when the painting was unveiled. Father Steidt of St. Andrew's was selected to carry out the request, but sent word that he would not bless the picture until he had the assurance that the wife of the painter, "and no other woman," had served as model. As it was impossible to secure this statement, the authorities had to dispense with the religious ceremony.

One Part of Meeting.

"Did you ever meet an old friend whom you didn't meet?" was the enigma put up to a Harlemite by a neighbor. The Harlemite never did.

"I did this morning," the neighbor explained. "I was rushing downtown on a subway express. We passed a local, also bound in the same direction, what less speed, I was hanging to a strap, and as I gazed into a car of the local that was opposite my car I recognized a man I had known intimately, but had not seen for 15 years. He recognized me at the same moment and there was a mutual salute. Then my train forged ahead of the other and he was lost to sight.

"You see, I met him, yet I didn't meet him."—New York Globe.

Natural Progression.

Mrs. McCall—How about your servant girl? The last time I saw you you complained about her being so very slow.

Mrs. Hiram Offen—Oh, she's progressing.

Mrs. McCall—Indeed?

Mrs. Hiram Offen—Yes; she's getting slower and slower.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 29, 1910.

Topic.—Intemperance and other sins of the body.—Rom. viii. 1-14. Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

In this famous paragraph from the book of Romans the Apostle Paul draws a vivid contrast between the spiritually minded and the carnally minded. Through Christ the spiritually minded have been made righteous and walk not after the sins of the flesh or body, but walk after the Spirit. On the other hand, the carnally minded—and those who have not accepted Christ and are still devoted to the sins of the body have no spiritual life or power and are dead in trespasses and in sins. Their condition is most deplorable. They think only of evil and destroy body, mind and soul by indulging in the sins of the flesh. All who follow this kind of lives in any form or forms should arouse themselves, realize their danger and give up sinful lives for spiritual ones. No man should "drink to death need walk in the flesh," but may and should walk in the spirit." "If ye live after the flesh ye shall die [spiritually and eternally], but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body ye shall live." Which shall it be—a spiritual life and eternal salvation or a carnal life and eternal death? Each one must decide this question for himself, and may the Lord help us to decide aright.

"The sins of the body are numerous. Back of every sin of course, is a sinful mind. Evil thoughts, evil imaginations produce evil fruits, and they themselves are evil. "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he," and Christ makes a man free from bodily sins by transforming his mind and renewing his will.

Some of the sins of the body are:

1. Intemperance, especially intemperance in the use of alcoholic drinks. No sin of the body has been more universal and destructive than that of intemperance. It has destroyed millions and has ruined and wrecked countless homes and even been a principal factor in the destruction of nations. Against it decidedly the young need to be warned. No drunkard ever intended to become one. He intended to be temperate in his use of drink. But some things are dangerous to tamper with, and strong drink is one of them. The only safe way is to avoid it altogether. Let the young men especially be warned today, for as never before the business world demands sober men to conduct its affairs. The boy of today who learns to drink and to use tobacco in this world as well as the loss of spiritual and eternal life.

2. Gluttony is a sin of the body. Constant overeating is most harmful and injurious to physical health and mental activity and spiritual life. The expressions "gluttonous" and "winebibbers" are several times united in the Scriptures, and warnings against both are enjoined. The man who is a glutton overworks the digestive organs and not only injures them, but other vital organs of the body, especially the heart. The health of thousands is impaired and their lives made miserable by intemperance in eating too much or in eating that which is harmful rather than helpful. Too much care cannot be exercised over our diet. Indigestion, dyspepsia and heart weakness are mainly the result of overeating or carelessness in what he eats. Rich foods and especially rich candies should be sparingly partaken of, if at all. Eating without complete mastication of food should be absolutely avoided. Take time to eat, eat what agrees with you, but never too much. Regularity in eating is may be. The great danger here is that the evil effects are not immediately apparent, but they are no less serious because their full fruit is not produced until years may have passed. The body is the temple of the Holy Ghost and should therefore, as well as for health and long life, be faithfully cared for.

3. Impurity is a sin of the body. The vilest of sins is impurity in thought, word and action. The pure in heart shall see God, but the impure shall not stand before Him. He is perfect holiness and cannot suffer impurity in His sight. Impure thoughts and imaginations, vileness of speech in ordinary conversation or in the telling of filthy stories and impurity of life are abhorrent to Him. Moreover, nothing so much as impurity pollutes the human body and mind. Its secret practice in thought or deed makes the body a sepulcher of death. Nothing drags humbled and woundhood to lower depths. The temptations to it are numberless, and the young should summon every grace of God and every strength of will to keep their thoughts and words and lives pure. No virtue surpasses it, and no other carnal sin so utterly debases and debauches mankind.

On to Honolulu in 1915.

It is a long look ahead to 1915, but that look has been taken by Christian Endeavorers of Honolulu, and they have already sent an invitation that the all American Endeavor convention of 1915 shall be held in their beautiful city. Not only are the Endeavorers very earnest in this matter, but the Hawaii promotion committee already seconds their invitation most heartily. "We hope indeed," writes the secretary to Dr. Clark, "that this may be brought about and at this time wish to tender you our services in any way they may be utilized to help carry out such a plan. Hawaii never disappoints. Yours for Hawaii in 1915."

THE METAPHYSICS OF LOVE.

(A Pronounced Mixup).

I would, sweet maid, that I were You,
Or else that You were Me;
For, being so transposed, We Two
As One might then agree.
If I were You I should be kind
And let Me closer come;
If You were I, You would not mind
If You should kiss Me some.
And so again, if You I were,
On Me my choice, would fall;
And thus with You, You would prefer
Yourself above Them All.
Oh, let us change our Dual State
And be of Single Thought,
Or Life is simply Desperate
The Nothingness of Nought.
—F. Moxon, in Puck.

THE RAVEN REVISED.

Once upon a morning foggy, while I loitered, grouched and groggy
Over biscuits that were soggy and an egg that was a bore,
While I dawdled, almost dreaming,
and my coffee never ceased from steaming,
Suddenly there came a screaming—screaming never heard before.
"This some suffragette," I muttered,
"screaming at my outer door.
Just a noise and nothing more."
—Chicago Tribune.

COWARDICE AND INDOLENCE.

To shrink from the duties which come to us in our common callings, however, dull and wearisome they may be, is not only indolence and cowardice; it is also robbing ourselves of the best means of development in life.

When the busy season comes we are not to conclude that we are sick because fatigued, and ought to go off for a vacation. Nor are we to suppose that we should give up our present work for something easier.

Whatever our work may be, in office or store, or field, or school, we should see to it that we "get the music up to concert pitch" at the beginning.

If we start in too low, we may not get right all the year, and a year's working less effectively than our best will hurt our life forever.

There are considerations which should help us to take up our work earnestly after our holiday season; and best, we should have the inspiration of gratitude—that we have tasks to perform, and the strength to undertake them which is something to be thankful for. Then, if the past year has been spent in a sensible way and has furnished us with new knowledge and, therefore, new vitality, giving us greater strength for the work before us, we should be eager to undertake our tasks, to start the year afresh—going back with joy to our duties.

AN AEROPLANE DANCE.

Paris has started a new dance which is quite the fashion. It is the outcrop of aviation, and is called "L'Aeronette." It is the creation of M. Leopart, the great dancing master of Paris.

It has four movements. In the first the couples dance a slow step, which is to imitate the rolling of the aeroplane. In the second movement the couple raise their arms slowly as they dance which is to represent the rising of the aeroplane in the air. The third movement is difficult to describe. It is an irregular step to illustrate the unsteadiness of the aeroplane in its flight. The fourth movement describes the descent, which is a long, sliding step.

A humorist has insisted that there should be a fifth movement, which should be the crash of an aeroplane. When asked what the movement should be said that all the couples should fall to the floor and the quick pick up the dead.

SEAL COATS.

The long coats of sealskin, or, let it be whispered, nearseal are being bought and worn by fortunate women.

They reach almost to the ground and are superbly lined. Jeweled and tortoise-shell buttons are used on them.

The cut of these coats are extremely graceful, preserving a long line and lacking in the bulkiness of our mothers days. Frequently there is a cutaway effect in the front, and just to give variety many of the sides and backs are curved at the lower edges.

A Dream of Opulence.

I'd like to be a plutocrat
With millions under control.
And never have to shudder when
I bought a ton of coal;
I'd like to see my wealth of coin
In gay profusion tossed
And buy big beafsteaks when I liked
And never ask the cost.

Polishing Furniture.

It is not generally known that wringing out a cloth in hot water, and wiping the furniture before putting on furniture cream, will result in a very high polish and will not linger mark.

Cleaning Carpet on Floor.

To clean a carpet without taking up, take a cup half full of corn meal mixed with salt and sweep well when spots are left; then take oxgall or ammonia. Both are very good things to make the carpet as bright as a new one.

SHOULD SECRETS BE KEPT FROM HUSBAND?

One of the first things that a bride feels bound to do is to empty her past of every little event, every affair and all episodes which happen to most young women. She pours them into the sympathetic and willing ears of her husband and feels very much better after the shifting of the burden.

But is this right? Is it fair to the other person who shared the secret before? The wife should remember that the proposal which she feels impelled to disclose to her husband is not entirely hers. That lover who was refused offered his life to one person, and it is dishonorable for her to tell a person for whom the words were not intended.

There is another side to this question. Self-preservation suggests that a divided confidence will prevent the return of these confidences in boomerang chastisement. Men frequently brood over facts, and a distorted, exaggerated idea results.

When every little affair is disclosed to a husband a jealousy of his wife's life and friends rankles in his heart. He misinterprets and is thoroughly uncomfortable.

Do not speak quickly and repent at intervals which stretch for years and years. Do not read your old love letters for your husband to criticise.

This is not a plea for a secrecy that destroys a perfect trust and love between man and woman. Two minds can carry a burden better than one, and the knowledge that you thoroughly understands will make your days worth while. But fortify yourself with the knowledge that he does understand.

Remember that there must be a foundation of trust which should respect a silence in the loved one. If a husband insists that everything be told, explained or excused, he is fulfilling the role of his wife's mentor, not her equal.

Tell your thoughts or your own secrets to your broad-minded husband. Keep the secret that belongs to another to yourself.

TO CLEAN FURNITURE.

It is not always possible to take upholstered furniture in the open for a thorough cleaning and beating. In cities there is neither yard or porch for such work.

Many housekeepers make this lack an excuse for letting furniture get into a condition that would horrify them could they realize the germs and dirt concealed.

This is the less excusable, as even heavy tufted furniture can be kept clean indoors without raising a tornado of dust.

Here is a simple plan:

Wring out of warm water a cloth that is large enough to cover a large portion of the furniture. The cloth should not be linty and should be just damp and not wet.

Beat the cloth well with a rattan beater. When one side has become dusty the cloth can be turned. Sometimes it will be necessary to use several cloths on a single piece. Continue until the cloth is not soiled. The dust sticks to the wet surface and the furniture is freshened by the treatment.

If the color of the furniture is not too delicate the cloths can be wrung from hot ammonia water to still further brighten the covering.

If the beating has not removed dust from the corners of tufted furniture it should be attacked, with a small, stiff toothbrush. Better yet, two can be used, first a dry one to get out the worst of the dirt, and then one just moistened to act like the damp cloth.

Remember, moistening does not mean wet. Make a mistake and your furniture is streaked, possibly ruined. When the upholstery is clean rub up the woodwork with a polish.

"PRETENDING."

Practical education is the fashion of the day. The boy at school is confronted with facts. Fancies which soften and beautify life are thought superfluous, and fairy tales are often banished from the nursery. Not long ago a lady walked into a village school and reprimanded a teacher there for telling the babies a fairy story.

Letters in the papers followed, and many agreed with the action of the visitor. To teach a child what was not "true" was said to be unpardonable.

Nevertheless, to listen to stories which are not true and to play games of pretense is, and always will be, a part of the childish program.

Go into your own nursery, and "Let us pretend" are the first words you hear. The nursery table is converted into a ship, the nursery floor is the ocean, the boys the sailors and pirates, and the girls the maidens who are carried off and eventually saved.

That it is all pretense enchances the joy of the whole thing. Before childish eyes spreads a glorious world. Who could be so hard-hearted as to dispel it?

"Discovered."

"Don't you get tired of saying 'discovered!' every night and two matinees?" asked the camelian of the troupe.

"Yes," answered the villian; "I have been 'discovered' so often I begin to feel like the North Pole."—Exchange.

THE LIVING LINCOLN.

"It was my pleasure to have known President Lincoln personally," said Alexander McDowell, clerk of the House. "I talked with him on several occasions in Washington and at the front, and while I knew him well I do not flatter myself that he knew me well, for there was only one of him and there were forty millions of me. What struck me above all else was his simplicity and everyday common sense.

"He met all men as equals, not in a patronizing way, but in a way that said as plain as words, 'we are all of one blood, and brothers.' He was a great man and he was the only one in all the land that did not know it.

"He always remembered his early struggles and poverty, and with a sympathy born of them was ever ready to give a helping hand to those compelled to travel the road that he had been compelled to travel in his youth and early manhood.

"He was a Christian, not a church member—and did by his actions what so many do by their professions only. His life was the golden rule in action. He loved and had faith in his fellowman. We found one time ready to hold the ladder firm while they ascended and no jealous envy ever entered his mind no matter how high the ascent.

"He was a Republican and a partisan, but above all, a patriot and a lover of his country. We found today partisan Republicans and partisan Democrats, men who believe in their party and the principles of their parties and not so many guerrillas that feed between the lines, now on one side and then on the other.

"In his death the South lost a sincere, honest friend and the nation a patriot."—National Magazine.

IN THE SICK ROOM.

The arrangement of the sick room is very important. People seldom realize the wonderful effect which a patient's environment has on his condition.

Brightness and sunshine must have a decided effect upon the nervous system during recovery from serious illness, although in its acute stages much shadow may have been necessary.

The best outlook for a sick room is a southeasterly one. Much can be done at times by altering the bed in order that the light may not cause glare in eyes easily strained because of primary disease and headache.

Have just a few flowers, very fresh; and always take trouble about their arrangement.

Avoid in your sick rooms all heavy hangings and draperies.

Quiet in the sick room is a matter of primary importance.

Whispering or talking outside the door is quite unforgivable. Never, if you can avoid it, awaken a patient, whether with intention or by accident.

The patient is infinitely more dependent on his food than on any medicine, therefore, he should never spare any effort to provide him with dishes likely to be appetizing.

But try not to ask him what he wants or likes. Surprises often stimulate the appetite.

TWO-PIECE SKIRTS.

The prevailing fashion of the day is to have a skirt of two materials harmonizing in tone. There is a pleated or circular lower part and a washerwoman's tunic in any form one desires for the upper part. This tunic is made to open at the side and attached to the lower skirt with buttons and braid buttonholes when the material is of rough cloth; or it may be left plain, cut in battlements.

Some of the soft house fabrics are merely twisted into a graceful roll at the bottom and left raw edges, and in other frocks one sees a wide scallop overcast with floss in a button hole stitch.

In walking frocks there is a long knee yoke of plaid serge or cheviot and below this a flounce of narrow plaits or plaid chevlet.

When there is not a straight around yoke, there is a long wide front panel that is shaped up at the sides and rounded at the back.

ANTIQUE BRACELETS.

With long sleeves one might suppose that bracelets would be relegated to the jewel caskets, but not so. Fair woman not to be outwitted, smilingly placed them over her sleeves, and now tries to match the general ornamentation by different styles of metal bands.

Dull-finished gold or silver seems to form an approved setting for semi-precious stones, and these "antiques" made to order are reasonable enough to admit of a fair-sized collection. The wellbred woman changes her bracelets with her gowns.

Egyptian, Russian, Italian and Indian jewelry form the models for these lovely ornaments. They give an appropriate finish to gowns that trace their lines back to the other centuries. They are certainly more artistic than the shiny, plain bands of gold. Their colorful lines are effective additions to day and evening gowns.

"They say she will create no end of gossip."

"Well, I guess the jobbers in that commodity will be able to handle her output."—Washington Star.

WHEN HOOPSKIRTS WERE WORN

There is ill news in store for the fashionable woman. It is being hinted by the editors of the fashion pages that that horrible structure, the hoopskirt, is certain to come in again, says the Grand Rapids Press. It had been hoped that this steel wire contrivance had gone out for good with the close of the Civil War. Several purity organizations have condemned the present picture and gowns and the styles are drifting back to the beehive effect which makes it necessary for every woman to cover a good half-acre of space.

There are many persons alive still who remember with pangs of regret the hoopskirt. It was a contraption which made the human form divine resemble an old-fashioned ink bottle. When a matron walked down the street she had the sidewalk all to her self, and her husband had to either walk in the gutter or in the street. When two fashionable dames met and stopped to discuss the events of the day traffic was impeded and drivers had to go around the block.

There are steel engravings which give a good idea of the fashions of war times. One of them which is familiar familiar. It represents a man and woman walking down the street. The woman is prominent in a hoopskirt and a little bonnet about the size of a fruit jar cover with strings which tie under the chin. Over her head she holds a parasol which is almost as large as a silver dollar. On account of the hoopskirt her escort is walking at some distance from her, gracefully twirling his mustache. His Prince Albert coat flares out at the bottom and he wears a silk hat two sizes too large. The picture is such that one is kept in a state of constant apprehension for fear of an accident. He also wears long hair and curly brown whiskers.

The question is whether the race must go back fifty years for its styles it is hoped not. Better the tube gowns. At least the male public has some room in which to move about.

CRISIS IN ENGLAND.

"The Crisis in England," by Sydney Brooks, in the North American Review, is a comprehensive statement of the present conditions in English politics which all the world is watching. Mr. Brooks concludes his article:

"What will be the upshot of it all? The prime minister on December 2 introduced into the House of Commons a resolution reaffirming in the strongest and clearest terms the financial supremacy of the lower chamber. That resolution strikes the keynote of the campaign. The Liberals can hardly expect to return from the polls with an undiminished majority. If they come back even with a majority independent of the Irish Nationalist vote, it will be a very considerable achivement. I know England too well to prophesy with any definiteness the result of a general election, but I shall be very greatly surprised if, in spite of the many formidable interests they have antagonized, the Liberals do not return to power with a clear mandate to bridle the financial pretensions of the House of Lords. One Liberal minister after another has declared that his party will not again take office without a clear guarantee that what occurred on November 28 shall never be permitted to occur again. There is only one guarantee that will meet the situation, and that is a promise by the king that he will be prepared to create a sufficient number of peers to carry through the House of Lords in its definitely limiting the upper chamber of the right to reject the financial proposals of the Commons. Sooner than be swamped by 500 new men the House of Lords would agree to anything. But the expedient is a desperate one, so desperate that it is difficult sufficiently to believe that Great Britain is passing through a peaceable but profound revolution and is entering on the prodigious and fateful task of rebuilding almost from top to bottom her constitutional framework."

AN ORANDIE BAG.

Painting the lily is not more delicate work than the improving of organdie, but women who are artists with the needle have done even this. Fancy work bags have been made of this thinnest of crisp party dress materials, and each blossom has been first outlined with untwisted silk floss.

The prettiest organdie bags are made of a large square; the casing describes a huge circle and is an inch wide bias strip of the material. The four corners from a petal-like heading, each point faced with a piece cut to fit it, and on these turned over edge of the organdie appears the tracery of goldcolored floss that is to give the final finish.

New Egg Glasses.

Those who prefer not to eat their morning eggs out of the shell are taking delight in the handsome new silver and crystal eggholders. These are in the shape of wine glasses, the stem and open-work bowl being of silver and the inside tumbler of thin, fine glass. These are considered quite smart to give as wedding presents. They are also admirable to give to an invalid or the leisurely woman who always has her breakfast in her room. A small silver spoon is used with the egg tumbler.

AGE OF NIAGARA FALLS.

In the current issue of Science Professor J. W. Spenser defends an opinion advanced last year, but recently disputed by other geologists, concerning the length of time during which America's best known cataract *has existed, says the New York Tri*bune. His estimate of the interval is 39,000 years, which is considerably more than that of Professor George F. Wright, who makes it 7,000 years, but far less than Professor Grove K. Gilbert's estimate of about 150,000 years.

All attempts to solve this fascinating problem are based on a well established fact. As the Niagara river is undermining the ledge over which it tumbles, and as the uppermost statum of rock breaks away in consequence, the position of the falls is continually changing.

It is now fully seven miles from the vicinity of Lewistown, where the shelf terminates. Obviously if the history of the cataract dates from the time when it began to eat its way backward from that point—an assumption which is probably warranted—and if the retreat has been at a uniform rate, computation of the age of the falls would be a comparatively simple task. Since the late Professor Gilbert had queried their position, in 1842, they have receded 250 feet, an average of about four feet annually.

The erosive work of the river, however, has not been regular, as some geologists once took for granted. Indeed, it has been exceedingly variable, and it is the lack of uniformity which embarrasses those who seek to determine how old the falls are. One of the influences which may have operated with different force from one period to another are variations in the thickness or hardness of the rock to be worn through.

It is uncertain, too, whether the falls have always been as high as they are now (160 feet). Professor Spenser, however, thinks that Lake Ontario's level was once only thirty-five feet lower than Lake Erie's. If he is correct, the undermining effect must have been much smaller then at present, and the rate of recession much slower. Furthermore, it is generally believed that the volume of water discharged by the Niagara river has not always been what it is now.

Professor Spenser was one of the first to adduce proof that the contents of the three lakes formerly reached the St. Lawrence Valley by another route than that now followed, and that the Niagara then served as an outlet for Lake Erie only.

UNDERWEAR HINTS.

Should one wear wool, cotton, or linen next to the skin? Wool has its fanatics, to whom discarding their flannel or merino vest or drawers would seem like risking their lives. But the opinion of physicians has changed notably in recent years, and now many, if not most of them, favor cotton or linen next the skin.

The reason is that wool absorbs perspiration and retains it; it absorbs it with difficulty at first, but surrenders it to the surrounding air with even greater difficulty. Cotton, *on the other hand, asks only an op*portunity to absorb it does as rapidly as possible.

The best plan in cold weather is to wear cotton, or linen, if you can afford it, next the skin, with wool outer clothing. The wool excludes moisture and, being porous, the cotton absorbs perspiration quickly and dries even more quickly, and this without chilling the body if the latter have an outer covering of wool.

In this climate especially, where houses and offices are generally overheated in winter and where, consequently, the transition from indoors to outdoors is attended by a far greater change in temperature than in milder climates where the houses are not kept so hot as in America, it is better to wear cotton or linen underclothes and to rely upon heavy outer garments to resist the cold of the wintry air.

A Hatpin Holder.

In one of the well known little hat*pin holders made with a glas tube* and ribbon the decoration is a long twist of green ribbon covering the tube and suggesting a thick stem. This is surmounted by a chrysanthemum made of tiny fluted ribbon worked into an immense rosette the size of a chrysanthemum and resembling that flower. Bows and loops of green ribbon surround it and suggest leaves. The hatpins are stuck in through the flower, which is based upon a piece of bobbinette covering the top of the tube.

TRANSVAAL AND ITS RESOURCES

Dr. William Macdonald, of Pretoria, South Africa, is making a tour of America on behalf of the Transvaal Government to inquire into the latest methods of agricultural science more especially in regard to the dry-farming movement in the West. It is believed that the methods which are being successfully applied in the Great Plains region and in Utah will be of great importance in the reclamation and settlement of the desert regions of South Africa and other parts of the British Empire.

Regarding the Transvaal, Dr. Macdonald gave some interesting information to a reporter for the Washington Post. "This State is 112,000 miles in extent, and so has as area of 71,000,000 acres," said Dr. Macdonald. "It is about the same size as Arizona. As is well known, the Transvaal is remarkably rich in precious metals. The gold yield up to the present time has been $150,000,000, or one-third part of the output of the whole world. Again, near the town of Pretoria is the famous Premier diamond mine, where the Cullinan diamond, the most valuable gem ever found, was dug up. Besides gold and diamonds, the Transvaal has large deposits of coal, iron, copper, tin, etc. It is thus destined to have a great future from the mineral standpoint.

"But vast as are its mineral deposits, it is confidently believed by many that the agricultural and stock-raising possibilities of this land are much greater. The Transvaal can raise cattle, horses, sheep, ostriches and angora goats, grow tobacco, maize (corn), wheat, tropical fruits of all kinds, oranges and lemons, coffee, fiber plants, and also all fruits of the temperate zone. Already a considerable export trade has been started with England, and now quantities of maize and citrus fruits are being shipped to the European markets.

"But to the present time it has been said that irrigation was the great need of the Transvaal, but I am a firm believer in the potentialities of the dry lands of this region. The staple crop of the colony is maize, and by means of conserving the moisture in a rational and scientific manner it will be possible to grow large crops of this cereal with little or no fear of drought, and the same will naturally apply to other crops and forage plants.

"The annual rainfall of the Transvaal varies from about twelve to over forty inches, with an average for last year of twenty-three inches. To promote this matter, the government of the Transvaal has recently started a dryland experiment station, under the Department of Agriculture in the hope to produce the colony's own experiments in proper methods of tillage and the raising of drought-resistant crops."

SOME DON'TS FOR WIVES.

Don't begrudge your husband a few hours spent with his men friends. You meet friends. Be considerate and give him the same privilege.

Don't bother him with trouble*some trifles that happen during the* day.

Don't whine and complain over household difficulties.

Don't overwork and be tired and cross when he comes home. Your husband will see you tired and irritable where he will not be conscious of a few grains of dust which may have dissipated at the expense of your strength.

Don't let yourself get old and ugly. Take time to keep yourself young and to cultivate good looks. If you can't be beautiful, try to be interesting.

Don't forget to cultivate your mind. Read about what is going on in the great world, so that if he makes remarks on current events you will be able to answer him intelligently instead of giving him a blank stare.

Don't inquire how his business is unless you are sure from his face that he has something pleasant to tell you.

HOW NEW BOWS ARE WORN.

There is no end to the methods that are employed this winter in the use of bows. They are worn at the neck, back and front, and also at the belt, back and front, and always at the top edge.

The latest fad for rosette is placed at the bottom edge, as it was last season.

The newest spot for a rosette is not at the bottom edge, as it was last season.

The newest spot for a bow is at the front of the bodice, just below the yoke. This is a different color from the frocks, and it is usually made of liberty satin. It is not full and loose, but long and trim. The loops and ends are the full width of the ribbon and are laid out in flat lines.

These touch up not only dress costumes for theatre, restaurants and informal dinners, but they are worn on simpple house frocks. The more vivid colors are used to give brilliancy to simple gowns such as white, gray or black.

Among the colors are apple green, plum, purple, garnet, green, turquoise, blue, geranium red and black, with rhinestone centre.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE'S CAMPAIGNERS PRESENT CAUSE OF LOCAL OPTION HERE

Former Governor Glenn, of North Carolina; Judge Wm. A. Covington, of Georgia, and J. Frank Burke, of New Jersey, Make Able Addresses Before Large Congregations.

In as many churches, before large congregations, Sunday, as many leaders in the temperance cause made strong appeals in favor of the passage of a local option law for New Jersey by the present Legislature. They gave a history of the movement, told of the evils of the liquor traffic, condemned the saloon and championed the right of the people to say whether they wanted prohibition.

A large congregation greeted former Governor Robert B. Glenn at the Crescent Avenue church Sunday morning, when that distinguished southerner, with all the brilliant characteristics of Dixie orators, made a dramatic appeal for the enactment of a State local option law.

Governor Glenn in a portion of his address laid great stress on the fact that New Jersey was one of three States in the Union that had no law as to statute books whereby its voters can vote locally on the liquor question. The other two States whose voters are also muzzled on the question is Nevada and Pennsylvania.

In presenting statistics Governor Glenn declared that New Jersey's criminal record is about the highest in the union, taking into consideration its population. The condition of affairs, he declared, was entirely due to the excessive use of alcoholic beverages.

Conditions in North Carolina before and after the enactment of local option laws were ably presented. "People who favored the saloons before the law was enacted are now united in their support of local option, and under no conditions would the communities vote to license saloons."

"Under the old conditions when the liquor powers were in control factory owners suffered to a big degree. The workmen also were sufferers in loss of wages. When the saloons were open a majority of them would draw their wages, go out and spend their money in the gin mills. It was a rare thing if a factory had more than half its force at work on Monday morning. The factories would not fill until Wednesday. But now, things are different. There are no saloons and the mills and factories are filled on Monday mornings instead of Wednesday mornings under the old regime. The saloons were put out of business and the workmen's wages are now going into the homes and happiness prevails everywhere.

Governor Glenn also flashed a volley of pathos into his address, and while narrating the evil results of the traffic, the effect on the homes, there were numerous tears seen in the audience. In a dramatic manner he made a comparison.

"Friends of the liquor interests," declared the speaker, "in opposing local option declare that it hurts business. I claim it benefits business and statistics will prove my assertion. On one hand is the drunkard handing over his dime for whiskey in the grasping hand of the saloonkeeper; on the other hand you will see the results—broken-hearted mothers and wives, shoeless and ragged children, homes with bared floors and little furniture, and then the other scene presents the monarch of hell, the devil, standing outside of the fiery entrance to Gehenna, awaiting to receive his subject—the poor drunkard. Friends, I leave it to you, does local option injure business.

"I have not always been a teetotaler," continued Governor Glenn. Like St. Paul I used to take a drink now and then for my stomach's sake and for my infirmities, but my ailments seemed to increase and I quit for good.

"The best men of North Carolina," he said, "had been laid low by too much drinking. Fifty per cent. of the soldiers in the veteran's homes throughout the country were forced to these places because of rum."

At the close of the service a substantial collection was taken to advance the work being carried on by the Anti-Saloon League of New Jersey.

Judge W. A. Covington, of Georgia, addressed a large mass meeting at the First Baptist church in the afternoon. J. Alexander Cairns, secretary of the league, together with Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the church, were in charge of the meeting.

In presenting Judge Covington, Mr. Cairns briefly told of the work that the league is doing in New Jersey and has been doing during the sixteen years of its existence. He declared that New Jersey leads in crime per capita, that while during the past years the population has increased at the rate of twelve per cent. the cases of lunacy has increased at the rate of 200 per cent. He paid his respects to Senator Hinchcliffe, and said that he was glad that he was not returned to Trenton.

Mr. Cairns made a strong appeal in behalf of a franchise on the liquor traffic is not the only tool of the devil to accomplish his ends, what is it? And, if it is not the object of the church to destroy that power what is the church for?

"A certain Mr. Hayes, known as a lobbyist, has proclaimed to the world that the liquor interests will prevent the consummation of the desires of the Anti-Saloon League just as long as they can, but the League, assured of ultimate victory will continue to the end finally to see the long looked for victory perched upon its banners. Anyway the attitude of the liquor men is changing. They know that they are not fighting something that will down easily, they realize that the men engaged in this fight are working night and day, twenty-four hours every day and seven days a week in a year and the results of this fight are manifesting themselves in every State in the union with three exceptions.

"Hayes has said that the churches of the country could put the liquor men out of business if they wanted to, but he questioned their sincerity of purpose. He said there was a loophole somewhere, between the saloon and the home, perhaps, or in the homes of the people, but surely somewhere. We want this loophole discovered and eliminated. Eighteen years ago this might have been true, but it is not so now. The churches instead of working each one for itself are united in one common cause and thus the work is assuming proportions which were not dreamed of in those days. Even the brewer acknowledges that the league is battling in its efforts, and we have words from their own year book which prove that they feel and recognize the power of those who are working to save the country from utter disaster. 15,000 saloons were voted out of existence by the people in 1909. In the Southland, the northwest and middle west the liquor men do not dare to hold their conventions any more. Why? Because the people of those parts of the country wont stand for them.

"Eighteen years ago God wanted a man to take up this work and He found him in the person of Rev. Dr. Russell and in a very strange manner. Dr. Russell had been asked to officiate at a funeral in Chicago, and in accepting the duty found such conditions to exist as to resign his pastorate and launch out in a crusade against the evil of liquor. The result of that resolve is the Anti-Saloon League of today, and that power which started the movement will be termed a wave of the continuous power of God gaining in strength until today its far reaching results are visible in the territory I have mentioned to such a degree that jailors who prospered on the number of criminals they had in charge are now asking for salaries. In some counties of the west the prisons are actually empty.

"Seven hundred pulpits in this State today are being filled with workers of this league. The conditions in New Jersey are like this: The population is increasing over 21% people. While in ten years the population has increased 12 per cent. there has been an increase of criminals of 300 per cent. Morris Plains asylum has 2,100 patients with accommodations for but 1,600. Nevada, Pennsylvania and New Jersey are the only three States in the union in which the people are not allowed by law to say whether they want the saloon or not. All we ask is a fair deal with the people themselves, if thirty per cent. of the men ask for a special election to determine whether local option may be their portion there ought to be a law which will allow them to express themselves to that extent. We will have that law in this State before long and then will come the other deed, ends."

Mr. Burke made a short reference to the divorce evil and attributed it to liquor. He said that during the last decade more than 156,000 divorces had been granted in this country, 95 per cent. of which were directly traceable to the drinking habit.

In referring to the organ of the Anti-Saloon League, he said that "The Issue," now had a circulation of 12,000 in this State, and was increasing rapidly. Cards were signed for pledges of money for the support of the league were passed among the congregation and many signatures for contributions were received. The church was fairly well filled.

Sale and Tea Netted $35.

The sale and tea held at the home of Mrs. J. W. Gavett, of Third place, Friday afternoon, under the auspices of the Missionary and Aid Society of Warren chapel, netted about $35 for the chapel building fund, carried by the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. There was a sale of cake and bread, after which tea and coffee were served. Mrs. J. H. Snyder was chairman of the committee in charge.

Charles A. Pomeroy Injured.

Charles A. Pomeroy, of Park place, the borough, has been detained at home for several days with a sprained ankle, the result of a peculiar accident. He was leaning out of the window reaching for something, when his feet slipped on a rug, which lay on a waxed floor, and he went out of the window head first. The injury required the services of a physician.

Plain Field Notes and Queeries

By Druid

Many feasts are eaten in honour of Abraham Lincoln, and long may it be before feasters lose appetite for this yearly tribute. Yet no famous American so little needs this inducement of table homage. All the world is glad to doff the hat at mention of this great name. If Lincoln had been a soldier, if he had garbed his inborn majesty in the gay plumage of a General or an Admiral there would no doubt be ever so much noiser a display of pompt and martial magnificence, which so electrifies the man in the street and his children. Lincoln was immortal before his martyrdom. His mastery is that of the plain man raised to the heights of sublimity by noble thinking, calm bravery, heroic endurance and the strength which proves true greatness. He is not a holiday god only. His acts are his national monument, his words so wise, so apt in wit that stirs and sticks in the memory, have become a national tradition. Lincoln was above all a fine model of sheer goodness of heart. A truer man never lived. He could never have been a killer of men. He yearned to be their saviour, and met the outrageous fate of other lovers of their brother men. A record such as this does more to ennoble a nation than a General or an Admiral than all the liveried and sworded figures that are put up to swagger on prancing horses for country cousins to gape at. If ever there was a splendid fighter Lincoln was that man, a princely lion-heart towering above a horde of professional heroes, thinking, perhaps, as much of their own fame as of anything else. Lincoln well knew that he faced martyrdom, a more pitiful doom than stray bullets bring in the fury of battle. He knew the chill of daily duty, a loftier courage than the reckless bravado of the field.

How extremes meet! A train from St. Louis was running to St. Paul when St. Opheim, a passenger, drunk, tried to shoot his wife, and then, insane, pitched himself out of the car window. Sequel not reported. These unsainthy happenings might not seem so peculiar if the "St." were used only for street names. Where meanings are lost symbols and labels are better if adopted to modern ideas. And no reverent mind read without a shock the schedule and fares of the railway from Joppa to Jerusalem or the trolley cars to Damascus?

When the treaty of peace between Japan and Russia was signed in Portsmouth, N. H., a few years ago, most people felt rapturous over the prospect of lasting peace in the far east. And so proud that so signal an event should have been celebrated in the once proud American eagle. Well, it has lasted beautifully so far. It might possibly have lasted till this wornout old world of ours shall be flicked out of existence by some frisky comet's tail, but for certain knocks administered to the peaceful parties. Secretary Knox has ventured to ask a little favor from the two Powers, in return for the magnanimous favor we did for one of them, when we relieved the loser from the painful necessity of paying a just indemnity to the winner. He has begged them kindly to so arrange the settlement of Manchurian affairs that Uncle Sam shall be free to set up his market stand there. Now, it may or may not be good tactics for anything approaching to push our national interests wherever there is a ghost of a chance to get a foot in. This is what we encourage, and reward the successful drummer. Whether it is good diplomacy to pose as friends of both sides in a domestic quarrel, with an eye to business, remains to be seen. These particular reconciled foes are both petted at the proposal and may any day pick up their quarrel where they left it and call Uncle Sam a taste of their resentment.

So the hotel men of Atlantic City are going to offer $200,000 for a great meet of airships of every shape and kind. This will be a delight each for all the inventors of things that will fly, from balloons to steam-boiler explosions. There will be furious fights between fleets of aeroplanes bumping matches by balloons carrying wagons, and inventors trotting out their newest machines, and they will all go up and up, sky high. But will they come down as delightfully as they go up. Well—if there is a doubt—that is the grand drawing card of the game. We pay to see water come down at Niagara, who wouldn't pay double to see the sky pilot descend sitting straddle-legged on top of his smashed air-horse?

The N. Y. Times, under the heading "Preachers from Abroad," editorially approves the criticism that underlies "the question whether the face of American preachers is dying out." It was asked in this column last week. It is informed by a religious weekly that it can name ten American preachers who can preach as well as the Englishman whom the Fifth Avenue church tempted with its offer of $20,000 a year. We could name a small choir number, probably, of able pulpit men who are even better for that church's practical service than any outsider can be, because they are natives, and possess the temperament and sympathy and adaptability which cannot often be imported. Why do not the capitalists of churches encourage their own people? The truth is that the sectarian competitive spirit narrows religion itself and bars out ideal ministers because not bearing their trade mark. This wholesale *pandering to luxury is the importa*tion of foreign pulpit goods is more damaging to genuine church progress than would be the giving up of professional preaching altogether, and returning to meetings for worship.

GERMAN ORGANIZATION ENJOYS A MERRY TIME

Carnival Day was observed on an elaborate scale by the Gesang and Turn Verein Sunday afternoon and evening. More than two hundred members and their families participated in the festivities which continued until an early hour.

The program was a medley of New York, made a hit by a series of humorous recitations and monologues. Miss Mary Traynor also won a big round of applause in a comedy sketch. There were also a number of selections by the singing section of the society and by members of the Stirling Singing Society.

During the celebration speeches were made by President Stephen Schleif and Otto Keller. Lawrence Fahr represented "Uncle Sam." The committee in charge was Fred Becker, August Wolf and A. Paroubek.

INCENDIARY BLAZE AT SCOTCH PLAINS

Fire destroyed the home of George Frentz on Montague avenue, Scotch Plains, at an early hour Monday. The blaze was probably of an incendiary origin as the family was away, having gone to Catskill, New York, Wednesday of last week.

The fire was first discovered by John Ford, a neighbor, at about 5:15 o'clock. At that time the entire structure was ablaze within and there was no possible opportunity to save any of the household goods. An alarm was turned in but all the firemen could do was save the barn, which was already smoking when they arrived.

Mr. and Mrs. Frentz were preparing to remove to Montana in the spring and Mr. Frentz had taken his family to Catskill where they were to remain until he had packed the household goods and forwarded them west. The house was owned by Mr Frentz's father A. L. Frentz, and he said this morning that he had a purchaser for the property and expected to sell it as soon as his son moved out.

The loss on both household goods and house is said to be only partly covered by insurance.

MAY USE TRINITY BELL FOR FIRE ALARM SIGNAL

The necessity which compels the fire department to look for some means of notifying the call men of fires after the removal of the steam whistle privilege on March 1, prompted Father Bogud, rector of St. Mary's church, to put the bell of the church at the disposal of the department, but there is an objection to this because of the fact that St. Mary's bell rings at certain stated times and there is the possibility of this confusing the signals.

Chief T. O. Doane, in looking over the field, discovered that the bell in Trinity Reformed church tower would be just about the central point in the city and if the bell could be secured temporarily would answer the purpose to better advantage. With this end in view he consulted some of the church authorities and said that the fire and buildings committee of the Common Council would be responsible for any damage done to the bell while in use by the department. A special meeting of the consistory of Trinity will be called to consider the matter within a few days and from what can be learned favorable action will be taken.

Miss Price Entertained.

Miss Jennie Price entertained a number of friends at a party on Saturday evening. About forty guests were present and an enjoyable time was had.

SOME GOWNS SEEN AT MRS. FISKE'S SHOW

Mrs. Flora Annie Steel, the well-known English novelist, expresses her opinion of dress as the "canker of womanhood which has sapped the sanity of society women," to which A. L. Humphreys replies that "Mrs. Steel is an advocate of frumps. Frumps, like the poor, we always have with us, but fortunately they are in the minority."

No frumps were there in the capacity audience that saw Mrs. Fiske in "Salvation Nell" at the Plainfield theatre Saturday night. The patrons were largely representative of society in this city, as well as nearby towns.

Mrs. T. J. Mumford wore a black gown with vest of white lace and Miss Holly, who accompanied her, was gowned in light blue silk net with cloth of silver facings on the skirt and repeated on the top of the bodice with embroidery in pale blue and white lace.

Mrs. William Connor's gown, entraine, was of soft finish black silk. The high neck bodice was trimmed with duchesse lace and tucked net.

Miss Charlotte Finch's gown was covered with a long cape of white cloth beautifully embroidered.

Mrs. William McIntosh wore a gown of silk tissue, narrow black and white stripe with pipings of lav*endar on the skirt and broader bands* of it combined with lace on the bodice. Miss Ethel McIntosh wore a simple empire gown of pale blue self-striped gauze trimmed with very little gold braid.

Mrs. E. T. Wilson's gown was of novelty self-striped silk in ashes of violets.

Miss Mabel Hooley wore under a long coat of white fur a peplunia chiffon cloth gown weighted with broad bands of black satin.

Mrs. George L. Babcock wore a gown of light blue with a sheen of gold. The bodice was finished with yoke and sleeves of white lace. Her wrap was of cora colored satin with deep collar of sable.

Mrs. George P. Mellick was gowned in amethyst figured satin.

Mrs. John Bushnell had on a simply made gown of black silk dotted with pale blue.

Mrs. J. L. Watson wore a black satin gown with a touch of rose pink at the lower edge of the square yoke of white, and below the pink a large motif of lace. Mrs. Watson wore under a full length sealskin coat a lingerie gown of white silk batiste.

Mrs. James Blake was gowned in smoke grey with white lace and embroidered bands of the same shade.

Mrs. J. S. Martin wore a princess gown of black satin. The front panel of the skirt was embroidered in gold and a little of the gold repeated at the top of the panel below the small yoke.

Mrs. W. L. C. Glenney wore a golden brown messaline satin, entraine, trimmed with cream lace.

Mrs. J. Hartley Mellick's gown was black with touches of pale blue and pink.

Mrs. A. B. Probasco's black gown was tipped by a yoke of cloth of gold embroidered in lilac and finished with tiny folds of lilac satin. Miss Dagma, her sister, wore a gown of old blue French voile.

FOREIGN CHILDREN SEEN IN STEREOPTICON VIEWS

Nothing of greater interest has ever been shown in stereopticon views anywhere than those thrown on the screen in the Congregational *church Sunday. They were photo*graphs of children from parts of the world in which Congregational missionaries are at work and they included the offspring of parents in Mimpie, Spain, Austria, Macedonia, Turkey, Greece, Africa, Ceylon, India, the Philippines, China, Japan and other places.

Rev. Mr. Goodrich interested a large audience in his descriptive story of the way in which these children are reached and through the children the parents. The great advancement in the civilization of these foreign people is apparently to come through the efforts of missionaries and their ultimate Christianization will be wrought through the children who are taught to the western methods of teaching.

Mr. Goodrich said that in India alone there are twenty million more children than the entire population of the United States, but although the task is a large one, eventually they will all come to have a knowledge of the Saviour.

The different types of faces, exhibiting their special characteristics afforded the congregation amusement as well as instruction and some of the illustrations of Christian and non-Christian types showed by comparison the better condition of the former. The stereopticon was operated by Thomas Hylan and was splendidly done.

The seniors and juniors held a dance in the High School auditorium on Saturday night. The affair was a great success and many were there. In the middle of the evening the classes held a banquet in the gym. The dance cards were in the shape of valentines and the whole affair was very unique.

ASBURY PARK OBSERVES SUNDAY CLOSING LAWS

Mayor T. Frank Appleby enforced the old Sunday Blue Laws Sunday at Asbury Park, and there was not a cigar store, drug store, or any of the many Italian fruit stores open for business. All the stores were ordered to do business in the morning, but when the city fire bells rang the noon hour every shop closed and pulled down its curtains. Yesterday afternoon printed placards were put in the windows bearing this inscription: "Closed during the silly season." The cards bear as ornament a stern looking policeman and, in an upper corner, a couple of sweethearts with the inscription: "What are the wild waves saying?"

And it's all on account of politics, people say, though why nobody knows was the Mayor's words. Tell. Notices that they must close their shops at noon yesterday and stay closed for the rest of the day were served on druggists, the proprietors of fruit stores, and restaurant men by the Mayor's secretary. The druggists were allowed to stay open for the sale of drugs only, but the pharmacists got together yesterday morning and determined that such restriction was unjust, and they announced they would not open at all.

The Mayor seems particularly opposed to a Sunday cigar; that is, a Sunday cigar purchased after noon. His instructions to the police were to close all cigar stores, prevent the sale of tobacco and cigars in restaurants after noon, close all the fruit stores after 12 o'clock and prevent the sale of anything but drugs at the pharmacies.

Similar orders were given a week ago, but Thomas J. Winckler, President of the Common Council, told the proprietors the Mayor could not enforce half a law and to keep open. And they did. This angered the Mayor, and he gave orders to the police again Saturday to enforce the closing order. No arrests were made last Sunday.

When the orders went out again yesterday business men decided to let the Mayor have his way and see how his people like it. With the postoffice and stores closed, there was little for them in the afternoon or evening to purchase stamps and souvenir post cards.

MISS HILL THE BRIDE OF GEORGE N. GILES

Announcement was made today of the marriage of Miss Iola B. Hill, daughter of Mrs. Charles Hill, of Dunellen, and George N. Giles, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. N. Giles, Of West Front street, this city. The cere*mony, which took place Sunday* at Trenton, was a surprise to the relatives and friends of the couple, who were not given an intimation of the event.

The couple was married by Rev. Alfred Wagg, of Trenton, district superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal church. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Giles returned to Plainfield and introduced themselves to their friends and relatives, announcing the marriage. They will reside here until spring. Mr. Giles is in the employ of the Taylor Provision Company, of Trenton.

ILLUSTRATED ADDRESS ON "PILGRIM'S PROGRESS"

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, gave the first of a series of illustrated gospel talks at the church Sunday night on Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress." They will be continued for three Sunday nights, when he hopes to complete the story. There was a large congregation and all thoroughly enjoyed the first part of the talk, which included the journey of "Pilgrim" from "Den to Wicket Gate."

The pictures were especially good, while the talk by Dr. Chambliss was a delightful one, holding the closest attention of all. There are many people in the city who are familiar with the story and last night's talk only helped to refresh their minds. The lantern was operated by Augustus Searing in a very satisfactory manner.

P. H. S. Entertainment.

The school carried out its new custom on Friday afternoon and had an entertainment in the auditorium. Games were played and Riffert and Doane gave a Dutch sketch, entitled "Neillie, or why do the birds fly south." Their singing was first-class and the jokes very clever. The idea of this Friday afternoon entertainment has proved such a success that it will be carried out on every Friday.

Charles L. Lewis, instructor of music in the public schools of this city, delivered an entertaining lecture at the Bordentown Military Institute, Friday night, on "What I Saw in Panama," the lecture being illustrated with more than one hundred beautiful views of the Isthmus, showing what Uncle Sam has done and is doing anent the Panama Canal, an engineering feat that interests the world.

BANQUET OF MEN'S CLUB

Rev. Dr. Iglehart Speaks at First Presbyterian Church Dinner.

F. O. DUNNING TOASTMASTER.

Washington and Lincoln the Theme of Chief Speaker—Seventy Attended the Banquet.

Comparing Washington and Lincoln, two great heroes of their time, Rev. Dr. F. C. Iglehart, of New York, former pastor of the Central M. E. church, Newark, as well as other large churches throughout the country, made an interesting address last night at the banquet given by the Men's Club of the First Presbyterian church. It was "ladies' night," and the first time that the club has entertained the women at a similar affair. There were about seventy guests.

An excellent dinner was served, young men of the church acting as waiters. Just prior to the address of the evening, F. C. Iglehart, Jr., formerly baritone of the church choir, sang two numbers, accompanied by Clifford A. Braider on the piano. Mr. Iglehart was given a hearty reception.

Dr. Iglehart, who is now at the head of the Anti-Saloon League work of New York State, as well as a writer of note, is an earnest and convincing speaker, and his remarks last night were full of patriotism, as he portrayed the characteristics of Washington and Lincoln, an appropriate subject for the day.

Dr. Iglehart remarked that while Washington had been dead about ten years when Lincoln was born and that the two heroes were dissimilar in many ways, especially their environment, there were many things about the two men that were similar.

By way of contrast he said that Washington's father left a rich estate while Lincoln was a poor boy and a poor man. He said that at the time of Washington's inaugural he was considered one of the richest men in the country. He wore silk stockings, fine linen, etc., while Lincoln wore the cheapest clothing and had a hard struggle to get along. Until a man he wore deer skin clothes, was ill at ease in polite society, while Washington represented the other extreme. In the opinion of the speaker Washington and Lincoln were typical of the good and great of the country.

"Both were farmers," said Dr. Iglehart, "hayseeds, if you chose. Both were officers in the army and fought the Indians and both were elected twice to the Presidency of the United States. There is no doubt but that Lincoln studied Washington's life and emulated him to a large extent. Almost every great man has had a good mother. Washington's mother was a beautiful and good woman, and he was always loyal to his mother. The same can be said of Lincoln. We know that when his mother died he walked a distance of fifty miles to get a minister to preach a funeral sermon, and the latter could not do so until a year later, owing to the distance and other duties.

"Garfield kissed his mother on the day of his inauguration, saying to her, 'Mother you have brought me to this.' McKinley showed the same affection for his mother, while Lincoln said 'all that I am I owe to my mother.' The mothers of America have made our commonwealth."

Dr. Iglehart then spoke briefly concerning the prophetic instinct as exemplified in both Washington and Lincoln, showing how in their youth they seemed to feel and know that some day they would lead the nation. He referred to the strong Christian character of the men, and gave unmistakable evidence that both were strong believers in God and served Him.

The speaker also related several interesting stories about Lincoln, showing what a strong man he was. He quoted Judge Hawle, of Illinois, to show that it was Lincoln who first suggested his candidacy for the Presidency, and how the leaders of his party conducted his campaign successfully defeating Seward. He also referred to Lincoln's pure wit, which was lacking in Washington.

At the close of his remarks, Dr. Iglehart was greeted with hearty applause.

F. O. Dunning, as president of the club, presided. He was assisted by Dr. N. W. Currie and Clifford A. Braider in arranging the affair. The young men who acted as waiters were Preston, Arthur and William Dunning, Alvah Dunham, Stryker Hoagland and Wilton Smith. A vote of thanks was given to them for their excellent services.

FINE LECTURE—RECITAL

Ovide Musin Entertains and Interests a Large Audience in P.H.S. Auditorium.

TRIUMPH FOR MR. McINTYRE.

Miss Florence Austin Also Wins Plaudits for Splendid Playing—History of Violin Shown.

At the beginning of his very interesting and instructive lecture-recital in the High School auditorium last night Ovide Musin, the Belgian virtuoso quoted a fable in which the point was shown to be that the true artist will make it his ambition to excel in one thing, be the master of one single profession or art. He also told his large audience that there were several schools in which the art of violin playing was taught, but that there were only two kinds of players, those who play well and those who do not.

The program was made up of selections from the best masters and interest added by the stereopticon views of the men who have made the world look up to them as wonders with the most human musical instrument of all including Paganini and Ole Bull. The history of the making of the violin, its creation one string first and following on through the various stages of its development, were portrayed in the splendid views. The school at Cremona with its production of the Stradivarius and other sweet toned instruments kept the audience enthralled.

No criticism is warranted here of the music actually played, but a few words concerning those who took part will not be out of place. Mr. McIntyre, who accompanied Mr. Musin, received the unequivocal praise of the violinist himself. Mr. McIntyre's work was in keeping with the high standard he has always maintained and he was particularly brilliant in some of the most difficult passages.

Miss Florence Austin, one of Mr. Musin's pupils, added much to the evening's enjoyment, being especially delightful in the duet with Mr. Musin, the last number on the program, the duette for two violins by Godard. Four of Miss Austin's pupils, Misses Deutscher and Tillinghast and Messrs. Silverman and Kahn delighted the audience with several selections from Leonard, Kreutzer and Fiorello.

Without doubt this recital, with its enchanting music and its educational features will long be remembered by those who were fortunate to have heard it. It was given under the patronage of seventy-two women and under the auspices of the Boys' Work Committee and the Women's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A.

J. E. Warner, of Cranford; Herbert Burton, of this city and W. H. Reed, Mrs. Carlo Fenzi and Mrs. Appleton, former members of the company, although the company will not lose its rating until the regular report is made. This was the State and U. S. A. inspection.

The ceremony was performed at the Bricke church, New York, and was witnessed by members of both families.

AGED PRIEST'S FUNERAL

Bishop and Thirty Priests Attend Father Schandel's Obsequies.

MASS AT ST. JOSEPH'S CHURCH.

Dean Cody Preaches the Sermon—Great Crowd at Service—Interment at St. Mary's Cemetery.

St. Joseph's church was thronged this morning when the funeral service of the Rev. John Schandel, the venerable priest who died on Saturday, was conducted. The hour set for the celebration of the solemn high mass was 10:30 o'clock but the edifice was filled by 9:30 o'clock. So large was the crowd of mourners that hundreds were unable to gain admittance and were compelled to stand out doors during the service. Among those were thirty priests of the Trenton and Newark dioceses.

Bishop McFaul was in charge of the obsequies. Father Duckgeishel, of Newark, was the celebrant of the mass, while Father Quinn, of Newark, a Redemptionist, acted as deacon; Father Schwartz, of Stony Hill, was sub-deacon, and Rev. Dr. Griffin, of Trenton, was master of ceremonies. The deacons of honor were Monsignor Kievitz and Father Lyons, both of Freehold; Fathers Lewis and Polycarp, of St. Benedictine's Abbey, of Newark, chanted the mass.

Dean Cody, of Newark, who preached the sermon, spoke eloquently of the dead priest, praising Father Schandel for the many sacrifices he had made in his work for the church.

Presiding at the organ was Mrs. Harry G. DeMeza and the music was directed by James Bailey, the choirmaster. The hymn sung impressively "God Will Judge the Nations."

Following the celebration of the mass the throng outside of the church was given an opportunity of viewing the dead priest as he laid in a solid oak casket in his vestments.

Interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery this afternoon. The bearers were J. B. Eller, Charles Eller, Caspar Fuchs, Thomas Oexner, Edward Oexner and Edward Debby, of Stony Hill, former parishioners of Father Schandel.

CAPT. ALLEN INSPECTS THE LOCAL MILITARY

With only one man absent, Co. K held its annual inspection Monday night at the armory on West Front street, and it was agreed that it was the best in its history. The absentee was Philip Meisner, and papers for court martial proceedings were prepared by Sergeant Keeling. A physician's certificate of illness is accepted as an excuse for absence on this occasion, and it is said that Mr. Meisner was not ill. The penalty in such cases is quite apt to be severe.

Captain Allen, of the 29th Infantry, U. S. A., recently detailed by Governors Island, inspected the company assisted by Col. R. H. Patterson, of Elizabeth, and the guardsmen never showed up better. There were fifty-five men present. The boys were complimented by Major W. B. Marsden, former captain of the company, although the company will not lose its rating until the regular report is made. This was the State and U. S. A. inspection.

After the inspection arrangements were completed for the company's trip to Trenton on Saturday, when the entire Second Regiment will be reviewed by Brigadier General Murray and staff. The company will hold a business meeting Monday night to complete arrangements for the fair in March.

MRS. TRACY LAID TO REST IN HILLSIDE CEMETERY.

Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue church, and Rev. Dr. K. P. Yocum, former pastor of the First Presbyterian church.

The funeral was attended by a large company of friends of the family both from this city and out of town and the floral tributes were many and beautiful. The interment was in Hillside cemetery and the bearers were Charles F. Abbott, L. N. Lovell, John M. Whiton, Samuel Huntington, W. L. C. Glenny and George H. Goddard.

HEBREW WOMEN HOLD ANNUAL MASQUE BALL

About one hundred couples attended and the costumes were grotesque, elaborate, historical and original. Prizes were offered for these and were won by the following: J. Trupin, for a costume representing a Russian prisoner captured the first prize, while the Misses Esther Wolfe and Rose Rosensen carried off the second prize as the Gold Dust twins. The third prize fell to Miss Sadie Leichtentritt for her highly comical costume of the "Teddy Bear Girl."

The judges of the affair were Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel Kapelsohn, Mr. and Mrs. Simon Mirosh and Marcus Silbert. The committee were Mrs. K. Rothberg, Mrs. L. Steigman, Mrs. A. Victorson, Mrs. M. Cohen, Mrs. M. Lipkin and Mrs. F. Miller. Refreshments were served.

REV. MR. SHAW'S VIEWS ON LOCAL OPTION BILL.

Rev. Edwin Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, spoke concerning the anti-saloon campaign Saturday morning, taking for his text, "For the people had a mind to work," Neh. 4:6. He considered and presented the following propositions:

"Drunkenness is a bad thing, a harmful thing and therefore an immoral thing for he who drinks and usually a harmful thing for his family, friends and associates.

"The institution known as the saloon is the chief source of drunkenness and of the other evils which almost always accompany it.

"The organization known as the Anti-Saloon League is the most powerful and efficient foe of the saloon at the present time.

"The great majority of workers and leaders in the league are united in the belief that for the State of New Jersey the most practical, the most effective and the most the best method of work at the present time would be the enactment of a local option law.

"The league has prepared such a measure and it has been introduced in the Legislature.

"If the people of the State have a mind to work this bill may become a law."

The pastor suggested ways and means in which the people could work. At the close of the service the congregation by rising vote approved the Gebhardt-Ridgway Local Option bill and expressed the hope it would become a law.

SUSPENDS SENTENCE ON FOUR WAYFARERS.

Four tramps, three from Bayonne and one from Elizabeth, were corralled Monday midnight riding on a Central Railroad freight going through this city. The hoboes were riding in a box car which they had boarded while the train was standing in the yards at Elizabeth. As it could not be proved that anything had been taken from the car nor that the men had broken the seal in order to get in, Judge William N. Runyon suspended sentence this morning in police court. They were James O'Leary of 138 Avenue E; Neil Toland and Charles Gallagher, of 41 Andrews street, all of Bayonne, and Thomas H. Dean, of 128 First street, Elizabeth.

Somerset County Bill.

Assemblyman W. W. Smalley, of Somerset county, has introduced a bill in the Legislature repealing Chapter 161 of the laws of 1855 relating to the requisite number of years which a lawyer must serve as a counselor before he may become eligible for the position of Judge of the County Court. The law now reads that five years' practice as counselor is necessary. Recently Governor Fort appointed Clarence E. Case to be judge of the Somerset county court, but objections were filed because Mr. Case was not eligible according to law, having served but four years. The bill is intended to obviate the necessity of the five years' service.

Prof. Hamilton to Speak.

The Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield will hold its next regular meeting at the home of Miss Mary Willard, 954 West Seventh street, on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Fans who were present at the Keeler banquet were surprised when they read in the New York newspapers this morning that Willie had been unconditionally released by the New York Americans.

COUNIHAN'S HIPPODROME

Plainfielder Leases New York Ball Park for Amusement Shows.

MARK L. STONE HIS PARTNER.

Also Leases Madison Square Garden Roof for the Same Purpose—Engaging His Talent Abroad.

William J. Counihan, owner of the Plainfield theatre of this city and the Majestic theatre, of Perth Amboy, has entered into an agreement with Frank Farrell, president of the New York American League baseball club whereby the area in ball park will be transformed into an immense stadium. Mr. Counihan's partner in the enterprise is Mark L. Stone and they promise to present one of the greatest out-door amusement parks ever placed before the public.

The ground, entrances and grandstands will be brilliantly illuminated at night and while performances will not be given on days when baseball is being played, it will be open every evening during the season from about May 1. Madison Square Garden has been contracted for by Counihan & Stone where a similar show will be inaugurated at about the same time that the ball park is opened.

The purpose of the new company is to provide everything worth while in novelties and features in out door amusements, including every new thing that Europe has produced. John D. Tippitt, manager of the park circuit, sailed for Europe today in the interests of Counihan & Stone to secure the latest thrillers hippodrome acts and novelties. It is purposed to open the new enterprise on Decoration Day simultaneously with the Garden and the firm has every encouragement to enter the field of popular forms of amusement at prices which the people can afford to pay.

Mr. Counihan leased the two theatres, the Plainfield and Majestic, to F. F. Proctor, Sr., and Harry S. Sanderson about six months ago, and since that time has been engaged in perfecting the plans for this hippodrome.

HOPE CHAPEL SUPPER AND ENTERTAINMENT

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society and the William N. Runyon Bible class association, of Hope chapel, a Martha Washington supper was given at the chapel, last night. More than one hundred and fifty people patronized the affair. The decorations consisted of red and white bunting and numerous American flags.

The William N. Runyon class Association had a special table, covers being laid for thirty members and guests. The guests were Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, Rev. and Mrs. L. R. Howard, G. Herbert Condict, John Leal and Judge William N. Runyon. The class and others present had the pleasure of listening to an address by Dr. Zelie on "Throwing up the Position."

Judge Runyon was persuaded to go to the piano and he rendered a number of songs in his inimitable "Runyonesqueu" way. In addition to the supper there was a sale of aprons, fancy needlework candy and cake. Those in charge were:

Aprons, Mrs. Thomas Hendry, Mrs. James Herron, Mrs. William Gray and Mrs. Samuel Cratsley; cake, Mrs. W. S. Terry and Mrs. Charles Vincent; candies, Mrs. Laura Hangiter and Miss Mary N. Mortimer; needlework, Mrs. Charles Hughes and Mrs. W. H. Cook; in the kitchen Mrs. Robert Hangiteh was in charge, assisted by Mrs. Cora Eckert, Mrs. James Penny, Mrs. Charles Graves, Mrs. William Jones, Mrs Fred J. Wharton and Mrs. James Herron. These were the waitresses:

Mrs. F. A. Weber, Mrs. George Leighs, Mrs. Walter Bradford, Mrs. James Perry, Mrs. Gertrude Ritchie, Mrs. Charles Hughes, Mrs. M. W. Clark Mrs. Samuel Cratsley, Mrs. David Gordon and Mrs. Harry Keen. Mrs. Donald McInnis was in charge of ice cream tickets. Financially and socially the affair was a great success, and it will be made an annual event.

MISS MARY P. GATES AND EDWARD HANRAHAN P. H. S.'s BEST SPEAKERS.

ALUMNI HELD THE CONTEST.

William C. Hubbard Re-elected President of Association—Dance Follows Entertainment.

Miss Mary Pauline Gates, a member of the freshman class, and Edward Hanrahan, a sophomore, won the honors in the prize speaking contest for pupils of the Plainfield High School at the annual meeting of the Alumni Association held in the auditorium last night. Each received a ten dollar gold piece. Four boys and four girls took part in the contest, which was the feature of the association meeting. The judges were Samuel St. John McCutchen, Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie and Miss Emelyn Hartridge, and the awards were made by Dr. Zelie.

Miss Gates' selection was "At the Box Office," and her rendition showed careful study and a thorough appreciation of the subject which was numerous. Mr. Hanrahan gave "Anthony's Funeral Oration," and he entered well into the spirit of the classic speech. Miss Alice E. Mehl gave "Cy Pringle's Detective Experience," Miss Arline Brown, "The Higher Culture in Dixie;" Miss Frances K. P. Newell, "The Swan Song;" Frank Cullen, "The Victor of Metaugo;" J. Wilbur Tovell, "The True Greatness of a Nation;" and Roy E. Titsworth, "The Black Horse and His Rider." Each won merited applause from the large gathering of school alumni.

William C. Hubbard, '84, presided at the meeting, and the reports of Franklin S. Smith, '80, the secretary-treasurer, and heads of the various committees showed the organization to be a flourishing one. A fund of $100 has been tendered from the association treasury to a young alumnus for the partial defrayment of college expenses. The annual election resulted in the choice of the same officers: Mr. Hubbard as president, Charles B. Morse, '95, as vice-president, and Mr. Smith as secretary-treasurer. A large executive committee was named. Miss Margaret Longstreth, 1910, was chosen as alumni editor for The Oracle, the school paper, and a complete alumni department will be a feature of future issues. Copies of a special alumni number of the school paper were at the school last night.

Following the business session, during which plans for co-operation with the undergraduates and educational aid for alumni were discussed, came informal dancing, which continued until 1 o'clock. Music was by Suhr's orchestra. A feature was the serving of supper in the gymnasium. Benjamin Evans catered and the arrangements caused much favorable comment. The committee in charge of the affair was headed by Charles B. Morse, and included Miss Anna L. Runyon, '05; Miss Inez Tolles, '05; Ralph S. Titsworth, '93; and Theodore O. Gavett, '05.

CIVIL WAR VETERANS SURPRISE A COMRADE.

I. L. McVoy, of 305 East Second street, was surprised on Monday night upon his return from the meeting f the G. A. R. to find the house filled with friends and relatives who had come to help him celebrate his sixty-third birthday. The rooms were handsomely decorated in pink and a bouquet of sixty-three pink carnations, Mr. McVoy's favorite flower, decorated the table.

When the G. A. R. men marched in in a body the surprise was complete. There were thirty of Mr. McVoy's comrades in line and they made the evening a pleasant one for their host. The surprise was engineered by Mrs. McVoy and was complete. The evening was spent in music and singing of patriotic songs, in which the whole company of sixty people joined heartily. Mr. McVoy received several handsome presents. Guests were present from New York, Newark, Jersey City, Westfild and Brooklyn. Those who assisted Mrs. McVoy in receiving were Mrs. Arthur Morrison, of New York; Mrs. William Addis and Mrs. John Folk.

Grant Boos' Party.

FANS DINED "WEE WILLIE"

A Silver Loving Cup Was Presented by Local Admirers to Keeler.

JUDGE RUNYON TOASTMASTER.

Samuel St. John McCutchen, Arthur Irwin and Many Others Respond to Toasts—Songs a Feature.

"Wee Willie" Keeler was toasted and lauded to the skies at the banquet given in his honor at Hotel Iroquois on Monday night. The dinner was a big success for Keeler is the magnet fr all of the fans of the old Crescent days. "Wee Willie" rejoiced a big crowd as he stepped to the plate in the midst of the festivities and was presented with a silver loving cup by City Judge William N. Runyon, who acted as toastmaster.

The guest of honor never had a reputation as a dinner speaker, but he accepted the gift in well chosen words and at the close of his remarks he was obliged to face another volley of cheers. Keeler told the fans that it was in this city that he signed his first contract for Tom Keller. Willie also confessed that the occasion was the first banquet at which he was ever a guest of honor.

The dining room was elaborately decorated for the occasion. In addition to a profusion of national flags and bunting, the side walls were adorned with the 7 M. C. A. and Clinton Avenue Baseball championship pennants. The walls were also adorned with bats knotted with red ribbons.

With Judge Runyon as toastmaster the other speakers were Samuel St. John McCutchen, George O. Stevens, Bogert Conklin, A. E. Keaney, John J. Kenney, Joseph F. Norton, sporting editor of the Newark Evening News, Arthur Irwin, scout of the New York Americans, John A. Gaffney and Walter L. Hatfield.

Among the guests was Billy Lee, of Scotch Plains, who covered third base for the old Y. M. C. A. Crescents. Willie Deegan, also of Scotch Plains, who formerly pitched for Plainfield, was also present. John Harkins, Somerville's old pitching star, was also there.

Mr. McCutchen, a former Crescent player and also a former captain of Yale, in his address gave an interesting talk in which he referred to the game as played under the old rules. Mr. McCutchen declared that the fielding in the pioneer days of the sprt he believed was as fast as now played, but with the game has advanced because of the advantages in new rules and player's equipments such as gives and masks. He thought that the greatest difference, in comparisn with his days on the diamond, lies in the base running. It was true when he played, and the present day game does not show as well in this department.

Mr. McCutchen also described the old time rule which only permitted a pitcher to serve the ball from the waist. He remembered seeing one pitcher with his fingers badly crippled because of constant contact with the ground. This style of pitching, he believed, was almost as effective as the pitching nowadays. Mr. McCutchen also related the experiences of the Yale nine when curve pitching came in vogue.

Arthur Irwin in his address paid a high tribute to Keeler. He praised "Wee Willie" as one of the fairest and best ball players who donned a uniform.

A distinctive feature of the banquet was the musical prgram, which consisted of topical songs written by William Bedell, of Newark. The singing was in charge of Johnny Campbell.

Souvenirs in the form of miniature balls and mitts, the gift of A. J. Reach & Company, Philadelphia, were distributed.

The committee in charge of the affair was George Johnson, John G. McLaughlin, George E. Firstbrook, John J. Keaney, William Cass, Ernest Doerfler and V. W. Nash, Jr.

Two verses of a song which made a hit are as follows:

"Judge Runyon thought he had a right to mingle with the Saints
"He said 'I've heped the honest folks and taken the complaints;'
"But Peter said, 'You can't come in, because Id have you know
"You sent so many folks to jail, you'd better go below."

"'Oh, here's another,' Peter cried, as Sam McCutchen came,
"'He looks t me as if he used to know about the game.'
"'I guess I do,' old Sam replied, 'Let Irwin drp his tail.
"'A hundred years ago I used to play the game for Yale.'"

HE DEFENDS THE LORDS

Oliver H. G. Leigh, English Journalist, on British Upper House.

FAMOUS MEN ARE MEMBERS.

An Institution Much Misunderstood In This Country the Subject of His Discourse.

Oliver H. G. Leigh, journalist and reviewer, of international reputation, lectured before the pupils of the High School Thursday having for his subject the House of Lords, a topic which has been much misunderstood. Mr. Leigh injected a quantity of humor into his talk and the lecture was received with plaudits for the speaker.

Mr. Leigh's main line of talk was to satisfy the hearers that the House of Lords exists as a house of second thoughts, the Commons being the initiative and always liable to be impetuous and possibly unfair, so that the law of nature of taking second thought took the shape of an institution, a parallel to our Senate and Supreme Court. It is the Supreme Court of Appeal of England and as such must qualify itself by including in its members those who represent every calling, professional and otherwise, which makes it a house of experts on every question liable to come up in the Supreme Court.

Coming to the personnel of the House, which numbers some six hundred men Mr. Leigh showed how it is continually renovated. He then gave sketches of many of the members whose fame is world wide and who have been called to the House of Lords, first as a reward for their services in literature, science, art, industries and invention, and in fact, almost every branch of knowledge. Second, because the House of Lords desired to honor itself by including men eminent in all departments of life.

Among the examples he mentioned Lord Kelvin, a poor young man, tutor in Glasgow University, whose discoveries and inventions in perfecting the mariner's compass, telegraphy etc., take the lead of all other inventions in preventing shipwreck and in advancing human progress. The inventor of listerine was called to the House of Lords as was the inventor of antiseptic surgery. A man who is the son of a lord and who will be in the House of Lords some day, spent a fortune or two in inventing the steam turbine, which has revolutionized the motive power of steamships—C. A. Parsons (Earl of Ross).

Lord Montague, of Beaulieu, a close friend of King Edward VII, was the first man to champion the auto motor against its enemies. He edits "The Car," and is an all around expert. Lord Raleigh is one of the foremost mathematicians and physicists. He has recently discovered a new element in the air called argon. He also was a great dairy farmer and milk producer. Others equally prominent in this great house were named and their usefulness to humanity shown. All of which goes to prove that some conceptions of the ancient body are faulty, and those who heard the lecture were glad to have been enlightened.

PRIEST PAYS TRIBUTE TO PETER FLYNN SR.

Father Bogan, as celebrant of the solemn requiem mass at the funeral service of Peter Flynn, Sr., in St. Mary's church, paid an eloquent tribute to the dead man. Mr. Flynn, Father Bogan declared, was a typical Christian. He referred to the fact that when the deceased came to Plainfield sixty years ago there was no Catholic church here. Mr. Flynn, he said, displayed his devoutness to the faith and to the church by regularly attending services on Sundays at Stoney Hill, Elizabeth and New Brunswick, which were the nearest places to Plainfield that Catholic churches were established at that time. Assisting Father Bogan in the mass were Fathers Scolia and Hogan.

There were many beautiful floral tributes on the bier and a large number of friends in attendance at the service. Interment was made at St. Mary's cemetery, the bearers being Edward Lynch, Clarence Waldron, Patrick McDonough, Michael Callahan, Joseph McCue and Michael O'Keefe.

LITERARY

The dozen articles in Recreation for this month are illustrated by over a hundred photographs taken especially for the purpose. One of the most striking of these is a full page half-tone of a four-horse logging team coming down a precipitous mountain road in front of a load of giant spruce logs. This is one of the nineteen photographs used to illustrate Leonard Dewitt Sherman's "Logging in the White Mountains," an article of unusual interest dealing with life at a lumber camp at which 5,000,000 feet of spruce are cut yearly.

Among the well-known writers who contribute short fiction to The Red Book Magazine for February, are noted the names of Edward Hungerford, Mary Imlay Taylor, George Hyde Preston, Alden Arthur Knipe, Hulbert Footner, James O. Curwood, Edith Rickert, Clara E. Laughlin and Susan Glaspell.

Everybody's Magazine, as its readers know, is in no sense a partisan publication. But partisanship is not involved in the Insurgent movement. Representative government is at stake. For this controlling reason, Everybody's does indorse, without qualification, the bolt taken from the ranks of the Insurgents of the Senate and the House. These men have risen above party. They have faithfully and courageously represented the people at large in Congress.

The February issue of Physical Culture, in addition to a number of interesting contributions, contains not a few articles from the pen of its editor, Bernarr Macfadden. Among the latter a series of exercises for "Straightening Round Shoulders" with a supplement in colors, is particularly worthy of mention.

Commander Robert E. Peary gives in the February number of Hampton's Magazine his own solution to a riddle that has puzzled explorers and scientists for the past few centuries. That riddle is the origin of the Eskimos. The Commander in this second installment of his wonderfully interesting story of the Discovery of the North Pole, reveals the importance of well-trained Eskimos in polar travel, and he incidentally gives a remarkable sketch of the Greenland tribe that he himself employed.

"The Insurgent movement is not a mere hasty revolt within a single party; it is in reality wider than either party, and it is disrupting both," writes Ray Stannard Baker in the February American Magazine under the title, "Is the Republican Party Breaking Up?" His article is the most *vital comment on the con*gressional fight that has yet been written. In the course of it, he tells just what the Insurgent movement is, how deep it goes and what are the true reasons for it.

COMPLAINT AGAINST THIS FOOTBALL CLUB.

Richard Gilbert, who occupies apartments in the building with the Plainfield Association Football Club, was a complainant against the club in the city court Saturday. Mr. Gilbert declared that the late hours and boisterous conduct of the members constituted the greatest nuisance he has ever been up against and his life is being made miserable.

Mr. Gilbert says that rest at night is impossible and that during a recent illness he would have committed suicide from the pain he suffered from tortured nerves had he had the means at hand to kill himself with. Judge Runyon, who heard the complaint, said he would have the matter investigated and would try to have the nuisance abated.

Brutal Cop Suspended.

Harold Serrell, of Myrtle avenue, complaining of an act of brutality by a mounted policeman in New York in attacking a driver named John Ruth, in New York on Thursday, whose truck bumped into the officer's horse, caused the policeman to be brought to Mayor Gaynor's office in New York yesterday by Acting Commissioner Bruere. The policeman was suspended and ordered on trial.

Names Committees.

The executive committee of the Dunellen Board of Trade met at the home of the secretary, F. D. Baerman, of Mountainview avenue, on Thursday night and the following committees were appointed: Membership, Newton Apgar, J. W. Gangloff, Fred Haynes, N. S. Nicholaysen, J. B. Elck, Alden Wilmont and A. S. Coriell, Jr.; real estate—John R. Campbell, Dr. T. H. Platt, Charles A. Coriell, Sr., W. M. H. Harding, Isaac J. Stites and Harry Cook; civic—Dr. T. J. Hogan, Edward Maurer, A. H. Burdick, L. W. Schneider and Edward Pennock; manufacturers and industries—Edward Maurer, John P. Feeney, Walter Runyon; railroad and transportation—W. S. Frederick, George W. Day and A. J. Hamley; advertising and publicity—Former Mayor Harry Swackhamer, John Federman and W. P. Deering.

New Soprano Soloist.

Miss DeCant, of Oss*i*nitg, N. Y., one of several candidates for the position of soprano soloist at the First Presbyterian church, will succeed Miss Grant, the present soloist, on April 1. She sang at the local church two weeks ago and made a favorable impression.

REFUGE FOR HOMELESS MOVES TO UNIONVILLE

The Self Masters' Association, which had been located for about eighteen months on the Rahway river bank, in lower Rahway, is moving to Unionville, near Elizabeth. The property recently purchased at Rahway will be left on the hands of Broker Crawford, who, it is understood, was the financial backer of the enterprise and in whose name the property stands. Mr. and Mrs. Crawford will continue to reside there.

The objects of the association, as outlined by the president, Andress S. Floyd, were to establish a refuge for homeless boys and men, which Mr. Floyd calls his "family."

Up to yesterday the "family" was located on a nine-acre tract. The institution is supported by voluntary contributions and sale of articles manufactured at the home. Mr. Floyd also adds to the income by giving lectures on "My Family of Prodigal Sons."

The trustees are given as William A. Clark, of North Plainfield; Alexander C. Litterst, of the Metuchen National Bank, and Charles J. Fisk, of Plainfield.

The cause of the removal from Rahway is alleged to be the gift to the home of a $30,000 farm at Union by C. H. Ingersoll. The farm contains fifty acres of land, which Mr. Floyd will put into use at once for raising everything a farm can produce. Mrs. Jennie Matthews, of Newark, will go with Mr. Floyd, as will also the secretary, Miss Lillian Blanche Kline, as matron.

Rev. E. J. Craft, formerly of Bridgeport, an uncle of Miss Kline, is to be the house chaplain according to present plans.

It is proposed to establish half a dozen of these homes. Howard Colby, a magazine writer, expects to locate there with the "family." It is reported.

Frank Smith is one of the largest supporters of the affair, according to Miss Kline. At the new place, it is proposed to open a tea room, with dairy products, for autoists. C. H. Ingersoll and Howard C. Colby are on the advisory board. The directors' list shows names as follows: Rev. Ernest Judson, of Bridgeport, Conn.; Elston M. French, Plainfield; Mrs. George H. Campbell, Plainfield; Mrs. J. C. Field, Round Brook; S. R. Farrington, Perth Amboy.

SUFFERED A STROKE AND DIED IN AN HOUR

Mrs. James F. Brown, who for the past eight years has been a resident of this city, died suddenly at 11 Thursday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac R. Giles, 32 Fairview avenue, where she lived with her only niece, Mrs. Thomas Cuming. She was in her usual good health yesterday and during the early part of last evening. Just as she was about to retire at 10 o'clock she was stricken with apoplexy and died within an hour.

Mrs. Brown, whose maiden name was Miss Amelia A. Runyon, was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dunham Runyon, of Stelton, near which place she was born sixty-seven years ago. She was married to Rev. Dr. James F. Brown many years ago. He was a prominent Baptist clergyman. He held several important pastorates in this State, and was pastor of the Stelton Baptist church, succeeding Dr. Searles. His first charge after his marriage was at Tunkhannock, Pa. He was also pastor of the Baptist church at Mullica Hill, this State.

Mrs. Brown was a faithful and devoted member of the First Baptist church and personally interested in all its activities. She was a regular attendant at the church services and the meetings of the home and foreign missionary societies. Of her means she was a liberal contributor.

She was a woman of culture, education and a delightful conversationalist, and had a host of friends who admired her for her many excellent qualities.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. GEORGE WELLBROCK.

The funeral services of Mrs. George Wellbrock were held at her late home, 926 West Fourth street, at 2:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon, and were largely attended especially by young people, with whom Mrs. Wellbrock was popular. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiated, and he paid deserving tribute to the admirable character of the young woman.

There was a large and beautiful display of floral tributes from relatives and friends. The burial was in Hillside Cemetery and the pallbearers were George Wilson, William Firstbrook, Robert and William Skinner, William VanSickle and Elias Harris, the last named of Cranford.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement is announced of Ida M. Lawrence, daughter of Mrs. C. G. Lawrence, of Saltcoats, Scotland, to William Ruddy, formerly of Greenwich, Conn. For several years Miss Lawrence and Mr. Ruddy have been residing in this city.

TALKED ON PATRIOTISM

Congregational Church Men Spoke Entertainingly at a Supper.

FOR BLDG. FUND'S BENEFIT.

Joseph E. Morse, E. L. Suffern, James W. MacClymont and Alexander Millar Made Addresses.

Stormy weather failed to prevent a large attendance at the dinner served at the Congregational church Women's Association. Some two Thursday under the auspices of the hundred and fifty dinners were served to hungry people and some fine speeches afterwards served to aid digestion. The room was handsomely decorated with draped American flags, the music was of a patriotic nature as were the speeches, and the supper was aptly named.

Rev. Mr. Goodrich introduced the speakers and said that the spirit of loyalty and patriotism was shown by the splendid attendance at the supper and augured well for future enlargement of the church for the benefit of which the supper was held. Joseph E. Morse, a veteran of the Civil War, was the first speaker, and told of some of the motives which actuated the youth of the land in the beginning of the struggle between the North and South. He told of the organization known as the "Wideawakes," who when mustered into the service were quickly removed from the "awkard squads" because of their superior ability in drills. A good many of the young men enlisted for the excitement, but back of this was the love of country which is true patriotism. But, he said, the women, the mothers were the true patriots of that time. They were the ones to keep brave hearts and murmurless lips when their sons left for the front. He also told how his brother, while still under sixteen years of age and lacking in height managed to pass the examinations by stuffing a big pair of boots with cotton to raise him up to five feet four.

E. L. Suffern told in an amusing way the experiences of the young men who enlisted in the navy, and James W. McClymont gave an exhortation to the young men as to their political duties. Alexander Millar spoke briefly on the "Patriotism of the Foreign-born," and read a report that he was not eligible to membership in the noblest organization in the country—the G. A. R. He said that nine of the signers of the Declaration of Independence were foreigners, and laid claim to some of our most eminent warriors, scholars and jurists as Scotchmen, among whom he included John Paul Jones, Sam Houston, Stonewall Jackson and *U. S. Grant. Mr. Millar's first im*pression of the flag was received at a small Vermont village and he has been on bended knee unceasingly ever since. All the speakers were applauded to the echo.

A trio composed of M. C. VanArsdale, W. G. Smith and Harry Blimm rendered some patriotic selections. The committee having the supper in charge was composed of Mrs. J. W. Beekman, chairman; Mrs. A. A. Weeks, Mrs. C. R. Rice, Mrs. T. W. VanAlstyne, Mrs. Dr. Hubbard, Miss Jessie McIntosh, Mrs. T. E. Rhoads and Mrs. Thomas Hylan.

Pastor Goodrich after telling of the objects of the church enlargement fund which is to provide more room for the activities of the growing church, said that while no subscriptions had actually been taken tentative amounts had been mentioned as being possibilities equalling slightly over eight thousand dollars for the new work. No definite plans for the improvement have been presented to the membership, but it is within the bound of possibilities that the work may be concluded this summer.

HACK ORDINANCE PASSED

Amendment to Follow at Meeting of Feb. 24—Double Fare from 11 o'Clock.

COMMITTEE OF HACKMEN GLAD.

Fifty Cents for One Passenger and Twenty-five Cents for Each Additional One Carried.

The amended hack ordinance was passed on third and final reading at a special meeting of the Common Council, Friday, but until the laws and ordinance committee practically agreed to offer an amendment at the next meeting, February 24, changing two important features.

One of these features is that the hour for charging a double fare be made 11 instead of 12 o'clock, as proposed, and the other is that for carrying passengers from within to points without the city, a charge of fifty cents shall be made for one passenger and twenty-five cents for each additional passenger. According to the amended ordinance a charge of fifty cents is made for one passenger and twenty-five cents "for additional passengers," which might mean one or more.

These matters were taken up with the committee prior to the meeting by President William Jeffery, of the Board of Trade, and John Lynch, William Callahan and Henry Hanson, representing the hackmen. The committee extended every courtesy to Mr. Jeffery and the hackmen and agreed to offer an amendment at the next meeting making the desired changes.

In other respects the hackmen are well satisfied with the ordinance. Among the important provisions are that the hackmen are required to place their licensed number conspicuously on the lamps on their carriages, to be not less than one inch and a half in and must have the censed person shall wear a badge with the license number while engaged in the business. The badges are to be furnished by the city.

Each hackman must also display a card or plate in his carriage bearing the license number, also the rates of fare and other necessary information.

The boundaries meaning "within the city limits" are extended to include Woodland, Evergreen, Hillside avenues, in the East End; Randolph road on the south and Grant avenue in the West End. This was a bone of contention among the hackmen, but they were willing to waive this feature, provided the other changes were made.

GRACE EPISCOPAL CHOIR RENDERED A CANTATA

The cantata sung by the male choir of Grace Episcopal Friday night was one of the most impressive musical services ever presented to a *Plainfield congregation. The solem*nity of the dramatic portions of the music was pronounced and at times the big audience was moved to tears as the journey of the Saviour was depicted in melody. This was particularly so with the rendition of the baritone solos sung so effectively by B. B. Pettigrew, and the tenor recitative by William Tallamy.

The work on the tympani by William Stobbe, of Philadelphia, aided materially in the interpretation of Maunder's beautiful work. Masters Arthur Raymond, soprano and Raymond Manley, contralto also held their respective parts splendidly. The chorus work of the entire choir was a revelation to those who had never heard it sing before. S. Frederick Smith, the organist, received many congratulatory words at the conclusion of the service

BIG TIMBER, THIS.

John Cole and his son, Charles Cole, claim to have felled the largest tree ever cut in the vicinity of Port Murray section. It was grown on the Hunterdon county side of the Musconetcong Creek, and contained over four thousand feet of lumber.

The tree was forty-six feet tall and measured four feet, six inches across the butt. Eleven ties were cut from the limbs. John Cole and Lorenzo Smith also claim to have taken the biggest log to the mill ever drawn in that section. It had lain in a swamp and a number of teams driven and refused to haul it. The log was twelve and one-half feet long and made more than twelve hundred feet of lumber.

The two men were six hours in loading the log and getting it to the mill. Four horses were required to draw the log and the sleds stuck in the mud several times.

WILL INSTALL FIRE WHISTLE ON SPICER FACTORY

The Common Council at a special meeting, Friday, accepted the offer of the Spicer Manufacturing Company, to locate and maintain the fire alarm whistle on its factory on Madison avenue. This action was taken after the proposition was made in a communication to the Council by the Spicer company. The cost to the city will be $515 a year, and in addition it will have to stand the expense of erecting a tower at the Spicer plant for the whistle and removing the whistle to its new location. The city will also have to assume all responsibility, the company alone agreeing to furnish steam for blowing the alarm.

After the communication was received from the Spicer company, Mr. Taylor, of the fire and building committee, moved that it be referred with power, which was done. The committee was then empowered to go ahead and make a contract and have the corporation counsel prepare the necessary papers in the matter. It will cost between $250 and $300 to put the whistle in position.

Mr. Taylor said by way of explanation that his committee had received bids from the Gamewell Fire Alarm Company for installing a tapper on a local church bell; also tappers in the homes of the call-men, and he concluded that the offer of the Spicer Company was the most advantageous.

TRADE BOARD HEAD FOR EQUAL SUFFRAGE

In the course of his remarks at the Board of Trade class meeting on Thursday night, President William Jeffery said that he "hoped that the men's clubs of the various churches of the city would find it convenient to attend the class meetings and join in the discussion; that so far as possibly affords, it would be wise for the class to consider taking up for discussion the entire political structure; becoming familiar with the requirements of each office and the workings of the several departments of the city. The subject of taxation could be done into thoroughly, also city improvements. A better understanding of the municipal government could not fail to result other than in a keener appreciation of those who 'work for the city without receiving compensation and the necessity of indicting level-headed business men to enter municipal politics; all of which would bring about the re-establishment of civic honor, which now seems to be so far away from American municipal government, that one can hardly see it.

"The wide entry into municipal government would bring this about quicker than anything else. It does not worry me about the women voting for county, State and Federal offices, because the whole structure of American government rests upon municipalities or should so rest, and the present tendency, particularly in the State of New Jersey, of commission government, a-la George III, is royalistic, un-American, foolish and unnecessary; when the American people get so that they cannot run their municipalities without having the Mayor and officials superintended by the governor and commissions, they better get down to real business and send over to England and have King Edward send over a real Royal commission. The 'advisory Service Commission for municipalities like Plainfield, is grotesque, humorous and not to be taken at all seriously."

Mr. Jeffery announced that the following men had joined the class: Alexander Gilbert, A. J. Gavett, J. W. Gavett, Harry C. Van Emburgh, F. A. Dunham, J. Hervey Doane, A. E. Williams, E. B. Davis, Dr. A. F. Van Horn, W. G. Debele, John Manley, Frank Linke, Gustave Meisner, Jeremiah Van Winkle, Jacob Sachar, Harry Poinberg, George M. Christian, J. Fred MacDonald, J. V. Vanderhoef, F. A. Buttenhofer, A. S. Herr, Herman Schwed, Thad Doane, Jr., A. C. Pleydel, William Berrell, F. E. Bodin, S. J. Place, Frank C. Shaffer, Dr. H. V. Hubbard and Hugh B. Sweeney.

HOW "SHOW ME" STARTED.

Colonel John Martin at Chicago, has taken issue with ex-Governor Joseph W. Folk, of Missouri, and has defended the slogan "Show me" as indicative of the spirit of his native State. He even went farther, and modestly confessed having invented the phrase. At a meeting of the executive committee of the Missouri Society at Chicago, Colonel Martin said:

"I was in New York many years ago with friends, many of them Democratic politicians, and we got to telling stories, each man bragging about the glories of his native State. I scoffed at their yarns, and said: 'I'm from Missouri. You've got to show me.' The expression was taken up and has become famous."

FIRE WHISTLE IS 67 YEARS OLD

Robert L. Pierce, New Market's veteran constable, observed his sixty-seventh birthday Thursday by entertaining a few relatives at supper. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Nelson B. Giles, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Pierce, H. C. Pierce and family, of New Brunswick, and Mrs. C. C. Pierce, of Brooklyn. During the day and evening Mr. Pierce was the recipient of numerous congratulations.

Mr. Pierce is one of the best known constables in New Jersey having served in the Middlesex county court since 1869. Mr. Pierce is of New York State stock, being a native of Claverack, Columbia county. His father, Abraham Pierce, was born at the corner of Cortland street and Broadway and lived to be 79 years of age.

In addition to having a remarkable court record Constable Pierce also enjoys a glorious record made in the Civil War, in which his services was marked by extreme bravery. When the Rebellion broke out he enlisted in the 56th New York Volunteers and the color bearer for General Sedgwick.

Constable Pierce while fighting for the Union smelled the smoke and heard the bullets whistle in twenty-two battles. During three and a half years of service he was twice shot while carrying the colors. Once he was in the thick of the hardest fights is gleaned from the records of his regiment, as there were only sixty-five survivors at the end of the war out of 1,200 who enlisted.

After the War Mr. Pierce removed to New Market and in 1868 he married Miss Mary Dunn, who is still living. At the time of his marriage the latter's father, David C. Dunn, was a member of the New Jersey Legislature.

ATHLETE FRACTURES HIS COLLARBONE IN DIVE

Chauncey Murphey, one of the star athletes of the Y. M. C. A. squad, fractured his collarbone while he smashed a record in the running plunge diving contest in the Y. M. C. A. Thursday. Murphey stead of hitting the mat came in contact with the floor with heavy force and many of the onlookers declare that the athlete had a miraculous escape from breaking his neck.

Immediately after the accident Murphey was taken to the office of Dr. Albert Pittis on East Front street and later to his home. Dr. Pittis diagnosed the injury not to be serious but Murphey will be unable to resume competition in athletics for some months.

In making the dive Murphey posted a mark of 14 feet 4 inches, wiping out the record of 12 feet 3½ inches made by Carl Steiner last year. In last night's contest Fritts was second, followed by Vall, Berigman and Sampson.

Murphey tops the list in the championships with a total of 712 points and Fritts is second with 691 points. Murphey was looked upon as the probable winner of the title but it is likely that the accident will present an opportunity for Fritts to jump in the lead.

A PAST CHANCELLOR'S JEWEL FOR ROTHBERG

Unity Lodge, No. 102, Knights of Pythias, at its meeting Thursday, received one candidate, and received the reports of the Grand Lodge representatives, James D. Anderson and J. H. VanWinkle, who told of the doings at the annual session held at Trenton, Wednesday and Thursday.

In the good and welfare, Past Chancellor Horace J. Martin, Sr., presented Chancellor Commander Samuel Rothberg with a handsome past chancellors' jewel, in accordance with a custom of the lodge for twenty-seven years. Mr. Martin said some complimentary things about Mr. Rothberg, and the latter expressed his appreciation in a suitable gift. The entertainment committee was empowered to make arrangements for celebrating the twenty-seventh anniversary of Unity Lodge, which occurs on March 17.

THE DRAPED TOGA.

There has come about a fashion of wearing an immensely long and wide draped garment over one's smart afternoon frock. It is of the color of the gown and is edged with a wide band of fur or a deep fringe.

It is thrown around the body somewhat a a toreador throws on his scarf, only in a more classic fashion. It creeps down over the right hip, goes across the chest over the left shoulder, across the back and is caught with a buckle at the right hip.

When gracefully done it is exceedingly pretty on a slender figure. It may be of chiffon or gauze. It must be soft and it is prettier when sheer.

NEW JERSEY SCHOOLS BEST

So Said Doctor A. E. Winship in Lecture to 150 School Teachers Yesterday.

NEED NOT FEAR CRITICISM.

Critics of the Public Schools Have Nothing on Which to Base Their Utterances.

"The schools of the State of New Jersey are the best in this country and I can leave the criticism of the educational methods employed in those who know about schools," is what Dr. A. E. Winship told the 150 teachers who gathered in Somerset School Wednesday afternoon.

Dr. Winship is the editor of The Educational Review, published in effete Boston, therefore the feather for the cap of New Jersey's educational institutions emanates from an unquestionably high source.

The Dr. has been visiting and becoming familiar with public schools all over the United States for the past twenty-five years, and spoke from a knowledge gained by experience when he said he could be listened and encouraged his audience. He was introduced by Professor Krebs and at once launched into his subject.

Dr. Winship said that no one ought to think that he was trying to make them believe that the schools are as good as they ought to be, for they are not. But, then, there is nothing perfect in this world but death. Times come when crises appear, a public ensues when confidence is shaken as well as school life as in the financial world, but those who are doing their best to educate the youth of the land need never fear criticism because that usually comes from those whose familiarity with the subject is altogether questionable. He cited several instances, some of them humorous to a degree, in which he proved conclusively that a fellow ought never to criticise anything unless he has facts upon which to base an argument.

A railroad man who has no children to send to school, or who never visited a school except to attend it as a boy, has no more right to criticize public school systems than a teacher has to [illegible] the railroad to account for unavoidable delays. "But," he said, "criticism is in the air and we all enjoy it when it's on the other fellow. The other day I heard a man say that the discovery of the North Pole was going to cost the taxpayers $5,000,000, because all the school books would have to be changed. He had told this to others and they had not questioned him. I asked if he thought it would change the spelling book, the arithmetic and the grammar, and after a moment's thought he replied, 'you're making a fool of me!' No, I replied, you did that yourself."

Dr. Winship referred to William Allen White's article in the American Magazine of last August which criticised and said that although Mr. White's statements were made with all good intention and founded on statistics, the statistics themselves were wrong. Mr. White, in the article referred to, stated that one-half of all the money paid out in this country for school buildings was wasted; there were, he said, 24,000,000 children of school age and only 12,000,000 attended. The trouble with Mr. White's argument was that he got the school ages mixed, and neglected to take into account for the difference in the number of pupils.

The lecturer proved to the satisfaction of everybody that the schools of today are far superior to those of a quarter of a century past, they are just as far ahead as the automobile is in advance of a wheelbarrow for pleasure. He told about the hue and cry made by the Cleveland, Ohio, newspapers because mental arithmetic was not taught, as they thought, in a practical way. These calamity howlers were quelled by a few special efforts made by the superintendent of schools in that city. He referred also to the compulsory education laws, the great improvements in the south and west. Told how the pupils of a school in Page county, Iowa, were driven after terms at agricultural colleges; gave readings from some schoolbooks of the middle of the last century including "geography" by Harriet Beecher Stowe, which to the educated mind of today seemed pathetic, and ended his lecture by advising the teachers to remember that they can afford to ignore the criticisms of the so-called critics, as their work is upon a plane highly removed from the former systems of education.

The doctor's concluding words were heartily applauded and many of the teachers took the opportunity of shaking hands with the eminent educator.

"What I long to hear," said the man with a Prince Albert coat and a turndown collar, "is some of the fervid eloquence that used to echo through the halls of legislation."

"Well," rejoined Senator Sorghum, "you ought to drop into the cloakroom some day and hear us statesmen discussing the weather."—Washington Star.

REV. MR. MOONEY'S PLACE FOR ANOTHER

The congregation of the South Orange M. E. church, of which Rev. George Mooney, formerly of this city, is pastor, has extended a call to Rev. Perry H. Murdick, now of Woodbridge, and will try to secure his appointment to that church at the coming session of the Newark Conference. So far as known this is the first instance of a call being extended in the conference to a new charge.

Mr. Murdick's first charge in the conference was Epworth church, Elizabeth, 1902-05. He was then pastor of the M. E. church at Mendham, '06-'07, going from there to Woodbridge, where he is now located.

Mr. Mooney, who was formerly pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, has had a longer career in the conference, as follows: 1894-'95, Northwest Nebraska Conference, missionary to Lander, Wyoming; '96, Newark Conference, Hilton, half-year; '96-'99, Caldwell; 1900-'03, Mendham; '04-'05, Plainfield, Monroe Avenue; '06-'10, South Orange. It has not been learned whether Mr. Mooney has received a call to another charge or not, but as he is one of the strongest men in the conference, he will doubtless be appointed to an important charge.

FORMER COUNCILMAN T. W. POWELL IS DEAD

Thomas Wilfred Powell, a former borough councilman, died at his home at 23 Duer street last night after a lingering affliction. Mr. Powell was 62 years of age and a native of Burlington, this State. From 1888 to 1900 he resided on Grandview avenue and since that time he has also been a resident of New York and Meriden, Conn., in which city he also resided for a time. The funeral service and interment will take place at Burlington on Saturday.

Surviving him are a wife and two children, Dr. Grace R. Powell, of the borough, and Charles D. Powell, of Dubois, Pa. The latter is secretary of the Dubois Y. M. C. A.

WOODHULL AND MARTIN IN DRY GOODS BUSINESS

Floyd T. Woodhull and Edson C. Martin, formerly conducting a dry goods business on East Front street, under the firm name of Woodhull & Martin, but who retired from this business a couple of years ago, have decided to re-engage in the dry goods business again and will open a store at 118 Broad street, Elizabeth. The firm has purchased from Frederick B. Bassett his business at the above address and extensive improvements are planned which will be completed during the summer months.

This sale is the first development in connection with the reconstruction and extension by the Kean estate of the building at 118 Broad street, which is to be transformed into a modern department store structure to take in the driveway adjoining the Bassett store on the north and the site of the present Sauer shoe store.

Woodhull & Martin will occupy the present Bassett store section while the remainder will be occupied for construction and at its completion they will use the entire ground floor and both floors and the basement of the two-story rear extension which is to carry the building back to a depth of 150 feet. It is estimated that the firm will have 14,500 feet of floor space in its new store.

The new building will have a number of features new to store patrons in Elizabeth, among them being elevators, and the whole structure is designed to prove a striking addition to Elizabeth's uptown business district.

The firm of Woodhull & Martin conducted a dry goods business at Morristown, previous to locating in this city. When the firm came here it purchased the business formerly owned by Seely Edsall and which was then located in the Babcock building. It remained there until the fire which destroyed a large part of the building. Then the firm purchased a plot of ground on East Front street and erected a modern structure which is known as the Woodhull & Martin building.

The firm two years ago sold out to a stock company, which continued the business under the firm name of the Woodhull & Martin Company. Both Mr. Woodhull and Mr. Martin have been successful in their business ventures, having acquired considerable real estate in the city and vicinity; also erecting a building for apartments and store adjoining their business block on East Front street.

Bittle at its head, then performed the three degrees on twenty-nine candidates, bringing the total membership up to eighty-six. Forty-seven whose names are on the charter list will probably be initiated at the next meeting. The degree team from Newark received a rising vote of thanks for their excellent work.

National Councilor Samuel A. Charles, of Hoboken, who is a member of Star Council, No. 49, of that city, made an address in which he congratulated warmly on the auspicious circumstances under which the lodge is entering on its career. He applauded the efforts which the members are putting forth to build up and maintain the interest in the organization, and he presented the new lodge with a pair of gavels.

After the final business of the evening light refreshments and entertainment committee served refreshments and the company dispersed with the feeling that Royal No. 77 is going to be a power among fraternal organizations in this city.

HE DIES IN THE CITY WHICH HE HAD NAMED

Alfred Speer, a lifelong resident of Passaic, who was prominently identified with the city's early history, died there yesterday in his 87th year.

Mr. Speer was born in Belleville, November 2, 1822. He was apprenticed to a cabinetmaker in Newark, and began business in Passaic when a young man. He is a descendant of Puritans and Kingsland families who were among the early settlers in New Jersey. From cabinetmaking he turned to invention, and later to winemaking, becoming the first extensive producer of American wines.

His greatest invention was a traveling sidewalk, the first practical device for rapid transit in New York. His device, of which he had a working model, was favorably received, and had the support of Peter Cooper, Horace Greeley and others. An act authorizing its use in Manhattan passed two successive Legislatures, those of 1873 and 1874, but was each time vetoed by Governor John A. Dix.

After the defeat of his project Mr. Speer turned his attention to his wine business, which he carried on successfully until his death. He was founder and editor of Passaic's first newspaper, the Weekly Item, which he continued to publish until a few years ago. It is to Mr. Speer that Passaic owes its name. The settlement was originally known as Acquackenonk, but the name was unwieldly, and when the town began to grow it gave much trouble to men in business who had goods shipped to them. Mr. Speer suggested the name Passaic, and took the matter up with the postoffice department at Washington. To complete his work he painted a huge sign bearing the name "Passaic," which he nailed late one night to the Erie Railroad station.

Mr. Speer leaves seven children. They are Miss Althea Speer, William Henry Speer, Morgan Speer.

ASK FORT TO HELP IN WHITE SLAVE WAR

An appeal to Governor Fort for aid in effecting the enactment of laws that will prevent the so-called "white slave" people from carrying on operations in New Jersey has been made by the suffragists of this State. It is the first move in the war upon this menace declared at the last meeting of the executive committee of the New Jersey Women's Suffrage Association.

The letter, which is signed by Mrs. Louisa E. Hector, of Arlington, chairman of the legislative committee of the association, sets forth resolutions citing the result of investigations into the existence and form of the menace.

The letter sent the Governor follows:

"The legislative committee of the New Jersey Women's Suffrage Association respectfully ask your assistance in the passage of a law covering the following resolutions adopted unanimously by the association at a meeting on January 28:

"Whereas, The treaty ratified by the United States Senate March 1, 1905, provided for the universal action of the powers toward the repression of the white slave traffic, has been declared by Daniel J. Keefe, commissioner of immigration, to be "practically worthless;" and,

"Whereas, The said commissioner general, in his report transmitted to President Taft, has stated that an agent of the Immigration Bureau has visited England, Austria, Belgium, France, Germany, Russia and Roumania, and as a result of his investigations has arrived at the conclusion that there is no such thing as an international "white slave" organization, and that he found the large cities infested with women of "immoral tendencies" living in poverty and squalor, eager to embrace the opportunity of coming to this country, and thus becoming a menace to the moral welfare of the community; and,

"Whereas, Recent investigations have disclosed that in certain large cities of the United States there are secret organizations fostering a similar condition of evil in our own country through the white slave traffic.

"Resolved, That the Women's Suffrage Association of New Jersey most respectfully ask your assistance in passing a law sufficiently drastic to deal with the aforesaid conditions in prohibiting the white slave traffic in the State of New Jersey."

At the meeting of the Suffragists' executive committee it was declared that if New York was successful in driving out this element a migration to this State would follow. This apprehension resulted in the decision to take immediate action.

THE TACTFUL WOMAN.

A woman of tact is the one who feels that the story told to hurt our feelings is essentially bad form and inconsiderate of the feelings of others.

A woman of tact is the woman who is courteous to old people, who laughs with the young and who makes herself agreeable to all women in all conditions of life.

A woman of tact is the one who makes her good-morning a pleasant greeting, her visit a bright spot in the day, and her good-bye a hope that she may come again.

A woman of tact is one who does not gauge people by their clothes or their riches, but who condemns bad manners.

A woman of tact is one whose love for humanity is second only in her life's devotion, and whose watchword is unselfishness.

PYTHIANS DEMAND ACTION

Call Upon Legislature to Remedy Existing Conditions of Commitments.

GRAND CHANCELLOR'S IDEA.

Declares Present Laws Do Not Sufficiently Protect Rights of Individuals—Committees Named.

The Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias in annual session Thursday, passed a resolution unanimously, calling upon the Legislature to take steps at once to remedy existing conditions relative to the commitment of persons to insane hospitals in New Jersey. It was declared that the present laws do not sufficiently protect the constitutional right of individuals in this regard.

John Ulrich, of this city, a past grand chancellor of the organization, brought the matter to the attention of the lodge. He declared that commitments to asylums are made largely on ex-parte opinions and without due process of law. He pointed out that members of the Knights of Pythias, bound together by ties of friendship, charity and benevolence, are subject to the loss of their constitutional rights in this way. He urged it to be the duty of the order to protect those of its members, as well as for the benefit of the entire State to urge the changing of such conditions.

The matter will be brought to the attention of the Legislature by a committee of Pythians to be appointed for the purpose.

The chief business of the concluding day's session was the installation of the newly-elected officers and addresses by prominent members of the order. The officers were installed by Acting Supreme Chancellor Frank Shanley, of Jersey City, assisted by John Ulrich; DeWitt C. Cobb, supreme grand prelate, of Bridgeton; W. E. Hitchcock, William B. Trenchard, of Bridgeton, and William Cowgill, of Paulsboro.

The convention adjourned to meet in Trenton February 15 and 16, 1911. Grand Chancellor A. Lewis Drucker named these committees just before adjournment:

Law and Supervision—George H. Peurstine, Paterson; Benjamin G. Paul, Paulsboro; Robert D. Weir, Jersey City.

Grand Chancellor's Report—Max Salinsky, Bayonne; Albert Grace, Millville; Raymond Anderson, High Bridge.

DUNELLENITES WOULD LIKE CONSOLIDATION

Property owners of Dunellen and New Market are beginning to agitate for consolidation with a view of getting more improvements and a bigger return for their taxes and the matter is likely to be an important factor in the elections next fall.

At the present time a majority of the citizens of Dunellen, and some in New Market, between Centre street and the Lehigh Valley tracks, are in favor of the annexation of that section of New Market to Dunellen. On the other hand a number of prominent property holders of New Market do not entertain the belief that the village would reap any benefits if consolidated with Dunellen.

John Y. Rupel, a substantial citizen of New Market, however, comes out with a brand new suggestion. He advocates the consolidation of Dunellen and New Market with Plainfield. In an interview with a Daily Press reporter yesterday Mr. Rupel said:

"I am confident if New Market, South Plainfield and Dunellen could be joined with Plainfield it would result in the development of thousands of acres of land in Piscataway township and result in great good to all municipalities.

"Under present conditions we are not getting value for the money paid in taxes. All we can show is our schools and they cannot be classed with Plainfield. We are getting no police protection and very little fire protection. By being a part of Plainfield we would enjoy all these benefits. We are sorely in need of police protection but I do not believe we will ever get it under the present system.

"It would do New Market no good to hitch up to Dunellen, what we would like Plainfield to do, is to take New Market in, regardless of the ideas of Dunellen."

CIVIL WAR VETERAN JOINS THE GREAT ARMY

Wesn Fisher, a veteran of the Civil War, ager 72 years, died at his home on Linden avenue Wednesday of diabetic convulsions. Mr. Fisher had been enjoying fair health until Sunday when he was taken ill. He rallied after his first attack and was able to take breakfast with the family on Monday morning but he was seized later in the day.

Mr. Fisher was 72 years of age and was a native of Bucks county Pa. When a young man he removed to Copper Hill, Hunterdon county, where he followed agricultural pursuits for about sixty years. About seven years ago he retired and removed to the borough last June.

During the war of the rebellion Mr. Fisher served as a member of the hospital corps of the 31st New Jersey Volunteers. While in the army he became acquainted with the late Fred Wenzel, of this city, and the friendship thus formed continued until the latter's death a few months ago. Mr. Fisher was a member of Lambert Boeman Post, G. A. R., of Flemington.

He is survived by a wife, two nieces, Miss Ida Hartpence and Mrs. Lemuel Pope, and a nephew, Forrester Hartpence, of this city. The funeral service was held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock and was conducted by the Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First Methodist church.

MR. AND MRS. GILES BADE FAREWELL TO THE FARM

Mr. and Mrs. B. DeWitt Giles, of New Market, entertained about one hundred of their friends Thursday. The affair was a "farewell" to the farm, on which Mr. Giles was born and raised, and has lived all his life. Last fall Mr. Giles sold the land and will vacate the tract on February 24 and thereafter he will live a retired life in a new house recently erected at New Market. The farm was formerly owned by Randall Giles, Mr. Giles' father, and is considered one of the most valuable tracts in Piscataway township.

During the evening piano selections were rendered by the Misses Edith Giles and Iva Dayton; vocal selections by Mrs. Parker Marsh and Miss Loranthia Nelson, and readings by Mrs. Clark. One of the chief features of the gathering was the bounteous repast which the guests enjoyed during the festivities.

POET'S DAUGHTER TO LECTURE FOR CHARITY

Everywhere she has been received with such success and enthusiasm that she was induced to give an additional season. Plainfielders consider themselves fortunate in being able to secure this noted woman. The proceeds of the lecture will be given to the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield. CHAMPIONS SUNDAY LAW

Rev. Dr. F. W. Johnson Tells of Efforts for Sabbath Observance.

DECRIES THE OLWELL BILL.

Washington, N. J., Preacher Explains How Legislature's Committee Acted at Hearing.

"I was never more humiliated in my life than when attending the hearing on the Olwell bill at Trenton, last Monday, said Rev. Dr. F. W. Johnson, of Washington, at the Christian Endeavor mass meeting at the Temple Baptist church, Thursday night. "With several other clergymen of the State, I appeared before four youthful members of the Legislative committee who had the hearing in charge, and throughout the discussion they sat with their feet up on a table, smoking cigarettes, far from being dignified."

Dr. Johnson held the close attention of more than one hundred Endeavorers of the local union as he told of the latest efforts on the part of certain people to desecrate the Sabbath. He said that no matter what action the legislators might take, the Sunday law is a divine law which cannot be repealed. He then quoted Blackstone to the effect that that which is contrary to divine law is not law.

The speaker then referred to the Olwell bill, which is designed to permit baseball on Sunday in this State, and of the hearing at Trenton on Monday when he and other clergymen appeared before the legislative committee. He said that, if enactment of the bill argued that it would mean the closing of the saloon on Sunday in this State, while in his opinion the real purpose would be to permit the baseball managements of New York and Pennsylvania to make a baseball ground of New Jersey and the Sabbath with impunity will not endure very long.

Dr. Johnson is superintendent of the department of Good Citizenship and Sabbath Observance of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union, and in the gathering was the bounteous repast which the guests enjoyed during the festivities.

Dr. Johnson spoke of the encroachment of the liquor interests on the Sabbath, especially in Hudson and Atlantic counties, and quoted the Scriptures to prove that man needs on day in seven for rest and that a State or nation that disregards the Sabbath with impugnity will not endure very long.

Dr. Johnson is superintendent of the department of Good Citizenship and Sabbath Observance of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union, and in the gathering was the bounteous repast which the guests enjoyed during the festivities.

He has addressed a circular letter to all Endeavorers in the State, calling upon them to use their influence to preserve the Sabbath. Dr. Johnson's remarks aroused the greatest enthusiasm among the Endeavorers and all pledged themselves to work harder than ever for the maintenance of a Christian Sabbath.

Clarence L. LaRue, as president of the local union, was in charge of the mass meeting, and the song service was in charge of Wilbur Holmes, followed with a prayer by Rev. J. W. Musson.

During the business session which followed, Theodore Martin, chairman of the audit committee, presented his report, which was accepted and the report of the State convention committee, presented by Charles F. Windham, the secretary. This showed that the committee held twenty-two meetings, after its organization on October 19, 1908. It reported that 662 delegates attended the State gathering in this city.

The total receipts in connection with the convention amounted to $797.70 and the expenditures $722.62, leaving a balance of $75.08. It was voted to appropriate $25 to the United Society of Christian Endeavor, and give $5 to the work of the Lord's Day Alliance. The balance will be kept in the treasury for the present.

Then followed the roll call of the societies. The Temple Baptist church society again received the attendeicy, present. The Warren chapel society was second with only two per cent. difference in attendance. All of the societies in the union with the exception of New Market were represented. The meeting closed with the benediction by Rev. J. M. Musson.

FUR ORNAMENTS.

Fur is creeping into many of our evening schemes, and although Paris has not been in our ears, the women of America have been deliberate in their acceptance of this lovely fashion. Sable and mink are used in narrow stripes, broad bands and tiny motifs. The brown shades of these furs are particularly well adapted to give contrast to pale yellow and pinks.

With the dull blues and violet tints chinchilla is lovely. Its gray harmonizes with these colors in a way dear to the artistic heart, and its softness admits of a variety of treatment.

No matter what the fur, it is cleverly wrought in inserting forms to decorate the dress. Perhaps the most novel and pleasing form is the tiny flat bow of fur, caught in the centre by a peweled buckle or ornament.

NO ACTION ON SEWERS

Mayor Smalley Tells Council Matter Will Come Up in March.

WHY THE SEWERS ARE NEEDED

Will Enhance Value of Property and Will Boom Building, He Declares to Borough Fathers.

The sewer matter did not come up for discussion at the special meeting of the Borough Council Friday night except in a few informal remarks by Mayor Newton E. Smalley. The mayor stated that the required number of signatures to the petitions had not been secured, but that he was confident that everything would be in readiness to proceed at the regular March meeting of the Council.

"Some citizens have refrained from signing the petitions," said the Mayor, "under the fear that there will be an increase in the tax rate. It is true that the taxes will be slightly increased and that also applies whether a sewerage system is established or not. Lack of sewers will bring about other conditions which will have a tendency to boost the taxes.

"With sewers," continued the Mayor, "building conditions will be greatly improved. Instead of small houses being erected, which is now the general rule, home seekers will build larger and more attractive dwellings than are now going up. Sewers are bound to enhance the value of property in the borough and will also be an inducement for a boom in building."

It was expected that a successor to Councilman Charles L. Nichols resigned, would be elected but no action was taken on this matter. Mr. Nichols' resignation was read, accepted with regret, and placed on file. His successor will probably be chosen at the March meeting.

The resignations of Lieutenant William Gash and Otto Rupert, of the fire department, were also received. The appointment of Alfred C. Fritz, as Gaul's successor by Mayor Smalley was also confirmed.

A letter was received from Colonel E. W. Hine, of the Public Service Corporation, informing the Council that the tracks would be put in better condition on upper Somerset street.

On the recommendation of Councilman J. J. Stahl, N. J. Sopus was granted a permit to erect a barn on Somerset street.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY ON ASSAULT CHARGE

Alfred Turman, a colored man, who was wanted by the local police on a charge of assault and battery committed on February 4, on Max Morris, of 419 John street, was captured on Saturday at Bloomfield by Detective Sergeant John Flynn, and arraigned Monday before Judge William Runyon. Turman demanded an immediate hearing and after listening to both sides of the alleged assault Judge Runyon held Turman in the sum of $500 to await the action of the grand jury.

This is not the first time that Turman has been accused of assault, he having several times before John Ord, a bell boy at Truell Hall, on June 9 last. For this offense he was arrested and the hearing of the case was postponed in order to allow both complainant and defendant to bring their witnesses. Turman immediately made himself scarce and the case was never tried. The assault on Morris resulted through the running away of a horse he was driving on West Fourth street on February 4.

Turman stopped the horse and, according to his own story, prevented it running down a woman and child, who were crossing Plainfield avenue. He asked Morris for a quarter for this brave act, but Morris did not have the money. Then Turman did the only thing that occurred to him to do, and slugged Morris on the jaw breaking the bone.

Plainfielder Injured in New York.

Charles Shults, of this city, an employe of Scott's Press Works, was severely injured Saturday night while a passenger on the rear platform of a surface car in Union Square, New York. Another car bumped into the car on which he was standing, and threw him a distance of fifteen feet. He was unconscious for a half hour, but finally succeeded in reaching home. His right leg is severely injured.

Church Sale a Success.

Under the auspices of the altar chapter of the Women's Guild of the Church of the Holy Cross, a successful sale of home-made bread and cake was held at the parish house, Saturday. Miss Ida Davis was chairman of the committee in charge. The women were so much encouraged that they have decided to hold a similar sale every Saturday morning at 11 o'clock for the present.

Plain Field Notes and Queeries

By Druid

As Mayor of New York Judge Gaynor is both winning and earning the hearty goodwill of all good citizens, including those who feared that his impulses might be more than a match for his judgment. He has screwed a bristly broom on the end of his sceptre and wields it with the vigor of an old-time schoolmaster birching his boys. His uncommon common sense is vivified by courage unprecedented in the office he is thus far adorning. Nothing is more sensible than his attitude towards the inglorius fate that has overtaken the Fourth of July in its evil days.

Before the Mayor or not the police are to stop the retail sale of fireworks between June 10 and July 10, the Mayor frankly confesses, "I am as fond of firecrackers now as when I was a boy, nevertheless, if the damage they cause outweighs the pleasure they give I suppose the order should stand. Let us submit the matter to public sentiment, for, as a rule, that ought to govern." Well, sharing this admirable sentiment as I, for one, do, I hope to be pardoned for presuming to raise an insignificent voice on the angelic side. If we have it, of the great public, against the devilish noisy side taken by the small boy and his abettors.

* * *

The glorious Fourth is not by any means the only institution that began in a spirit of pure and noble enthusiasm, but survives in a carnival of riot, meaningless noise, and childish sham we. If we men and women are bidden to commemorate the victory over the oppressor by giving our children spectacular displays that shall impress them anew with patriotic pride in the heroic deeds of the fathers, men of old, I would hail it as a return to the spirit of the original glorious Fourth. We would instantly rise to the true dignity of our opportunity. Our intelligence, and not our inborn prowess, would then control the celebration of a great national event and make it intelligent as well as entertaining and safe to life and limb.

* * *

We pride ourselves on being humane, on having exquisite taste, on our genteel horror of vulgar things and ways. Yet even the best of us, even the ideal Mayor of Gotham the Blest, quiver at the knees, wag our all-the-year-round muscular brains into batter pudding on the cry of the Dog Days beloved of lunatics, and ignominiously surrender our reason and humaneness at the hold-up command of infantry in arms! At their decree we pull down not simply the official landmarks for lost dragon drivers, peddlers and other shockingly common persons to make noises near hospitals, but we work ourselves up into a blend of crazy Indian war dance and whiskeyfied Coney Island Mohawk spree that we may join our darling little angels in shooting dynamite craps to hurry up to heaven our helpless sick and pain-racked neighbors!

* * *

What think the saintly Fathers of our childish caricature of their sublime achievement? We can almost see their sickened smile of contempt, and hear the cutting comments that lash the air into furious billows as they pace the shades of the Elysium we yearly do our worst to blow into the hot end of purgatory. "Has it come to this? We made an uphill war to win for our people a peace so lasting that our posterity would forever loathe every din and smoke puff that might recall the horrors of wholesale bloodshed—but see! Are they our descendants down below here? Have our people gone back to barbarism, or is it only temporary lunacy?"

* * *

Sweet it is for the wisest of us to play the fool to our hearts content, on the right time, in the right place, in a harmless way. Long live April the First, and may it never again be celebrated on July the Fourth. For there is no need of the change. Happily, children are with us in each of the four seasons. Those poor dears, feel the heat of July as much as we do, but the consequences of doubling it on the one day don't always show until too late for us to recall the cause. The hearty artificial heat on nature's heat is an impudent insult to the Sun. He is too much of a gentleman, an artist, and a sensible Good Fellow, to splutter his genial rays on us through Chinese pipes that don't draw, and so took up at him through the dirty smoke and see how he blushes to think that we—who fancy ourselves the smartest he smiles on—can't even do him and the Fathers, and ourselves, the honor to do him and our own dears, but buy them from the heathren Chinese because they come cheap! Cheap and nasty go together, and this is the incense we send up to those we profess to worship!

* * *

No. This will never do. But we won't dream of dropping the observance. There is another glorius Day, which the Sun politely invites us to substitute for the Roasting Fourth. He offers to hide his glowing face behind the veil of cloud, or the cooling screen of snow, on our national Thanksgiving Day. A day that encourages the making of fires and the firing of fireworks. November's chills restore Reason to her throne. Youngsters will be all the merrier for having fireworks in the snow. Mothers will be happier because the gentle innocents will be safer, and fathers will be gladdened *patriots be*cause the fewer hours will consume less cash. By all means, Judge Mayor, save their flare up and their fingers, eyes and noses for the limpy boys; they'll enjoy it tenfold in November. But spare us, Good Lord of Gotham, spare us thy suffering creatures, the undeserved pains, horrors and ridiculousness of a midsummer day's madness.

DR. LONG PASSES AWAY

Prominent Physician Succumbs to Heart Disease, Aged Sixty Years.

WAS HOSPITAL STAFF'S DEAN.

A Resident Here for Thirty-five Years—Funeral Services on Wednesday Morning.

Dr. Monroe Budd Long, the dean of the staff at Muhlenberg Hospital, and one of the oldest physicians in the city, died at 5:30 o'clock Sunday night at his home on Park avenue, from heart trouble. He suffered his first attack a week ago yesterday, and he had several other attacks during the week. Early yesterday afternoon he had another spell, but appeared to feel much better afterward. About 5:30 he was taken with a sinking spell and passed away suddenly and peacefully.

Dr. Long was born at Martinsville, Somerset county, December 16, 1849, and spent his boyhood days at home on a farm. When a young man he took up the study of medicine and surgery at Dr. Fred Cornell's Institute at Somerville. He then completed a course of study at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York. He came to Plainfield in 1875 and associated himself in the practice of medicine and surgery with Dr. John C. Sutphen, who was one of the best known physicians in this section.

Following the death of Dr. Sutphen, Dr. Long continued his practice as well as that of his own and with great success. He was the first physician in Plainfield to perform successfully an operation for appendicitis. He organized the hospital staff and remained its head. He was constantly giving his services, day and night, to relieving the sick, and he was frequently called in consultation by other physicians and surgeons.

Outside of his profession, Dr. Long was not a public man. He was not identified with any lodges, aside from the fact that he was one of the oldest members of the Union County Medical Society, the Plainfield Medical Society and the American Medical Association. Ever since its organization some years ago, he was president of the Union Building and Loan Association.

He was married, December 27, 1877, to Miss Clara S. Goodman, of Newark. She and five children survive as follows: Miss Clara G. Long, Walter L. Long, Miss Agnes L. Long, Miss Edna D. Long and Monroe H. Long.

The funeral service was held from the late residence, 819 Park avenue, Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock.

RETURN FROM TOUR AROUND THE WORLD

Mr. and Mrs. James F. Buckle, who have been making the round-the-world trip, arrived home about 10 Sunday night, feeling well and full of praise concerning their wonderful journey. They returned by the way of San Francisco, stopping off in Montana, to visit their son, who is in Stone & Webster's employ, at the preparatory schools, the academies, and even the students in the lower classes of some of the colleges would make out of these topics if suddenly thrown at them in an examination under civil service rules.

Since there is no place like Plainfield after all and are glad to get home.

Saturday evening the Get-Together Club will give Mr. Buckle a reception.

May Sue Dunellen.

Nathan Guyre, of Dunellen, is confined to his home as a result of injuries received by falling on an icy walk some time ago. James Guyre, his son, in a letter to Mayor Sanford intimates that unless the borough will pay his father's doctor's bills he will bring suit to compel payment. Young Guyre takes the stand that the borough authorities were responsible for the bad condition of the sidewalks during the spell of bad weather.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

No Smoking in Church.

Atlantic City has lost one of its attractions. "The Men's Church" is to be closed. Perhaps it will be recalled that this was a special service from which women were barred and at which the men were permitted to smoke, sip soft drinks, take off their coats in the summer time and make themselves comfortable. In addition to the regular services several "attractions" were occasionally added.

This venture, worked under charge of a young, zealous assistant rector, was not altogether a failure. The services were moderately well attended, but the results were not wholly satisfactory and the congregation and the church officers were divided on the question of giving it financial support. Finally the vestry and wardens notified the assistant that the church ritual could not be used at his services. The bishop concurred in this action and this broke up the "Men's Church" scheme.

The end of this particular experiment has not come sooner than was predicted. When begun it attracted wide attention and caused mixed comment, but the prevailing sentiment was that if vaudeville and smokers had become necessary to the successful work of the church, the latter had fallen far from its original strength and purpose.—Newark News.

The Telephone Investigation.

Frank I. Sommer's argument before the municipal corporation committee of the Assembly yesterday for a legislative investigation of the telephone monopoly in this State that has established extravagant rates for the service is masterly presentation from the viewpoint of a lawyer, as well as of a citizen. Mr. Sommer showed that through telephone lines have by law unlimited powers as to routes and location, which legal power local telephone companies lack, placing them at the mercy of the through companies. This discrimination in itself is calculated to promote monopoly. Companies upon which are conferred this exceptional right are in duty bound to be decently fair to the public. The New York Telegraph and Telephone Company is unfair, oppressive and dishonest in its charges. It is in the power of the Legislature to regulate these charges, and it is also the Legislature's duty to the people. All that is now asked is an investigation to ascertain the facts. The attorney-general's studies show that his office is not equipped with the facilities for an investigation and would need an extra appropriation for the purpose. The difficulty thus raised can be easily surmounted. It would be extraordinary indeed if an inquiry necessary for the public welfare should be abandoned on the plea that the legal department of the State did not have the means to prosecute it or aid it. The Legislature can attend to that.—Newark Star.

Could You Stand It?

The following is a list of questions in general history submitted to the children in the ninth grade of a public school in an adjacent State. The schools there are very much like those in our own State, in fact, ours are a trifle "better," if anything. The children who were expected to answer them were between the ages of thirteen and fifteen. The most of them failed, it is said, but there were *some who actually passed the exam*ination. Here are the questions:

1. Discuss the antiquity of man.
2. Give an account in detail of the early forms of writing.
3. Give a detailed account of the Aryan race.
4. Give a brief history of the Assyrians.
5. Give an account of science among the Egyptians.
6. Discuss commerce among the Phoenicians.
7. Why did the Phoenicians establish colonies? And why?
8. Discuss the important customs of the Babylonians.
9. How does science establish the location of the home of the first parents?
10. Give a description of Egypt, the condition of the soil, etc.

It would be interesting to see what a tangle nine mature men out of ten would make in attempting to give reasonably intelligent responses to these questions. It might not be altogether uninteresting to note what the principals of the high schools, the preparatory schools, the academies, and even the students in the lower classes of some of the colleges would make out of these topics if suddenly thrown at them in an examination under civil service rules.

Since there is no place like Plainfield after all and are glad to get home.

She is survived by her husband, J. Evarts Tracy, three sons and five daughters. The sons are: Howard C. and Lawrence of this city, and William E., of Telluride, Colorado. The daughters, Misses Emily B. and Edith H., of New York city; Mary E., of Yokohama, Japan, now at home on a vacation from her missionary work; Mrs. Melvin Mix, of Muncie, Indiana, and Dr. Margaret Tracy, a professor in the Women's Medical College, of Philadelphia, Pa.

The funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock 1321 Prospect avenue, and was conducted by Rev. Dr. John Sherdan Zelie and Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham. The interment was in Hillside cemetery. The pall bearers were Charles F. Abbott, L. N. Lovell, John M. Whiton, Samuel Huntington, W. L. C. Glenny and George H. Goddard.

Mrs. Tracy was born at Roxbury, Mass., in 1839, and was the daughter of Rev. Dr. David Green. Her mother was Mary Evarts, a sister of William M. Evarts, the great statesman. She came to Plainfield in 1874 and lived here until two years ago, when she removed to New York. Mrs. Tracy was a member of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, and was prominently identified with every enterprise in the city conducted *in the interests of humanity. YOUNG WOMAN DIES ON WAY TO CHURCH

Miss Cora Marion Coyle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Coyle of Waynewood Park, died suddenly in the home of Randolph Marsh, 310 Plainfield avenue, of heart trouble, following an attack of faintness which seized her as she was passing the Marsh home. Miss Coyle was in company with her sister on the way to attend the 9:30 mass in St. Mary's church when stricken. Father B. M. Keegan, who had just started his sermon, was summoned from his pulpit, but the young woman was beyond human aid when he arrived on the sad scene.

Dr. Marcus Clawson, closely followed by City Physician C. F. Lufburrow, could do nothing to restore to consciousness the young woman, as she expired five minutes after being laid on the lounge in the Marsh house. Miss Coyle was apparently in the best of health when she left her home for the church and had just reached the corner of Plainfield avenue and Fourth street when she was seized. She was in her twenty-fifth year.

She is survived besides her parents by three sisters, Mrs. Percival Martin, Jeane and Sadie Coyle, and two brothers, Charles and William, all of this city.

Miss Coyle enjoyed the friendship of a large number of friends in this city who were greatly shocked and grieved to learn of her untimely demise.

A sad circumstance connected with the death of Miss Coyle came in the nature of telegram to Mr. Coyle Sunday after the death of his daughter. Mr. Coyle on arriving at his home found a telegram announcing the death of his sister, Mrs. Mary Maloney, at Easton, Pa. Mrs. Maloney had been ill for some time.

The annual dinner of the Union County Bar Association was held at the Hotel Brevoort, Fifth avenue and Eighth street, New York. James C. Connolly, of Elizabeth, president of the association, was toastmaster. Among the speakers was S. S. Swackhamer, whose toast was "Influence."

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

James E. Martine Airs His Views at Meeting of Dutch Arms.

PUBLIC SHOULD OWN WATER.

Public Conveniences and Necessities Should Belong to the Public, He Says.

The speaker at the meeting of the Dutch Arms, the men's club of Trinity Reformed church, Friday, was James E. Martine, whose topic included three sub-divisions—Municipal Ownership, State Control and Conservation of National Resources. In his opening sentence Mr Martine declared that the closer the relations between the church and politics became, the closer the people would come to a realization of the ideal for which they are striving. Meaning that with the co-operation of the intellects of the men who can guide a municipality in a spiritual way would be helpful in guiding the spiritually inclined in a political way so that the ends of justice to the people at large would be better conserved.

The congestion in our cities, he said, requires sanitation, safety and a control of the utilities and without these there is no chance for any care for the future of the nation to be taken. The big problem of the day is that of monopoly All our utilities are in the grasp of a few men. Private monopoly is detrimental to mankind and I urge you young men to face the issue squarely and do your honest duty to get back for the people that which God gave them.

"If you would but devote the two or three hours which conscience demands of you for a proper attention to your primaries, you would not at this moment be under the grinding heel of the private monopolies which are crushing out every material life. The legislatures of the country are today thronged with the lobbyists, whose sole object is to see that the monopolists do not lose a single opportunity to gain their nefarious ends. In order to be run in the interests of the public the utilities should be owned by the public. Are not the utilities of Plainfield in the hands of the politicians' Should not the water we drink belong to us because it is a gift from the God we worship? Of course, yest is the answer to both questions, but how are we to acquire right to say so and get what belongs to us" There is but one answer and that is take them away from the monopolists through legislation, and in order to get this legislation we must elect honest men to work and represent us, and in order to get these honest men we must all of us have a hand in the politics of our cities and towns.

"You say that a politician is an unclean thing. But that is not so. Politics are clean until some scoundrel besmirches them. You can all help in this work. Plainfield must have a municipal water plant because the Hon. John Kean needs no more money now. What he has added to his patrimony by squeezing it out of the people should keep him very well for the remainder of his life.

*"The greatest efforts are constant*ly being made to divert the God-given waters of this State to another, and the lobbyists at Trenton are moving heaven and earth to encompass this end. These things should not be. We must see to it as well as I do. Rahway has its own water plant as has Madison, and their way is good enough for us to copy. They have the necessary system that makes it possible for their sinking funds to care for the purchase price as well as the maintenance of their plants. What is to hinder Plainfield from profiting in the same way? If the furnishing of water to the city of Plainfield pays the water company why won't it pay Plainfield to furnish its own supply? These are pertinent questions and are asked of the citizens to remember that they are Freemen and entitled to a voice in the disposition of their franchises and to be above a mere vascillating atom on the face of the broad land.

In speaking of the conservation of our forests, coal lands and other resources he referred particularly to the great fine coal lands in Alaska, which tow big companies are worrying the Federal government to give then an interest in. These resources belong to the men, women and children of the land and not to the one-eighth of the plutocrats who own seven-eighths of the entire wealth of the country.

Mr. Martine was cheered at the end of his speech and recived the approval of his audience by a rising vote of thanks.

Mr. Martine interjected a suggestion in a pause in his discourse, taking the subject of a new name for the West End school. Why not call it the efferson, he asked. Thomas Jefferson was the first to inaugurate the system of public school teaching, and it was he who besides becoming the father of the Declaration of Independence, was also the father of our schools.

He also declared that the lawyers of the State, with a few exceptions, were subsidized by the corporations, as is proven by the craven acts of Robert McCarter, who while a legislator, defeaded the people and the State in preventing the lobbyists from killing the Batcaellor bill, which prevents any body of men or corporation from shipping or taking water, either surface or subterranean from New Jersey to another State, and who immediately after became the most insistent pleader before the Legislature for just this infernal scheme.

At the business meeting, which followed a ten minutes devotional meeting led by Fred E. Smith, the committees for the ensuing year were named, as follows:

Entertainment, Charles M. Dolliver, chairman; J. C. Field, H. C. Van Emburgh, E. F. Sheppard and W. A. Woodruff. Vestibule, W. F. Williams, J. E. Dunn, B. F. Cordell, Edward Honeyman and Charles Bettcher. Refreshment, Henry P. Sender, Russell Doeringer, Charles Doeringer, Sidney Frazer, C. Rittenhouse and C. F. Mehlenbeck. Devotional J. L. Dolliver, Rev. Dr. E. G. Read and F. E. Smith. Visitation, A. H. Willett, M. G. Mantz, A. Swalm and George W. Saums.

CRAIG A. MARSH WINS A BIG LEGAL VICTORY

Somerville has just had a legal skirmish with the Somerville Water Company, in which the latter was worsted. The concern started to lay a big water main through the borough and the police force under the direction of the mayor stopped the work and arrested the workmen. The concern began suit in Chancery for injunction, claiming that it had a charter right to lay the main. The borough retained Craig A. Marsh as special counsel to assist the borough counsel, James L. Griggs.

Alvah A. Clark and Clarence E. Case, as counsel for the Water Company, moved for a preliminary injunction to restrain the borough from interfering with the laying of the main. The argument was heard by Vice-Chancellor Walker. Besides oral argument at Trenton, two voluminous briefs on both sides were submitted, and the vice-chancellor held the case under consideration until Saturday, when he announced his conclusions in favor of the borough. He denied the preliminary injunction on two of the points made and authorities cited for the ruling in a memorandum opinion concluding as follows:

"In this case the water company claims the unrestricted right to make the improvements mentioned without the consent of the borough and in spite of its resistence. Upon this preliminary inquiry I am unwilling to say that that right exists, but, on the contrary I rather incline to the opinion that the company's rights in the premises are subject to the municipal control of the public control of its streets and highways by way of police regulation. The question of complainant's righ here involved is at least one of doubt and the rule is settled that where the complainant's right is doubtful a preliminary injunction may not be issued. I am therefore constrained to the conclusion that the prayer for a preliminary injunction must be denied."

PISCATAWAY TOWNSHIP MEN GUESTS OF W. A. CODDINGTON.

Judge William A. Coddington, counsel for Piscataway township, gave a banquet at Brantingham's clubhouse in South Plainfield Saturday night to "past and present Piscataway township officeholders" in celebration of the tenth anniversary of the Judge's tenure of office.

Fourteen guests besides the Judge sat down to a sumptuous repast. Post prandial eloquence was let loose and most of the guests took part. Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, Councilman Herbert Runyon, Herbert H. Bonn and Harry C. Van Emburgh, all had complimentary things to say of the Judge.

Still Superlative.

"Marriage hasn't altered her love a bit."

"Hasn't, eh?"

"No. She used to say he danced divinely. Now she uses that term to describe the way he splits the wood."

BOLD DAYLIGHT ROBBERY TELLS THE BANKS TO REDUCE THE INTEREST

Daring Thief Stole $500 from Dunellen Express Office Saturday Afternoon.

While Absent Robber Extracted Bills from Envelope and Left No Clue as to His Identity.

A bold daylight robbery, in which $500 in bills was taken from the U. S. Express Company's office at Dunellen, was successfully executed on Saturday afternoon. The thief left no clue as to his identity but the company's detectives are working on the case. It appears to be the general impression that the robbery was perpetrated by a person who was acquainted with the office.

The money was old bills which had been received by the Dunellen bank to forward to Washington for the exchange of new bills. Councilman George Huff, the Dunellen agent of the company, received the money and placed it in the usual style of envelope and left it in a book on his desk.

Mr. Huff had occasion to step out of the office on business for a few minutes. Constable Robert L. Pierce was there at the time Mr. Huff left, but he knew nothing of the latter leaving the money on his desk. Mr. Pierce left the office before Mr. Huff's return without locking the door. The two men were out of the office about fifteen minutes and it was during that space of time that the money was stolen.

Discovery was made by Mr. Huff when he returned to the office. The envelope was taken from the book, the money extracted, and the envelope left on the window. Mr. Huff immediately notified the headquarters of the company at Philadelphia

ANNIVERSARY SERVICE HELD AT WILSON CHAPEL

The twentieth anniversary of the dedication of the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel, was held at the chapel at Watchung, Sunday afternoon, when there were appropriate addresses and special music by George and William Spier. The opening exercises comprised the Scripture lesson, a hymn, prayer by Rev. John Y. Brock, of Trinity Reformed church, selections by a chorus.

Then followed interesting remarks by E. S. Ackor, superintendent of the Sunday-school; E. L. Bonny, Miss Nettie Beeching and A. H. Wilson, all of whom have been connected with the work at the chapel for many years.

The address of the afternoon was by Rev. John Y. Brock, of Trinity Reformed church. He congratulated the members of the chapel upon their achievements during the past twenty years and spoke words of encouragement for the future. His remarks were much enjoyed.

The chapel was dedicated February 22, 1890. The late Col. John F. Wilson, kindly added to the building fund raised by the Watchung Sunday School Association. The chapel was named in memory of his wife, Mary E. Wilson, "The Mary E. Wilson Memorial Chapel." Most of the labor done on the chapel was by volunteers. The stone was quarried from the mountains. Before the chapel was erected services were held in the old school-house.

Special services were held at the chapel Sunday, when there were brief addresses by several workrs. There was also special music.

WILL FORCE CLUBS TO TAKE LICENSES

Notices have been sent by the Hoboken Board of Excise Commissioners of Hoboken to all clubs or social and fraternal organizations informing them that if they expect to sell liquors hereafter they must appear before the board and take out licenses, for which a fee will be required.

Under the law, according to Corporation Counsel John J. Fallon, of Hoboken, the board has the right to compel each club selling selling liquors within its establishment to take out a license covering the traffic. Violations of the law in this respect can be punished by the commission.

Many clubs will be unable to stand the expense of a license fee, and will have to discontinue the sale of liquors on their premises. Any found guilty of any breach in this regard will be dealt with severely.

The organization is to continue to regulate the liquor trade in Hoboken to the best interests of the city, and it is expected at the next meeting of the Excise Board that many clubs will tender applications for the licenses required.

HOW GEORGE WASHINGTON DID SET CREEK AFIRE.

Princeton, Feb. 23.—The latest edition of the letters of Paine which has been acquired by the library of Princeton University shows George Washington in something else beside military or cherry tree accomplishments. According to Paine, George Washington was a physicist.

It happened in this wise: In 1783, when the Continental Congress was sitting in Nassau Hall, the first building erected on the college campus, George Washington had his headquarters at Rocky Hill, a few miles away. It was just after Congress had finished thanking George for his services in the Revolution that the renowned general heard from the country folk a story about "setting the river on fire." The "river" referred to was only a creek, but Washington was struck with the idea of even setting a creek on fire so he determined to investigate.

General Lincoln and Thomas Paine were his companions in trying the experiment. Two theories in explaining the phenomenon were advanced. One was that on disturbing the bottom of the creek some bituminous matter rose to the surface which could be ignited, and the other opinion, that held by Washington, was that a quantity of inflammable air was released which ascended through the water and burned at the surface.

The experiment was made in the evening. Paine, Lincoln and Washington, with a side-driver and several soldiers, boarded a scow near the mill dam at Rocky Hill. Washington stationed himself at one end of the scow with a roll of cartridge paper, which he ignited and held over the water, about two or three inches from the surface, while the soldiers disturbed the bottom of the river with poles. Paine made observations from the other end of the scow to prove his own theory of the rise of bituminous matter. When the mud at the bottom, however, was disturbed, the air bubbles rose quickly and the fire "was seen to take from Washington's light and descend to the surface of the water, which blazed." That was demonstrative evidence that what was called "setting the river on fire" was really setting on fire the inflammable air that arose from the mud, which theory Washington held.

JUDGE ORDERS HIMSELF COMMITTED TO JAIL.

Jersey City, Feb. 23.—According to the order delivered by the clerk of Judge Carey's court to the keeper of the jail on Saturday, Judge Carey was seeking to have himself incarcerated. The order read:

Receive into your custody the body of Ida Goldstein as a witness. Do not discharge her without an order from Judge Carey who is hereby committed to your jail by order of the court on the above charge.

Ida Goldstein, seventeen years old, was arrested about ten days ago, on complaint of her brother, who claimed she was held as a white slave by Mrs. D. Lorenzo of West Hoboken. The woman was arrested and the Goldstein girl held as a witness, the order reading "until February 17."

At the expiration of that date her brother tried to get her out of jail, and his counsel, Joseph Newman, applied to Judge Carey for an order. Judge Carey was afraid there was a conspiracy to spirit away the girl to prevent her testifying, and he directed the jailkeeper be notified to hold the girl, the result being the note as described. Newman thereupon applied to Justice Swayze, and at a hearing held Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock, Justice Swayze sent for the Goldstein girl and asked her if she wished to leave the jail. She expressed a desire to go and her bail was fixed at $500. The bond was furnished by Anton Spitznagel.

Nelson M. Haas, of Nutley, who has been in the employ of Keith & Proctor, has been made an assistant at the Plainfield theatre and Proctor's theatre. He will relieve the management at both theatres in the increasing duties attendant upon conducting these enterprises.

OIL-DRILLER HAS GRIEVANCE

Doesn't Want Any More Dealings with Women, and Most People Will Not Blame Him.

In boring for oil, when the drill reaches the depth where it allows gas to escape, every precaution is taken against striking a light, lest there should be a destructive explosion. This necessary precaution gives point to the following story, told by a writer in the Pittsburg News:

"I can deal with men," growled a grizzled oil driller, "but a woman can outdo the best of us!

"The other day I brought in a well down in Virginny, right close to the kitchen door of a little farmhouse. Just as we were getting to the ticklish point, where smoking wasn't allowed within forty rods, out comes the farmer's wife and goes to building a big fire in a Dutch oven.

"Mebby I didn't kick, but she just showed me a batch of dough, an' said if she didn't bake it 'twould spoil. If I wanted the fire out I had got to pay for the dough. Ten dollars, too.

"She just dared me to touch that Dutch oven, an' I didn't touch it, either. I just gave her the ten.

"Mebby we didn't get that fire out quick. If the well had broken loose it would have blown me an' the whole farmhouse out of sight!

"No, sir, I don't want any more dealings with a woman. They're too risky."

CAT THAT CANNOT BE LOST

Left Behind When Ship Sailed Puss Boards Another Vessel and Follows 3,000 Miles.

Sailors and officers of the Norwegian steamship Minerva, which sailed for Baltimore to load coal, claim that they have on board the original and authentic "cat that came back," and moreover this feline cannot be lost.

The sailors declare that the cat boarded the Minerva of her own free will at the Lamberts Point coal piers over a year ago, and that she at once became a favorite on board.

The steamer was then loading a cargo of coal for Portland, Ore., and in some way the cat got left behind when she lifted anchor and steamed on her 3,000-mile voyage.

She had been at her destination eight days when one morning the cat again walked on board, and the only sign the sailors could figure out how she got there was that she had stowed away below, but several days later the mystery was solved when it was discovered that after the Minerva had left Norfolk the cat boarded a British steamer going the same way, and, recognizing members of the crew of the Minerva at Portland, followed them back to the ship.

The cat got her picture in the papers on the Pacific coast for that, and she is still with the ship.—Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.

The Academy of Silence.

It is written that among the various schools of Grecian philosophy existed one known as "The Academy of Silence, composed of 100 men, each member pledged to the purpose of the school, writes Hollis Godfrey in the Atlantic. To them came one seeking admission. Their list of membership was closed and their head calling the would-be neophyte before the assembled audience, showed him without a word an urn so filled with water that not a single drop could be added. The neophyte, reading the message, bowed silently, turned and withdrew, but hesitated and returned. Picking a petal from a flower, he dropped it on the brimming bowl so dexterously that it floated without dislodging the slightest particle of the liquid. The membership of the academy of silence became 101.

Not a Lager Beer Sign.

The lady was disconsolate. "My dear," she said to her friend, "I've had such a disappointment. Mrs. Blank has just moved into the house at 23 Washington Square North for the winter. We had planned to furnish it so prettily, but when I went around to look at it the other day I saw one of those horrid lager beer signs right next door. And I thought that was a restricted neighborhood. Of course we can't take the house, and I'm simply heartbroken."

"Well, you can cheer up again then," said her friend. "That wasn't a lager beer sign you saw. It was the double eagle of Russia on the coat of arms hanging in front of the Russian consulate."—New York Sun.

Can't Please Everybody.

Mrs. Asquith came in for a good criticism during a dinner Lord Allen to a luncheon. Smarting under it, she invited next time the great Parisian artist in clothing, M. Potret.

"This time," she said, "there will be no mistake. As the only objection to Miss Lily's gown was that the artist who had reduced clothing to the minimum, I have invited the artist who has raised clothing to the maximum. Now there can be no criticism."

But, strange to say, there was.

Painted His House with Opium.

Silas Morgan, living on Whidbee Island, Washington, found several dozen cans containing a substance resembling paint, and believing a case of red paint had washed ashore, painted his house with the material. On taking a sample to town, he was told that the sticky fluid was pure opium and each can worth about $300. As he had used or spoiled nearly thirty cans of the opium he had wasted more than $9,000.—Greenville News.

ON NOT BEING INDEPENDENT

"Do you know," broke out the girl who likes to talk, "I've just been considering the most interesting idea! Suppose nobody had to fuss over trying to be what he felt he was expected to be, and could just accept himself as he was—think of the time one would have really to enjoy life!"

"The reason this great thought dawned on me," explained the girl who likes to talk, "is that when I got up this morning I felt lazy and mortally yearned to skip my gymnastics that I sternly writhe through twice a day. You see, I'm getting stout and I realize that nothing but stern, heroic, regular winding will help me.

"I had to argue with myself. I said firmly: 'Now, you know perfectly well that those reducing exercises won't do you ten cents' worth of good if you are haphazard about them—it's the steady plugging away that counts!

"It's dreadful to think that all my life I'll have to struggle that way! Why, I just long for a real legitimate excuse to escape my duties. Talk about inheriting a fortune! If I could wake up some morning and know I had a day's freedom from those gymnastics that I loathe I'd go mad with joy. Think how lovely it would be if I could just comfortably go to bed and nobody would be shocked, and I was just as goodlooking as though I were thin and I knew it didn't matter! Simply because I realize the world will think I have a slight if I don't attack sylphlikeness I'm doomed to struggle on!

"Then look at Daisy Greene! She has such a desperately pretty face that everybody says, 'Gracious! I expect people are just crazy over that girl!' She probably is the most popular person in her crowd and has a dozen proposals a season!' What's the result? Why, poor Daisy, who is perfectly simple and unassuming and would far rather stay at home and read novels or embroider centerpieces, is wearing out her young days being a belle because the world thinks she should be! You needn't tell me that a girl isn't a slave. Look at the way she races about to theaters and luncheons and dinners! She smiles, smiles perpetually, and is always keyed up to be charming and attractive—when she doesn't give a picnic for the fact that her dance program is filled first and the papers call her a social leader.

"She's bored to pieces by it all. She's just as much tied to the treadmill as I am by gymnastics, and there's no escape for her, either. Everybody has decided that she'll make a brilliant marriage and be a social leader, and she wouldn't dare for her life marry a man who wanted to stay at home and read in the evenings and wear a smoking jacket, for such a howl would arise about her throwing herself away with all her beauty and genius for the world's good as would be because she knows she isn't expected of her and bows to public opinion!

"Consider the way Mrs. Updike wears herself out endeavoring to make her daughter grow up into what the family has decided she is destined of what Hazel naturally is! Hazel is a lumpy, ordinary young person of 14, who has no taste for the artistic and no gift or charm. She'd be perfectly content to be in a corner and bother all the rest of her life—in fact, that's the only role she'd make a success of. Yet her mother is miserable and makes Hazel miserable by eternally goading her on to shine, putting her in the kindergarten that makes proper friends when she can't make friends any more than she can pick Mars out of the sky to trim a hat, chasing her to her French lessons, standing over her like a monument to torture her at dancing, assisting on her painting dreadful things, making her do clumsy antics at dancing school, keeping at her grimly.

"It would be pathetic if it wasn't so ridiculous! Why can't she accept Hazel for what Hazel naturally is and let it go at that? She'd have lots more time to enjoy life and Hazel would have some peace. But she is haunted by the knowledge of what people think a daughter ought to be, and she'll keep at it till they both die of exhaustion or till Hazel elopes with a grocery clerk and lives happily ever after.

"I feel sorry for George Edwards. He'd be such an ideal, ladylike proprietor of a dry goods store in a small town—and here he is trying to be a clubman, a cotillion leader and a sad dog generally! Just because his father has money and he's been to college and something is expected of him! If he belonged to 50 clubs and had a new dress suit every ten minutes I should always see hunting George's footsteps, like a second self or a familiar ghost, in the office, retiring little man, with a yardstick handy and an eager desire to display the last bargain in silks!

"Think how much simpler it would be for George! He wouldn't have to work nearly so hard as he does now, and maybe his countenance would lose that pained, anxious expression which comes from wondering if he's doing the right thing and whether the right person has noticed it at the right minute! Why can't people be independent?"

"Well, why don't you start it and quit your hated gymnastics?" demanded a listener.

"Oh," hopelessly said the girl who likes to talk, "that's different!"

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

'Squire Collins Idea.

The sensible suggestion made before the Union County Board of Agriculture by Farmer-Editor Collins, of Westfield, and subsequently approved by the New Jersey State Board of Agriculture, is attracting attention far and wide. It was, in substance, that all property not specifically opened to gunners by printed or verbal permission shall be legally considered closed, and hunters going thereon be subject to action for trespass. The New York State Fish and Game Commission is thinking over the matter and may yet have something to say about it. New York, by the way, offers a suggestion in return. In the last report of its commissioner of statistics it is said that there is no valid reason why the statutes should not favor the propagation and sale of any kind of game. For the purchase of game thousands of dollars are sent abroad every year that might as well go to the farmers in small fractions as well as the big ones in foreign countries make money out of the game they raise. Massachusetts is trying the scheme with prospects of success, and there is no reason why New Jersey farmers may not turn an honest dollar in the same way. It would help to restock the State with game, at the same time.—Newark News.

"P. B. A." Benevolence.

The State Patrolman's Benevolent Association has another of its benevolent schemes before the Legislature. The legislative committee of the "system" that has such a strangle hold on police departments in this section of the State, has induced Assemblyman Housel, of Mercer county, to introduce a bill whose passage would add largely to the tax rate in Newark. Just why a scheme, in which his home town is not interested, is not known, but it may be accounted for by the fact that lawmakers from this section consider it dangerous for them to be known as furthering a plan such as that proposed. The bill provides that cities where the present police pension act is in force shall borrow or appropriate enough money to cover all pensions required during the remainder of the current fiscal year of policemen or firemen, and shall thereafter put in the annual tax levy a sum equal to four per cent. of the total salaries paid to the police force to be used and kept exclusively as a fund for the payment of police pensions. The passage of this bill would mean an outlay of $30,000 annually to Newark alone right now, with constant increase each year.

The pension fund is now principally supported by the one per cent. levy on patrolmen's salaries, which is deducted each month from the salary checks. Inasmuch as about $750,000 is expended in salaries, this means about $7,500 a year for the fund. Then all fines imposed against officers of the force are included. These are not so much now as heretofore. The money deducted from salaries for any cause, such as sickness, absence or otherwise, is another item for the fund. All money received from the sale of special policemen's badges and commissions, amounting to about $900 a year, is another, as is the money received from the sale of permits for revolvers and parades. Likewise the donations that are made, from outside admirers for meritorious work go into the fund. It costs now about $1,500 a month to pay pensions, and after March 1, when four more men are to be pensioned, the cost will be increased to about $1,800 a month. The receipts for the fund amount annually to but $9,000 or $10,000. This, of course, means a big shortage, which is paid out of a past surplus accummulated by the board of trustees. At present this surplus amounts to $40,000 and is invested in city bonds. March 1 it will have to be reduced to $38,000 and each year will get smaller and smaller as the department enlarges and the pensions increase.

The Housel bill is intended to prevent this fund from being further decreased, and to prevent at at the expense of the taxpayers. The "P. B. A." is so benevolent that it desires a very large pension fund in order that the pensioning of its members may be carried on more rapidly than is the case at present. The members are not willing to pay any more than they do to maintain the fund for their own benefit, but they are entirely willing to have the general taxpayers bear the extra burden.—Newark Evening News.

McAlester, Okla., Feb. 23.—The Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of the State of Oklahoma, in annual session here last week, by unanimous vote, severed fraternal relationship with the Grand Lodge of New ersey until such time as the Grand Lodge of New Jersey repudiates its members who are colored men. reverses the usual order of furnace facts. It requires the least amount of fuel and the least amount of care. In return it gives the biggest, hottest fire you ever knew; a clean, clinkerless fire. It burns all the coal and when you shake it all the dust goes up the chimney. BOYNTON furnaces are clean. They give the maximum of heat for a minimum of expense. We will gladly give you the name of the nearest BOYNTON dealer, so that you may investigate.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 27, 1910.

Topic.—Christ twining our nation.—Luke x, 1-17. Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

In this paragraph selected for our study Luke describes the sending out of seventy disciples, who, two by two, were to precede Christ into the towns and cities into which He was to follow. On two other occasions Christ had sent forth the twelve, but this is not one of these occasions, for Luke records both events. This was an increased number and probably went before Christ into the places He was to enter on His last journey from Galilee to Jerusalem. The twelve were the official apostles and accompanied the Saviour. The seventy were selected disciples. They remind us of the layman's missionary movement of today, in which thousands of men who are not ordained to the ministry have joined themselves together to make a gigantic effort to win the world for Christ. These seventy men were therefore to go before Christ to teach of Him and to prepare the way for His coming. Through their efforts many would receive Christ before He came, and in the hearts of others the seed would be planted and made ready to accept the Christ when He himself should appear. This work was not to be done on foreign fields, but among the Jews, and was therefore home missions, and as we follow the injunctions here laid down it will result in Christ coming to our nation.

Christ should win our nation. To win it He needs but to be presented to the people throughout our land in the proper way. He Himself says, "I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto Me," and John says, "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have eternal life." It is the duty of American Christians to uphold Christ before the nation and He will win it unto Him. This duty rests upon us in our local Christian work. In the vicinity of all our churches there are many whom Christ has not won. Let us follow the example of the seventy and, going out two by two for co-operation and sympathy, hold Him up before those about us. In addition to this personal work at home, we should send missionaries in whatever way possible throughout every land of the land where Christ has not been lifted up.

Christ can win our nation. If He be properly presented to the people the hearts of the vast majority will be won to Him. There is no greater attractive power on earth or in the world than Jesus Christ, and if some are not attracted to Him the fault lies in them and not in Him. A magnet attracts steel, but not lead, but the magnet is not to blame for the difference is in the lead. The cross of Christ is related to men in the same way. It attracts all men equally, and while some respond and others do not the difference is not in the attractiveness of the cross, but in the hearts of those attracted and of those repelled. It is ours to uplift the cross. With the acceptance or rejection of it we have nothing to do. That responsibility rests upon those who bear.

The responsibility of our nation in its relation to Christ is great. It is so because of its great opportunity. Throughout our land for years the gospel's joyful sound has been heard. If heard and not heeded we shall be like the city which Christ condemned for failure to take advantage of their opportunities. May Christ win our nation in all its relations. May our homes be Christian homes, our business controlled upon a basis of honesty and uprightness, our social life be clean and pure. The relation between employer and employed has its foundation on the principles taught by Christ, and may every official position from that of the president down to the humblest officeholder in the land be so conducted as to receive the approval of Him who is King of kings and Lord of lords.

No Longer an Apology Needed.

Rev. W. W. Rogers in his farewell address at Sydney as president of the New South Wales union, speaking on Christian Endeavor's progress, said:

"Christian Endeavor has no longer to apologize for itself or justify its existence as an innovation. It remains for us to maintain that justification which we have won by loyalty to the first principles. Christian Endeavor had a hard battle to enter some churches, but that is now entirely gone. There was a negro in one of the southern states of America named Rastus, who wanted to enter the church and asked permission of the pastor. He said, 'I think you had better go home and pray about it for an hour tonight.' At the end of that time the negro returned, but he did not look very happy, and the pastor said, 'Well, Rastus, what does the Lord say about it?' Rastus answered: 'The Lord said: "Well, it ain't no use your trying to enter that church. I have been trying to enter it twenty years myself and have not got in, so what chance have you?"' And when I see Christian Endeavor kept outside and churches shut their doors, I wonder whether the Lord has got in yet. At any rate, I know this, of course—churches that have not Christian Endeavor societies are not necessarily unevangelistic, but standing in the forefront of the evangelistic churches in our city are those that nurture and welcome Christian Endeavor enterprise."

Report of Committee on North Avenue Bridge, Cranford, N. J.

Your committee on the matter of building this bridge it seems to your committee desirable to alter the plans in so far as the fence is concerned, and to substitute for the fence placed for the structure another type of fencing which will be more ornate and also more substantial.

Your committee is of the opinion that as this bridge is almost in the heart of the village of Cranford, the situation requires a fence design of first-class appearance.

Your committee would therefore recommend and here offers this resolution to that effect:

Resolved, That the committee on the bridge be authorized to have placed on this bridge another type of railing, according to plans submitted by contractor, the additional cost of the work to be not more than $260.

Respectfully submitted,

Resolved, That the Committee on Soldiers Monuments be authorized to make application to the Quartermaster-General, U. S. Army, for such stones as Gustavus A. Madison Drake, hereby charged with the duty of locating the graves and furnishing the inscription, as ascertained to be necessary, said stones to be delivered by the contractor in the county at the nearest railroad station, and that the same be erected at the graves of the dead soldiers.

THE VIOLIN IS LIKE MAN SAYS REV. C. L. GOODRICH

Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church took an unusual topic for his sermon Sunday morning, using the symbol of the making of a violin as the comparative means for illustrating man's character building. He took for his text Ephesians 2:10: "Ye are complete in Him."

In past Pastor Goodrich said: "I count the violin the most human of musical instruments. Somewhat as God, after creating many varieties of animate beings created man, who could express more fully God's own spirit. So man, after inventing many varieties of musical instruments made the violin. The history of the violin and its construction is full of interest. It involves names that are secure in fame—Amati, Stradivarius and others. The violin did not become complete in a day nor a decade. It was many years before the instrument was brought to its final form. No good violin can be made in a year or in ten years. Its wood must be mature and the seasoning process of the materials from which it is made must be selected with great care and be left entirely to nature's own processes.

Young people require the same careful treatment. They are often impatient for results; they wish to get the desired results before the necessary preliminaries of work and growth. In the forming of character and in gaining skill in the crafts or the getting of an education time is the necessary element. Nature will not be hurried. One may work with nature, but you cannot take a short cut to perfection in anything. The violin makers of the Cremona school selected the best curly maple and the white pine from the mountain districts for their violins, and these woods were selected with great care from trees which grew on the south side of the forest and the wood from the side exposed to the south, or the side most exposed to the sun. And the result was the finest of sound. How suggestive is it all! Not any chance piece of wood was used, only that which the best results.

What must go into the making of the complete man? Something of the grandeur of the mountains. Something of the sturdiness of the forests, something of the freedom of the hills and the warmth of the pure sunshine. Some strength to struggle.

The master workmen of old could take an instrument whose tone was poor and reconstruct it so that it would produce beautiful tones. God has taken men and made them over so that they were like new men. It may be that some of us feel that we are not rendering to God the music of devout and holy lives He desires; that the influence from our lives is not one glad sweet strain to the praise of God. I am thankful to believe that God can remake us.

Nature cannot make a violin alone. She can grow the material, but man must fashion the instrument. So with all reverence I will say God could not make a complete man alone. The person himself must have a share in the process. God cannot make a good character in a person. He cannot make a good Christian out of anyone. Not by Himself. The person has to do his part.

The violin is only complete when it is ready to take up into the hands and be played upon. Man's life and Christian character are not complete until he has begun to do something for Christ and man does not love the Christian character until he has begun to use it for someone else. It is impossible for man to be a complete Christian until he uses the developed, perfected character for others. No man's character, no man's life, nor his usefulness can be perfected, can be what he ought to desire it to be until it is given up into the hands of the great Master. Only thus may we hope to fulfill the purpose of our Maker.

The Epworth League of the First M. E. church will hold a social and business meeting Friday night, March 4.

The Sunshine Mission Band, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, will give two fairy plays in the chapel Friday afternoon and evening.

The regular communion service will be held at Hope chapel the second Sunday evening in March.

Miss Anna L. Case and Miss Jessamine Burd, the latter of the First Presbyterian church choir, will give a musicale at Somerville tomorrow night.

The Young People's Association of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will meet this evening for mission study, instead of Friday night.

DISAPPROVES OF THE HINTER

Remarks of Young Business Woman Will Find an Echo in the Breasts of Many.

"If there is one thing I hate," said the determined young business woman as she sat down to lunch, "it's the hinter. If some one wants to borrow an umbrella or some money from you, let her say so right out, not come shambling into your office, take away all your valuable time beating around the bush and dropping fool hints on the way. I won't take a hint. I'm not dense, but I want to discourage the habit. I think it shows cowardice.

"Take the man who wants to come to see you. Why can't he say: 'May I call?' No, he hasn't the courage of his convictions, but he has to hem and haw, look sheepish and hint for dear life. I won't have a man like that in my house. Same thing with girls. Don't you hate the kind that suggests to a man that a taxi is so comfortable, and she does loathe the street cars, or the one who asks him if he's seen the lovely display at Hupler's or the 'cute' little boxes they send with Thorley's flowers. It would be safer for her if she kept off the subject, for the chief fun in doing things lies in planning them, and nothing is so maddening as to have others make suggestions. The hinter only makes herself unpopular, and the sooner she knows it the better. Keep quiet or say right out what you want.

"Now, don't hint that you'd like an oyster cocktail, because you won't get one if you do. Sing out like a little woman—have one? Good!"

LAKE COMO DREAM OF BEAUTY

English Writer's Tribute to Sheet of Water That Is the Delight of Artists.

The first thing you say as you set sail on Lake Como is: "Now I know where all the lovely drop scenes come from." It is an impish sort of satisfaction to confess, perhaps, and, in so far as the notion is theatrical, it does Como an injustice, says a writer in the Pall Mall Gazette. Like our own Windemere, Como is natural to a fault. That is to say, she has the defects of her picturesqueness. She is the most ladylike of the North Italian lakes. Her cities of hills are genteel in their slope, her depths of shadow more velvety in tone, and her waters have a gayer surface than have her rivals and neighbors, Garda and Maggiore. But if Como is a child of nature, it is in a way entirely her own. She seems to have been fashioned in a holiday mood, as if, after making sterner things, nature had vowed, like Gainsborough with his landscapes, that this time she would work to please herself. Probably she said: "Here's something for the artists, bless 'em!" the result in the long run being the sort of canvas we saw at the last academy over the unexpected name of David Murray. There you have Como in a sober mood—that is to say, without the flood of sunshine that invests her like a robe. You get the blue haze of the hills, the bluer spread of waters, and a group of those hazy coracles that skim her surface like a leaf upon a leaf. But who shall paint a Como sky?

A Professor Goes Wrong.

A college professor lately said that no new pleasure had been discovered in modern days. Is not the reading of the morning paper a pleasure they did not have in Greece and Rome? Is not the knowledge that we are not in ignorance of any important event throughout the world for the last 24 hours a pleasure as well as a gain? Is it no pleasure to pass comfortably by train in short time from Europe to America and from New York to San Francisco? Is there no gain and gratification in the fact that the ultermost ends of civilization are brought under observation within the limits of a month without undue risk of life and limbs? Is it nothing that even the man of one language can now command the profit of all the literature of all times and of all peoples? Shall not that professor revise his language?

Good English Words.

We read the following sentence in a letter given in evidence recently in a murder trial: "I gave him a home and done the best I could toward learning him the English language, as we are English speaking people." There were some who laughed when this sentence was read aloud. Yet the sentence is a brave, a sturdy one. "I done" smacks of the soil. "I did" has more energy. "I done" is epic. "To learn a person," was for years, beginning with 1300, good English. Caxton, Coverdale, Bunyan, Fuller, Shakespeare, De Foe, Richardson used "learn" for "teach." Nor did William Morris in "Sigurd" refrain from writing: "Thou hast learned me all my skill."

Undue Familiarity.

"Did you strike this old man?" the coroner asked English.

"Certainly I did," English replied. "He called my wife bad names."

"Did he know her?" the coroner inquired.

"No," said English. "That's just it. If he had known her he might have called her names."—Testimony at a Coroner's Inquest in England.

Useful Indeed.

"Of all the useless cads, that Jonesly is the limit!"

"Oh, I don't know; he always has a match about him."

BRIGHT YOUNG MAN DIES

Harold Lawrence Mulford is a Victim of Pleuro-pneumonia.

WON HONORS IN SCHOOL.

Bishop David H. Greer Officiated at Funeral—Pawling School Masters and Students Attended the Services.

One of the bravest losing fights ever put up was that in which Harold Lawrence Mulford succumbed to the grim destroyer, Sunday morning at 6:30. Pleuro-pneumonia was the cause of death. Young Mr. Mulford was the son of Mrs. Charles Alexander Pomeroy, 110 Park place. His father was the late S. P. Mulford, and he was born in New York city January 20, 1891, where he resided with his parents until eight years ago, when he came to Plainfield.

Mr. Mulford received his preparatory schooling at Leal's School, afterwards going to St. Paul's School at Garden City, L. I. Here he remained for three years graduating with the highest honors in his class and having won many medals and other prizes for efficiency in his studies. After leaving St. Paul's Harold went to Pawling School, Pawling, N. Y., where he repeated his successes, winning approbation with his splendid application to study and ranking high in all of the various branches of the school work including athletics. Here again he displayed his remarkable ability as a student, capturing prize after prize and finally the gold medal at the end of the last school year.

Young Mr. Mulford's remarkable versatility in composition had marked him as a coming genius in a literary way and his kindly and genial companionship was much sought after by his fellow students. He has been complimented for his ability by no less a personage than DeLancy Nicoll, former District Attorney of New York city, whom he met on board the Lusitania, on the way home from Europe last summer. The young man had traveled extensively and had a knowledge possessed but by few boys of his years.

The funeral was held on Wednesday afternoon from his late home at 2:30 in the afternoon. Headmaster Dr. Ganade, of Pawling School, accompanied by the entire faculty and student body attended the services which were conducted by Bishop David H. Greer, of New York city. The bearers were selected from among his former school companions.

LOCAL Y.M.C.A. FIVE LOSE TO ORANGE TEAM

Plainfield Y. M. C. A.'s speedy basketball team encountered defeat at the hands of the Orange Y. M. C. A. State champions, at the latter place on Saturday night. The locals were snowed under by a score of 41 to 13.

From the very outset the Orangeites held the upper hand. The Plainfielders were outplayed at every angle of the game. At the close of the first half the score was 28 to 6 in favor of Orange. When the whistle announced the beginning of the second half Orange started off with a rapid-fire succession of baskets, which, try as they would the local players could not stop.

The lineup was as follows:

Orange.		Plainfield.
Gibbons	left forward	Collier
Barker	right guard	Gavett
Lee	centre	Linke
Knapp	right forward	Aalholm, Miner
Shorter	left guard	Foster

Goals from field—Gibbons, 4; Knapp, 4; Lee, 4; Barker, 3; Shorter, 4; Aalholm, Linke, 2; Collier, Miner, 2. Goals from foul line—Knapp, 6; Collier. Referee, Ernest P. Patten. Orange Y. M. C. A.; time of halves, 20 minutes and 15 minutes.

GOLF.

An active spring season has been decided upon by the energetic committee now in charge of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association, additional proof being that three one-day tournaments have already been planned. There one-day gatherings, open only to metropolitan women, will be held at the Richmond County Country Club, the Plainfield Country Club and the Greenwich Country Club.

Something new in women's metropolitan circles will be attempted this year in the way of an official handicap list. It will serve as an aid to clubs holding special one-day or invitation tournaments and it will also prove of assistance to the Ratters body. The women's metropolitan list has not been compiled as yet, but it will probably be ready by the end of the month or early in March.

WAS NOT OLD LADY'S SON

Little Romance Built Up by Proximity Found to Be Not Founded on Fact.

The little old woman who sat nearly opposite the girl at the long marble table was palsied. She almost spilled her coffee when she put it to her mouth. Her trembling fingers hardly could break her bread. It came near spoiling the little lunch the girl had ordered for herself to see the pitiful trembling of the little faded fingers, the constant shaking of the head under the old lace veil that half shaded the old withered face. The only reason it didn't was because of the strong young man who sat beside the little palsied woman, quite close, so close that the little woman once or twice leaned against him shakily.

"It's her son, thank heaven!" thought the girl. "Thank heaven, she's got a son! Oh! Suppose I should go about all alone some day shaking like that!"

The little shaking woman finished her lunch before the girl did, perhaps because they had bought it quicker, sorry for her, seeing her shake so. She got up. The young man got up and stood by her.

"Yes," the girl thought, congratulating herself, "it's her son. They look alike. I'm awfully glad she isn't alone, that poor little palsied woman. Something might happen to her."

Then the little palsied woman walked tremblingly to the desk and paid her check, and the strong young man went and paid his, and when they got out the door one went one way and the other went the other, and he wasn't her son at all.

MONARCH WILLING TO OBLIGE

Episode That Proved Ruler Was Endowed with a Good Share of Common Sense.

Having purchased two pictures of a Parisian artist, King A—— of X—— honored the painter by a visit at a studio situated, among many others, in the fourth floor of an old house in the Latin quarter.

"Fourth floor back, young man," directed the hall-porter, ignorant of the identity of the royal visitor.

The king prepared to ascend, when the man-in-livery popped his head out of his little office.

"Look here, young man! Do me a favor. Just carry up this washing to your friend!"

Much amused, the young king carried the artist his bag of clean linen.

The artist was greatly embarrassed. "Oh, your majesty!" he stammered; "what a terrible mistake! Why did you not reprove the porter? Why did you bring the bag up?"

"Because he asked me to,' said the king with a laugh.

"But—"

"Oh, nonsense!" interrupted the king. "Don't say any more about it. Every one ought to be obliging, and, whoever one may happen to be, it would be very disobliging to refuse a favor to a fellow-creature, when one could so easily save him a journey up four flights of stairs!"

Interesting Relic.

Just before Charles II. fled, the young prince, in order to England to attempt the recovery of the throne of his ancestors, he gave a ball in Paris to which his friends and partisans were invited. Among the many beautiful women present, Lady Mary Touchet, a young English lady, greatly attracted the prince's notice, and before the evening was over he cut out the "star" which decorated his breast and presented it to her. Lady Mary cherished a romantic regard for "Prince Charlie," and was one of his most devoted adherents. She died very suddenly in the pride of her youth and beauty. The "star" after her death became the property of her sister, who married Philip Thicknesse. This gentleman, who was a wit, did not care for the Jacobite relic, and gave the "star" and a picture of the prince to his nieces. Doubtless the pretender's "star" is now in the possession of some family who regard it as a valuable curiosity, and preserve it as such.

Protection for the Lion.

A strange petition has been received at the French colonial office from the colonists of Algeria. It prays for the protection of the lion from the gun of the hunter, on the ground that the king of beasts is alone able to rid them of their enemies, the herbivorous animals, the deer, the elephant and the rhinoceros. It seems that hunters were rigorously restricted as to the number of these beasts which they could kill, although the license cost from £50 to £60. Consequently they have increased and multiplied to such an extent that the colonists are now calling upon the home authorities to protect the exterminating lion. Only La Fontaine could do justice to this situation.

Cause for Heavy Tread.

"Have you noticed," asked an observant woman, "how much more heavily women walk this year than ever before? I have learned the cause of it. The high heels are responsible for this extra noise. You see, the balance of the body is completely changed, especially for those people who have been wearing a comparatively low heel, and the result is that the entire weight, apparently, comes down "plunk" on those high heels. It will certainly be a blessing when the low heel is once more in favor, for then our nerves will not be racked by the awful thumping as people wander on their way."

BRONZE STATUE OF COTTON THREAD KING CAST BY HINMAN, TO BE PLACED IN NEWARK CEMETERY

The statue recently cast by the Hinman Bronze Works is a life size image of the late P. V. Clark, of Newark, the pioneer in the manufacture of cotton thread in this country whose huge plant is in Newark. It being the first piece of statuary ever cast in this city brings the fact to the notice of the country that such work can be successfully done here. The statue measures five feet three inches in height and represents Mr. Clark seated in his favorite armchair with a closed book in his left hand and a look of meditation on his face.

The casting itself was absolutely flawless when removed from the moulds and the work is so finely done that even the special markings of the sculptor are plainly noticed showing the faithfulness to detail which the founders have followed.

When set up in the family plot in Fairmount cemetery in Newark the statue will rest upon a base of red Missouri granite in two sections—the bottom being 5 feet 4 inches by 6 feet 4 inches; and the upper slab 3 feet 5 inches by 4 feet 8 inches, and three feet high. The entire base is highly polished and bears the simple inscription "P. V. Clark." The design of the statue was executed by John Harrigan from a photograph and the pedestal is from the works of L. G. Manning & Son of West Front street.

Another fine piece of work just completed by the Hinman establishment is the door for the Leeds' mausoleum at Woodlawn cemetery, New York. This door weighs 1,100 pounds and is from a design by John Russell Pope, the well-known architect of New York.

MISTAKEN FOR ROOSTERS. MINORCAS PROVE WORTH.

Branchville, Feb. 23.—Seven black Minorca pullets, that Thomas Erb, a hotel-keeper of this place, purchased for roosters from William Walton last fall, are now giving more than their share to the egg supply of the community. Three of these fowls lay double-yolked eggs regularly two days in three.

The feats of the Erb chickens have been reported for a fortnight past. It was this that enabled the flock to save their necks, for their owner, a former Newarker, had bought them from Walton for the expressed purpose of fattening them up for chicken dinners. Week before last Henry C. Duryea who feeds the brood, announced that they were in a fit condition, and a chicken dinner was planned for the next day. Three of the fattest fowls were picked out to be executed the following morning. That night, when Duryea went to feed them he discovered an egg in the coop.

A watch was kept to find out which was the profitable member of the flock. The next day there were two eggs, to the confusion of Duryea. Then a double-yoked egg was found, and ever since Duryea has been finding them. He has discovered that three of the pullets are producing these.

Duryea prepares the food for them in private and is confident that he can break the egg-producing record of the community, both as to number and size.

JEWELS.

Every winter fashion leans toward a new vogue in pendants. One year it was the old Italian pattern, with scroll-like devices that satisfied, but this season it's the round shape. A beautiful ornament, intended to be slung upon a short neckchain, shows a serpent coiled within a circle.

The whole design is expressed in enamel of wonderful colors. The serpent in its wisdom is supposed to bring its wearer good luck.

But the vogue for round ornaments does not end there. An old-fashioned locket, bright with new-fashioned Russian enamel wrought upon both sides, has a receptacle lining in the rim which, when pressed, divulges a place inside for a photograph or little gaze d'armour.

Surely the sentimental mid-Victorian spirit has come back, and with it that taste for aromas which makes for a third locket interesting, a pretty trinket with a tiny grille at the back, behind which a wad saturated with concentrated essence is found. No sweeter way of scenting a frock can there be than this of the odorous gems.

The more expensive round lockets are set in lattices or in a solid mass of precious stones, such as diamonds, emeralds and rubies, with pearls to give softness to the scheme.

The fancy for round ornaments extends to brooches. A circle of bright green enamel is broken by a bow of diamonds and pearls, with ends that fall gracefully over the enamel, and that are completed by pear-shaped pearls.

CHURCH MISSION BAND WILL GIVE TWO LITTLE PLAYLETS.

The Sunshine Mission Band, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, will give two little plays on Friday afternoon and evening of this week at 3 and 8 o'clock in the chapel of the church. One of the plays was written by John Jay Chapman and is called "The Lost Prince," and the other is the old favorite of all children, "The Sleeping Beauty," dramatized by Mrs. Hugh Bell.

It will be the first appearance on any stage of many of the actors and a treat is promised the audience. There will be home-made candy for sale. The proceeds will go to the work of the band in supporting mission stations in Syria, China and the Philippines.

The Brotherhood of the First M. E. church will hold an important meeting in Vincent chapel Friday night.

TO CALL HIM AS PASTOR

Park Avenue Congregation Want Rev. Mr. Maguire for Their Minister.

MAKES MARKED IMPRESSION.

Expected That the Trustees Will Issue a Formal Call This Week —Preached Here Twice Yesterday.

Rev. G. R. Maguire, of Cleveland, Ohio, who was invited to preach at the Park Avenue Baptist church, Sunday morning and evening as a candidate, made a most favorable impression, and undoubtedly a call will be extended to him this week to become the pastor of the church to succeed Rev. A. E. Finn. Both services were largely attended by worshippers and all were agreed as to th wisdom of giving Mr. Maguire a call.

In the morning Mr. Maguire preached on the subject of "Faith," and in the evening his theme was "Unselfishness," as exemplified in Christ and the two thieves on the Cross. He pictured Christ as death to sin. Both sermons were practical, straight Gospel talks and in the evening he held the undivided attention of his large congregation for nearly an hour and a quarter.

Mr. Maguire has been offered large sums of money to go on the lecture platform, but he says that he wants to preach the Gospel and will not leave the ministry. He desires to locate near New York and provided a call is extended to him, he will doubtless accept it. He has been highly recommended by Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, formerly of Cleveland. Mr. Maguire now has a church with a membership of nearly nine hundred and preaches every Sunday night to a congregation of over one thousand people. He preaches without notes and is a forceful speaker.

CHILDREN IN HEAVEN SUBJECT OF SERMON

Rev. John Y. Brock, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, preached the sixth in the series of sermons on Heaven Sunday night and had for his topic "Children and Children in Heaven." The subject presented many academic questions and, like others, Pastor Brock finally left the actual solution of some of them to "Him who doeth all things well."

"The question of whether children remain as children as they are taken away in their infancy and whether they go to the city of many mansions is of great importance and future interest to many anxious parents, he said, but it seems impossible that all those little ones who die in infancy should not be saved. It has been estimated that one-half of the population of Heaven will be made up of those who die before they have reached the age of discretion, because one-half of all those who die are taken away in their infancy.

Children belong to God. The faith of the parents will be a safe conduct for their sons and daughters as the Bible teaches us, but what of the children of unbelievers? I believe that all children who have not arrived at the age of discretion will enjoy the many mansions above. Does not Christ tell his disciples when asked who shall be the greatest in the Kingdom of Heaven, that if they wish to even enter there they must become as little children?

Many people raise the question of the unbaptized child. Has he a chance to enter the pearly gates? I unhesitatingly believe that they are lost if they die unbaptized. The thief on the cross was not baptised, yet Jesus said to him, "today thou shalt be with me in Paradise. Peter received the Holy Ghost before he was baptised. Paul was not baptised when he was converted. That ought to answer the question.

As to whether our children will recognize us when we go to the heavenly place, I believe that notwithstanding the faces may change through the ravages of time we will be recognized and welcomed as though he had never been separated. What the limit of our maturity is and the probability of growth there we must leave to Him who doeth all things well for we know as Christ said, "A little child shall lead them."

LEWIS WAS CONFIDENTIAL

Told a Reporter of His Many Benevolences for Henriques Family.

IS BEING PERSECUTED NOW.

Declares He Saved David Henriques From Prison and Others From Financial Stress.

If the story told by Frederick Lewis, the aged prisoner at police headquarters, who is being held pending extradition, is true, then the persons who have caused his arrest on the charge of embezzlement will have some difficulty in proving their case against him. Mr. Lewis was in the mood for talking yesterday and gave a succinct and graphic account of his connection with the Henriques family.

According to the tale, Mr. Lewis was by intermarriage with the family intimately associated with its various members and on one occasion has prevented at least one member from going to prison to pay nothing of the countless number of times he has rescued the entire family from penury and disgrace.

"Why," said Mr. Lewis, "those people instead of having me arrested ought to look upon me as their benefactor. They are ingrates. Once, not so long ago I paid out of my own pocket $450 for board for them so that when they wanted to change from one place to the other they might do so without having trouble about getting their personal belongings.

"On another occasion when the insurance policy for $5,000 which had nearly lapsed because of deferred payments of premiums I stepped into the breach and paid the money, thus securing to the family the full amount of the policy and this I did without ever receiving anything in the way of recompence for my outlay. Then, you know, when David Henriques died I actually took the whole family under my care and looked after them. Then about standing money, why I had no chance to get even what they actually owed me.

"Mrs. Henriques tells the story of one of the family starving to death. Well, as a matter of fact, that is all buncombe. One of the female members of this bunch of people did go to the island, but through no fault of mine. She was sent there for the reason that she was mentally incompetent and had to be sent to some institution for safe keeping and there were other troubles leading up to this which would be out of place to mention in a newspaper.

"I cannot see anything in this whole affair, but a piece of petty spite, which becomes greater by the same means that a little story grows in common gossip. I never handled the sum of money mentioned in the indictment they found against me in New York. Altogether I believe there were $9,000 in the entire estate and that has been accounted for long before now. No, sir, I am not any more guilty of embezzling the money than you are and I am not afraid to go to New York city to face those who would do me further injustice. I fight against it only on account of my son and daughter who will feel the disgrace and obloquy of even the suspicion that their father is dishonest.

Mr. Lewis has some mighty interesting documents to prove at least a part of his contentions and perhaps enough to save him from filling a felon's cell. He is at least optimistic.

This morning it was announced that Robert Newton Crane had withdrawn from the case and that Craig A. Marsh would conduct the further proceedings in person. Mr. Lewis will remain at police headquarters until requisition papers arrive. Assistant Prosecutor Walter Hetfield, Jr., has consented to the arrangement for Lewis' detention here as it involves no expense to the city, Mr. Lewis paying his own board.

The actual process of identification of Lewis by Detective Sergeant Flynn was a simple thing. The photograph of the man was taken so long ago that the features were not easily recognizable, but in the scarf which he wore when the picture was taken appeared a pin peculiar to the fashion of the time and it was through the pin that Detective Flynn's curiosity was excited. Quick comparisons while facing the man on a street car led to closer inspection of the features which finally induced the detective to place Lewis under arrest.

Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of which Miss Bond was a life-long member, officiated and spoke words of eulogy concerning the exemplary Christian life of the departed, which had been lived in a quiet and unassuming way.

There were many beautiful floral tributes from relatives and friends. The burial was in the North Plainfield cemetery and the pall-bearers, all nephews, were Clarence E. Bond, Clarence Leslie Bond, G. P. Hinman, Russell Bond, of this city; Alexander Linnett, Jr., and Edgar B. Linnett, of Newark.

PLAN TRIP TO 'FRISCO ON THEIR BIKES SOON

George Adams and Percy Haberle, two young men of this city, who have achieved considerable fame as bicycle riders, having taken many prizes in competition in road races, are planning to take a trip to California on their wheels. They have not decided just when they will start, but it will doubtless be early this summer as they want to spend the warm weather on the trip.

Both Adams and Haberle are carpenters by trade and they will plan to do odd jobs at their trade en route across the country. If they reach their destination next fall they will be satisfied. The young men believe that the trip will afford an ideal way of spending the summer and at the same time give them a chance to see the country, all of which is new to them.

Adams, who resides on Nethers wood avenue, and who has been working in Newark at his trade, has found abundant exercise and good training in riding his wheel to and from Newark each day when the weather would permit. Both he and Haberle are considered good long distance riders and they have no fear of being unable to cover the distance to the Pacific Coast.

AS WILSON FREDERICK KNEW SENATOR PLATT

Although tributes by the thousands have been paid to former U. S. Senator Thomas C. Platt, president of the U. S. Express Company, whose death occurred in New York on Monday, and who was buried today at his old home and birthplace, Tioga, New York, there are none more eloquent or sincere than the praise bestowed on the dead political leader by Wilson S. Frederick, of Dunellen, the local manager of the U. S. Express Company.

"Mr. Platt was a man of genial nature," said Mr. Frederick to a Daily Press reporter today, "and he was liked by everybody who knew him. As president of the U. S. Express Company, he was beloved by the thousands of employes of the company. Any employe could approach him, even the humblest office boy. The men in the U. S. Express Company will miss him greatly.

"Mr. Platt was a man who was always trying to do good to somebody. His always did it in a quiet way and the outside world will never know the extent of his good deeds. He was always temperate in all things and he never went to extremes. One of Mr. Platt's fine traits was that he never got angry."

Mr. Frederick as he came in contact with Mr. Platt constantly for several years while stationed at the New York offices of the U. S. Express Company.

In speaking of Mr. Platt, Mr. Frederick referred to the time when he was injured in the Westfield wreck seven years ago last January. When the former man was apprised of the accident he telegraphed the New Jersey superintendent of the company to engage as many doctors and nurses as necessary. The telegram read in part: "Get six doctors and nurses if necessary."

FOR CHILDREN'S GOOD

Owen F Lovejoy Tells Why Better Legislation is Needed.

AT CRESCENT AVE. CHURCH.

Urges Men and Women to Use Influence with Senator Ackerman to Favor Bill Before Senate.

Owen R. Lovejoy, general secretary of the National Child Labor Committee, in his lecture before the Men's Club of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church last night besought the influence of the members with Senator Ernest R. Ackerman to urge the passage of the Child Labor bill which is now before the Senate. This bill which prohibits the employment of children under the age of sixteen years in factories has already passed the House and is to come up shortly in the Senate.

Another project which the committee has before the Federal Government is the establishment of what is termed a "Federal Children's Bureau," whose object is to collect and disseminate information affecting the welfare of children, similar to bureaus already established by the Government regarding various forms of our material wealth as Bureaus of Entomology, Chemistry, Animal Industry and the like.

Lindsay Best, president of the club, introduced the speaker of the evening and remarked that the days of Knight Errantry are not gone, in so far as the care of the weaker by the stronger of mankind is concerned. Children being weaker than men are entitled to the chivalrous concern of everybody with red blood in his veins.

Mr. Lovejoy, taking up the theme of chivalry declared that when knighthood was in flower the great principle was to defend the weak and it was even so with primitive man, but with the onrush of commercialism instead of putting the children in the rear with the women they have been rushed to the front to bear the brunt of the fight and those who were strong survived while the weak ones succumbed to the overpowering adversaries, disease and moral obliquity.

Child labor is not accidental nor incidental, it has been a study and there were according to the census of 1900 more than 1,700,000 children employed in factories in these United States, all of whom were under the age of sixteen. After the publication of these figures an investigation was started which revealed that not all of the children were working under conditions which called for more humanitarian conditions so the investigation was partially dropped, but there was enough misery depicted in the reading between lines to cause the formation of the child labor committee which has worked with unflagging zeal ever since. The motto adopted by the committee is "The Evils of Child Labor Must be Abolished."

Methods in vogue in England a couple of centuries ago were worse if anything than some of the conditions here. In those places where children of tender years were chained to the walls of the coal mine were made to do the work of an animal. Farm work at early years does not usually hurt the child in fact he grows stronger with the outdoor air, hearty food and pleasant environment. But these things are not the portion of the sweat shop worker. Their's is the fetid atmosphere, absolute drudgery twelve, fourteen and even eighteen hours every day and night and this is the cause in many thousands of cases of the physical, moral and mental downfall of many of the American born children. This committee wants to show the child the value of honest labor to the betterment of his manhood.

Pennsylvania with its coal mines and factories is one of the worst States in the union for the abuse of the child. Mr. Lovejoy described graphically the conditions under which the boys work at the coal breakers and at the furnaces, telling of the great percentage of accidents to boys as compared to men (300 per cent.) The law which went into effect on January 1 last has been the means of liberating some fifteen thousand boys from the slavery of the mines.

Mr. Lovejoy also paid his respects to a misleading article in one of the recent magazines in which the child labor problem in the cotton mills of the South were held to be the best thing for the children that could be devised. The South is not alone in employing children in its cotton mills for in Rhode Island there exists a similar state of affairs. If we educate all our children, the speaker said, there will be no so-called unskilled laborers by and by. Everything can be done better by the educated laborer than by the one who

The Foresters' reception to be held at the Plainfield theatre, tomorrow night under the auspices of Court Watchung, No. 3871 and Court Plainfield, No. 1144, I. O. F., promises to be full of interest. The affair is arranged in honor of Supreme Chief Ranger Elliott G. Stevenson, of Detroit, Mich., who will make an address. Several selections will be given by the Lotus Glee Club.

F. T. Dickerson, private secretary to Vice-President W. G. Eesler, of the New Jersey Central, will preside at the meeting. There are a few tickets left and they may be secured from Joseph E. Kelly, John F. Casey, A. M. Vanderbeek and Frank E. Woodruff.

Supreme Chief Ranger Stevenson will be entertained by the Elizabeth Foresters tonight and Former Governor Foster M. Voorhees will preside at the reception.

MANY OFFENDERS IN POLICE COURT TODAY

Clifford Hill, of Scotch Plains, was fined five dollars this morning by City Judge William N. Runyon for being drunk and disorderly on Madison avenue last night. Hill caused the arrest of Samuel Hunt, of West Third street, claiming Hunt had robbed him of seven dollars. Hunt escaped with a suspended sentence.

Mrs. Essie Brango, who owns a pair of goats and keeps them on her premises at George street and Jackson avenue, will have to tether them so that they will not break away and annoy the neighbors. Several complaints were made against the animals for foraging on adjourning land. Mrs. Brango promised to chain them up.

Albert Brinkley, of 308 Berkman street, a colored bicycle rider, was caught riding his wheel on the sidewalk yesterday at Woodland avenue and East Seventh street. This morning Judge Runyon warned him that a repetition of the offence would result in a fine.

George Lewis, colored, arrested on complaint of Mrs. Annie Estell, also colored, of West Second street, for assault, was discharged this morning. It was shown that the "green eyed monster" was responsible for the charge.

Somerset stole a bicycle belonging to Walter Kennedy from in front of the First M. E. church last night.

PLEASANT EVENING FOR TRINITY'S ENDEAVORERS.

Under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church, a largely attended business meeting and social was held in the Sunday-school room of the church last night. Only routine matters were considered at the business session.

During the social hour there were piano duets by the Misses Minnie and Marie Hahn, and then games were played. A feature was a guessing contest. A large card-board elaborately decorated and representing pictures of "Cecilia" and "Pocahontas" was displayed. Open spaces were left for the face and various members of the society would stand behind the cardboard show their face and the audience would then guess the name of the person, affording plenty of amusement. Refreshments were served.

The committee in charge comprised Miss May Randolph, chairman, Miss Edna Dilts, Miss Elsie Dunavan, Miss Edna Cole, Miss Marie Hahn, Miss Minnie Hahn, Russell Doeringer, Edward Honeyman, Elmer Gayle and Alfred W. Dunavan.

MISS PETRIE WILL TELL OF THE AMERICAN INDIAN.

The monthly missionary meeting of Warren chapel will be held tonight at the chapel, when Miss Josephine Petrie, the missionary, will give an interesting account of her trip to Alaska. She will tell of the American Indian. There are very few women missionaries who have been to Alaska and Miss Petrie is one of them.

This meeting is held at this time instead of March 21, owing to the fact that the missionary accounts in New York close earlier than usual and the members of the chapel are anxious to make the collections complete tonight.

Home News Buys Building.

The New Brunswick Home News has purchased the building at 127-129 Church street that city where it will remove its plant in the near future.

F. E. Smith, of the grocery firm of J. A. Smith & Co., is detained at home with throat trouble.

BALL CLUB TO GIVE BANQUET TO PLAYERS

At a meeting of the Plainfield Baseball Club last night it was voted to tender a farewell banquet early in April to Clifford Randolph, James Emery and John Martin, former members of the local team, who will play in the the minor league arena during the coming season. The committee in charge is Manager Ernest Dorflinger, Arthur Fluck and Russell Randolph.

The New Jersey League proposition was also discussed. Mr. Dorflinger and Adam Shott were named as a committee to attend the meeting of the league at Perth Amboy next Sunday. A meeting of the club will be held on Tuesday night, March 22 to make a decision on the matter.

Ira Van Arsdale, a former player of the team, was named as umpire for next season.

COPS NEED PISTOL PRACTICE, SO SAYS MRS. VICTORISON

According to Mrs. Oscar Victorison, of Summit avenue, some Plainfield cop is badly in need of practise in marksmanship. Mr. Victorison had a dog. The animal wandered away from home on Sunday and bit a woman on Watchung avenue. A local cop captured the canine and telephoned to police headquarters for instructions.

"Shoot the dog" was the order that came back on the wires.

The cop, therefore, tied the dog to a tree and drew his trusty revolver from his pocket. Taking aim he fired twice at the dog at short range. Two of the bullets hit the dog, one missed, while the final shot ploughed through the rope and enabled the bullet loaded dog to make its escape.

Yesterday the dog returned home in a suffering condition. Mrs. Victorison called in Dr. L. S. Pocock, a veterinary surgeon, and he recommended that the dog be shot, as there was no chance of saving its life. The dog went to the land where all good bow-wows go at 10 o'clock this morning.

LEWIS THOMAS IS ILL IN THE PHILIPPINES

Word has been received by relatives of Lewis Thomas, the former local newspaper reporter, that he is seriously ill in the Philippine Islands. Mr. Thomas was stricken down with a fever several months ago and the last heard from him was that he is still in the hospital. His relatives are trying to prevail on him to return home soon as he is able to make the long trip.

Mr. Thomas laid down the pad and pencil in local newspaperdom nine years ago next August, when he went to the Islands as a school teacher in the employ of the Taft party. He taught school for one year and then quit to engage in mercantile pursuits with a large American trading company. He has traveled all through the Archipelago and has been successful.

MRS. SHERIDAN DEAD AT THREE SCORE AND TEN.

Mrs. Bridget Sheridan, widow of the late James Sheridan, died at the home of a daughter on West Second street last night after an illness which dated back to January. She was about seventy years of age. She was a native of Ireland where she was married. About fifty years ago Mr. and Mrs. Sheridan came to America and for twenty-two years she had been a resident of this city. Mr. Sheridan died fourteen years ago.

Eight children survive the deceased, Mrs. John Cahill, Mrs. George Hipp, and three sons, Thomas, Peter and Philip, of this city, and three other daughters, Mrs. William Gray, of Meriden, Mrs. Arthur Youngman, of New York, and Miss Annie Wallace, of Brooklyn. The funeral arrangements will be announced tomorrow.

Trolley Frightened Horse.

A horse attached to a delivery wagon belonging to Frank Neidig and driven by Bert Mulford, was frightened by a trolley car on Somerset street yesterday afternoon and ran away. Mulford secured control of the animal before any damage resulted.

Always the Same Story.

A woman on Park avenue lost a black satin waistcoat dress on Saturday, and it was found by Charles Curran, a blackson of 469 West Third street, a reader of The Daily Press, who saw the advertisement in this newspaper, and returned to the owner.

ORGANIZE A CIVIC CLUB

Municipal Problems are Discussed by Men Who Form a Society.

OPPOSE PERSONAL TAX IDEA.

Water Scheme and Sanitary Garbage Collection Also Topics at a Truly Interesting Meeting of the Body.

The Plainfield Civic Club is the new name given to the Plainfield Board of Trade auxiliary, which has been known as the Board of Trade Class and the Board of Trade Debating Society, during its brief, but active existence. The name was adopted unanimously at the meeting of the organization which was conducted at the Plainfield Business College. President Jeffery announced that there would be no dues or cumbersome rules but when funds were needed for incidental expenses he would pass the hat among the members.

The program arranged for last night was a discussion of the water question, but owing to the inability of Councilman Mygatt to be present, owing to pressure of councilmanic duties, the subject was discussed in an informal manner along with the personal tax question, sewers, sidewalks and the postal savings bill, which is now before Congress.

In the discussion of the measure which recently passed the Assembly and is now in the Senate making a $200 exemption on personal property Council No. 1, Woolston, of the borough, and Mr. Jeffery endorsed the bill in plain language. The arguments which were put forth resulting in a resolution being adopted urging Senator E. R. Ackerman to use his best efforts to have the measure passed in the Senate. Speaking in favor of the measure Mr. Woolston said in part:

"I don't know whether you gentleman know it or not, but we have a system of taxation in this State which only effects the poor. I refer to the personal tax law which I claim is manifestly unjust. We live here and the matter should be righted. There are lots of people who should be exempt. The poor people are being taxed out of proportion to their means. There are pictures hanging on the walls of the homes of rich men, worth far more than the poor man's furniture that are not taxed at all."

Mr. Woolston cited an incident which came under his observation in the borough recently and called attention to his hearers that the bill to exempt personal property taxation to the sum of $200 is now before the Senate and that efforts should be made to have it passed. Mr. Woolston also rapped the assessors of Newark who recently opposed the passage of the bill in the House. He declared that these assessors represented 40,000 small assessments.

Mr. Jeffery declared he was glad to see that the people are waking up on the subject of taxation. He declared himself in favor of having the personal tax law eliminated altogether and in referring to the present he said:

"A $200 exemption is charity; the people don't want charity, but want justice. A personal property tax is either right or wrong. The people who have lots swear it off, but the people who don't have lots of it, can't afford it to. I believe in paying to the government in proportion to what one receives.

"The personal property tax operates hard on the farmer. The tiller of the soil is taxed for his horses, wagons and cows and on every head, while the man who owns stocks and bonds escape. The farmer is always caught with the goods on.

"I want to go on record as favoring the exemption of all personal property taxes. The government has no business to collect taxes in that manner, no more right to do so, than it did in taking slaves. There is too much government interference nowadays.

F. A. Duttenhoffer also echoed the sentiments expressed by Messrs. Woolston and Jeffery. He declared that there are many rich and that there are lots of people not paying one cent personal taxes who should be paying.

Mr. Woolston also had something to say on the water question. He declared he is not in sympathy with the present movement for municipal ownership of a water plant. Plainfielders, he said, should be thankful that they are able to get good water at reasonable rates.

"I think the city should have owned its water works when it had an opportunity. A charter was kicking around for $200 or $300 a number of years ago, but the Council would not touch it; today it will cost one million dollars.

Plain Field Notes and Queeries

By Druid

Did anyone notice, would anyone condescend to notice, the paragraph in the New York papers a few days ago about a reception given by a prominent family in Brooklyn in honour of a distinguished guest? The name of the guest is Emma Scarborough Jerrybanks Du Botes. Honours of this kind go pretty cheaply nowadays but this one was richly earned by twenty-one years of faithful skilled service as cook in the house of Mr. George F. Elliott, of Clermont avenue. The honours are even in the cook. Not the family only but their friends joined in the tribute and gave it an extra substantial value. We hear the perpetual wailings of the rich over the alleged scarcity of good servants. We know their pitiable prejudice against negro servants. If every household mistress and the young folks would but follow the example of the Elliotts in their dealings with their negro cook—which is simply following the golden rule in spirit and in fact—this humiliating exhibition of failure would soon end. Domestic service in good families is a good fortune to the servant and a good test of practical goodwill in households. May it become the rule!

* * *

In the course of a lengthy talk in his office a good many years ago, the late Col. Ingersoll surprised the present writer by a vigorous, almost violent, expression of his patriotic contempt of England and all things English, which has at last caused me into an almost slavish adoption of her fashions in dress, sports, games, books, habits, accents, slang and certain admirable reforms. The newspapers then gave very little space to English news, though reprinting its intellectual output as liberally as they do now. But how different to-day. The Sun actually devotes about four columns the other day to the opening of Parliament, reporting the proceedings as fully as a London paper, and we were reading it here within twelve hours of the event. This time as an appendix to comment on the sagacity of the voluble orator's outburst that day—"If I owned the New York Herald I wouldn't print one damned line of English news or anything else English! What do we want with England? What do we care for England? When I was over there, wherever I went I was made to feel I was sitting below the salt." It was amusing, more so than his funny stories, and we parted more cordially than we had met.

* * *

This incident is recalled by a column in last Sunday's Times. It is headed, "New field found for moving pictures; scientists expect valuable results from photographing chemical processes." It adds, "Already used in Europe." It reports that the N. Y. Board of Education gave a demonstration of films, showing test tubes, greatly enlarged, of silver wire in the process of being dissolved by nitric acid; "the action of aqua regia on metallic gold; the electrolysis of water," and other such wonders of science, doubtless familiar to every small schoolboy in this super-educated community but of which I am utterly and gratefully ignorant. They also showed the house-fly laying its eggs "in unsavory places, there you saw the eggs developing into a heap of wriggling maggots," and so on.

The curious thing, however, is the remark which follows the above: "These films were merely samples of what is done abroad, and are not at all the best done in this line, but merely the best yet attainable in the United States, for the scientific end has been made more thoroughly developed in Europe."

* * *

In speaking of this there is not the slightest element of unfriendliness, but simply a desire to let readers, and young students generally, know that there are very many matters which the papers not only do not let them know, but often minimize or colour their accounts of what is reported. Twenty years ago perhaps 50,000 tourists went to Europe. They did practically nothing, on their return, to correct wrong impressions of England. Now that there are nearer 250,000 trippers, even our children are gaining truer knowledge of the world and in front of the greater movements of progress. They should learn this from their school-books first, it matter-of-fact history is useful knowledge. Quite thirty years ago there were public entertainments in which stereopticons showed us a drop of stagnant water in a little tank, and the microscopic lens treated us to the sight of a six-foot tank with monstrous snakes, elephants, tea serpents, giant tadpoles, etc., all a-wriggling in agony as the intense heat of the lamp was boiling them alive, and as they died they shot up to the surface of the water, which of course gradually ate the bottom to which they dropped. And I said the electric sparks fly from the generator —the biggest at that date—across a large platform with a loud slap and strike a plate of brass held by the inventor. "We have not had those films over here," said Mr. Colller to the Education Board, "and will not until there is a demand."

*Last Sunday's World gave the portraits of three "inventors and designers of a new turbine engine," which is to revolutionize the construction of the U. S. navy. They are George Westinghouse, the famous inventor and maker of electric and other machines; Admiral Melville, retired, and John H. Macalister, this hard-headed Scotch associate," the civil engineer. Everyone has read or heard of the wonderful turbine engines which were put into the Mauretania, the Lusitania, and other giant steamers some years ago. But no name has not been informed that these adaptation of the turbine principle to ships was invented, completed, and installed by Charles Algernon Parsons, after years of perseverance and the expenditure of a goodly fortune. He happens to be the fourth son of the third Earl of Rosse, himself a practical engineer of the unpretentious kind as to dress and manner. His elder brother, the present Earl, has been President of the Dublin University since 1885, and his grandfather built the famous great telescope known by his name, on his Irish estate; it long remained the largest in the world. These three eminent Americans only chose to have invented and improved ment in Parson's invention, but it is the habit to glorify followers as if they were pioneers nowadays. Rosse is not the only name in the House of Lords distinguished in science, scholarship and practical business.

NOVEL VEGETABLE DISH.

Among the new table dishes of imitation Sheffield, which is of silver on nickle, instead of copper, there is one which should strongly appeal to the housewife with a small family. They are also excellent for apartment houses where only two or three persons are served at one table.

There is a deep bowl of the Sheffield, in which hot water will be put, and fitted into this is a dish which holds four or six different vegetables. The divisions slant from a central standard. The top fits tightly over the outside bowl.

The steam from the hot water keeps the vegetables hot, and the dish is quite a decorative one for the maid to pass. That it saves service and adds to the quietness of presenting vegetables to the guests after the meat one can see at a glance.

Macarino and Cheese.

Two tablespoonfuls macaroni, one and one-half cupfuls boiling water, two tablespoonfuls cheese, one-fourth teaspoonful salt, one-half cupful white sauce, six tablespoonfuls buttered crumbs. Break macaroni and wash thoroughly. Place water in upper portion of double boiler, add one-eighth teaspoonful salt, and, when boiling rapidly add the macaroni. Boil five minutes over direct heat, then place upper in lower portion of double boiler and cook one hour. Drain off surplus water. Cover the bottom of a buttered baking dish with a layer of macaroni and layer of white sauce and sprinkle with cheese. Repeat until dish is full, omitting cheese from the top layer. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake until white sauce bubbles and crumbs are browned.

For Soiled Clothing.

Brush the garments carefully first and then apply the liquid with a woolen cloth, going religiously ever every spot. This should be done with care, using especial diligence with the soiled spots. After sponging dampen the garment and before the garment is thoroughly dried press it between two dark cloths. Soap bark is an effective cleaner of woolen skirts, and men's clothes, as it is a quick eradicator of grease and dirt. Get five cents worth of the soap bark, pour it over a quart of boiling water, steep it gently over a fire for two hours, keeping the heat low so that the water will not boil away. Then strain through a piece of cheesecloth and it is ready to use.

One Lapel.

The single lapel is sufficient unto the day and might be a new long coat. It is faced with beautiful embroidery and weighted down by means of a long tassel at the point. It is extremely large, and falls from the chin to the waist in a ripple. At the wearer's mouth the lapel may be taken and thrown over one shoulder so that the tasseled part will hang at the back. In front the throat and chest will be coily covered. It is a charming idea when making a walking or motor coat.

Ball Club Organizes.

The South Plainfield Sunday Baseball Club has organized for the season with Frank Mullin as captain and Peter McDonough manager. The club will play the Elcid A. C., of Rahway, at Rahway, on May 1, and will play all out-of-town games during May, and at South Plainfield for the rest of the summer. A practise game will be played with the Crystal Club on April 24. The lineup will be a strong one and new uniforms will be purchased.

One on the Critic.

"That comic opera of yours gave me a pain," said the critic.

"Well," replied the author of the opera, "you shouldn't have laughed so much."—Yonkers Statesman.

Hard to Portray.

"I don't think the book will dramatize well."

"Why not?"

"The hero has a good many mental struggles, but them kind of combats don't go well on the stage."

INTELLECT VERSUS BEAUTY

"If your fairy godmother were to give you a choice between a gift of beauty or intellect, which would you select?"

This question was thrown with bombshell force into the midst of a circle of young women, and the conversational ball was juggled and tossed by each in turn.

"Beauty, decidedly," said one maid, who makes it a point to yearn for the unattainable. "I have watched the beautiful woman in all phases and it is she that holds most power. Who has changed the lives of most men? The beautiful woman. Of whom does the poet sing in iambics and all other meters in the catalogue? Is it the woman who is personally unattractive? Never. He chooses the lovely eyes, hair, lips, hands, voice—anything that is beautiful—and tunes his song accordingly. I know—because—well, I, at least, can give an unbiased opinion."

"Yes, I agree with you," added another one of the compatables, as she thoughtfully threaded her needle. "The woman who is beautiful holds men and women under her sway. You hear your brothers or your men friends positively rave over lovely Jessica, while sensible Jane remains unnoticed. You have listened to remarks like that, most of them underlying theme from women. But it means that beauty is important enough to secure recognition, even from enemies."

"I always wished to be beautiful," said the drone of the hive, "because beauty is the excuse for being. People, for some queer reason, never expect he pretty girl at the picnic to prepare the potato salad. She can drape herself over the tree stump and gurgle out pretty nothings to two of the most interesting men of the party."

"The beautiful are never desolate. But some one always loves them."

"Do you think those creatures of the male persuasion ever appreciate Mary-at-the-coffee-pot as the plain, efficient dishwasher? Ah, no! Their pulses are beating to the time of a pretty face."

"But do the men marry the pretty girls?" queried the fairest of the lot.

"I am sorry to dash your hopes, but they as a class do not. The foolish, fluffy one may be taken to his heart, but when it enters the masculine mind to settle down to his own fireside he deserts the woman who elicited his verse."

"Give me intellect," said one who had remained silent during beauty's reign. "Intellect itself can never become freckled or sunburned; it can withstand the increased years, profiting by age.

"An intellectual woman is a joy to her friends and to herself. If these friends desert her, she has something within herself on can read besides a pretty hand. There is nothing like the deep, sincere admiration for your learning. Hand in hand you and an intellectual friend can pass through the endless realm of knowledge, and thoroughly will both enjoy the companionship. This is possible between women, too—a great thing in its favor.

"While you are recovering from your last discourse let me add a thought," one sensible girl said. "Did it ever occur to you that beauty as a factor in life destroys, while intellect constructs? I don't like to represent our lovely friends as refined vampires, but the balance is on the hearts, ideals and homes laid waste."

"Again, I wish to ask, do the men marry their intellectual friends?" came from the hitherto.

"No! They are afraid of her for a wife. Man always wishes to teach his mate—everything. He enjoys the enlightening of her mind and balks at the thought of his wife's knowing more than he. He must have an ignorious. His wife must stand at the Pierian spring and receive refreshment from his hand."

"I suppose the woman who has a suggestion of beauty and just enough wisdom to conceal it is the one who is successful with a man, matrimonially speaking."

"I believe you are right," each of the contributors agreed.

"Suppose we drown this question and any of our disappointments at our faces in some tea," their hostess suggested.

PARTNERS.

Our old friend, Egg,
Staid as a clam,
For months doth peg
Along with Ham.

They pass around
And always seem,
Wherever found,
A worthy team.

But yuletide days
Excite Egg some,
And he essays
To shake his chum.

And for awhile
Along doth jog
In reckless style
With festive Nog.

Series Special Sermons.

Rev. C. L. Goodrich, of the Congregational church, will on Sunday, March 13, begin a series of monthly sermons to the younger boys and girls following the regular sermon. Children who are not present at the beginning of the service will be ushered in at 11:30 o'clock.

ORATORS ANNOUNCED FOR ELIZABETH DINNER

Plans which have been completed for the annual dinner of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick at Elizabeth indicate that the program to be pre*sented this year will rank with the* most successful ever preapred by the organization. The demand for tickets has forced the committee to limit their sale somewhat in view of the fact that only 120 diners can be accommodated in the Y. M. C. A. hall in that place, where the affair has been given for years past. It is evident that there would be an immediate demand for three times this number of tickets if they were to be disposed of, and never in the history of the local branch of the Friendly Sons has greater interest been manifested in the St. Patrick's Day program.

As in the past special attention has been given to the selection of speakers for the affair and the list of those who will respond to toasts include some of the best known orators in this section of the country. The opening toast, "Our Country," will be responded to by Thomas A. Davis, of Orange, a judge of the Court of Common Pleas. Peter A. O'Boyle, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., will speak on "the Influence of Irish Character on National Destiny." Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, president of the Senate, will respond to the toast, "New Jersey;" the Rev. Joseph J. Kirklin, of Philadelphia, one of the most eloquent speakers among the clergy of the Pennsylvania city, will speak on "Ireland's Call to Celebrate," and John J. Tracy, of Jersey City, will have "The Women of Erin" as the theme for his address.

There will be impromptu addresses as usual by officers and past officers of the Friendly Sons, as well as by guests, and the committee looks forward to another of the oratorical feats which in the past have helped to lift the social affairs of the Friendly Sons of Elizabeth out of the rut of ordinary banquets.

The menu will be in charge of Purcell, of Orange, as usual, the floral decorations will be provided by Leahy, Laggren Brothers will have the decorating of the banquet chamber and music will be furnished by Professor Wetter. C. Arthur Baker, the New York comedian who has endeared himself to the Friendly Sons by his artistic handling of the entertainment programs in the past, will be on hand again to lead the choruses.

SENTENCE SERMONS.

Men seek for honors often because they have lost honor.

Forgetfulness of self is the secret of finding satisfaction in life.

Sorrow is heaven's school, where we learn the alphabet of love.

A man is to be known by his goal rather than by his genealogy.

The best thing that a loving heaven is endeavor to bring it here.

It is easy for a man who amounts to nothing to give himself away.

Deceit usually has a good start in the man who boasts of his diplomacy.

He soon loses faith in the poor who tries to feed them with fine words.

No man is uncommonly good who does not help make goodness common.

One of the blessings of being needy is that there are always some who are more so.

Some think they are standing by the faith when they are but frozen in their tracks.

Many a man shows his faith in the wisdom of his God by offering a dime to cover a dollar sin.

It is no use prescribing the Gospel to a sick world unless you commend it by a healthy life.

People who run around in a circle usually hire a calliope to call attention to their progress.

Heaven is going to be a strenuous place for some who have spent their lives running after bliss.

There is a lot of difference between the people who take a front row at the feast and those who hold it in the fight.

Some sinners do not repent because they fear there would not be enough joy in heaven over the event to satisfy them.—Chicago Tribune.

Changes Contemplated.

Among the reports handed in to the Navy Department recently was one recommending certain changes to be made to the uniform shirt for the enlisted men. As a matter of briefness, it was headed:

"Commander-in-chief desires to change shirts."—Harper's Magazine.

A Hard Knock.

Proud Father— Bless me, it's really marvelous about that baby of mine. You'll hardly credit it, but every time it looks up into my face it smiles—positively smiles.

The Friend—Well, I suppose even a baby has some sense of humor.—The Sketch.

Shadow Lace.

This is new, and because of its unobtrusive patterns can be used in great quantities without fear of overdecoration. The pattern is woven in such a way that an uncertain shadowy effect is produced. It is especially lovely in black and cream. The black shadow lace is used over black net and a white satin undership. The cream is effective over pale tints in evening gowns.

FISK JUBILEE SINGERS AT CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

A large audience greeted the Fisk Jubilee Quartet at the Congregational church Friday and gave them a cordial greeting. The entertainment was given under the auspices of the Men's Club of the church, and was delightful from beginning to end. The quartet, composed of J. W. Work, first tenor; J. A. Myers, second tenor and elocutionist; A. G. King, first bass, and W. W. Ryder, second bass, gave enough sympathetic and heart reaching interpretations of negro melodies as to awaken the emotion of everyone in the audience.

The old songs, like "Old Black Joe," "Swanee River," "Hallelu' Lu'i Da'rid," "Another Witness for the Lord," were sung with a fidelity of darky expression that reminded one of New Orleans and the levee, only it was much more effective musically. Classical music as it all was there came into the program as anthem, while the clever quartet was prompt to sing inaccompanied and minus the score. Yet Nevins' great anthem, "Remember Thy Creator," chiefly remarkable for its quaint minor subtleties was sung beautifully by these men. This composition evoked the greatest applause of the evening.

Mr. Myers, who rendered several of Paul Lawrence Dunbar's poems captivated the audience at his first essay and his reciting of "Two Li'l Boots," brought tears to many eyes. Taken altogether the entertainment was an exceptionally fine one. The quartet were libral in responding to encores.

MR. AND MRS. SMALLEY MARRIED 25 YEARS

RESERVE QUALITY EVERY WOMAN OUGHT TO HAVE.

It was George MacDonald, in one of his delightful tales, who said of somebody that she would have been more of a woman had she thought less of being a lady.

He spoke the truth, for, verily, that seems the poorest, cheapest way of all to accomplish the long desired —"the ladylike." The very term is not so satisfactory as is "the womanly."

Gentlel and ladylike go hand in hand, and may they go far and stay long. We need them not in this day of the capable, the genuine and womanly woman.

There was once a gentle creature, she of the black lace shawl, who swayed the social world in bygone days when men were lords and their wives were ladies. The black lace shawl, the comero pin and the mitts have gone, but we want the wearer back. We yearn for her influence in the everyday walks of life, where the masterful woman dominates or the would-be lady falls short of her own ambitions, and our ambitions for her.

Being a lady is all to frequently but a superficial attempt on the part of those who have but lately taken upon themselves the avocation of a gentlewoman. With them there is lacking, almost inevitably, reserve, the controlled restraint born of generations of culture. Reserve should be spelled over and over again in capital letters by those who still are students in this estimable school. Its initial R should be worn upon the breast and shield her against the first and most important among the canons of good taste.

Being a lady means, in the estimation of each one of us, some slightly different thing, but were a public definition asked, it is doubtful whether there would come in one answer that did not bring in the personal equation. Each sensitive woman among women has it within her to resent the too close personal touch upon some one vital or intimate subject. Each intrusion is resented by us either with disdain or met with dignity; but it is none the less apparent to the dignified that the offender has somehow overstepped them ark.

Strange things are perpetrated in the name of common, ordinary politeness; women or whom it is not expected to show a sistery interest in us and try to take our money reach, and in this generous effort they even venture to tell us some too roundabout way, how near it comes to reaching, how much (or how little) we have.

They try sometimes—indeed, quite frequently—to rear our children. This seems to be the especial privilege of some ladies. In a moment of further reform they would make over our wayward brother, whom we pray for, but rarely mention: they would even improve our husband. It is safer and kinder to assume than to inquire about the improvement in their own.

The more curious among them, still calling themselves ladies and honestly believing themselves to be such, so far misunderstand the boundaries that must always exist between person and person as to make inquiries in public which they could not hope to have answered in private, if they understood. They try to make their own and all the world's secrets which was yours or mine alone. They would force an entrance where no one else has ever knocked. They would storm the portals of the holy of holies. They positively elect to break down the barrier which stands for the sacredness of personal seclusion. They disturb the silence of a grief under which we are bowed.

We forgive the climber much, but these things never. Being a lady would seem to be beset with many difficulties. Women may lapse in sundry little ways which may be overlooked, so long as they do not offend in matters of fine personal feeling.

By their reserve shall ye know them.

A FRENCH TOILET TABLE.

Although Empire decorations are not quite so fashionable as in the past, there are many pretty things made in that style which merit the favor given to all that is beautiful and elegant. Attention is drawn to the decoration of a toilet table, which, by the exactitude of details strictly followed, would be worthy of figuring at the Empire palace.

The central piece constitutes in itself a real work of art It is a "Psyche" in miniature, whose little towers of pearl, incrusted with green gold, support a mirror framed with the same metal and delicately decorated with wreaths of laurels.

Candlesticks with two branches, of the purest Empire style, admirably finished, are placed on either side on a set of square boxes. There appear again pearl decorations beneath gold trellisses, crossed over with laurel garlands of different tones.

TO AWAIT EXTRADITION

Frederick Lewis, Alleged Embezzler, is Held in $5,000 Bonds.

AMOUNT INVOLVED IS $40,000.

Because of Crime, Says Widow Who Appeared At Hearing Today.

Frederick Lewis, the alleged embezzler of $12,900 from the Henriques estate in New York, was arraigned this morning before City Judge William N. Runyon and bail fixed at $5,000. He will be held pending the honoring of extradition papers by Governor Fort. Robert Newton Evans appeared for the prisoner while Assistant Prosecutor Walter Hetfield, Jr., looked after the interests of the New York authorities.

Mrs. Florence Henriques, of 343 St. Nicholas avenue, New York appeared in court Saturday, but was not called upon to do anything but identify Lewis. Later in the interview after the hearing Mrs. Henriques declared that the amount of the indictment does not begin to cover the actual amount with which Lewis absconded. She said the original estate amounted to four times the amount on which the indictment is based, but because of the embezzlement the other members of the family had been reduced to absolute penury, several of them having had to accept charity, one sister going to an asylum for the poor and blind while others have wrested a living as best they could. At least one of the younger members of the family has starved to death.

Mrs. Henriques was bitter in her denunciation of the man whom she avers has wrecked what was once one of the most comfortably situated of the old Spanish families in New York. When Lewis took charge of the estate as trustee there was something like forty thousand dollars clear for the use of the family, but when he left for parts unknown last June not a vestige of the money or property was left. It is the old tale of misplaced confidence, it would seem, as he, alleged, secured his influence with the elder Henriques by false or forged credentials, this discovery having been made after his disappearance.

In court this morning Lewis asked the judge for permission to make a statement and Judge Runyon said he could do so short by a question by Mr. Hetfield, who wanted to know why, if he were innocent of the crime with which he was charged, he did not return to New York and face his accusers. The old man, he is seventy-three years old, had no reply to this question, but declared that the estate was indebted to him for moneys loaned before and since the alleged defalcation. Mrs. Henriques' lips curled in contempt at the old rogue's story (she called him an old rogue) and afterwards would not speak to him together unprincipled and ought to be made to restore what he had stolen.

Lewis must still possess some money, as he has hired Professor James Finnerty, the physical culture artist, to stay with him while he is in jail, and the latter is now in attendance. Unless bail is furnished by next Monday Lewis will be taken to Elizabeth to await his extradition to New York. Lewis has a son and daughter living in New York, but his wife died some time ago. He is a white haired, genial, benevolent looking man, straight and soldierly in and of commanding figure, and while being sized up by a curious crowd this morning only betrayed his emotion by a constant shifting of his eyes and an occasional shrug of the shoulders.

Counsellor Crane made a plea for low bail in the case, but Mr. Hetfield opposed him believing, as he said, that if a small amount were set the old man would effect a getaway and leave his bondsmen to foot the bill. Detective Lieutenant Russo accompanied Mrs. Henriques from New York Saturday and will stay here to await the papers needed to take Lewis to the city.

LIKE A ROSE.

The workbag that looks like a rose is as ornamental as it is useful. Never in the history of bag making have ideas soared so high. The present-day bag is ravishing in color, and has taken on many remarkable shapes. Those that are rose-like in appearance offer an unusual opportunity for the incorporation of the beautiful, deep rose-colored satin ribbons. Petals of six-inch width fold upward like the outer petals of a rose over a centre of pink and yellow pompadour ribbon shirred into the shape of a round bag. Both are fastened to a round bottom, and the upper edges of the petals are rolled between thumb and finger and slipstitched into a curled edge. They are merely tacked against the sides of the bag as loosely as possible, so that they will retain the flower shape.

CHANGE MILK ORDINANCE

Health Board Has Also Inspected Bakeries, Barber Shops and Dairies.

RESULTS OF MONTH'S WORK.

Thirty Cases of Communicable Diseases Reported 38 Births and 35 Deaths and 15 Marriages.

A draft of the new milk ordinance was submitted to the board for their consideration. This ordinance will probably go into effect about the first of June.

Forty-two dairies and ten bottling places were inspected during the month, according to the reports submitted at the monthly meeting of the City Board of Health Wednesday afternoon. Improvements are being made in the majority of the dairies. One dairy was shut off from supplying milk in the city as the owner refused to make the necessary improvements. Twenty-eigh milk wagons were also inspected and the majority were found to be in a good condition. Thirty-three stores from which milk is sold, were inspected during the month, in addition to the above, and the conditions under which the milk is kept, were found to be very gratifying.

Four samples of cream and sixty-five samples of milk were analyzed, thirty-three of the latter were from stores, thirty from the regular dealers, one from Muhlenberg Hospital and one brought to the office. The analysis shows the milk to be of very good quality.

During the past month, a number fo bakeries were inspected and inspections given to the employes to read and live up to the requirements of the State law. One bakery was found to be especially dirty and unsanitary and fifteen days were given the owners to comply with the State law; otherwise the product of this bakery will be prohibited from being sold in the city.

A sample of city water was taken and sent to the laboratory of hygiene at Trenton, for analysis, which proved it to be of the usual good quantity. The posting of the anti-spitting notices in conspicuous places was continued during the month, although no arrests have been made up to the present time, several persons have been warned that a second offense would result in their arrest.

All barber shops were inspected during the month and conditions found were good. The number of inspections made in connection with plumbing, were 59; number inspections made in connection with milk supply, 113; number miscellaneous inspections made, 295; total, 467. Number houses disinfected during month, 3; number of rooms disinfected during month, 110.

The bonds submitted by the following plumbers were received and ordered filed: P. E. Neylon, Nicholas Cody, James M. Frazee, A. L. Carney, Vail Bros. and Daniel W. Hibbitts; A. R. Mills and Joseph Heach, foreman for Mr. Mills.

The following returns were made during February: Marriages, 15; births, 38; still-births, 2; deaths, 35. The following table gives the deaths at all ages: Under one month, 2; one month to one year, 5; one year to five years, 2; five years to twenty years, 0; twenty years to forty, 9; forty years to sixty years, 3; over sixty years, 14.

The number of communicable diseases reported during February was thirty, and there were four deaths There were fourteen scarlet fever cases, one typhoid fever, nine of measles, two of chicken-pox and four of tuberculosis. There were three deaths from tuberculosis and one from scarlet fever.

HUGH GORMLEY TO START A RIDING SCHOOL HERE.

Hugh Gormley, of Kensington avenue, has purchased the property on Kensington avenue, near Putnam, comprising a tract of land 125x175, on which is a large stable, and he proposes to establish a riding school there in the fall. The property was owned by J. C. Smith, of Newark.

Mr. Gormley plans to move the stable to the rear of the lot, clear the land of trees and otherwise improve it. At present Mr. Gormley has a large number of pupils who he is teaching to ride horseback and his recent purchase will afford him an excellent opportunity to increase his class.

Belated Marriage Announcement.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Katherine Henry, daughter of William H. Henry, of Astor place, and James Ennis, of 449 West Third street. The couple was married on August 13 last at Elizabethport. The wedding was not kept a secret, the parents of both the bride and groom knowing of it, but no public announcement was made. The couple is residing at 136 Central avenue.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF COL. JOHN DIETRICH

The funeral of Col. John Dietrich was held at 2:30 Thursday afternoon from his late home, "The Margaret," on Arlington avenue, and was largely attended by friends and neighbors. Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, officiated and he made eulogistic remarks concerning the life and character of the dead man.

Col. Dietrich, who was almost ninety years of age, had been a resident of this city about thirty years and was a familiar figure about town. He always took a lively interest in local affairs and had a host of friends. The burial took place in Hillside Cemetery besides the grave of Mrs. Dietrich.

THREE PLAINFIELD BOYS TO PLAY IN LEAGUES

Three Plainfield boys will be found playing ball in the minor league ranks next season, Cliff Randolph, who will swirl again for Binghamton in the New York State League; Jim Emery, who will play in the infield for the York (Tri-State League) team, and "Jack" Martin, who will be with Worcester in the New England League.

Randolph started to condition himself for the season yesterday in the Hope chapel gymnasium. Cliff tips the scales at 178 pounds which represents a gain of eight pounds during the off season. The Grant avenue boy, however, is not worrying over his avordupois, but he is devoting his attention to unlimbering the muscles in his pitching wing by swinging the dumbbells and executing similar stunts.

Jack Warner, the veteran catcher will manage Binghamton this year and under the coaching of this old campaigner, Randolph should round into an experienced twirler by the end of the season. Randolph has the confidence of the union while last year was a bit green. Speaking to a Daily Press reporter yesterday Randolph said:

"My arm never felt better at this time of the year. I am working it out gradually in the cage and gym," and I expect that 1910 will be my banner season. My experience last year at Binghamton was of the best sort. I didn't know the batters when I went there but now I know the weak and strong points of all of them."

"Jack" Martin is anxious to hear the ring of the bell at Worcester. Jack had little chance to show last season as he joined the team late. Jesse Burkett, the manager, however has informed Martin that the local boy will be given a fair opportunity to make a place on the team this spring, and Jack is confident that he will fill the bill.

"I understand I am one of a bunch of infield candidates," said Martin to a Daily Press man last night, "but you can put down a bet that I will make 'em all hump for the job. I got a line on the speed of the league last season and I am sure I'll make good."

Martin has adopted roadwork as his style of preliminary training for the purpose of getting his wind powers in perfect working order. Jack realizes that base-running is one of the potent factors for a leaguer and he will lay big stress in his efforts to reach the Blue Line Flyer rate.

Jimmy Emery writes from Pittsburg, where he is employed, that he will report at York on April 1. Emery is stationed at third base for Plainfield last season and was signed for the Tri-State aggregation by Scout Ernest Dorflinger, of this city. Emery is a fast man and he has rosy prospects of making good in his first dive in the league pool.

PLEASING PERFUME.

Some women are very fond of perfuming their clothes so that they will waft a delightful aroma wherever they go. Violet sachets or powders are the smartest, and, indeed, there are people who say any other perfume is vulgar. But scented lotion may be liked and found useful for the perfuming of gloves and slippers, which should be sponged inside with it. Take an extract of ambergris two drops only and of spirits of wine one ounce or, to make a more plentiful supply, proceed in this proportion, and the result will be found to be a oddly refreshing hint of lavender aroma.

A fragrant perfume for putting up into little bags to lay among linen or dresses is made by taking one ounce each of cloves, carraway seeds, nutmeg, mace, cinnamon and tonquin beans and adding as much base for the orris root as will equal all the other ingredients put together. Grind the whole to a fine powder and put it into muslin bags.

Plainfield Elks Win.

Plainfield took two out of three games from Newark in an Elks' League series on Campbell's alleys Friday night. The series was devoid of any sensational work by either team, the finest performance of the evening being executed by the locals in the initial clash when the visitors were taken into camp by the score of 915 to 824. In this game Blatz registered a score of 215.

CASE IS MADE A JUDGE

Legislature Removes Legal Obstacle to Confirmation of Appointee.

SUCCEEDS LEWIS H. SCHENCK.

Assemblyman W. W. Smalley Also Has Bill Pass Giving $1,500 Salary to Assistant Prosecutors.

The bill fathered by Assemblyman W. W. Smalley and introduced by him two weeks ago repealing the act of 1895 which requires a service of five years as counsellor before a counsellor becomes eligible for the office of county judge, in Somerset, was unanimously passed Wednesday by the House in Trenton, and Clarence E. Case was confirmed as judge of the Somerset county court. Assemblyman Smalley had had the bill laid over until he could talk things over with the members with the result above noted.

Another bill fixing the salary of the Assistant Prosecutor of Somerset county was also introduced and passed without opposition. It gives the assistant prosecutor $1,500 per year. F. A. Pope was nominated for prosecutor by Governor Fort some time ago and the appointment was confirmed ten days ago. Mr. Pope succeeds John F. Reger, of Hackensack. Mr. Case succeeds Judge Lewis Schenck.

WHAT THE COMING SUMMER DRESSES WILL LOOK LIKE.

Womanly interest already centres round the summer gown. Not the heavy pongee coat suits, nor the lightweight cloths which we will be buying first for spring wear, and not even the heaviest linen costumes. The flimiest of lingerie frocks, all made of mull, lace and embroidery, have claimed the momentary admiration of womankind. They are the usual first showing, made for Southern travel and exhibited as models for those we will be making later.

These advance notes are a decided help to the wide-awake home dressmaker just those early suggestions for which she yearns.

She is either making the first few summer dresses or repairing the last few that are left over, according to her own particular system; and an idea—even one—will be of untold assistance.

Now, we are sure of the girdle, but also we have faith in the persistence of the panel, which brings us to that evidence later on. Many of the sheer white dresses will be single edged, others will be one-side-ornate; some will be made of embroidered swiss; others of plain mull. But most of them will show a combination of girdle and princess panel. The front breadth, and sometimes the back, continuing from collar to hem, with the princess line, while the under-arm sections of bodice and skirt are girded together by a wide or narrow band. These belted sides offer opportunity for more fulness, which will be let in in the form of skirt gathers—a very few—at the waist line.

Fashions are essentially the same in outline. There is no great change in fulness at any given point, which would naturally disturb the outlines as we know them at present.

Changes in outline are the most exciting, and at the same time the most depressing. When the whole general exterior of woman changes her last year's clothes are a dead loss and she finds herself at sea. It is too hopeless to contemplate, and there is cause for thanks that the coming season will usher in no such vital differences.

Even in those frocks with a girdle crossing the front breadth and in the belted linen dress the profile has not altogether departed. There is no evidence of the much-pouched waist front to disturb the long panel line we are now accustomed to, and the added tunic is fitted very like the skirt of a year ago.

Numerous belts are the cry, and we have the evidence of our senses to prove it. They are shown, even new, in crushed shape made of colored silk or leather. Any gown that will admit of such an addition may have it, according to dictates from Paris. The Russian note is strong, and the belt is as much a feature of this Eastern garb as is the tunic.

Frocks for spring and summer wear are showing every variation of the belt from the merest strip across either front or back to whole belts of narrow band width and wide curved or crushed ones. As for tunics, they have dropped down upon every summer gown in one form or another, whether they take the shape of the overskirt tunic, the apron front, the wide sash drawn round the upper half of a kilted skirt, or whether they are the Russian coat tails to the belted blouse.

Again, the tunic may be merely that in effect, a deep tuck let into the middle of an otherwise plain skirt, or a band of ornamental trimming so placed as to suggest a straight or shaped tunic.

Take them, one and all, add them, and divide them to get the average, their outlines have not changed. Women will look, in the main, very much as they did a year ago.

STARCK, BIG BULLY, BUMPS INTO JUSTICE

Carl Starck, twenty-three years old, was fined twenty dollars Saturday by Judge William Runyan in the city court, for assault. Sylvio Velardo, an Italian, who was the victim, Velardo's left eye was bruised and cut by a blow from Starck's fist yesterday afternoon. Starck was making a beautiful story out of his side of the question when James Finnerty stepped up to Judge Runyon and said that he was the assault and heard the conversation between Starck and Peter Udel, to which the former said that he was going to "break the —— guinea's face," or words to that effect.

Preceding the actual assault, according to Mr. Finnerty, Udel had asked Velardo for the price of a drink and when this was refused some bad feeling was engendered. Evidently Starck thought that by intimidating Velardo, he could force him to produce the necessary money for a thirst quencher, but as Velardo did not care to have anything to do with them the assault was decided upon.

Velardo denied having used any of the vile language attributed to him by Starck, and as the Italian has always borne the best of reputations, Judge Runyon decided that Starck was guilty as charged and imposed the fine. Starck bears the reputation of always looking for trouble and one of his pet hobbies is to shove people off the sidewalk and otherwise annoy those who are smaller than himself. It is said that he has Chief Conover, of Buffalo and Brooklyn and even Brooklyn's Public School Athletic League. He recently taught 500 Brooklyn boys to swim within a week.

WEDDING RING IN AFRICA.

There exists a strange custom among the Bayanzi, who live for many miles along the Upper Congo. The custom would seem to make life a good deal of a burden to their married women. Brass rods, which are the favorite currency in the country, are welded into great rings around the necks, arms and wrists. Some of the rings worn by the women whose husbands are well-to-do weigh as much as thirty pounds, and this burden must be carried around the poor women as long as they live. Frequently one sees a poor woman whose neck is sore and bleeding from the heavy weight, and in places the skin is rubbed off by the ring. This is a sure sign that the ring has been recently welded around her neck, for after a time the skin becomes callused, and then the strange ornament produces no abrasion. But the weight is an inconvenience; they never get used to it, and it is a perpetual tax upon their energies. In every crowd of women may be seen a number who are supporting the rings with their hands, and thus for a time relieving their weary shoulders of the heavy burden. It may be said that with every movement of their bodies the rings give them discomfort. Once on, it is no easy matter to get it off. The smiths have but one thing on a file, and though they can hammer a lot of brass rods into one, it is very difficult for them to cut the thick mass of metal in two. Women who increase largely in flesh after the rings have been fastened on their necks are in danger of strangling to death, and instances of this sort have been known to occur. Yet these women regard the cumbrous ornament with pride, imagine that it enhances their importance and beauty, and wear the burden with light hearts.

STORY ABOUT THE KOHINOOR.

The Lawrence brothers, Henry and John, who occupied important posts in the government of India, and who were men of resource and integrity, had at one time the custody of one of the most famous diamonds in the world, says Youth's Companion. In "The Lawrences of the Punjab," F. P. Gibbon gives the story as evidence of the simplicity of the brothers in affairs which, by many, would be considered matters of the highest importance.

Among the State jewels of the Sikh court was the famous "Mountain of Light," which, after passing from the Mogul to the Persian court, and thence to the Afghan, from whom it was wrested by Ranjit Singh was now to be presented to Queen Victoria.

The diamond was placed in charge of Sir Henry Lawrence, who, deeming his brother the stronger and more practical guardian, entrusted it to ohn, who pocketed the little box and straightway forgot it.

Some weeks later came an official letter from Lord Dalhousie, ordering that the diamond be sent at once to her majesty. The president received the message during a meeting of the board, and John advised him to send it off promptly.

"Why, you've got it," said the senior member.

John's clear intellect took in the full horror of the situation, and he feared he was a ruined man, for the gem had never been seen by him since the day it had been given into his keping. Crimes without number had been committed for jewels not a quarter its value, and who would believe his plea that he had forgotten its existence and flung it aside in the pocket of an old waistcoat? Of what avail to rely upon his know integrity? His story might be officially believed, but he knew that men would shake their heads and regard him suspicion.

Yet without a sign of perturbation, he casually replied:

"Oh, yes, of course! I forget all about it," and calmly proceeded to discuss the business before the meeting with all his usual alertness and without a trace of pre-occupation. But one can guess how he longed for the end, how he hurried in search of his servant, who chanced to remember taking a smal box from his masters discarded clothes. He explained where he had put the worthless thing, unfolding the bit of glass, and the Kohinoor was safe.

SWIMMING CHANCE FOR PLAINFIELD BOYS

As a part of its policy of reaching the boys of the entire city and borough, the Young Men's Christian Association is planning to teach all the school boys of the city, twelve years of age or over, to swim. For this purpose, the after school and Saturday hours of the week beginning Monday, March 14, have been set aside and George H. Corsan, one of the country's foremost swimming instructors, has been engaged. Friends of the association have contributed enough money to cover the expense of the undertaking and the lessons will be absolutely free.

The need for instruction in swimming is amply demonstrated by the fact that over 4,000 men and boys in the United States and Canada are accidentally drowned each year, and records show that most of these persons could not swim. Many of them were drowned so close to safety that, had they known a very little about swimming, they could have saved themselves.

It has been ascertained that there are over two hundred boys in the schools of the city and borough who can not swim at all and nearly one hundred more who can swim a little. All these boys will be invited, through their parents or guardians to take advantage of this opportunity.

George H. Corsan, the instructor, has served as swimming instructor for the University of Toronto, the Battle Creek Sanitarium the Young Men's Christian Associations of Cleveland, Detroit, Buffalo and Brooklyn and the Brooklyn Public School Athletic League. He recently taught 500 Brooklyn boys to swim within a week.

DUNELLEN A. C. IN FLOURISHING CONDITION

Dunellen is a small burg compared with some other stopping places on the Jersey Central, but there is some real sporting blood in the town. It can boast of an athletic club of which Plainfield would be proud—the Dunellen Athletic Club—which occupies cozy apartments on North avenue opposite Railroad Park.

The organization is blossoming out as one of the most substantial clubs in that town and the prospects are rosy for the continuance of its growth and advancement. The club-rooms are made home-like with a piano and other attractions. The parlor and reading room is attractively furnished in mission and elaborately decorated with the club's colors of red and black. Then there is a pool and game room which provides entertainment for the members.

During the last few years the club has been to the front in football, baseball and other sports. All of the energies of the officers and members at present is to organize a cracker-jack ball nine for the season. At present the indications are that there will be very few changes from last season.

Of the familiar faces who will be seen in the D. A. C. uniform next season are Ben Dodwell, behind the bat; Howard Harrison, first base; Will Piddington, first base; Willie Giles, second base; H. Craig, shortstop; Russell Garretson, center field, and Harry Nonemaker, left field. There are several promising candidates for right field position.

A manager for the season has not yet been elected, but in all likelihood Jess Ayers will be selected to pilot the nine through the 1910 campaign. The question of management, however, will be settled on Monday night, March 21. At this meeting it is planned to have Judge William N. Runyon present to give a talk to the members.

The officers of the club are Robert Maltbie, president; William Giles, vice-president; Benjamin Dodwell, secretary and Jesse Ayers, treasurer. The trustees are likewise connected with the ground proposition as there are chances that the Madison avenue plot will not be available for next season, but the members have several other sites in view.

PLAINFIELD HIGH FIVE DEFEATS THE LEAL'S

The Plainfield High School basketball team defeated the Leal's five yesterday afternoon with the score of 42 to 26. It was one of the nearest games yet played and although the crowd was small it was highly interesting. At the beginning of the game Leal's boys led for at least five minutes, but Plainfield High School soon got busy and ran the score up fast. At the end of the first half the score stood 26 to 10 in favor of P. H. S. Leal's five played an exceptionally good game all the time and the High School had to play pretty hard. Morris and Clark played the best games of P. H. S., while Doane did some clever guarding. Jewett played a beautiful game for Leal's and Lawrence and Hibbard were close seconds.

The line-up:—P. H. S.—Forwards, Morris, Clarke, K. Runyon; centre, Manley; guards, Bristol, Doane.

Leals—Forwards, Hibbard, Driscoll; centre, Lawrence; guards, Jewitt, Stevenson.

Goals from field, Morris 3, Clarke 8, Manley 3, Bristol 2, Doane 5, K. Runyon 1, Hibbard 3, Driscoll 1, Lawrence 2, Jewitt 6. Goals on fouls, Lawrence 2. Time of halves 20 minutes. Referee, Collier; umpire, Tine; timer, R. Lawrence.

HUMANS AS CHECKERMEN AT HOPE CHAPEL RECEPTION

At a reception given at Hope chapel to the members of the ladies' Bible class and their husbands Friday night, more than 100 people were present. Mr. and Mrs. Simons, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Condict, Rev. and Mrs. L. R. Howard and Mrs. Donald McInnes, received. A game of checkers with human pieces was played on a huge gauze checkerboard and the women were the games.

Thomas Hendry sang some Scotch songs accompanied by Mrs. Howard. Refreshments were served toward the end of the evening. These receptions are to be features bi-monthly and are looked forward to as pleasant events in the class.

A little while,
She lives in manner grand,
In regal style.
She is an heiress, understand,
And yet she let me hold her hand.

She let me hold her hand
And left the room
To give some slight command.
So I presume.
I played her hand as best I could;
You see, it wasn't very good.

KINGS' DAUGHTERS PLAN FOR ANOTHER TAG DAY

The executive board of The City Union of The King's Daughters at a meeting in the Charity Organized Aid rooms, Thursday, discussed plans for a "Tag Day," to be held the last of May or the first of June. It is believed that a considerable sum can be realized in this way for the King's Daughters work in the city and borough.

Mrs. Anna M. Most, treasurer, reported a balance of $43.64 on hand and during February 269 children were cared for at The Nursery. Miss Oliver DeLany, the city nurse, reported having made 109 visits in February. Mrs. Frank W. Jones, president of the Union, presided at the meeting.

RECORD TRIP OF A BOTTLE THAT WENT TO ENGLAND

When John Kelly, the former patrolman, sailed for Ireland some months ago and while on Sandy Hook he threw overboard a bottle containing the history of the event and gave his address. This missive after traveling some three thousand miles has been picked up off the coast of Cornwall, England, and indicates that the ocean currents are somewhat swifter than the sailing ships which all too infrequently leave our shores for European ports.

The finder of the bottle is Willem Duffy, of Cornwall, and he says he picked up the bottle just three months after it was given into Neptune's keeping. Sailing vessels have been known to consume four, five and six months in making such a trip which makes the trip of the bottle a remarkable drifting record.

Mr. Duffy in sending his greetings to Mr. Kelly congratulates him on the fact that the bottle has undoubtedly broken all records for ocean travel and he hopes the sender and his friends and family are well.

HOODS FOR EVENING.

As an evening head dress hoods are in the lead. They are seen in every conceivable material from fur to chiffon, and often the two are combined with a touch of lace here and there.

When it comes to shapes it would be difficult to describe them, for many of them are no shape at all, but simply scarfs bunched, knotted and gathered up until they form a kind of bag which is pulled over the head and tied in a knot, or make even the plainest face bewitching.

In color we have the range of the rainbow and every shade and tint of each separate color, so even the most fastidious may be satisfied.

In lace, however, black, white and ivory are given preference, but sometimes even these costly bits of silk or thread are dyed to match a wrap or gown.

Unlike many charming head dresses that every woman covets, these hoods can be made at home by the most inexperienced of sewers. Those who know only the least bit about sewing will be safe in attempting an opera hood.

A pretty way to make an opera hood of chiffon or marquisette is to run five quarter of an inch tucks eighteen inches long, placed two inches apart, lengthwise through the centre of the material.

Through the casings thus formed, run heavy cords sufficiently long to reach from one side of the head, below the ear, to the other side at the same height.

The fullness should be distributed evenly and the ends of the cords caught firmly together with several stitches. So arranged, the material will fall on both edges in a full soft frill.

At the points where the cords are caught, the scarf may be loosely knotted as a finish, or when one prefers, flowers can be the mode of decoration.

A large rose of crepe, or a bunch of small flowers such as violets or rosebuds, is effective.

The long ends twisted round the neck serve to protect the throat and chest from the cold.

It Isn't Fair.

Have you ever heard a child say when it has been punished that "it isn't fair"?

You may think nothing of it at the time, but the child does not forget, and sometimes, often years after, the thought of the injustice may still rankle in his mind.

A Pretty Auto Bonnet.

The luxury of tailless ermine is seen in a closely fitting auto bonnet which is beautifully soft and warm. It is made after the fashion of a huge baby's cap, with a turn-back portion of the fur. Soft chiffon laid in folds lines the cap next the face, and chiffon streamers tie this lovely hood to the head. These are tipped with cuffy pom-poms, which give an airy finish to this model.

No doubt we'd like the weather,
If we could break the ice!

STREET NAMES CONFUSING.

It is not at all strange that Duer street property owners should petition the North Plainfield Council to change the name of that thoroughfare to North Madison avenue, inasmuch as it is a continuation of Madison avenue beyond the city line. The only strange part of it is that a movement in that direction has been so long deferred. Not alone does this apply to Duer street. The same confusing condition exists in many other sections in both city and borough.

For instance in the city, South avenue is but a continuation of East Fifth street, the change in name being at Richmond street. Grant avenue runs through to West Front street, but from there to the city-borough dividing line it is West End avenue. In the borough, one thoroughfare running east from Somerset street, is known as Jackson avenue and running west it is Park place. Craig place runs west from Somerset street and to the east it is called Pearl street and a little further on Orchard park. Other such conditions exist in both city and borough.

More unusual it is that there should be two thoroughfares bearing the same name. There is a Jackson avenue in the city and there is a Jackson avenue in the borough; a Columbia avenue in the city and a Columbia avenue in the borough; a Grandview avenue in the city and a Grandview avenue in the borough; a Jefferson avenue in the city and a Jefferson avenue in the borough, and a Union street in the city and a Union street in the borough.

Considering the city and borough as a whole, there is still another strange condition that causes annoyance to the postoffice and confusion to the stranger. We have Cedar street and Cedar avenue; Washington street, Washington avenue; Sycamore street, Sycamore avenue; Prospect street, Prospect avenue and Prospect place; Central street, Central avenue; Rockview avenue, Rockview terrace; Elm street, Elm place; Arlington avenue, Arlington place; Somerset street, Somerset place; Compton avenue, Compton alley; Orchard avenue, Orchard place and Orchard park; Franklin avenue, Franklin place; Marion street, Marion place; St. Mary's avenue, St. Mary's place and South street and South avenue. Worse still, we have Park place, Park avenue, Park terrace and Park lane.

While such a condition be allowed to exist when there are so many appropriate names that might be chosen for our beautiful thoroughfares. To rid the city and borough of the confusion caused by present titles, could not the names of the Presidents or of the States, for instance, be adopted. Some such solution could be agreed upon by the proper authorities of the two municipalities and we suggest that the matter for their early consideration.

AIDS OF PROSECUTORS UNDER CIVIL SERVICE.

Trenton, March 9.—Supplementing a previous opinion that sergeants-at-arms in district courts are amenable to the civil service law, Assistant Attorney-General Nelson G. Gaskill has informed Secretary Gardner Colby of the commission that in his judgment county detectives, probation officers and other employes in the office of the county prosecutor, employes of the county board of taxation and county probation officers are in the same class and subject to examination. The opinion of the assistant attorney-general was based upon the principle established in the so-called Pierson case which established the status of sergeants-at-arms with relation to the civil service law.

Briefly the principle laid down was those who derived their authority from and are appointed by an operative branch of the State government are considered as parts of the State government irrespective of the sources of their compensation.

The entering class shows an increase of sixty-two over that of a year ago, while the total undergraduate enrolment of 2265 shows a net gain of thirty-four.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Some New York critics affect to believe that they have discovered "the new" Ethel Barrymore. By this they mean a powerful, emotional actress of the first rank. The discovery dates from her appearance at the Empire theatre, January 31, in Sir Arthur W. Pinero's new play, "Mid-Channel." Her "Zoe Blundell," in this strong, relentless portrayal of life "in London's "smart set," is unquestionably her greatest achievement thus far. Perhaps it is too soon to apply superlatives to her art, but "Zoe Blundell" indicates that the time is not far away when she will compel them. And yet, (the critics to the contrary notwithstanding) to those who have followed Miss Barrymore's career with attention, "Zoe Blundell" comes without surprise There is to them no discovery of a "new" Ethel Barrymore.

Maxine Elliott, most beautiful and most photographed of stage favorites has made the statement that personal beauty is an actress' "fifth wheel." Miss Elliott was interviewed in her dressing room at Daly theatre, New York, where she is enjoying the success of her career in her jolly nautical play, "The Inferior Sex," and said that a pretty face to an actress is as a fifth wheel to a wagon—perfectly useless. "The successful actresses, in most cases, are not the pretty women," she said. "It is very rare, indeed, to find success in mere beauty. When I first appeared on the stage I had the ill luck to be announced as a beauty. To walk on the stage creates a sense of disappointment unless she does something."

"A Son of the People," at the New theatre next Friday night, was produced abroad under the title of "The Revolutionary Wedding," and made an enormous hit. It was then translated into German, and later from German into English by Stephen Ivor Szinjwey. It is a story of the French Revolution. In brief, the story, is that of Ernest, an Emigre who flees from France and takes service under foreign flags, but returns to join the last rally of the broken Royalist forces attracted by the eloquence of the Girondin leader, Dumouriez. Ernest is in love with Alaine, a beautiful French woman, and is captured in her house on his wedding night by Marc-Arron, a Revolutionary leader. To save her lover, a weak and vascilating young man, Alaine makes love to Marc-Arron, agreeing to "pay the price" for Ernest's freedom. In reality she falls in love with Marc-Arron who liberates Ernest and is shot for so doing.

ELIZABETH DEMOCRATS TO HOLD DOLLAR DINNER.

Prominent Democrats from all parts of the State will attend the big dollar dinner to be given in Turn Hall, Elizabeth, Tuesday night, March 29, under the auspices of the Elizabeth Democratic City Executive Committee. Covers will be laid for more than seven hundred persons.

A committee composed of Alfred A. Stein, chairman; Robert H. McAdams, City Clerk John F. Kenal, John Heck and Richard Williamson are arranging plans. Already there is a large demand for tickets, not only by Democrats in Union county but also by prominent members of the party in Hudson, Middlesex, Essex and other counties. The list of speakers has not yet been completed, but it is assured that some of the foremost Democratic orators in New Jersey will make addresses.

It is rumored that the feature of the dinner will be the launching of a gubernatorial boom either for Frank S. Katzenebach, of Trenton, or State Senator George S. Silzer, of Middlesex.

TAFT AND HIS APPETITE AS SHOWN AT NEWARK.

Washington, March 9.—Eating may not be one of the best things President Taft does, but it is certainly one of the things he does best.

For instance, not long ago, the President attended a banquet at Newark, N. J. He did ample justice to the provender, and there was no scarcity thereof. The menu was at least two feet long, and in these days of high food prices it would have struck terror to the heart of the heaviest banqueter. After the banquet the President delivered a rather lengthy speech. Perhaps that explains what followed. Maybe speaking whets his appetite, for when the President climbed aboard his private car, fifteen minutes after rising from the banquet board, he hailed the porter with:

"Anything to eat?"

There was, and the President got it.

FROCKS FOR DEBUTANTES.

Rumor has it that in Paris the fashionable dance frock, which has proved even more acceptable and convenient than was anticipated, will grow shorter as the season advances. While this rage for the sensibly abbreviated skirt has not extended to the reception gown nor the at-home frock, it has penetrated in among such stuffs as rose petals and rainbows are made of. No material, no matter how diaphanous, need be reserved for the long reception gown; short frocks demand all the elegance of the season.

The debutante's dresses are more beautiful than ever. Silver has touched her white frock and rested there so persistently that the combination has almost become a uniform. The typical debutante of the season is, in many of her gowns, a veritable ice maiden from the Andersen fairy tales.

White satin, pure and simple, has declined in favor; it is now draped with the inevitable silver gauze, and again the same moonlight effect is produced by silver tulle over crepe meteore.

On another elaboration in frosty to'oring (if coloring it may be called) there are white satin ribbon rosebuds with silver centres on bodice and tunic. The sleeves are composed of cords of silver strung with little ribbon roses, and like cords depending form the girdle are heavily tassled with the roses.

On the white mousseline or ninon of the debutante there appears at times an edge of swan's down or white fur in place of the dark fur band on the heavy moire of the older woman.

Countless white and silver effects are to be gained, such as the iridescent dewdrop pressed into the chiffon fabric. Tiny sequins of silver run along the satin hem which borders the tunic; and again a satin cuirass glittering with silver and then veiled with white mousseline to bring again the youthful simplicity—to conceal an excess of riches.

Although elabrate to a degree, these gowns were short and they retained the crushed girdle of the proverbial youthful model, and a certain simplicity of design marked them as distinctly suited to the young. In almost every instance the short frock of the season has reverted to the fuller skirt, somewhat gathered across the back and around the hips, but smooth across the front breadth.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

The Grays and Blues were scheduled to play in the Business Men's League Monday afternoon but the former team forfeited the game to the Grays as only three players put in an appearance.

That basketball is popular as a sport among the boys of this city is demonstrated by some statistics furnished by Physical Director Listman. Mr. Listman stated yesterday that there are twenty-three leagues in operation at the Y. M. C. A. with a total enrollment of 198 different players.

The victory of Scotch Plains over the First Baptist in the Sunday School League Monday night was a popular triumph. The Plains team had a full complement of rooters out who cheered their favorites on from start to finish.

The Marathon A. C. baseball team, of Newark, has written Director Listman for dates.

Beekman Conover, who was admitted to Muhlenberg Hospital last week suffering from a complication of diseases, shows little signs of improvement, and his recovery is considered doubtful.

STRONG SENTIMENT FOR TROLLEY LEAGUE

Should the proposed New Jersey State League fail to organize at Perth Amboy, next Sunday, it is probable that steps will be taken to form a four club circuit to consist of Plainfield, Dunellen, Bound Brook and Somerville. Manager Dorflinger favors such an idea and between now and Sunday the status of the managers of the other three towns will be obtained.

Mr. Dorflinger entertains the belief that if a schedule of four games with each club is adopted, on the same lines as the old city league arrangement, it would be a big success. Such an arrangement would permit the championship season to open on Decoration Day and close about Labor Day. It would also give all clubs opportunities to play exhibition games with out of town teams, and also play Sunday games independent, if desired.

Chester McCauley will doubtless handle the managerial reins in Somerville and he will be assisted by Bogert Conklin in the formation of a team to represent the Somerset county seat. McCauley is said to favor such a circuit and is counted on to support the movement

The managements of the Dunellen and Bound Brook clubs will be sounded in the next few weeks. Charley Newhouse the veteran backstop, will pilot the team from the Raritan and Dunellen is to select a manager in the next few weeks.

SHARP BATTLES IN SUNDAY SCHOOL A. L.

Keen contests marked the basketball contests in the Sunday School Athletic League at the Y. M. C. A. Monday night. The most exciting encounter was between the First Baptist and Scotch Plains fives, which was won by the Plains aggregation by the score of 18 to 11. The Congregational five downed the Crescent Avenue quintet by a score of 35 to 12, and Hope chapel forfeited to Grace P. E. on their non-appearance. The teams lined up as follows:

First Baptist—J. Manning, Sline, forwards; Collier, center; Vail, L. Manning, Fountain, guards. Scotch Plains—J. Todd, Clark, forwards; Lidgate, center; H. Todd, Beeken, Carter, guards.

Crescent Avenue—Stevenson, Runyon, forwards; Slocum, center; Beers, Daniels, guards. Congregational—Ingham, Smith, forwards; Fritts, center; Newell, Steiner, W. Smith, guards.

Officials, Doane, timekeeper; Dunning, scorer.

DINNER TO ADVANCE LAY MISSION EFFORT.

Morristown, March 9.—A number of able speakers will address the guests at the dinner to be given tonight by the Laymen's Forward Movement in Washington Hall. Dr. S. M. Zwiemer will be entertained by Rev. and Mrs. Alexander MacColl at the South Street Presbyterian manse; Alfred E. Marling will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Noah C. Rogers at their home on Ogden place and Colonel William J. Scheffellin, the third speaker, will be entertained by Mr. and Mrs. George E. Chisholm, of South street.

Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., will initiate several candidates at its meeting Thursday night, March 17.

WANT A DOUBLE TRACK

Dunellen Board of Trade is Against P. S. C. Petition to Lay Sidings.

COUNCIL RECEIVE SUGGESTIONS

Mayor Sanford Brings up Sewer and Drainage Matter—Council to Draft a Building Ordinance and Fix Fee Limits.

That there is a strong opposition on the part of Dunellen citizens and property owners to permit the Public Service Corporation to lay two sidings or switches in the borough, was made apparent Monday at the meeting of the Borough Council, when a communication was presented from the Board of Trade in which that organization suggested that the P. S. C. be given permission only to lay another track through the borough and that the company pay for the privilege.

The Board of Trade also suggested that the company also be compelled to sprinkle North avenue and pay two thirds of the expense involved in repairing the street caused from that thoroughfare. In the communication the Council was reminded that in the past the company have received franchises and permits free of charge.

The suggestions in the letter are the sentiments expressed by Mayor William A. Sanford at a recent meeting of that body. Mr. Sanford reported last night that a local representative of the company called on him yesterday and requested that the Council defer action for one week. The request was granted and the matter will come up for action next Monday night, March 14, at a special session.

A progressive policy was also manifested by the Board of Trade in another communication in which it recommended the adoption of a building ordinance and the establishment of fire limits. Borough Attorney Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., made arrangements to meet the committees on Saturday when an ordinance will be framed and presented to the Council next Monday night.

Mayor Sanford announced that the time is nearing when Dunellen will be officially asked to unite with North Plainfield on the sewer proposition, and the Council authorized him to appoint a committee of three councilmen and two citizens to push the matter. Mayor Sanford announced that he would make the appointments at the proper time. In referring to the proposed sewerage system Mayor Sanford said:

"I am more optimistic than ever on the sewer situation. A sewerage system will have a two fold effect in stimulating the growth of the borough and also increasing the desire of people to come here to live. It will also aid in the accumulation of territory as people will want to come where there are sewers," (meaning that the residents of the section south of the Centre street boundary and between the Lehigh Valley tracks, will be anxious to annex to Dunellen.)

A drainage system also was referred to by Mr. Sanford. He declared that in the census of opinion in the borough that something should be done to eradicate present conditions which were a big detriment to the borough. Borough Engineer F. A. Dunham, who was present, was authorized to prepare a map showing the flow of water, the quantity, and the way to get clear of it.

"We have plenty of water," said Mr. Sanford. "The good Lord has sent it to us and we must find a way to take care of it. It's a matter we will have to face in the near future and a map will enable us to face the problem intelligently."

Mr. Bogardus reported that he was still negotiating with the Watchung Water Company for the installation of a register and gauge in the fire house. At the present, he said, the company appeared favorable at the recent fire at the Hally Printing Press plant was only twenty feet.

A petition was presented from the Hall Printing Press Works calling attention to the impassable conditions of North avenue in the vicinity of its factory and asking that improvements be made to the thoroughfare.

The street committee was authorized to advertise for bids for concrete crosswalks. Tax Collector Isaac reported $30.40 during February. Mayor Sanford reported having received a check for $116 from the P. S. C. being the share of the P. S. C. for the removal of snow during the storms.

Swimming For Boys.

Beginning on Monday, March 14, the free swimming classes will open at the Y. M. C. A. The enrollment will be limited to 303 members and boys from this city, Dunellen and Westfield are eligible to join the classes. There will be half hour periods, from 2 to 4:30 o'clock.

ORGANIZE A CIVIC CLUB

Plainfield than a water plant," said Mr. Woolston. "I find out that the fellows who are agitating for the municipal ownership of water in most cases are newcomers to this city.

"The city could better afford to look after its sanitary conditions. It is the worst city in the State for garbage. I believe that the garbage and sewer matters are far more vital than the municipal ownership of water.

An argument for the municipal ownership of a water plant was presented by Mr. Duttenhoffer. He took the ground that if private individuals can make money in selling water, a city can also, if honest and competent officials are placed in charge. He cited an instance wher a city owns its plant that the rates are $6 to $17 a year. By selling water at those rates, the city in question, he said, was able to pay $50 000 on its plant during the first year of its operation. "If other cities make a profit, why cannot Plainfield," was Mr. Duttenhoffer's argument.

"Men are not in business for fun. The Plainfield Water Company has a good thing and the men in it know it, and they will hang on to it as long as the citizens will let them. We should not be concerned about getting cheaper water, but to center our efforts in acquiring a plant and take.

An interesting discussion on the sewer problem was given by Street Commissioner Collins and John R. Campbell, a noted chemist who is a member of the Dunellen Board of Health. Mr. Gavett went into detail and explained the operation of the local disposal beds and other systems. Mr. Campbell entertained the belief that the Board of Trade should consider a new sewerage system before anything else. Mr. Campbell favored a co-operative arrangement between the city and adjoining municipalities. He predicted that the development of Plainfield and neighboring towns will be greatly handicapped unless the sewer question is taken up and settled quickly.

Ira La Rue spoke against the postal savings bills now before Congress and as a result of his argument it is probable that several local bankers will be invited to attend the next meeting of the society, on March 22, and give their views on the question.

Remarks were also made by Mayor William A. Sanford, of Dunellen, and Editor Deering, of the Dunellen Call.

has no education. This applies as much to street cleaning as to anything else. The laws have been changed in thirty-eight States and there is a child labor law in every State but Nevada.

A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Lovejoy for his entertaining talk and he answered several pertinent questions relating to school laws, their enforcement and reasons why some of the laws could not be strictly enforced. There were about seventy-five men and women present at the lecture.

ELOPER'S BRIDE IN EUROPE.

Easton, Pa., March 9.—An echo of the recent elopement of Miss Sarah, daughter of Joseph Pearl, a prominent resident of South Bethlehem, and Victor Lang, of the same place, was heard in habeas corpus proceedings before Judge Scott Monday when young Lang sought to have Mr. Pearl turn the custody of his daughter over to him. Pearl is the owner of three general stores in South Bethlehem. Lang was until lately employed in one of the stores as a clerk.

On February 17 Lang and Miss Pearl eloped and went to Elizabeth, N. J., where they were married. Pearl, discovering their whereabouts, went to Elizabeth and had both arrested. Lang was locked up for a week, and finally discharged. When he was liberated his bride was gone, and he was unable to discover where she was until testimony at Monday's proceedings disclosed the fact that she is in Europe.

After Lang was liberated from prison he was accused by his father-in-law of the larceny of money, but he voluntarily returned to South Bethlehem and demanded a hearing. There was no evidence against him, and the case was dismissed. Lang is a clean-cut, fine-looking fellow, about twenty-five years old, and has always borne a good reputation. His missing bride, twenty-two years old, is one of the prettiest and most accomplished young women of South Bethlehem.

Owing to the fact that Lang was unable to prove that his bride was being restrained of her liberty by her father, or was in his custody, the court dismissed the writ.

New Brunswick, March 9.—George H. Donovan, of the Theological Seminary, has accepted a call to the Reformed church of Cobleskill, N. Y., and will take charge June 1. He will succeed Rev. Alexander S. Vandyke, formerly pastor of the Highland Park Reformed church. Mr. Donovan is a Newark resident.

CITY PAY FORTNIGHTLY

Mayor Fisk, in Message to City Fathers, Makes a Recommendation.

RECEIVE MONTHLY REPORTS.

Shade Tree Committee Wants $2,500 —Street Work Commission to Be Appointed—Other Routine Matters.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk, following a conference with the heads of the city departments, recommended to the Common Council, Monday, that it pay the salaries of the city employes every two weeks, instead of every month as at present. He explained that the men are not permitted to contract debts and that it is almost impossible for them to avoid doing so as it is often the case at the month before they receive their money. The matter was referred to the finance committee and it is expected that favorable action will be taken.

A resolution offered by Councilman Buxton and adopted, authorized the cancellation of a franchise tax of $2,404.63, of the Public Service Corporation, in lieu of the $6,463.82, which the city will receive as five per cent. of the gross receipts of the company for 1909. The law provides that where the franchise tax amounts to less than the amount from gross receipts, the lesser amount shall be cancelled.

N. H. Randolph and others petitioned for two lights on Belleview avenue, and Horace G. Adams and others asked for two lights on Leland avenue, between Front street and Green brook. Both of these petitions were granted.

The Shade Tree Commission certified to the Common Council that its expenses for the coming year would be $2,360 and in addition $200 for the care of the city park. This was referred to the finance committee.

Mrs. Mary Denny, of Johnson avenue and East Second street, asked the Council to remit a sewer assessment of $31.50, as she had already paid $61.78 for the same purpose, and she had been assessed on both side of her property. The matter was referred to the sewer committee.

Residents of Richmond street petitioned for the establishment of a building line on the westerly side of that street between Putnam and East Seventh street. The matter was referred to the proper committee.

Residents of Lyman place asked the Council to accept that thoroughfare and improve the same at the least possible expense. They said that Andrew McCardell had agreed to furnish them with cinders from the Pond Machine Tool Works for this purpose at the expense of carting. This was referred to the street committee as was also the petition of the Central Park Realty Company for permission to tap sewers in the vicinity of Grant avenue, where the tract is graded and which, it is proposed to improve.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported the granting of seventeen permits during the past month. Overseer of the Poor A. D. Ayers reported outside expenses of $197.76 and almshouse expenses of $472.98. Horace G. Adams, clerk of the District court, reported receipts for the past month of $144.34, expenditures $14.34, leaving a balance of $130.

Mr. Gloak offered a resolution which was adopted asking the Court of Common Pleas to appoint a commission of three men to assess benefits in connection with the work of macadamizing certain streets in this city last year. The appointments will be made March 22.

Three resolutions were offered by Mr. Taylor and adopted. One authorised the installation of one two-way fire hydrant on Leland avenue, between George street and Midway avenue and the other authorized the city clerk and mayor to execute a contract with the Public Service Corporation for the installation of certain electrical apparatus for the new switchboard at fire headquarters. The third resolution authorized the fire committee to purchase one thousand feet of new hose at a cost not to exceed $900.

The Council authorized the placing of an electric light on Woodland avenue, between Watchung and Putnam avenues, in response to a request from A. W. Schlescke. Sometime ago he wrote Councilman George S. Clay about the matter, and upon the recommendation of Mr. Montgomery, chairman of the light committee, the light was ordered last night. The Common Council then adjourned to meet on Monday night, March 21, at 8 o'clock.

SCHOOL ELECTION NEAR

Rev. George A. Warner and Allen B. Laing Mentioned as Candidates.

COOLEY AND JOY TO RETIRE.

Robert Clark, Jr., Is Stated to Succeed Himself—Borough Election to Be Held Next Tuesday Night.

Notices have been posted in the borough calling attention to the citizens that the annual school meeting will be held Tuesday night, March 15. The principal business at the meeting will be the election of three members to the school board to succeed Dr. James R. Joy, Dr. Justice H. Cooley and Robert Clark, Jr., whose terms expire.

Mr. Clark, it is understood, has consented to serve another term if it is the wish of the voters, but Drs. Joy and Cooley have declared that they are determined to step out of harness. Both of the last two named members have served more than ten years on the board.

So far as known there are only two candidates to place on the ticket with Mr. Clark. They are Allen B. Laing, a former member of the board, and the Rev. George A. Warner, rector of Holy Cross church. It is understood that both of these men are in a receptive mood to accept the honor.

The amount of the budget is fixed at $20,000, a reduction of $4,625 from that of last year.

HANSEN APPEALS CASE BUT WITH NO SUCCESS

The Supreme Court has sustained the decision of Judge William N. Newcorn, of this city, in the case of Jacob Wiesner against Christian Hansen for malicious prosecution. Judge Newcorn gave Wiesman a verdict for $50 when the case was tried before him in the Elizabeth District court. Alfred A. Stein represented Wiesner.

Samuel Koestler, who represented Hansen, appealed the case on the ground that the court should have declared a non-suit because "undisputed facts failed to show cause for arrest and that also the existence of malice;" also that "relevant testimony was excluded on the part of the defendant."

The objections, however, were not sustained by the Supreme Court and Hansen will be compelled to pay the $50 damages.

FIVE NEW ORDINANCES WERE MADE LAST NIGHT

Prior to the regular session of the Common Council, Monday, public hearings were granted on several ordinances which had been passed on two readings and advertised. No one appeared to speak for or against the passage of the ordinances and they were adopted on final reading.

The ordinances included one to vacate Byron place, one to vacate a street on the property of John W. Murray and others, one to lay out and open up Thornton avenue, between Park and Hillside avenues, one to lay out and open up a portion of Stelle avenue and one to change the name of Dunellen avenue in the city to that of Myrtle avenue, corresponding with the borough extension of that thoroughfare.

REACH'S BASEBALL GUIDE FOR 1910 IS ISSUED.

Reach's Official American League Guide for 1910, published by the A. J. Reach Company, of Philadelphia, and edited by Mr. Francis C. Richter, of "Sporting Life," is out, and is, as usual, first in the field, thus making it the harbinger of the base ball season. It can be said without any qualification that, excellent as all of the editions of the Reach Guide have been in recent years the 1910 Guide is the best hand book of the kind ever issued by this or any other publisher. The special distinction of the 1910 Guide is, next to the text, quality of paper used and the number and beauty of the engravings furnished, the world's championship series being specially well dowered with splendid action pictures. The American League Guide for 1910 is in all respects a first class hand book for the National game and a decided credit to the American League and to the publishers, the Reach Company. This is the ninth annual issue of the Reach Guide as the official handbook of the American League and the twenty-eighth consecutive year of its publication as a book of record and reference for the entire base ball world.

MAYOR SANDFORD'S DOG CHEERS MASTER'S SPEECH

Did you ever hear of a dog being interested in politics and municipal government? Well, reader, if you haven't, attend the next meeting of the Dunellen Council and you will see and hear for yourself. Mayor William A. Sandford is the owner of such a canine. At Monday's session of the Dunellen law-makers Mr. Sandford's black bow-wow was present and occupied a front seat during the proceedings. The dog displayed little interest in the transaction of routine business and generally naps during these tame periods, but when the important subjects are being handled he says cocks his ears, sits up, and takes notice.

The dog appears to be doubly interested in the happenings when his master has the floor and is exploiting a favorite subject. At Monday night's meeting the dog remained on its chair until Mayor Sandford began to handle the sewer and drainage questions. When the dog heard the magic voice of the mayor it hopped down and took a position alongside of its master, wagging its tail and bowing its head, apparently endorsing everything the mayor was saying.

In the final stages of the mayor's remarks the dog really applauded its master by a series of encouraging yelps and salutations. "The borough needs sewers," bow-wow. "They will stimulate the desire of people to come here." (Bow-wow-wow-wow.) The mayor and his dog commanded the undivided attention of the lobby for several minutes and everybody appreciated the dog's loyalty to its master.

ELIZABETH ON TOP IN EXCITING STRUGGLE

The Elizabeth Y. M. C. A. basketball aggregation downed the locals on the home court Saturday night in an exciting struggle, by the score of 30 to 28. It was the hardest game of the season and was marked by brilliant playing on both sides. So keen was the play that at the end of the first half the score was 10 to 10 and when the whistle blew at the end of final half the score was 27 to 27.

It required eleven minutes to decide the issue and Reeves won the game for the visitors by shooting a sensational goal from midfield. Both teams had opportunities to win on fouls in the extra period, but the players were so nervous that they were unable to negotiate the basket. The lineup:

Plainfield—Aalholm, Collier, forwards; Linke, centre; Minor, Foster, Gavett, guards. Elizabeth—Reeves, Adelberg, forwards; Seyler, centre; Williams, Story, guards.

CAST SELECTED FOR TRIANGLE CLUB PLAY.

After several weeks of rehearsals, the cast of "His Honor, the Sultan," the original musical comedy to be presented by the Triangle Club of Princeton University at Krueger's Auditorium, Newark, March 23, as well as at Washington, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Chicago, Pittsburg and New York, has been chosen.

The play was written by Cyrus McCormick, 1912, of Chicago; the music by P. Nevin, 1912, a son of the famous composer, and the lyrics were written by J. F. Thompson, 1911, secretary of the Triangle Club, who plays the role of the Sultan. The scene of the play is in the garden of the Sultan's palace at Tanjoveo, capital of a province of Turkey, and deals with the adventures of a German newspaper correspondent, a young American traveler and a suffragette about the Sultan's palace, while a revolution is in progress. There is lots of snap and vigor to the play and it is being directed by Eugene Sanger, of New York. The cast contains a number of experienced actors. It is as follows:

Bob Hammond, a young American traveler, V. S. Merle-Smith, 1911; Heinrich Schlitz, a German newspaper correspondent, M. Barnhart, 1912; The Sultan, J. F Thompson, 1911; Ibrahim Ali, Grand Vizer to the Sultan, J. H. Larkin, 1913; Mohammed Pasha, a revolutionist, P. F. Myers, 1913; Hon. W. B. Grosvenor, American Ambassador, E. C. Jessup, 1911; Mrs. Grosvenor, L. T. Getty, 1911; Lieutenant McTavish, of H. M. S. Valour, R. G. Rolston, 1910; Marmora, the Sultan's favorite daughter, Brown Rolston, 1910; Mrs. Straighton, a suffragette from Battle Creek, Mich., L. K. Howe, 1911; Captain Hillyard Bleeck, R. G. Watson, 1913; American girls, palace guards, slaves, etc.

The scenery has been designed by H. M. Harvey, 1911. The costumes, which are of an Oriental variety, have been designed by T. S. Paul, 1911, and P. F. Crossman 1911, of Newark.

WATER ELECTION APR. 19

Voters to Decide Question of Condemnation Proceedings.

FULL PUBLICITY PROMISED.

Mr. Mygatt's Resolution is Passed Unanimously—President Tolles Places Himself on Record.

The Common Council, Monday, through a resolution offered by Councilman F. E. Mygatt, of the committee on public affairs, took steps to submit the question of municipal ownership of the local water supply to the voters and Tuesday, April 19, was the date set for the election. The polls will be open from 6 o'clock in the morning until 7 o'clock in the evening, with the exception of one hour, between 1 and 2 in the afternoon, to allow the election officers to have lunch.

The resolution carried with it provisions for giving ample publicity to the voters of the coming election and providing such other information as may be desired. It also ordered that the election officers shall return promptly the result of the election to the Common Council. As framed the resolution was carried without dissension. Vote, although President Tolles said that he did not want his action to be construed as meaning that he would vote for municipal ownership of water supply, but that he wanted it understood that he would be free to vote as he thought best.

Mr. Mygatt explained that the action simply meant that if the question should be adopted by the voters the Common Council may take steps to acquire a water supply, but that it does not bind the Common Council to simply mean that the question is to be put to a vote to determin whether the municipality wants to adopt the provisions of the Legislature act permitting cities of Plainfield's size to buy or build water works.

SUPERINTENDENT MAXSON REPORTS A CONVENTION

At the meeting of the Board of Education Monday the only absentee was Dr. B. vanD. Bridges and business of the usual routine character used up the greater part of the board's time. A report was presented by Superintendent Henry M. Maxson of the recent convention of National Superintendence held at Indianapolis. In his report Dr. Maxson says that there were 1800 members from all parts of the United States present, including twenty-eight from this State. The general subject of the meeting was "The Individual Child," the need for recognition of differences between children and modification of educational methods to meet individual needs. This was discussed under separate heads as follows: Mental alertness, moral responsibility, mental attitudes, tastes and tendencies; physical conditions, environment and vocational aim.

Special attention was given to the important subject of retarded children and the need for special treatment for gifted children. Physical training was held to be a potent factor in acquiring knowledge and special stress was laid on healthful exercise and play as being essential to proper supervision were declared to be doing much toward developing character and good habits. Folk dancing was also strongly endorsed.

The controlling thought of the convention seemed to be that as much time is wasted by the elimination of waste so the great characteristic of education in the immediate future must the elimination of waste, physical, mental and moral; that even the scope of humanity may be utilized.

Bills of the amount of about $1,200 were ordered paid and collections of $1,332.92 reported from the tax collector. There is a balance on hand with the custodian of school moneys of $81,591.96. The medical examiners report having examined 128 pupils while the dental examiners reported the examination of 149 pupils to all of whom tooth powder samples were furnished.

A birthday surprise party was tendered to William H. Kirch, of 66 Duer street, Saturday night, the affair being arranged by his wife. The evening was spent playing games, while vocal and instrumental music was added pleasure. Refreshments were served. The guests comprised mostly relatives.

MONDAY AFTERNOON CLUB WANTS CHILD PROTECTED

The Monday Afternoon Club Monday passed a resolution approving the Child Labor Committee's proposed amendment to the Jersey laws. The action was taken after the following letter from Mrs. Cushing, chairman of the Child Labor Committee was read:

Does your organization know that the New Jersey Child Labor laws are below the standard of more advanced States? In order to give the children of New Jersey adequate protection the following changes will be necessary:

1. Extension of the law forbidding the labor of children under 14 so as to include stores, offices, laundries, hotels, theatres, bowling alleys (the present low applies only to factories). 13 States cover all these employments.

2. Regulation of employment of children in messenger service. 15 States have such regulation.

3. Limitation to an 8-hour day for children under 16 years of age. (At present limitation is 10 hours a day and 55 hours a week in factories.) 6 States prescribe the 8-hour limit.

4. Prohibition of employment at night of children under 16 years of age. 17 States prohibit such employment.

5. Specific prohibition against child labor in dangerous occupations. (The present law has a vague, general prohibition.) 5 States enforce properly protective laws.

If you feel that it is New Jersey's duty to protect the children on the points stated, will you vote a resolution to that effect and send a copy to Mrs. G. H. Perry, Overlook avenue, Hackensack, giving also the number of your membership.

This should be done immediately as bills covering these questions will probably arise during the present session of the Legislature. The expressed sentiment of your body will be of great value in their behalf.

Very truly yours,
Mrs. G. W. B. Cushing,
Chairman.

Following is the resolution:

Resolved, That the Monday Afternoon Club in full accord with the object sought to be gained by the New Jersey Child Labor Committee in having the laws of the State of New Jersey changed so as to afford adequate protection to child labor, and approves of the specific points mentioned by that committee in the communication of February 18, 1910.

Respectfully yours,
Lillie G. Hoyt,
Cor. Sec'y.

UNDERTAKER IN TROUBLE

T. A. Moore Haled Before Borough Health Board for Alleged Violations of Law.

BURIALS WITHOUT PERMIT?

The Alleged Infraction of Law is Claimed to Have Taken Place at Mary Scanlon's Funeral.

Thomas A. Moore, the former local undertaker who went into bankruptcy last October, appeared before the Borough Board of Health Monday to reply to the charges of burying people without the usual permit. The charge is based in Mrs. Mary Scanlon's funeral which was in charge of Mr. Moore last Thursday. It is alleged by the health authorities that Mrs. Scanlon was interred at St. Mary's cemetery without a permit. The permit, it is understood, was issued after the funeral had taken place.

From what can be learned of the case Moore, it is alleged, has conducted a number of funerals of late acting as an agent for William De Mond, of Somerville, Moore, it is said, would get the business and have the permits issued in DeMond's name. Mr. De Mond was requested to be present at last night's session but he failed to appear. Moore was there, however, and from all accounts is in no trouble.

The case will be continued at the April meeting of the board when legal efforts will be resorted to in order to have Mr. De Mond present and tell of these transactions. It is the contention of the board that Moore cannot lawfully engage in the business in his own name while he is a bankrupt.

J. W. Manhattan's bid for furnishing culvert stone, crosswalks, and curbing was the lowest. The other bidders were the Watchung Stone Compny and Andrew Roach. The prices ranged from 22 to 77 cents per foot for the various sizes of stone. All were referred to the street committee.

SAYS BIBLE FOLK TRY TO HURT HER BUSINESS

Miss B. L. Clarke, publisher of "Daily Attractions in New York," has sued and obtained an injunction against a supposedly rival publication called "Every Day in New York" and published by Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketchum and Rev. Dr. A. L. White, of New York. Dr. Ketchum was formerly a pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of this city. Miss Clarke avers that the scheme of the two clergymen is to spoil her business and as they have intimated the type, cover and general appearance of her little magazine she has instituted proceedings to prevent her business being ruined.

At the office of "Every Day in New York" it was said yesterday that no papers had been served and that the owners of the publication, which by the way is being financed by Miss Helen Gould, would welcome its appearance in court in order to settle the question and the sooner the better.

RETURN OF STARLINGS SURE SIGN OF SPRING

More than one sign of spring has come to the knowledge of the people of the East End of the city during the past few days. Budding trees and blades of green grass of course are parts of the earliest signs but the birds which make for the best part of the season count more.

On Thursday evening about sundown a flock of about twenty starlings was noticed on a tree in the rear of the James T. Closson estate. On Friday the number had increased to fifty; on Saturday a hundred more were added and Sunday there were perhaps a thousand of the beautiful black birds with irridescent wings whirling about and chattering away like a lot of magpies.

It was interesting to watch them as they would apparently settle down to roost for the night and then in an instant see the whole flock in flight frightened from the shelter of the big pine trees by a passing automobile or a carriage crossing the bridge to the borough with a loud rumble. A singular thing was noticed in the manner of their flights. As the first frightened pair winged their way toward safety in another direction showing the way to the others, the whole mass of black rose as from a given signal and whirling about made straight for the Watchung hills only to return and repeat the performance. This entertaining spectacle was kept up until darkness finally hid the birds from sight.

Doubtless tonight will witness a return of the harbingers of the spring season is even greater numbers than were seen Sunday night.

JUNIOR ENDEAVORERS GIVE AN ENTERTAINMENT

The entertainment given by the Junior Society of Christian Endeavor in the Sunday-school rooms of Trinity Reformed church Monday was well attended and afforded the audience good opportunities to applaud the efforts of the young people who acquitted themselves admirably. The part of Mistress Mary was assumed by Helen Leithheuser and her reception committee was composed of Maud McAfee, Adelaide Cole, Jennis Sears, Adele Freeman, Nellie McAfee, Alice Auten, Alice Thatcher and Elizabeth Chickering. The flower girls were Elsie Zepp, Magion Wooley, Gladys Hubert, Alva Hansen, Alma Allegar, Vera and Hazel McCrady, Dorothy Van Winkle, Grace Soden, Ellen Sharback Helen McAfee, Ella Van Arsdale, Ruth Freeman, Helen Willet and Marjory Storr.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 13, 1910.

Topic—Patient faithfulness that wins the crown.—Rev. ii. 1-10, 18, 19. Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The book of Revelation is divided into seven parts, each one of which is subdivided seven times. The first general division is that of the churches, of which there are seven, and each one is described just as they were in John's time, and yet typical of the churches in all ages. Most churches today can find in one of them a description of itself. In this review of seven typical churches Christ finds none altogether good and none altogether bad. He praises the good, denounces the evil and gives warnings against the confluence of the evil. The letters are addressed to the "angels," or pastors, of the churches, showing the high estimation of the pastoral office that Christ Himself possessed, a position which certain classes of people, who are trying almost constantly to belittle the Christian ministry, might well observe and find in it a profitable example.

The circumstances in which the churches of John's day found themselves no doubt led Christ in writing to them to emphasize "patient faithfulness" or faithfulness in connection with a spirit of patience. It may be easy to be faithful under difficult circumstances if we could only give way to our impatience amid the difficulties. But to be both faithful and patient under sore distress is a united virtue, well deserving the Saviour's commendation. They lived in troublous religious times. These churches were largely made up of gentiles, who found it hard to give up the faith and forms of long years of training. Then there were some Jews in them, who practically still clung to the Jewish religion. False teachers and false doctrines rapidly arose. Outside persecutions made a Christian's life an uncertain quantity. Martyrdom was of frequent occurrence. To be faithful and to be patient at the same time must have sorely tried the souls of men. Yet they were faithful and especially patient. Christ frequently says, "I know thy patience." The early Christians were not all saints, but they did possess an abundance of patience, which is worthy our emulation today. Patience is not the overcrowning virtue of the present age, but when we think of the patient faithfulness of these early Christians, who endured even martyrdom without a murmur, and the example of Him who, though "led like a lamb to the slaughter, yet opened not His mouth," we should learn to exercise to a far greater extent than we do patience in our faithfulness.

Christ places a high reward upon patient faithfulness. To the church of Smyrna, which He declared must pass through many tribulations and trials, He also said, "Fear thou none of these things which thou shalt suffer; behold the devil shall cast some of you into prison that ye may be tried, and ye shall have tribulations ten days (a short time; be thou faithful unto death (not only until the end of life, but in death, if it should be martyrdom), and I will give thee a crown of life," or eternal life as a crown. What a precious promise for patient faithfulness! Eternal life as a crown! What the same promise holds good to us. The Christian life today is not a pathway of perfect peace. There are still trials and tribulations to be endured and things to suffer, but if we, too, are faithful and patient in our faithfulness there is laid up a crown of eternal life for us—Christ's reward for fidelity amid trials and tribulations. Let us see that none of us lose that crown which Christ has prepared for us.

A Heartening Word.

A Minnesota pastor says: I glory in Christian Endeavor work, upon which God has set His seal.

I remember when a lad of fifteen in my English home yielding my heart to God and yearning for the other young people of our church and community for whom no special effort of any kind, aside from the Sunday school, was being made.

Within three weeks I had banded six of my comrades into a young people's society. The number grew with every weekly meeting. There were conversions, and in time we heard of the American organization known as the Christian Endeavor and at once added the name Christian Endeavor to that of our society.

From that society preachers of the gospel have come. The society is now twenty-one years old, but is ever green and strong.

It has been my plan as a pastor in this country to give a Sabbath evening to the installation of the new Christian Endeavor officers in the presence of the whole church and congregation, knowing full well the increased interest that this will arouse on the part of the church in Christian Endeavor work.

I once had an elder (I am a Presbyterian) who was very skeptical about giving a whole valuable Sunday evening to such a procedure, but after the meeting he said: "It was grand. That was good for the church to witness."

I have but recently come to the north country, the woodland. This kind of work is missionary in deed as well as in name, and for that reason I chose it. There is no society here now; there never has been, but if it is God's will there soon will be.—Christian Endeavor World.

'OIL KING' LOWERS HIS BLACK FLAG—BRISBANE

At Trade Board Banquet, Journalist Salutes John D. Oft the Target of his Editorial Battery.

Arthur Brisbane, editor of the New York Evening Journal, was by all odds the central figure among the speakers at the banquet of the Board of Trade held at Truell hall. His topic, of which no one had an inkling before he announced it himself, was an arraignment of John D. Rockefeller and the American people for allowing the Standard Oil Magnate to become what he is. Mr. Brisbane also declared that the family of which our Mayor is a member, was responsible for the building of the tubes which connect New Jersey with Manhattan. The other speakers were Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth; Colonel C. W. Fuller, of Bayonne; James E. Martine and Samuel S. Swackhamer.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk, toastmaster, was introduced by William Jeffery, president of the board, and was received with tumultuous cheers lasting several moments. His honor immediately got busy with his introductory remarks as Mr. Brisbane had to catch a train. In presenting Mr. Brisbane to the company Mayor Fisk said that the great journalist had the privilege of speaking to the largest audience in the country every day, and as wisdom was his gift he urged the company to give the speaker their closest attention.

Mr. Brisbane wasted no words but jumped into his subject at once. He said in part: "I am going to acknowledge that I do speak to a good many people every day and in that I have an advantage which I will not have tonight, and that is they cannot reply to me, at least while they are listening to what I say. My talk tonight is to include but two subjects —the Hudson River tunnels and John D. Rockefeller. Of the first I desire to impress upon you that your Mayor and his family are entitled to as much if not more credit for the building of the great connecting links between the great State of New Jersey and Manhattan Island as William G. McAdoo. Because it was their money that accomplished the feat. Now each year 260,000 people are annually leaving Manhattan to seek homes in the suburbs. We are finding them in the Bronx, Long Island and New Jersey. It wont be long before a million families have come among you and it is up to you to provide accomodations for them. You have the territory and the railroads now up in and it burns for your population and make Jersey take its place along side New York that it may eventually become the greatest State in the Union."

Referring to Mr. Rockefeller the speaker said: "John D. has just had a bill introduced incorporating what he terms the Rockefeller Foundation. He is going to give away some of his fortune and the great American people are to be the beneficiaries. But he can afford this. He is only going to give back what he has taken from the people, but it is not a tithe of what the people ought to get. Rockefeller was a first class pirate for years, but he will show the people how to take care of themselves who wont do it if left to themselves. The natural wealth of the country is enough to care for the people, but we will have to take his money or he will own not only us but our property and our souls. Rockefeller was the synonom for the gallows owner of the middle ages, but he is to be thanked now and I sincerely believe that every newspaper man in the country, be he white, blue or a yellow journalist will extend to him the right to do what he has outlined."

Mr. Brisbane was cheered when he finished and the Mayor read a letter from William G. McAdoo in which the latter regretted his inability to be present and sent his hopes for a continuance of the prosperity of Plainfield. Later a telegram from Senator Wakelee was read in which the Bergen county man said his duties at the Capitol prevented his presence at the banquet, which he regretted very much.

Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth, who had endeavored to hide at a table in the center of the hall was espied by the toastmaster, and on the latter's invitation came forward to the speakers' table and made a short address complimentary to the Board of Trade. He said that it was his fourth experience with Board of Trade banquets in Plainfield, but he had noticed an improvement every time he came and was now convinced that this city had attained to that higher civilization to which other cities aspire but seldom realize. He classed John S. Kennedy and Andrew Carnegie with John D. Rockefeller, and claimed that all three were doing what would have been impossible in other times.

Colonel Fuller, who was asked to respond to "The Ladies," set the diners in an uproar by his witticism, and retired amid a yell of glee that could be heard in Eastwood. Mr. Martine, who followed the colonel gave a brief history of the ancient house of his family and presented the Board of Trade with a new gavel turned from a piece of timber taken from the original log house. The wood was part of a beam which was put in the house in 1717. Mr. Jeffery accepted the gavel in a speech of appreciation and said it would be a welcome addition to the weapons with which the board would prosecute its work.

Former Assemblyman Swackhamer made the most humorous speech of the evening and convulsed his hearers time and again with his timely and wholesome jokes. He ended, however, seriously by advising the board to pursue their purposes of advancing the interests of the city with an eye single to their duties as honorable, upright, courageous and energetic men, who would know no such thing as fail. This city with all its natural advantages has reached a high state of perfection and it should be the aim of its citizens to make it even better.

During the dinner the company was entertained by vocal and instrumental music by a quartet of colored musicians from the tubes whose achievements were loudly applauded. A striking thing was the reception accorded to Farmer-orator Martine as he walked up the aisle at 8:15. The big company recognized him as soon as he put his head in the doorway and there arose a cheer which must have warmed the cockles of his heart. It was one more demonstration of the affection in which Mr. Martine is held by his fellow townsmen.

The service of the banquet was perfect and the committee are entitled to the praise for the splendid results of their efforts. These men composed the committee. Edmund Rushmore, chairman; Allen B. Laing, M. C. VanArsdale, Alexander Milne and E. M. Laing.

MUCH WORK IS DONE ON THE STATE ROADS

State Road Commissioner Gilgyson, in his report to Governor Fort, telling of the constructed and maintenance of the roads of the State, speaks of the good highways throughout the State, and particularly in Mercer county.

The commissioner refers to a strip of twenty-two one-hundredths miles of the Trenton-Yardville road, which was built at a cost of $2,222.95, one-third of which, $740.98, was borne by the State from the moneys appropriated for road building and repairs.

Referring generally to the work done last year, over 52 miles of improved roads were constructed, at a cost of $507,914. Up to the close of the fiscal year on October 31, the total amount paid out on contracts from the $1,000,000 appropriation, was $174,443, and the amount paid to supervisors, $19,562, a total of $194,005. There was a balance due, against which contracts were filed on October 29, of $105,994. The appropriation for the year was $500,000, so that with the contracts filed against it, it was all used.

The report further says that during the past year we have built 70 miles of bituminous macadam roads, and have in course of construction 73 additional miles. These roads have been the subject of the most favorable comment by many eminent authorities on road construction, and unquestionably New Jersey is as far advanced in modern road building as any State in the union, and in addition, has a greater mileage of bituminous roads than any other State.

PRAISES THE "OIL KING"

Rev. Dr. Eaton, Rockefeller's Former Pastor, Discusses Great Endowment.

"JOHN D." AN INSTITUTION.

"He's One Hundred Men Rolled Into One and Is a Business Statesman," Says "Pastor-Farmer."

Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, pastor to John D. Rockefeller at the Euclid Avenue Baptist church, Chicago, and for years one of his close personal friends, was enthusiastic today when asked his opinion on the oil king's splendid gift to humanity. The doctor, who is now pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York city, was found on his farm in the picturesque Watchung valley just beyond the borders of this community, and he talked freely on the subject.

"Mr. Rockefeller's deed will go down in history," said Dr. Faton, "as a great deed of a great man. He has done a great thing, something thoroughly in keeping with things he has done in the past. Rockefeller is not an individual; he's an institution. He is one hundred men rolled into one. You get a different view of him from a hundred different angles. We all have our faults and our virtues and unhappily some have viewed this truly great man from one angle and have missed ninety-nine others.

"Everything Mr. Rockefeller does he does in a business way on business principles. That's so in this case. He has placed this philanthropy in the hands of responsible men and has made it so that it will be self-perpetuating. His guardians will pass away and others will take their places, but the gift will benefit mankind forever. He has shown his business statesmanship in this matter."

The world of benefaction, four great givers stand out in the fore rank. These men are John D. Rockefeller, Andrew Carnegie and John Stauart Kennedy, and the fourth a woman, Mrs. Russell Sage. Their gifts total nearly $350,000,000, and these riches have been distributed among universities, medical schools, societies for scientific research, churches, missions, in pursuit of world peace, and in miscellaneous ways.

He was a resident of Plainfield about thirty years, during the greater part of which he lived in retirement. He spent considerable time in travel throughout this country and abroad. Mr. Du Flon while interested in affairs of the city never took any active part in the city government. He is survived by a wife and one son, Thaddeus A. V. Du Flon. H M. Du Flon, Jr., another son, died some years ago at the age of four years.

"OLD FASHIONED SCHOOL" FOR PARK AVENUE BAPTISTS.

The adult Bible classes, the Berean and Volunteer, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, formerly taught by Rev. and Mrs. A. E. Finn, gave an entertainment at the church last Thursday, called "An Old Fashioned School." C. W. V. Moy was the teacher, and the entertainment abounded in genuine fun.

During the session of the school there were recitations by Mrs. Charles F. Dayton, Mrs. J. D. Wilson and the singing of popular songs. Mrs. J. J. Coard and David M. Runyon comprised a visiting committee at the last day of school for the season and they had lots of fun conducting an examination to ascertain what progress the pupils had made.

After the affair refreshments were served in the form of school luches. Those in charge of the entertainment were Miss Olive DeLany, Mrs. Jasper Sims, Mrs. Charles Steiner, Mrs. J. D. Wilson, Miss Jennie Giles, Harry Johnson, Ferdinand Boerum, Charles F. Dayton and Mrs. William Bush.

FAMOUS HORSE CASE TO BE TRIED IN APRIL

In the list of cases slated for trial at the April term of the Somerset County Court is the suit for $2,000 damages against Stonewall and William Jackson and Richard A. Boyce by Michael Riccardi. It is the celebrated horse case in which Jacob Lambert of Norristown, Pa., figured conspicuously last September.

The suit is the outcome of the theft of three horses from Lambert's farm near Norristown last fall. The latter advertised for the horses extensively, and through Stonewall Jackson, Lambert was informed that there were two horses answering to the latter's description at Boyce's livery stable, which Michae' and Benjamin Riccardi had tried to sell him.

Lambert came to Plainfield, went to the stables with a constable, and identified the horses as his property. Without any legal proceedings Lambert secured possession of the horses and shipped them back to Norristown, at the same time causing the arrest of the Riccardis on a fugitive's warrant.

The Riccardis engaged Robert Newton Crane, as counsel, who secured their release. Lambert made an effort to have the Riccardis extradited to Pennsylvania, but Mr. Crane successfully fought this issue in a hearing before Governor J. Franklin Fort, who refused to issue extradition papers. The impending suit is brought by the Riccardis for the recovery of the horses, which they claim as their own, and also the loss of their services, against the Jacksons and Boyce, as it was through their efforts that Lambert secured possession of the horses.

CLAIMS OF ATTACHING CREDITORS SETTLED

After three weeks of strenuous effort, Martin Stutsman, attorney for Wallace P. Bache, formerly of East Ninth street, has succeeded in settling with all his creditors. There were twenty-three suits and they were all settled on a percentage basis. He paid out in all about $1,227, including amounts due creditors, freight, cartage and storage charges and the goods have been shipped to the owner at Wichita, Kansas, where he now resides.

Mr. Bache, who was a New York merchant, resided on East Ninth street. He secured a position in Kansas, and had his goods packed in a freight car ready for shipment, when numerous creditors heard of his his intended "flight" and had attachments issue. Mr. Bache wrote to Mr. Stutsman, his counsel, explaining that as soon as possible he would settle all claims, which he has done.

HABITUAL DRUNKARD GETS 160 DAYS IN JAIL

One of the heaviest sentences ever imposed on a drunkard in the city court was that handed out to John Callahan Saturday by Judge William N. Runyon. A fine of one hundred dollars and confinement in the county jail for a term of sixty days, was the sentence and in case of the fine not being paid Callahan will have to serve one day for each dollar.

Callahan was warned by the judge on his last appearance in court that the fine and imprisonment would follow another appearance. Judge Runyon's patience became exhausted at the time of Callahan's last appearance, but gave the poor fellow one more chance to reform. But he just couldn't let the "booze" alone.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF CHAS. H. SCHERMERHORN

The funeral service of Charles Hill Schermerhorn was held Friday afternoon at 1 o'clock from the home of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Woodruff, on East Second street, and was largely attended by relatives and friends, including James N. Worl, of Westfield, who taught Mr. Schermerhorn telegraphy. There was a large number of beautiful floral tributes.

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, conducted the service, assisted by Rev. Mr. Francis, of Elizabeth, the latter being an old friend of the family. During the service Miss Marion Cromwell, of Cranford, sang a selection.

The various societies of which Mr. Schermerhorn was a member were represented, including the Old Timers' Telegraph Association, and the Masons. He was laid to rest in Hillside Cemetery and the pall-bearers were Frank and Edward Neal, Abram Schermerhorn, Sr., Abram Schermerhorn, Jr., Fred Work and Joseph Dunham.

SUPT. GEORGE H. BATCHELOR SUCCEEDED BY J. E. CHURCH.

George H. Batchelor, who has been superintendent of the First Baptist church Sunday-school for the past eight years, resigned Friday, and James E. Church was elected to fill the position. Mr. Batchelor retires because of a pressure of business duties which will not permit him to give his time to the work. He will, however, retain his interest in the school which he has served so faithfully. Mr. Church has had a wide experience in Sunday-school work, and is now superintendent of the State Home department association.

The other officers chosen for the year follow:

Associate superintendents, Frank W. Jensen, Harold Serrell, Mrs. Louis T. Matlack; primary superintendent, Mrs. J. A. Powlison; superintendent beginners, Miss Mary White; superintendent junior department, Arthur M. Harris; secretary, J. D. Macnab; treasurer, Fred A. Armstrong; librarian, Louis T. Matlack.

Annual reports from the missionary, finance committees and the treasurer as well as Miss Laura J. Runyon, superintendent of the Home department were received. The treasurer's report showed a balance of $214.78. The other reports were encouraging. It was decided to hold the annual excursion to Asbury Park this summer and the date will be announced later.

Additional room is needed for the beginners' department and the trustees of the church will take up this improvement with a committee from the Sunday school, the plan being to build an addition about twenty feet square in the rear of the church for that department. The average attendance of the school as well as the membership is increasing.

NEW DUST KILLER FOR THE HIGHWAYS

Members of the Road Committee of the Board of Freeholders who have been interested for years past in various road building methods, have been offered something new in the way of road building material in a preparation manufactured by the Solvay Process Company of Syracuse. This method of road building has been brought to the attention of the county engineers all over the State, and it is probable that experiments may be made with it by the State Commission during the coming spring. Union county has been experimenting with road building materials for several years past with an idea of getting good, durable road that will not make mucu dust and will stand the heavy automobile traffic.

The preparation put up by the Syracuse company is called the "Solvay granulated calcium chloride," and is a chemical salt similar in appearance to popcorn. It is a neutral salt and consequently has no injurious effects upon the material of the road or anything else that may come in contact with it. The makers claim that it is odorless, and that it is white, clean and non-corrosive. Its single property when applied to a road is that it immediately absorbs enough water from the air to keep the roads moist and dustless.

The manufacturers claim that the preparation preserves the roads from wear, and is absolutely dustless. Dust, they claim, is wear, and if there is no dust there is no wear.

The Syracuse company figures and tests prove that the material is more satisfactory than chloride of oil preparations. It is estimated that it costs less per yard than oil and requires no top dressing of gravel to absorb it, as does oil. It requires no water to apply, and is colorless and entirely soluble in water. It is noncombustible and can be shipped easily.

One of the big claims of the company is that the preparation does not produce a greasy mud nor does the mud injure the paint of vehicles. It is also claimed that it is wholly without any effect on rubber. The company says that the material is completely absorbed by the road's surface within one half hour or an hour after it is applied. The one point in which oil might seem to excel calcium chloride is that the application of oil is assumed to be sufficient for one or two years, although it is stated that oil must be put on a road once each year. Solvay granulated calcium chloride costs $25 per mile per application or $75 to $100 per mile a year. Two or more applications are necessary in the year. The manufacturers claim that it is cheaper to put the preparation on the road than it is to put water on with a watering cart.

GEORGE VOEHL TO RETIRE FROM BAKERY BUSINESS.

George Voehl, who has been engaged in the bakery business on West Front street, for more than twenty years, will retire on March 20, having sold the business to Lewis Cornfield, of this city. Mr. Cornfield has been employed for the past five years as a baker by Mr. Voehl and is thoroughly conversant with every detail.

Mr. Voehl is one of the best known merchants of the city. While he has been connected with the bakery business practically all his life, his father for many years before him having been a baker, he has been in business for himself a little over twenty years. He will vacate his property, which is to be occupied by Mr. Cornfield, and reside elsewhere in the city, still retaining the ownership of the property.

THE LATEST DOG.

The latest foreign dog to arrest the fanciers attention is the Samoyede (pronounced Sam-o-yad), or Artic sledge dog. The recent explorations have focused public attention on these invaluable aids to Artic exploration, although specimens of the breed have been exhibited in England before.

The Samoyede, in appearance, is something like an enlarged Pomeranian (from whom it is no doubt descended), except that his coat is not so long and much more dense and fur-like. Like all dogs of the northern regions he is prick-eared and curls his tail on his back. He is, naturally, the hardiest of the hardy, is also very companionable, and a good specimen is very handsome and valuable. There is every evidence of this northern dog becoming very fashionable.

Keeping Food Hot.

To keep food that burns easily hot upon the gas stove or to cook anything of the kind without constant stirring a simple devise possible to any housekeeper helps out greatly. This is made by securing a small tin, such as baked beans are spied in by delicatessens and grocers. Puncture the bottom of the can with several holes and invert it over the flames. Place the pan in which the food is to be cooked on this, turn the gas very low and it will keep warm or simmer (according to the height of the flame) without scorching the contents.

WANT TO CHANGE THE NAME OF DUER STREET

Mayor Smalley called the attention of the Borough Council last night to a petition being circulated among property owners on Duer street, suggesting that the name of the thoroughfare be changed to North Madison avenue. The mayor said that he had been requested to bring the matter before the Council by interested parties.

A number of citizens living on that throughfare, he said, were desirous of having the name of the street changed as Duer street is a continuation of Madison avenue and considerable confusion reigns among expressmen in the delivery of packages and out-of-town people who have occasion to visit the borough. The mayor entertained the opinion if the change was made these little troubles would be eliminated and everybody concerned benefited. He said he believed it would also be a benefit also to people residing in the city.

Councilman Stahl reported that the petition is in circulation and that it would be ready for submission to the Council at its next meeting on March 18. Walter Linbarger is securing signatures to the petition.

In the matter of street names Mr. Buttfield called the attention of the Council that a mistake had been made on the borough maps in designating Tappin avenue. The street was named after the Tappin estate, but on the borough maps the name is miss-spelled, "Tappan." The borough clerk was authorized to correct the mistake.

SIX NEPHEWS BEARERS AT MR. ROSS' FUNERAL

Funeral services over the late James Ross, who was sexton of the First Presbyterian church for thirty two years, were held Wednesday afternoon at the home of his granddaughter, Mrs. Florence Dell, on East Third street. Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring and Rev. Lewis Bond, who had charge of the service, referred in their addresses to Mr. Ross' long term of faithful service to the church and his Christian character.

Among the numerous floral tributes was a sheaf of wheat and lillies from the officials of the church. Interment was made in the North Plainfield cemetery, the bearers being six nephews of the deceast: L. W. Randolph, John and Charles Hunt, of this city; George Ross and Mr. Randolph, of Newark, and George Terry, of Montclair.

CLEANING ERMINE.

A furrier gave one of his customers a hint that has saved her many dollars. Instead of having her ermine furs cleaned professionally several times a winter, each time her set becomes soiled she mixes a thick paste of white cornmeal and gasoline and rubs it through the fur just as though washing clothes.

The paste is put in a big bowl so as not to spill on the floor. It is well to spread papers around, as the work is not especially cleanly.

If the furs are very dirty they should be put through several fresh lots of the paste, being sure to work it well into the skin. The mixture is easily shaken out and the ermine is as white as when new.

The lining usually becomes white with the skin, but if it does not the paste is rubbed on with a clean piece of flannel.

This is an excellent paste for cleaning white grebe or other light fur hats. Do not fear to make the fur too moist with the paste. Rub it in hard and repeat several times. Shake the meal out over a sheet or you will spend days cleaning your carpets.

This paste is also excellent to clean the bottom of an evening frock. It does not leave a streak like plain gasoline and is quickly rubbed on with a piece of flannel. Let it dry partly and brush off with a soft, clean brush.

TRUST COMPANY INSTALLING A HUGE STEEL VAULT.

Owing to the rapidly increasing storage business of The Plainfield Trust Company, it has been found necessary by that concern to materially enlarge its present facilities. To this end, a new steel-lined vault is now in course of construction which, when finished, will be more than twice the size of the present vault at the institution and will afford ample storage capacity for some time to come.

In connection with this improvement, a vault-room is being provided for the use and convenience of the patrons of the storage department, where they may have access to the trunks, etc. It is anticipated that the vault will be finished about April 15.

PLAINFIELD FOR LEAGUE

Manager Dorflinger Willing to Place a Team in the Proposed Circuit.

If the New Jersey State Baseball League is a go Plainfield will be represented with a team under the management of Ernest Dorflinger. This is cockcure, as at the meeting of the magnates and organizers held at the City Hotel, at New Brunswick, Sunday afternoon, Mr. Dorflinger declared that Plainfield is willing to link fortunes with the proposed league, and that in order to carry the local end through, Mr. Dorflinger informed the delegates that a stock company will be organized.

The organization of the circuit was deferred until next Sunday afternoon when a meeting will be held at the Packer House, Perth Amboy. At the present the circuit includes Plainfield, Perth Amboy, Elizabeth and New Jersey. New Brunswick is on the fence and Rahway, Carteret and Somerville are yet to be heard from. J. W. Dobbins, of Newark, who is one of the chief boomers of the league, stated that he stood willing to place a team in Somerville, if local fans would back the proposition down. Mr. Dobbins said if he took this course he would have the support of Jack Torpey, the well known catcher. Trenton and Summit are also possibilities.

The New Brunswick delegates have the "big league" bug after their big 1909 season. Hugo Wasserman, secretary of the Middlesex aggregation, had a lot to say at the session, and what he did say, he made no secret that he was trying to throw cold water on the proposition. The tact pursued by Mr. Wasserman resulted in a lively verbal recto between him and Mr. Dorflinger. Mr. Wasserman, in his remarks appeared to be satisfied that if New Brunswick entered the league it would be a runaway race for the Middlesex county seniors.

"Suppose the league is organized, and it results in a runaway for New Brunswick, where would the interest be?" was one of the questions asked by Wasserman.

This apparently nettled Mr. Dorflinger, and the latter jumped to his feet and replied: "See here, don't you New Brunswick guys get swelled heads. If there is any running away to be done, you can bet Plainfield will be in it right off from the start." That retort squelched Mr. Wasserman.

Several ripples of excitement marked the session. J. W. Dobbins frankly declared, without any reflection on the New Brunswick delegates, that many of New Brunswick's victories last season were due to Umpire Van Cleef, who made it a point to bat at a 1.000 clip, when the home team was in tight pinches. Dobbins also went so far as to state that VanCleef had instructions to follow this course from Manager Dave Driscoll. The Brunswick representatives had no replies to offer but let the matter drop with silence.

President A. L. Rollenetz also landed a wallop on New Brunswick when he informed the delegates that he had been informed that Dave Driscoll had made that boast that he had "fixed" the New Brunswick sporting writers to "knock" the proposed league. When Mr. Rollenetz made this charge, "Patsy" Vanderveer, sporting writer of the New Brunswick Times, jumped to his feet shook his fist in the air and declared:

"It's not so, you can tell your friend that he is a liar." Rollenetz dropped the subject and the excitement subsided.

Dr. F. J. Fanning, of the New Brunswick club, appeared to favor the league idea. He declared that the delegates that his club had paid out $10,700 for alien ball players last season and had lost $80 on Saturday games. Mr. Dobbins told the New Brunswick Representatives that they were paying too high salaries for their players. The latter declared that all of last year's team could be secured a half the prices paid. Dr. Fanning was interested in the dope, took notes, and it is likely that there will be some big salary slicing before the first game in old Brunswick is played next season.

In explaining the program of the new league, President Rollenetz said that the nominal price of five dollars would be charged for franchises, and that the league dues would be one dollar a game. This income he said would be used in defraying the incidental expenses of the president.

It is proposed to have a salary limit of $50, the idea being to give local players a chance, in preference to out of town players. The matter of guarantees and division of receipts was left for next Sunday's meeting. Games will be played on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. The schedule will be arranged which will permit Sunday ball teams to play at home on the Sabbath. The delegates to the meeting were as follows:

Plainfield, Manager Ernest Dorflinger, Adam Shoel, William Lane, G. H. Pfrathrook; New Brunswick, President George Kuhn, Secretary Hugo Wasserman. Dr. F. J. Fanning, Clarence Baier, Elizabeth, W. Hall; Parkways of Newark, J. W. Dobbins; Perth Amboy, William Hoffnet, Thomas Burke, William Martin.

ENJOY MUSICAL SERVICES

Special Program at Trinity Reformed Heard by Large Congregation.

The special musical program at Trinity Reformed church last Sunday served to attract a large congregation, which included members from other churches in the city and borough. The special attraction was Mr. Walter David, harpist, of New York city, and a number of anthems by the quartet choir. Mrs. David more than fulfilled the expectations of those who counted on having a musical treat. The addition of the harp to the organ accompaniments making a delightful combination especially so when accompanying soloists.

The voluntary "En Reve," by Verdalle, is a composition which requires nimble fingers for the harp work and the piece was executed with admirable technique and masterful expression. The prelude to Miss Raybert's solo, "Agnus Dei," by Bizet, with organ, viola and harp, was a finely executed number. Mrs. David alone played "Marche Solenie," by Gounod as an offertory, and gave a splendid rendering of this rather sombre classic.

Mrs. David, who has been a guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Cutter, the baritone of the choir, is an accomplished artist and produces with ease the most difficult chords on the instrument. The singing of the quartet choir was up to the usual standard and the audience was well pleased.

Rev. John Y. Brook spoke briefly on a Lenten topic referring to the crucifixion of Christ and His great suffering. He said that Christ was made perfect through His sufferings and died of a broken heart. He suffered His intense agony because he bore the sins of the world and in this His disciples would have to be like Him as through suffering they are made whole. In the suffering of the life of this life the growth of the Christian life is stimulated and the horizon of the Christian is broadened. From the beginning of His life until He said on the cross: "It is finished," Christ was an intense martyr and in view of this fact is there any sacrifice too great for us to make for him?

Great credit is due Alfred L. Titsworth, organist and choirmaster, for the success of the evening.

MUSICAL KINDERGARTEN METHODS ARE EXPLAINED

An interesting and instructive lecture on musical kindergarten work was given at the home of Miss Ella Berrell on Union street, Saturday afternoon, by Miss Marie von Hitzfeld, of New York city. Miss von Hitzfeld gave a practical demonstration of the Fletcher Music Method, the original kindergarten system, with which she has been so successful.

As was explained by the kindergarten paraphernalia, the system aims to reduce the difficulties which the study of music causes to children and to develop the child physically, mentally and artistically. The rendition from memory of Baccarolle from the Tales of Hoffman, Berceuse, Godard and Humoresque, Ellenberg, by Iola Ransome, a little girl was much enjoyed and showed what had been accomplished in two years' work. Miss Hitzfeld is planning to locate in this city.

BLUE RIBBON TERRIER'S THRILLING EXPERIENCE.

An Airedale terrier, belonging to Francis L. Bill, of Myrtle avenue, which distinguished itself by capturing several blue ribbons at recent dog shows, had a thrilling experience which nearly resulted in the death of the canine by starvation. In giving chase to a rabbit or rat under a barn belonging to the Tappin estate near Rockview avenue the animal trapped its two front legs and head in a beam underneath the structure. The wines of the dog heard by a boy who notified Chief Weiss, and the latter, after considerable exertion, succeeded in releasing the animal from its imprisonment.

When rescued, the dog was weak from lack of food but the owner is bringing it around on a milk and hot water diet. The dog had evidently been imprisoned for a week.

To West Point.

Huse for three years or more, hopes to enter the United States Military Academy early this month, his father having received unsolicited through Congress for him to take the course at West Point. Mr. Torroella will be much missed by his friends, but his popularity will not decrease, particularly among his fair friends. He bid an informal farewell to his friends at a pink tea given for him last Saturday.

HOLTON WILL CASE ENDS

Judge Schenck Stops Further Argument by Permiting Probate of Will.

The Mary E. Holton will case, which has been in litigation in the Somerset court for several months, came to an end Monday, when Judge Schenck ruled that the counsel for the contestants had failed to make out a case and issued an order that the will be probated. Under this ruling the American Baptist Society will come in for more than $50,000, with the understanding that the bequests made in Miss Holton's last testament will stand.

Judge W. A. Coddington, one of the counsel for the will, protested to the court against the allowance of any fees to counsel for the contestants on the score that the evidence did not warrant the contesting of the will. Counsel for the executors, however, declared that Miss Holton's mental condition at the time of her executing the last will warranted such a proceeding. Judge Schenck apparently took the same view as he was generous in the award of fees to counsel and witnesses.

Lawyers in the case will receive about $6,000, Judge Coddington and Alvah A. Clark, counsel for the will were awarded a fee of $2,500. For the contestants the awards were as follows: Winfield S. Angleman, $500; A. M. Lockman, $500; Nelson D. Dunigan, $500; Harry C. Runyon, $350; Mr. Streitwolf, $100; former Sheriff Edward Cooper, as administrator was awarded a fee of $300, while his counsel, Hugh K. Gaston, received $250; Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan and Dr. J. Angelo, as witnesses, were awarded $50 and $25 respectively, and the nurse who attended Mrs. Holton will receive $3 a day.

COUNCILMAN STAHL OFFERS A SUGGESTION

The petition in circulation among Duer street residents asking the Borough Council to change the name of that thoroughfare to North Madison avenue is being freely signed and the prospects are that it will be ready for presentation to the Council at the special meeting on Friday night, March 18.

Councilman J. J. Stahl offered a suggestion on the matter this morning. "Why not get up a petition to change the name of Madison avenue to Duer street? 'Duer' is the oldest name, when it is remembered that Madison avenue was formerly known as Mechanic street, and that the change was made not so many years ago."

Mr. Stahl wanted it to be understood, however, that he is not "butting in" one the wishes of the residents of Duer street on the matter, and that he stood ready to vote to name the street to conform with the ideas of the majoority of the property owners who are interested in the matter.

He Forgot His Errand.

Anthony Schwalback started from Westfield on Saturday to buy some pigs feet for a "friend," but he was tempted beyond endurance by the lights along East Front street and tarried by the way. The result was an accumulation of a load of tribulation which landed him in a cell at police headquarters. Judge Runyon advised him to remember that a detour from the strict path of duty always ends disastrously for the sinner and discharged him.

DUNELLEN PASTOR ON THE PHILA. STRIKE

The Philadelphia car strike was referred to by the Rev. W. A. Knox, pastor of the Methodist church and Rev. Ernest O. Brown, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Dunellen, in their sermons Sunday. Dr. Knox took for his text, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

The latter in his discourse made reference to the battles for American liberty in the revolution, war of the freedom of the slaves in the Civil War, and the liberating of the Cubans from Spanish rule in 1898. In all of these strifes, Dr. Knox declared, that America exemplified the Scriptural injunction, of being her brother's keeper.

"In Philadelphia," he declared, men, women and children are being shot down in the street. That gigantic railroad corporation around which the strike centres, says to its employes: 'Work for the executors, however, declared that Miss Holton's mental condition at the time of her executing the last will warranted such a proceeding. Judge Schenck apparently took the same view as he was generous in the award of fees to counsel and witnesses.

Lawyers in the case will receive about $6,000, Judge Coddington and Alvah A. Clark, counsel for the will were awarded a fee of $2,500. For the contestants the awards were as follows: Winfield S. Angleman, $500; A. M. Lockman, $500; Nelson D. Dunigan, $500; Harry C. Angelo, as witnesses, were awarded $50 and $25 respectively, and the nurse who attended Mrs. Holton will receive $3 a day.

Enrollment of new members and the commissioning of local officers were features. Eight were received as new members of the Army while four were received on transfers from other corps. After the enrollment the choir sang an appropriate song, "The Victory May Depend On Us."

At the close of the service one woman came to the altar and gave herself to Christ, thus making a total of ten who have professed conversion during the special series of meetings.

The Sunday-school officers are Miss Blanche Sharkey, junior treasurer; Miss Maud Jackson, secretary; W. PREACHES TO JR.O.U.A.M.

Rev. Charles S. Kemble Addresses Members of Four Local Councils.

The members of Franklin, Somerset, Benevolent and Plainfield Councils, Jr. O. U. A. M., attended divine services at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, Sunday, when the pastor, Rev. Charles S. Komble, who was recently initiated into the order, delivered a strong sermon on "patriotism." The church was filled with members of the order and their friends. During the service Charles W. Lewis sang a solo and there was an anthem by the choir.

Mr. Kemble presented Simeon as one of the finest types of patriotism, for he not only had a strong love for his own country, and a faithful follower of Christ, but delighted in the fact that he was to be a Saviour of the whole world. Mr. Kemble spoke of the tendency of today to depreciate patriotism in favor of a world-wide citizenship, and urged that a man love his own country best, as he would love his family and home, but that he should also be a blessing to the world at large.

In referring to Simeon the minister said that he was just and devout in his relations to God and man, and added that if a man is in proper relation to God he will also hold the right relationship to man.

THE BANISTERS.

What They Tell the Dwellers in New York's Tenements.

Many a grewsome bit of wisdom is gleaned by settlement workers. The other day a woman of philanthropic tendencies trudged miles looking for rooms for an unfortunate family that had to move. After she had made a selection that would fit their scant means the mother of the family went around to see the rooms before moving in.

"Oh," exclaimed that wise tenement dweller, "we'd be worse off here than where we are! This place is too unhealthy."

"How do you make that out?' asked the settlement worker. "It strikes me as being better than most houses of its class."

The woman pointed to the banisters, which ran up through the five flights of stairs to the roof in a ragged, broken line. "Coffins," she said grimly. "That's what that means. Coffins is terrible hard on banisters. There are too many deathe here to suit me."

And when the settlement worker learned that many tenement dwellers really do judge of the healthfulness of a house by the condition of the banisters she concluded that that place wouldn't suit her either.—New York Press.

WOMAN.

A Mystery That Keeps Man Eternally on the Guess.

"When woman has ceased to be a mystery she will cease to be of especial interest to man," said one among the loveliest of her sex, and she is able to speak as one having authority, for she is comely and has been alive long enough to know whereof she speaks.

And when the settlement worker learned that many tenement dwellers really do judge of the healthfulness of a house by the condition of the banisters she concluded that that place wouldn't suit her either.—New York Press.

MAYOR PRESENTS TROPHIES; ENTERTAINED AT ST. MARY'S

Many of the school children who were disappointed yesterday because Mayor Charles J. Fisk did not present the cups that the various classes had won in the recent self-denial week contest, but they were all relieved today when the Mayor, accompanied by a committee from the police department, went around the city distributing the trophies this morning.

At St. Mary's school special exercises marked the presentation of the banner and cup. As the Mayor, Chief Kiely and Patrolman Daniel McDonald entered the pupils arose and sang "Columbia," which was followed by a speech by one of the boy pupils. Mayor Fisk, Father B. M. Bogan and Chief Kiely all made short addresses, all of which were punctuated by songs by the children. After the entertaining program was over Mayor Fisk shook hands with the pupils and the Sisters of the convent. Fathers Hogan and Scioia were interested witnesses of the exercises.

At the other schools the principals were sought and the class entitled to the trophy were given a short address by the Mayor. In every instance the Mayor was received with manifestations of pleasure and the winning pupils showed their pride in their achievements. TO EQUIP PLAYGROUNDS AT TWO LOCAL SCHOOLS

Joseph W. Gavett, representing the Playground Commission, met with the Councilmanic finance committee, last night, when the latter agreed to recommend to the Common Council that an appropriation of $1,000 be made to equip playgrounds at the Franklin and Bryant Schools. Mr. Gavett explained to the councilmen the benefits that would be derived from having such playgrounds here and engaging an instructor who would direct the activities of the children. In the equipment it is proposed to purchase sand boxes, swing boards and other apparatus usually provided for such recreation places. If the plan is a success other school yards may be similarly equipped next year.

The appropriation will be asked for at the next meeting of the Common Council.

DAMAGE SUIT COMES NEXT

Harry Dreier's Action in Ejecting Mrs. M. Totten Decreed Unlawful.

WOMAN CLAIMED DAMAGES.

Supreme Court Decision Handed Down Monday—Mrs. Totten Now Dead—Daughter Will Sue.

An interesting sequel to the purchase of property at a sale by the city for unpaid taxes has had its penultimate decision at the hands of two Justices of the Supreme Court, and the original suit for damages instituted by Mrs. Margaret Totten against Harry Dreier will be continued by her daughter with a possibility of success.

The suit began last year when in August Mrs. Totten began proceedings against Dreier for damages in the sum of $5,000 for ejectment and assault. Dreier bought the property of Frank M. Bacon, at the corner of New and Fifth streets. This is a double house and Mrs. Totten occupied the half in front on an unexpired lease. When the new owner took charge of the property he refused admittance to Mrs. Totten even to allow her to remove her personal property. Her furniture was removed and stored and she was forcibly kept away from the premises.

During the trial of the original suit for the property Bacon was killed on the railroad, but this did not prevent Dreier from ejecting the Bacon family from the house After this there quickly followed the displacement of Mrs. Totten and the confiscation of her goods and chattels, which Dreier claimed he had a right to do as owner of the property and in spite of the lease held by Mrs. Totten.

The Supreme Court on Monday decided that the demurrer taken by Winfield S. Angleman, counsel for Mrs. Totten, was right and thus brings to the attention of owners of property that where a lease is held it is good until the expiration of its time limit.

Since the Supreme Court has had the case under advisement Mrs. Totten has died, but the suit for damages will be pressed by her daughter, Mrs. Terry, of North Plainfield.

ESTABLISHES PREGEDENT

Ruling of Vice-Chancellor Walker at Rahway New Interpretation of Law.

ALIMONY NOT ALLOWED HERE.

Woman Who Sued Husband While He Was Under Bonds Loses Case in Chancery Court.

A decision has just been handed down by Vice Chancellor Walker at Trenton which makes a precedent for the State of New Jersey and is one in which all overseers of the poor and women who seek alimony from recalcitrant husbands will be interested.

Lillian Roarke, of Rahway, who has not lived with her husband for the past two years, engaged counsel in a suit for maintenance for herself and child. Her lawyer, Charles T. Cowenhoven, at the same time asked that the Chancellor allow her temporary alimony and counsel fees. But Chancellor Walker not having any precedent to go on took the case under advisement, for this reason: Mrs. Roarke had in 1908 applied to Justice Alfred B. Cook, of Rahway, for support of herself and child, which was referred to the overseer of the poor. The latter had the husband, Alfred Roarke, put under bonds to pay his wife five dollars per week.

Mrs. Roarke accepted this settlement and on the expiration of one year the bond was renewed for the same weekly amount, and the date of the expiration of the bond is June 10, 1910. Mrs. Roarke engaged Judge Cowenhoven to bring suit for alimony and counsel fees while the bond of the husband was still in effect and Vice Chancellor Walker decides that Mrs. Roarke is precluded from receiving anything on her application while the orders of the police court Justice are in force.

Winfield S. Angleman and his brother, H. A. Angleman, of Rahway, appeared for Mr. Roarke.

—P. H. Latourette, auctioneer, will sell several parcels of real estate on Saturday. See adv. on page eight. 3 16 2

Pending the trial of the case Vice Chancellor Howell has allowed Mrs. Todd thirty-one dollars per week for the maintenance of herself and her two boys and a sum for counsel fees.

The wife's complaint states that Mr. and Mrs. Todd were married by Rev. J. K. Folwell, pastor of the Westfield Baptist church, on September 28, 1886, and that they lived together in perfect harmony until there appeared on the scene a certain stenographer who, she alleges, has alienated her husband's affections. This began, it is alleged, in 1907 and since then there has been cause for complaint on the part of the wife. The couple have been separated for some time. Todd makes his abode in the Boice-Runyon building.

Mrs. Todd also states that she and her husband came to this city in 1901 and that they have lived here ever since.

HE PLEADS FOR ECONOMY

S. St. John McCutchen Gives Good Advice at Borough School Meeting.

EXTRAVAGANCE IN BUILDINGS.

Rev. George A. Warner, Allen B. Laing Are Elected and Dr. Cooley and Robt. Clark, Jr., Re-elected.

Samuel St. John McCutchen, a member of the State Board of Education, made a plea for economy in the expenditure of school moneys at the annual school meeting in the Somerset street school last night. He declared it was a crime for municipalities to expend extravagant sums for school buildings which is not unusual in these days. Mr. McCutchen's sentiments struck a popular chord with his hearers when he emphasized his remarks by declaring:

"That we can educate children just as well in a $25,000 schoolhouse, as in a structure that costs $100,000 or more. Let us have all the essentials that are necessary to educate, but let us be careful in the expense involved. It is not the outside of the school that counts in the education of children, but what goes on in the inside."

Mr. McCutchen made his address at the request of Councilman L. B. Woolston, who desired some information as to the matter employed in the distribution of the state school tax money. In explaining this method he presented some interesting statistics and figures. He said that the state school received about two and a quarter million dollars from the railroad last year. This sum, he said, was inadequate to pay the salaries of the teachers in the state, and other expense, which made it necessary for a local school tax. Out of that amount about $300,000 is appropriated to state education institutions.

In criticizing the extravagant policies of some school boards he cited two instances that came under his observation as a member of the State School Board during the past year. One borough, with a population of 5,000 had bonded itself to the extent of $80,000 for a school building, and another municipality of about the same size bonded itself for the erection of a school to cost $50,000.

"It is a shame, and a crime," declared the speaker, "Men, when they get a big pile of money to handle become careless, and it is the same way with some school boards."

The meeting was attended by about fifty citizens and it was one of the most harmonious school elections ever conducted in the borough. There was only one ticket in the field. Dr. J. H. Cooley and Robert Clark, Jr., were re-elected to three year terms and Allan B. Laing was elected to succeed Charles L. Nichols for three years. Rev. George A. Warner was elected to the one year term. Dr. Cooley and Mr. Clark received 42 votes; Mr. Laing, 39, and Mr. Warner, 34 votes. There were also a few scattering votes.

A surprise of the meeting was the re-election of Dr. Cooley after the latter's declaration that he would refuse a renomination. Dr. Cooley was placed in nomination by S. B. Joseph. Dr. Cooley, however, responded by saying that he believed that he had done his full duty as he had served twelve years, but that he would consent to being a candidate for the one year term. Despite Dr. Cooley's request he was named as a three-year candidate amid an outburst of applause.

Thomas E. Currin, F. O. Dunning and the Rev. George A. Warner were named for the one-year term. Mr. Warner, however, was given a clear field as Mr. Currin withdrew in favor of Mr. Dunning, and the latter retired in favor of Mr. Warner.

There was no opposition to the $20,000 budget which included $16,187 for current expenses; $1,900 for 1911, and $1,913 for manual training. The first two named appropriations received 47 votes and 42 votes were cast for manual training.

Dr. James R. Joy, the retiring president of the board, called the meeting to order and Mayor Newton B. Smalley was selected as permanent chairman. The Mayor in his opening remarks said in part:

"We all realize that our school matters are important and I am glad that we all feel alike this year on school matters. The finances of the borough are in a highly satisfactory condition and I hope any action tonight will be an evidence that they will so continue.

"Our taxes to some of our citizens appear to be heavy and there is a feeling that our governing bodies such as the Council and School Board should operate on economical

GIRLS AFTER "TOWN POET"

Fair Sex of Dunellen Aroused Over Posting of Effusion in Postoffice.

"5:15 TRAIN" IS MENTIONED.

Joker, Whoever He Is, Having a Lot of Fun—Tar and Feathers Will Be His Fate If Apprehended.

The staid old village of Dunellen, which has occupied a prominent part in the newspapers in recent years, because of its many pretty girls, and its large number of estimable spinsters, is again in the throes of gossip over the posting of an original poem in the postoffice recently by the "town poet."

That some young woman in the town are after the scalp of the "poet" is no secret, and if his identity is discovered there is sure to be a tar and feather tragedy to record.

The Dunellen postoffice is well known as the gossip clearing house for that village, New Market and Piscataway township. "Its the general understanding if you want to know anything all that is necessary is to go to the Dunellen stamp headquarters "when the 5:15 train comes in every day."

It is also the trysting place for the town's lovers, and according to history, Dan Cupid has made many conquests within its walls. At any rate the town got busy and penned the following lines. The effusion was posted in a prominent place where is remained for twelve hours, or until it was hauled down by an indignant young woman. The poem which stirred up a hornet's nest among the young folk of the village read as follows:

At the Postoffice.

"Where are the skirts a-lyin' to?"
Asked Flies on parade.
"The postoffice—the postoffice,"
A wise guy sweetly said
"And will they all get letters?"
Asked silly Flies again.
"There ain't a chance—there ain't a chance."
The wise guy answered then.
"But they can all get together
In the window by the street
In their glad rags, each one thinking
She's sweet enough to eat.
Little beauties—let 'em tell it—
You would have hard work to beat
In the postoffice at 5:15 each evening.

"What will they all be doing there"
Old Flies asked bye and bye.
"On nothing much—just gossiping,"
The other made reply
"But, do their mamma's know they're out?"
Asked Flies so very soft.
"It doesn't make much difference,"
His friend discreetly coughed.
"For you know each girl is looking
For the handsomest young man,
Just to cast her eyes upon him
And annex him if she can.
Oh, their lamps are trimmed and burning,
On a most attractive plan,
And Dan Cupid's there at 5:15 each evening."

"And do the fellows fall for it?"
Asked poor Flies in affright.
"You bet your bloomin' life they do,"
His pal replied, polite.
"I thought Dunellen-boys were shy"
Remarked Flies in surprise.
"Of course they are—of course they are,"
The other man replies.
"But when one sees a friendly grin
Upon some lovely mush,
And hearkens a few minutes
Unto some fair maiden's gush
Then his wits begin to leave him
And his talk is most mush.
In the postoffice at 5:15 each evening."

PLAYING SAFE.

The year is clean, devoid of blame;
The year is pure;
I hastily advance this claim
As being sure.

The year is pure; the year is young
And clean, I wish.
No poet with a serpent's tongue
Can challenge this.

Why do I all these things avow?
Because I know
The same is feeling week from now
May not be so.

HAD VETERAN'S LICENSE; COST HIM THREE DOLLARS

Giuseppe Pacini is a slick individual, but he found his match in Patrolman Charles Flynn of Perth Amboy when he tried to pass off on the blue-coat a peddling license issued to Daniel Kelcher, of Newark, a veteran of Company I, Ninth New Jersey Volunteers, for which the wily Giuseppe had "loaned" Mr. Kelcher $5.00. The transaction took place in a saloon in Newark according to the Italian, and he said he did not know the veteran's address.

Giuseppe speaks English tolerably well and tried in every way to convince Judge Runyon that he was ignorant of the law regarding licenses and said that he had only loaned him he need have no fear of the police as long as he could produce the slip of paper bearing the signature of County Clerk J. B. Woolston, of Essex. Judge Runyon imposed a fine of $1 and confiscated the license. It is quite possible that Giuseppe will get into trouble for disposing of his privilege to peddle when the Newark authorities are acquainted with the facts.

APOPLEXY FATAL TO MRS. DANIEL E. DAVIS

Mrs. Daniel E. Davis died at 7 o'clock Friday night at her home 935 Union stret, following a stroke of apoplexy suffered Thursday morning while she was dressing. She was unconscious all the time, passing peacefully away.

Mrs. Davis was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvah S. Mulford, of Brooklyn. Her father was cashier of the Mechanics' National Bank, of that city, for many years. Mrs. Davis was born in Brooklyn, where she spent the early years of her life. She was married at Southold, L. I., and came to this city in 1871.

Soon after coming here Mrs. Davis identified herself with the First M. E. church and was active in all departments of church work, being a faithful attendant at the services. She lived an exemplary Christian life and was held in high esteem for her many excellent qualities.

Mrs. Davis is survived by a husband, of the Plainfield Trust Company; two sons, Robert W. Davis, of this city; Alvah Davis, of Newark, and one daughter, Mrs. Wilfrid Houghton, of Nutley.

MISS KELLY LOST PURSE AND FOUND A $20 BILL

Miss Annette Kelly, of West Fourth street, had an experience Friday which probably doesn't come to many young women who have occasion to go to New York on shopping tours for their Easter gowns and bonnets. In a nutshell, it was necessary for Miss Kelly to lose a twenty dollar bill on Sixth avenue for her to come to a realization that she had lost twenty-two dollars and her commutation ticket.

This is the tale. Miss Kelly, who is employed as a stenographer in New York, visited several of the large department stores and made a number of purchases and then started on her way to a Sixth avenue restaurant for lunch.

While walking between Thirty-first and Thirty-second streets, on Sixth avenue, Miss Kelly's eye chanced to see a peculiar bit of paper on the pavement. She stopped and picked up what looked to be a piece of crumpled paper. It was a twenty dollar bill.

It is needless to state that Miss Kelly's breath was pearly taken away and visions of as extra Easter bonnet shot through her mind. She held tight to her "find" and continued at a merry clip on to the restaurant. Soon as she regained her equilibrium she decided to place the bill in her pocketbook.

It was at this moment that she made the sad discovery that she had lost, left behind in one of the stores, her handbag which contained her purse, which stored a twenty dollar bill, about two dollars in change and her commutation ticket. Miss Kelly hurriedly turned around and retraced her steps to the different stores she had visited, but she failed to find her handbag.

"Well it could have been worse," said Miss Kelly to a friend last night on her return, "but the twenty dollar bill I found came in very handy and looked as big as $1,000 when I realized that I had lost the remainder of my shopping funds."

A well known dictator of the fascions has crossed the border and has gone to Germany for one of his successes. It is a cloak modeled upon the well known military cloak worn by the Kaiser. Comfortable and practical is this new style with a large cape that falls over the sleeves to the waist line. A huge fur collar and revers complete the luxury of the whole. When to these points a soft military cloth of silvery gray is added there is every reason to suppose that the model will meet with approval.

JUNIORS CONDUCT A PROGRESSIVE EUCHRE

The progressive euchre given in Jr. O. U. A. M. hall Friday under the auspices of Franklin and Somerset councils was an enjoyable affair. About 150 members of the two councils, their wives, sisters and sweethearts participated in the prize competition which was productive of much pleasure.

Mrs. Henry K. Lister carried off first prize among the women which was a handsome sofa pillow. Mrs. P. H. Lalourette was the winner of the second prize, a box of choice imported perfumery. Oscar Sweitzer carried among the men and captured first prize, which was a mounted inkstand. James McInnes took second honours, a collar and cuff box.

Refreshments were served at 11 o'clock. The joint committee in charge was Louis Hall, Joseph Englund, George Watts, George D. Wilson, Charles Wilson, Joseph Martin and Harry Nolte.

WANTS MOVING PICTURES AND PIANOS FOR SCHOOL

Because of the interest shown by the pupils of the Maple Avenue Public School, in Morristown, in a recent illustrated lecture, City Superintendent Ira W. Travell said Friday that he hoped some kindly disposed citizen would some day donate about $200 for the purchase of a picture machine. He had no intentions of running a moving picture show in the school, he said, but a picture machine that would reproduce photographs, postal cards and the movements in a watch would be of great educational value. In this way, he said, scenes in history, and demonstrations of the working of intricate machinery could be shown and easily explained to the pupils.

"In Plainfield," Mr. Travell stated, "such a machine had been purchased and had proved a success." The superintendent is also appealing for pianos for class rooms in the grades. The donation of a piano or two, he said, would be gratefully received.

"I am sure there are some people in Morristown who have old pianos that they wouldn't mind giving away for a worthy purpose," said Mr. Travell, last night, "and I believe in letting my wants known."

MRS. HANNAH M. SNYDER, AGED EIGHTY-ONE, DEAD

Mrs. Hannah M. Snyder, aged eighty-one years, died Friday at her home, 424 West Front street, following an illness of several years. She was born at Broadway, N. J., and had been a resident of this city about fifteen years. Owing to the fact that she was ailing she was detained at home most of the time. She made her home with her daughter, Miss Carrie M. Snyder, the modiste.

Mrs. Snyder was a member of the Christian church at Milford, N. J., and always retained her membership there. She was the mother of twelve children, nine of whom are living; thirteen grandchildren and five great-great grandchildren. The children are Mrs. William Crevelling and Miss Carrie M. Snyder, of this city; Mrs. Belle Schug, of Easton, Pa.; P. Sandford Snyder, of Bound Brook, Charles O. Snyder, of Upper Black Eddy, Pa.; Miss Eleanora Snyder, Mrs. Louisa Ryan and Amandus Snyder, of New York and Harry Snyder, of Dover. She also leaves one brother, Joseph M. Metler, of Raritan.

SIMPLE TAPESTRY WORK.

For the novice who has not yet indulged in the pretty French tapestry-covered fancy work there offers a most simple example, tempting to the inexperience and with not pitfalls.

The desk file, which is also a paperweight cannot prove other than perfect when directions are followed. Get the plain metal file having a round disk as its heavy base. The disk curves upward like a slice from a globe. Over the file slip a round piece of tapestry. Draw it down round the weight to the point of perfect smoothness and gather it in underneath. Cut off all unnecessary material and flatten the gathers, after moistening them, with a hot iron. Paste a piece of plain felt over these raw edges, and when this preliminary is finished decorate the little thing with a band of narrow gold-colored galloon, glued on around its largest edge and with a smaller piece at the base of the file. This last piece will first be measured, then draw into a circle, slipped over the file and pasted in place.

In all tapestry work pasting is an art and construction a science to be learned before the more intricate pieces may be accomplished with any degree of perfection. Many carelessly made pieces are not in the least worthy of the time put upon them; therefore it were well for beginners to select first such cardboard forms and shapes as demand little work and present no obstacles.

BANNER FOR ST. MARY'S

Parochial School Contributes Largest Amount to Muhlenberg Hospital.

SELF-DENIAL FUND $552.43.

Drake Business College Comes Second, Franklin School Third —Cups Were Awarded.

St. Mary's parochial school easily won the banner for its contribution towards the hospital in the contest which has just closed as a self-denial week under the auspices of the local branch of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association. This school contributed $95.42, thus winning the banner, and grade 4B won the cup in this school with a contribution of $15.43. The boxes were opened by a committe from the P. B. A. in the presence of Mayor Charles J. Fisk with Ralph T. Willis counting the coin and William Cansebrook, local manager of the Public Service Corporation as custodian of the boxes. The grand total was $552.43.

The other city schools contributed the following amounts: Drake Business College, $50.37; Franklin, $44.17; Somerset, $41.63; Irving, $41.11; Stillman, $39.15; Hartridge, $26.98; Washington, $22.98; Whittier, $20.70; Lincoln, $20.04; High School, $13.82; Plainfield Business College, $5.13; Clinton Avenue, $3.29; Leal's, $7.31.

North Plainfield and Scotch Plains contributed as follows: Somerset School, $48.74; Watchung, $16.26; and Scotch Plains, $12.83. From miscellaneous boxes distributed throughout the city $41.59 was collected.

The task of opening the boxes and counting the money was no light operation and it was early this morning when the count was ended and the prizes awarded. St. Mary's class Grade 4B gets the cup in that school, while the others were awarded by Mayor Fisk as follows: Drake College, shorthand department, $29.17; Franklin School, grade 5B, $12.17; Bryant School, grade 5B, $6.06; Irving, grade 3A, $7.06; Stillman, grade 7E, $7.49; Hartridge, $26.98; Washington, grade 3A, $3.04; Whittier, grade 6F, $8.95; Lincoln, grade 6, $10.04; High School, class of 1913, $7.08; Plainfield Business College, $5.13, and Clinton avenue, $3.29 Somerset School, grade 7B, $3.34; Watchung Kindergarten, $3.37. Scotch Plains School gets a cup for its contribution of $12.83.

It is the intention of Mayor Fisk to deliver the banner and the cups in person on Monday, provided he can so arrange the matter. One of the pleasant experiences of opening the hundreds of envelopes was the thrill which one would experience when a nice fat one came along and when opened disclosed a packet of cigarette papers in place of dollar bills. A few of the other articles contained in the boxes were tobacco, matches, checks from John D. Rockefeller and Andrew Carnegie for fabulous amounts, lead quarters, French coins of ancient date, the collateral used by actors on the stage and other imitations of the real thing. Several nice round buttons also were found.

FOR MISSES AND CHILDREN.

Misses, like their mothers, are anxious to keep in touch with the styles and even the school dresses often have to be made with thorough modern frills. The keynote of a dress for a miss must be that it have a portion of the style for the older women, yet retain youthful simplicity. With the younger set of young ladies the two-piece garments with the mannish effect are very popular this fall and winter.

The dresses have very little, if any, trimming, and rely mainly on the grace of the contour for the style and attractiveness. They are worn in cheviots, serges and fancy worsteds. In the more fashionable models the waist line is elongated to a certain extent, the effect being in both the skirts and coats. The Buster Brown belt is used in many of the models and gives a very pretty effect.

The coats are quite long and range from 40 to 50 inches. The deep-yoke effect is quite prominent in the skirts and some have the pleated flounce, while others have the side plaits and panel fronts. The Peter Thompson suits are worn a great deal for school, and yoked skirts go with these. For children's headwear this winter the pretty bonnets have been much used. They are in felt, beaver, velvet, crushed plush, bengaline and muskin. They are most effective when they harmonize with the coat worn.

As much of beauty as preserves affection;
Of modest diffidence as claims protection;
A docile mind subservient to correction;
A temper led by reason and reflection,
And every passion kept in due subjection;
Just faults enough to keep her from perfection—
Find this, my friend, and then make your selection.

STRAIN ON P.S. PUPILS TOO MUCH SAY TEACHERS

That the demands on the children in the grammar grades of the public schools are a strain on them, being far in excess of their mental ability, was the consensus of opinion among fifty or more teachers, members of the Essex County Teachers' Guild, who met in the Free Public Library Wednesday afternoon for a "round table" discussion on the crowded curriculum of the schools. Miss Elizabeth M. Stringer, president of the guild, was in charge of the meeting, which was held behind closed doors. The teachers discussed the proceedings of the meeting freely at its close, but would not name any of those who participated in the discussion, because, it was said:

"Almost every one present had something to say."

Most of the teachers were of the opinion that an injustice is being done to the pupils and also to their parents as well, inasmuch as children are obliged to take subjects that most of them will have no use for when they enter business life.

One teacher, who has been in the schools for a long term of years, said:

"We don't want to appear as if we were antagonizing those who map out the course of studies, but the present system is all wrong. Considering the money and effort expended on the enriched curriculum, pupils should be far in advance of those trained along the old lines, whereas facts show that they are less reliant, more superficial and study simply for card results."

This teacher declared that the teachers do not desire to lessen their own labors.

"We merely want the time to perform work that will show the best results," she asserted.

"The way the children have to cram and work for examinations" one of the teachers is credited with saying, "has little lasting effect; there is no time for drill and practise, and the result is that the knowledge gained by the pupils is merely superficial. The minds of children are no keener now than they were fifty years ago, and no one will dispute that more substantial results were obtained fifty years ago."

Should Penalize Knowledge.

One sixth grade teacher was strong in her condemnation of teaching civics and physics to pupils in her grade.

"The children cannot comprehend them," she declared, "in the time assigned, and the result is they merely get a glossing over of the subjects. I have pupils who will repeat page after page of these studies, parrot fashion, but when questions are turned around or they are asked for their own explanation or understanding of the subject, they are hopeless—they simply don't know." These two subjects, to the minds of most of the teachers, are entirely out of place in upper grammar grades.

"It seems unnecessary for children of thirteen years to be made acquainted with detailed facts regarding panel institutions of the State, as required in the study of Civics," one teacher contended. "It is in total variance with the movement now on foot to suppress crime. We find children searching the newspapers for lurid pictures and reading proceedings in the various courts to obtain their information, with the result that children obtain pernicious knowledge, of which, at their age, they should know nothing."

"The same conditions pertain in the High schools," declared another teacher. "Demands of the college on the High school, and in consequence work all along the line, are crowded, making demands on children before they are ready to meet them. A child is capable of putting forth just so much effort and if that effort be expended in too many directions, the results are weakened."

"Business men are complaining that boys and girls who go into offices to work cannot spell, and know little of arithmetic," was the statement of another teacher. "We should have the time to give them more drill in these studies, and others that will benefit them when they must earn their own living, rather than give them drawing and subjects that they will have no use for. If the curriculum in the grammar grades was cut down to the studies that are really necessary to our boys and girls of today, the results would be better, and pupils would have a wider knowledge of studies that will be of vastly greater benefit to them."

"JIM" EMERY IS WITH THE READING CLUB.

"Jim" Emery, the former crack third baseman for the Plainfield Baseball club's team who has been with the Reading Tri-State League Club, will report to the latter club on April 7. Emery will be given a thorough try-out for the position at third base and stands a good chance of making good. He is in fine condition, having been in training in Pittsburg, Pa., for several weeks. He will return home for the Easter vacation.

Emery will be in pretty fast company if he remains with Reading. The team plays an exhibition game at home on April 13 with the Philadelphia Nationals. Emery is undoubtedly a fast infielder and it is believed that he can hold up his end with the stick.

MEFFORD RUNYON DIES AFTER AN ACTIVE LIFE

Mefford Runyon, one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens of Piscataway township passed away at Stelton early Thursday morning, aged 83 years. He had been in poor health for some time.

Mr. Runyon belonged to that family of Runyons whose lives are so closely linked with the history of that section. The Runyons were settlers with the Stelles of the township and a long line of Runyons has left behind it an honorable record.

Mefford Runyon had tilled the soil al lof his life. He had been successful. He had been one of the earnest supporters of the Stelton Baptist church and for many years had been a deacon. His farm is just west of the Stelton railroad station. Mr. Runyon had been a deason of the old church since 1879.

Mr. Runyon was a descendant of Vincent Runyon, who spelled his name Rugnion, who came to this country in 1653. All of the Runyons in Piscataway descended from Vincent.

The progenitor of the family in this country is supposed to have been among the French refugees who fled their country following the revocation of the famous Edict of Nantes in 1865, whereby many Protestants were driven to Holland and thence to the New World.

Forty years or so ago Mr. Runyon was a merchant as well as farmer and conducted an extensive hay business.

He was a widower. He leaves four sons and two daughters: Jephthah, Ephraim, Frank, Charles, who is supervising principal of the township schools; Mrs. Furman Walker and Mrs. William E. Drake.

COURT GIVES GEER ONE MORE CHANCE

Charles Geer, of this city, retracted his plea of not guilty and entered one of non vult in the New Brunswick court Thursday to a charge of stealing a $25 horse and a $30 buggy from Spencer Gardner, a mail carrier of this city. Robert Adrain appeared for him.

Acting Prosecutor Russell Watson told the court that at one time Geer was a man of standing in the community, conducting a large carriage business, but that he had failed and had lost most of his money and had since been going lower and lower. He said that Geer claimed that he had been dickering for the purchase of the rig from Gardner, while Gardner claimed that Geer had had no right to take the rig without first paying for it.

Geer, he explained, had expressed a desire to pay for the rig and Mr. Watson recommended that the sentence be lenient owing to the man's previous good record and to his desire to pay Mr. Gardner for the loss of the rig.

Judge Lyon placed Geer in charge of the probation officer for three years, with directions that he must pay Gardner for the loss of the rig.

HERE IS A CHANCE FOR AN AMBITIOUS BOY

The Harvard Club of New Jersey according to its annual custom, announces that a prize of $250 will be given this year to the resident of the State who prepares for college in a New Jersey school and enters Harvard with the highest record at the entrance examination. WRECK A COSTLY AFFAIR

Derailment of Coal Train at Grant Ave. Station Represents a Loss of $10,000.

DEPOT HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

Coal Ladened Gondola Cars Come Within Five Feet of Ploughing Through Building—Traffic Delayed.

Two wrecking crews, comprising a force of seventy-five men, were engaged in clear the Jersey Central eastbound tracks of the coal train wreck which occurred at the Grant avenue depot at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon. It was not until 9 o'clock last night that the last derailed car was tracked. After darkness had set in the men worked with the aid of a searchlight. According to a Jersey Central representative the loss to the company will reach $10,000.

The Grant avenue depot had a close escape from being badly damaged, as two loaded coal cars, each of seventy-five tons capacity, jumped the track and ditched within five feet from the ticket office window. Five other cars, of the same type, were also hurled off the tracks and partially demolished.

The signal system at the Grant avenue station and at the bridge was put out of commission. The cars in sinking in the soft turf twisted the wires and destroyed connections. A gang of men began work this morning repairing the breaks.

As a result of the wreck traffic on the eastbound tracks was held up for about eight hours, trains going east being obliged to run over the westbound track. This arrangement naturally caused more or less delay in the arrival and departure of trains at all of the local stations.

Ticket Agent Raymond Carver received a big scare. At the time of the accident he was sitting in the rear room of his office engaged in repairing a chair. He was startled by a loud crash caused by the bucking of the train and saw the cars dashing towards the ticket office. He quickly telegraphed the railroad authorities, telling them of the accident, according to the railroad people was due to the spreading of the rails. Repairs were being made to the tracks yesterday, and when the wrecked train was sighted a temporary rail was installed, but the precaution failed to prevent the accident. The rails evidently began to spread as the locomotive was crossing the bridge, as at that point the tank of the engine separated from the cab, the former part being yanked off the truck.

A sharp blow of the whistle was a signal that something was wrong. The train was being pushed by another locomotive on the rear end, but before the engineer shut off steam, the rear locomotive had succeeded in pushing the seven forward cars off the tracks on the depot platform. Two derricks were in commission one hour after the accident. Three hours time was consumed in replacing the locomotive tank on its truck, and in order to get the wrecked cars back on the tracks it was necessary to empty them of coal. A pile of several hundred tons of coal is still on the station platform.

GETS SIX CENT VERDICT

Man Who Boarded Mr. Atterbury's Cat Wanted $10,000 for Assault.

DEFENDANT ON THE STAND.

Judge Chatfield Presented at Trial in Circuit Court, Brooklyn, N. Y., Yesterday.

A verdict of six cents damages was awarded by a jury in the United States Circuit Court, Brooklyn, Wednesday against Albert H. Atterbury, of this city. And thereby hangs the tale of a cat.

Mr. Atterbury has a cat named Jerry, the pet of his home. When he and Mrs. Atterbury went abroad in December, 1907, Jerry was put out to board in the family of Dr. Charles S. Ludekins, of New Dorp, S. I. The very day after the Atterburys got home, March 14, 1908, the cat was brought to Mr. Atterbury's office by Dr. Ludekins, who presented a bill of $11. Then the trouble began. Jerry, immured in the basket, had no voice in the racket until Dr. Ludekins and Mr. Atterbury began a struggle for the possession of the basket, which ended in a Manhattan police station.

Dr. Ludekins sued Mr. Atterbury for $10,000 damages for assault and false imprisonment and the case was tried yesterday.

"Dr. Ludekins brought Jerry to my office and said the bill was $11," said Mr. Atterbury in a dramatic recital on the witness stand. "I told him the bill was exorbitant for the board of a cat for a month and nine days. I offered to pay $8. This Dr. Ludekins refused, and he used violent language and declared he would take the cat home with him.

"'What,' I said, 'drag our pet through the streets back to New Dorp? Never!' We both seized the basket and struggled about the office.

"Finally I let go, but closed the door so that Dr. Ludekins could not get out with the cat. He continued to storm and called out of the window on the eleventh floor to attract attention, but failed. He tried the telephone and also threatened to throw the telephone book out on the street.

"Finally I said to him: 'We have both been foolish. I will pay you the $11, although it is an unfair charge.' I tendered him the money but he refused it and insisted that he would take the cat away with him.

"Then I called a policeman, who tried to settle the dispute, and wound up by arresting Dr. Ludekins on my charge of petty larceny when the doctor tried to get out of the office again with the cat. At the police station Dr. Ludekins gave up the cat to me and signed a receipt for my $11 and I withdrew the larceny charge."

"Are you positive as to the occurrences you have related on that cat day?" asked John Brooks Leavitt, counsel for Mr. Atterbury.

"They were burned into my memory," exclaimed the witness impressively.

"And the entire cat controversy was just as you have narrated it?"

"Even so," fervently.

The story told by Dr. Ludekins, a slender, gray-haired man, differed only slightly from that of Mr. Atterbury.

In an effort to show by Mr. Atterbury's testimony that Jerry is not his property but that of Mrs. Atterbury, Dr. Ludekins' counsel drew from the witness the retort:

"Mrs. Atterbury and I never had any ante-nuptial or post-nuptial agreement as to the ownership of our cats or other animals."

In summing up Mr. Leavitt laid stress upon the point that Dr. Ludekins' plea against the cat was gone as soon as he set the basket down in Mr. Atterbury's office.

"Here was the scene, gentlemen of the jury," said Mr. Leavitt. "Here were two gray-haired men engaged in a controversy over a cat. 'I want my money or I take the cat,' Dr. Ludekins says. 'Here is your money, then,' says Mr. Atterbury. 'I won't take it now, but I'll go to take the cat,' says Dr. Ludekins, and he takes the law into his own hands by making a dive for the cat.

"I'm dinged if you're going to take the cat," says Mr. Atterbury, and wouldn't you, gentlemen of the jury, have done just as Mr. Atterbury did in similar circumstances?"

Judge Chatfield in charging the jury said the case hinged on the question of false imprisonment of Dr. Ludekins in Mr. Atterbury's office.

PLAINFIELDER PATENTS SAFETY STARTING CRANK

Charles W. Smith, of 740 West Front street, has just been granted a patent on a safety starting crank for gas and gasolene engines, which it is said should prove of great value. With the increasing use of automobiles and the necessity for a safety device in operating machinery, absolute security in cranking is needed. Many serious accidents result every day from the ordinary methods of starting gas and gasolene engines. The back kick may result from advance, sparks, short circuits and carbonated pistons, due to carelessness. Water or dirt in the magnets can cause them or defective insulation or any other disarrangement.

With Mr. Smith's invention it is impossible, it is said, to receive the slightest injury, for as soon as the engine goes back, a pawl is released, which allows the shaft to revolve in the hub of the crank without the handle coming back a fraction of an inch. This can be used on any car. On most cars the device can be applied by removing the old crank. Mr. Smith is about to organize a company for the manufacture of his patent.

SPEEDING MUST STOP, SO SAYS POLICE CHIEF

A narrow, very narrow escape from a collision between two automobiles which occurred at the corner of East Fifth and Richmond streets Wednesday afternoon has caused Chief of Police Kiely to issue an ultimatum for the benefit of automobile owners and chauffeurs. "Speeding within the city limits has got to stop," he said this morning. "Automobilists who have had their cars housed all winter and who may perhaps have lost the knack of going at a slow speed should take warning."

"I have tried and am trying to be fair with all these people, but in spite of everything they will persist in driving too fast. If being good to them wont accomplish the desired end I will have to resort to the other thing."

The two automobiles which caused the chief to get wrathy were going so fast when they missed colliding that their momentum turned them both completely around so that they faced the opposite direction from which they had been traveling. Nothing but the quick action of both drivers averted a fatality. Consequently the chief wants everybody who drives an automobile to be careful or they will have to take the consequences.

FUR TURBANS POPULAR.

Little by little a change has certainly come in the shape of the most modish headgear and the present victory is deserved by the cap of a closely fitting turban, the brim of which hugs the crown. A round hat of this description was made of seal brown panne, with a brim faced with sealskin. Between the brim and the crown a coulonne of black fox was introduced and where the brim was divided the mask of the animal showed in the space that was left.

The coat worn with a hat of this type should be one of those loosely fitting, comfortable models so highly appreciated by the pedestrian. Made of rough brown cloth, it should be trimmed upon the lower edge with a deep flounce of fur, the mere mention of which reminds me to say, in pursuance of the subject already introduced that though the fascinations of the flounce have been for a long time overlooked, I have reason to believe that the neglected vogue will soon be restored to favor, and have to chronicle its appearance also upon the frocks made for girls to wear in the ballrooms of the winter.

HINTS FOR KITCHEN.

If you wish mustard to be pungent, whether it is to be used medicinally or at the table, mix it with cold water. The pungency of mustard is due to a volatile oil. This does not exist in dry mustard, but is formed when the dry mustard has been wet with water. Hot water hinders the formation of the oil and boiling water almost prevents its being made at all.

Take care how you use bitter almonds. They are dangerous things. When wet with water they give rise to prussic acid, one of the deadliest poisons known. Fortunately, it is volatile, or fatal accidents would happen more frequently.

Never try to cleanse with soap vessels in which vinegar has stood. Do not apply soap to any article soiled with other acids. The acid will decompose the soap and make things worse. Use washing soda. Bicarbonate of soda should be in every kitchen. If applied on the instant to a burn or scald it will work almost miraculously.

And then, with gloomy consternation,
Discovered I had quite forgot
The cause of the investigation.

DR. DU MOULIN PREACHES

The Dean of Cleveland Cathedral Addresses Grace Church Men.

ON FOUNDATION OF SUCCESS.

Faith in Jesus Christ Cause of Human Progress Declares Bishop Du Moulin's Son.

A large congregation of men with a sprinkling of women listened to a strong sermon at Grace P. E. church Wednesday by the Very Rev. Frank Du Moulin, D. C. L., of Cleveland, Ohio. Dr. Du Moulin's address was a deep study of the question of what lies back of all human progress and proving beyond doubt that the Christian religion as exemplified by Jesus Christ is the basic principle of all success.

Dr. Du Moulin took for his text "Seek Ye First the Kingdom of God," and said that all history demonstrates that Christ must come first in all our lives. If anything at all is to be accomplished it must come through the acceptance of the teachings of Jesus. All the ethical, moral and practical growth in the human is inevitably attributable to the Son of God.

It is absolutely true that all advancement of whatever good nature has Christ back of it. Our growth as a nation, our world advancement, our material progress, everything influenced by a broad and deep conviction of right is the result of the divine influence of God through His Son. The foundation of success in any enterprise is found in the faith which one ought first to have in the Master who guides our destinies.

The lesson as given by Dr. Du Moulin made a deep impression on his hearers. He is a wonderfully lucid speaker with a powerful analytical ability and impresses one with his virility and forcefulness and clarity of expression. The full choir aided materially in making the service a memorable one.

Dr. DuMoulin is Dean of the Cleveland, Ohio, Cathedral and is very well known in the West. He is a Canadian by birth and is the son of the Bishop of Niagara, Ontario.

JOS. MILLS CELEBRATES EIGHTY-FOURTH BIRTHDAY

Older residents here will be interested in the recent celebration of Joseph Mills' eighty-fourth birthday anniversary at his home in Decatur, Ill. The affair was observed on Wednesday, March 2. He is an uncle of Mrs. John A. Koch, of Richmond street, and during his residence in this city was a carpenter. He was an apprentice to E. P. Thorn and built Dempler Hotel in Washington Valley.

Mr. Mills removed from Plainfield to Decatur in 1853, and spent his time in building up the Mills Lumber Company, one of the big industries at Decatur. He was for six years an alderman and for a time an assistant supervisor. Soon after reaching Decatur he secured several big contracts, building some of the best houses in that city. He is one of the oldest members of the Odd Fellows, having received one of the fifty year medals. He joined the lodge in 1854, at Decatur, and on behalf of the organization contributed the first money for the relief of the Chicago fire sufferers in 1871. That was $50. Mr. Mills was generously remembered by his friends and neighbors with suitable gifts.

Mr. Mills married on 1845 to Miss Eliza Lansing in 1847. To this union five children were born, but one of whom is now living. Mr. Mills has been quite ill with rheumatism and a little later he expects to go to West Baden for treatment.

CHILDREN TO RAISE FUND FOR A CHILDREN'S WARD.

The pupils of the Hartridge School will give a simple little fair at Hartridge auditorium on Saturday afternoon, March 5, from 2 to 6 o'clock. The proceeds will be donated to Muhlenberg Hospital to be used towards the establishment of a children's ward. There is no such ward at the hospital and it seems eminently fitting that this work for children should be carried on by children.

Each grade will be in charge of a table, and the tables will be as different as possible. Fancy articles, useful articles, dolls, toys, cake, candy, flowers and light refreshments will be sold. All the friends of the school, of the hospital and of the children in general are asked to attend.

SUGGEST TAXING BANKS TO RELIEVE HIGH RATES

Should the banks be taxed for the millions of deposits they hold, or should the real owners of that money pay the tax? And would the taxing of the money equalize the rataibes so that the average man would have a chance to live as he desires? These are questions which a citizen has asked the Board of Trade to take up with a view to solving it.

The argument in favor of taxing the bank deposits seems to be based on the belief that the money while lying in the various depositories of the city or employed by the banking institutions is not profitable. Investments is not helping the building up of the city, neither are taxes being levied upon the actual worth of the owner of the money. For example: Smith has $100,000 in the bank and owns a house worth $20,000 including furnishings. He is assessed for the $20,000, but the money in the bank escapes the assessors' eyes and so no taxes are levied upon the actual property of the man. On the other hand the poor man or he whose sole possession is a lot with its house and furnishings is taxed at the highest estimate $2,000, must pay the rate on all he owns.

The citizen mentions these things to show the inequality of the system of taxation and insists that if the banks were taxed or the individuals had to pay for their surplus wealth the rataibes would be reduced to a normal figure and instead of having their money earning four per cent it could be made to earn six per cent. in mortgages on improved real estate and the building of houses would receive a boom and a natural, healthy growth would become noticeable in the city.

There are now nearly $7,000,000 in the banks of the city and borough, yet it is almost impossible for real estate loans to be had, especially where building is the purpose for which the money is to be used. Last year the citizens of the city paid taxes on about $4,000,000, while the amount of money deposited in the banks was nearly one third of this amount. Would not a tax levy on the bank deposits have reduced the tax rate and have produced the amount needed for the city's expenditures? Another thing which according to the citizen who is agitating these tax questions is the amount for which a man should be exempt from paying. He suggests that $1,000 would be about the correct figure and thinks a bill for this as well as the taxing of bank funds could be passed by the Legislature and receive the signature of the Governor. At any rate the question opens a field for some argument.

WOMEN'S RELIEF CORPS SURPRISES MRS. MATTOX

A feature of the meeting of the Women's Relief Corps at Reform Hall, Friday, was the pleasant reception tendered to Mrs. Sarah Mattox, who was celebrating the anniversary of her birthday. The affair was in the nature of a surprise. After the business session Mrs. Emma Frazee took the chair, and then announced to the members that Mrs. Mattox would celebrate on the morrow.

The affair then resolved itself into a birthday party and Mrs. Mattox received a suitable gift from each member and in addition the best wishes of all for many happy returns of the day. Another feature was the presentation of a birthday cake to Mrs. Mattox by Mrs. Kichell, it being her own make. Refreshments were served during the social hour.

Although they were digging for sulphur at Occoquan, Virginia, which is about twenty-eight miles from Washington, D. The average value of rock taken from the mine is $25 a ton. M. F. Gano is showing the samples of ore recently taken from the mine at his office on North avenue.

HAD RECEIVER APPOINTED

George A. Beaton, for Bondholders, Proceeds Against a Cement Concern.

WANT THE ASSESTS PROTECTED

Capitalized at $5,000,000 with $200,000 Paid in But Was Never Rated by Bradstreets.

Judge Ward of the United States Circuit Court in New York has appointed William F. Allen receiver for the Seaboard Portland Cement Company, of 225 Fifth avenue, New York, and Olsen, N. Y., on application of Robert C. Morris, of Morris & Piante, attorneys in an equity, suit brought by George A. Beaton of this city, on behalf of bondholders. Mr. Morris said that the proceedings were preliminary to a reorganization and were taken to protect the assets, which are estimated at more than $1,000,000. There is a bond issue of $2,000,000, and the liabilities outside of the bonds are not large.

The company was incorporated in July, 1907, with an authorized capital of $5,000,000, but never had any rating in Bradstreet's. It purchased 700 acres of land at Olsen, on the Hudson near Catskill, and built a large cement plant. In December last it was said that it would require about $300,000 more money to finish the plant. It is said that all the $2,000,000 bonds have been sold, and with every bond sold was given a share of stock. A large amount of bonds were placed on Long Island, and it is said that $120,000 were sold in, Riverhead and neighboring towns.

The list of the officers of the concern in 1901 was: George A. Beaton, of this city, president; Joseph M. Shellabarger, of this city, secretary; directors, George W. Roydhouse, Isaac F. Woodbury, Edwin Thomas, Alexander I. McLeod, Francis V. Greene, Charles P. Collins, Daniel E. Jones, M. V. Brewington, Joseph T. Fanning, T. T. Watt, Edwin C. Willets, Dwight H. MISS PETRIE TELLS OF CONVERTING THE INDIAN

Miss Josephine Petrie, of this city, a home missionary who has been laboring among the Indians in the far west, addressed the monthly missionary meeting at Warren chapel Wednesday. The meeting was in charge of the Men's Association, and Rev. J. O. McKelvey, the pastor, presided. There were nearly one hundred people present and all were delighted with Miss Petrie's talk on the Indians, a topic of latest concern. concerning the American Indian. She referred particularly to her last visit to Oklohoma, where members of nearly all the tribes congregate from time to time.

Miss Petrie said that the Indians are becoming civilized rapidly and they not only support their churches, but last year one tribe contributed $150 for foreign missions. At a conference of all the tribes $1,000 was raised to feed the people and twenty fat cattle were brought along to help provide for the gathering. She said that the converted Indian is intensely in earnest in his work and is anxious that the Gospel shall be preached to other members of the various tribes.

Miss Petrie also spoke of the visit of a government official to that section, and of the ceremonies of the Nev Perce tribe are wonderfully religious. She also referred to the great work being carried on by two native missionaries, Rev Mr. Crawford and Rev. Mr. Eastman. She said that they are doing a wonderful work among their people.

At the close of the address an offering was taken for the work. Miss Petrie distributed interesting literature among those present.

Prosperity in Somerset.

The recent sale of live stock at Somerville shows that there is prosperity in this section of the country. At the Stelton sale fowls sold for 25½ cents a pound (a fine price). At Case's sale one brood sow brought $47.50. Mr. Hope declares that Chicago is not in it with Somerset county.

A SUMMER BOARDER'S DUPLICITY IS EXPOSED

Mrs. James Hoover, of Neshanic, visited Proctor's theatre Wednesday afternoon, enjoyed the performance, and incidentally discovered through the medium of Ala Zara, the Egyptian mind reader, that she was cleverly duped by a summer boarder last July.

Mrs. Hoover, who earns spare change during the summer season by accommodating city boarders, was married about three years ago. Six months before the wedding her husband presented her with a diamond engagement ring for which he paid $120. Wednesday afternoon while Ala Zara was engaged in identifying articles belonging to persons in the audience, Mrs. Hoover in fun, showed her ring to the mind reader and asked him if the stone was a genuine diamond.

Zara paused one moment and said "Nit, it is a rhinestone." Mrs. Hoover paid little attention to the dope handed out by the Egyptian until the performance was over. Then her curiosity was aroused.

After leaving the theatre she visited a jewelry store, displayed the ring, and inquired if the stone was a genuine diamond. The jeweler corporated the Egyptian's views by informing her that it was a rhinestone. Not fully satisfied Mrs. Hoover visited two other local jewelry stores with the same result.

Then it dawned on her that she was flim-flammed by one of her city boarders last summer. It flashed through her mind, that on a certain day in July a boarder who was a guest in a cheap jewelry admired the ring she was wearing.

"That is a beautiful stone," said he. "I would like to compare it with some valuable stones I have in my trunk." Mrs. Hoover unhesitatingly handed over the ring to the boarder, and a little while afterward she received another ring, which she believed was her own. Instead of it being her $120 engagement ring it has turned out to be a rhinestone ring worth about three dollars.

Soon as Mrs. Hoover realized the truth of the matter she fainted and after coming to was indignant. "That fellow is an infamous crook, I know his address, and I'll put Detective Totten on his trail at once. He'll spend his next vacation behind the bars, if I have anything to say about it."

Mrs. Hoover is well known in this city. residents who have been summering at Lebanon and vicinity, as her mother is the proprietress of a summer boarding house at the former place.

HEYL'S PROFANITY AN EXPENSIVE OUTBURST

For using abusive and profane language to an officer while in the discharge of his duties, George Heyl, of Somerville, was fined eight dollars by City Judge William Runyon Saturday. Heyl came voluntarily to court when he learned that he was wanted and the fine inflicted is sentence, but it is safe to say he will not repeat the offense in this city.

Heyl came to Plainfield on February 13, and after a few rounds of drinks lost his equilibrium and his senses went with gathering. At 1 o'clock of the morning of the 14th he in company with a crowd of other young men were creating a disturbance in the North avenue station when Patrolman Saffron entered. The patrolman requested the crowd to be quiet, but the silence lasted only until the train for Somerville came along. Then Heyl boarded the train and leaning off the steps reviled Patrolman Saffron, and it is alleged he continued to speak of him in such terms that the conductor was asked to have him put off the train at Dunellen. This was not done.

In explaining his conduct to Judge Runyon Saturday Heyl declared that he must have been intoxicated, as he remembered nothing of what he had done. After paying his fine Heyl apologized to the officer he had insulted.

Two pieces of rich silk, one of rose-colored grosgrain, the other a creamy satin or lining, will make a pretty handkerchief holder if they are each lined with scented wadding, their edges turned over it and the two slip-stitched together. It is, of course, oblong in shape and generous in size, and when folded over the kerchief it will form a perfect square large enough to cover handkerchiefs folded in quarters.

Y.M.C.A. BOYS GIVE A BENEFIT EXHIBITION

For the purpose of raising funds for Y. M. C. A. work among the boys in Sanitago de Chili the members of the boys' department of the local Y. M. C. A. gave an athletic and gymnastic exhibition Friday. A large audience was present and a substantial sum was realized for the project. The events were ably conducted by Charles H. Line, assistant physical director of the Association.

In addition to the athletic contests there were two basketball games. In the first between the freshmen and P. H. S. "seconds," the former won by a score of 22 to 13 and the Boys' teams triumphed over the P. H. S. freshmen by a score of 30 to 16. The lineups follow: Seniors—Coyle, Love, forwards; newell, center; Zerega, Dunning, guards. N. P. H. S. "seconds"—Wyckoff, Walker, forwards; Bauer, center; Krewson, Townley, guards.

Boys' team—Manley, McNamee, Coyle, forwards; Ulmer, center; Vail, Naylor, guards. P. H. S. Freshmen—T. Ricketts, J. Ricketts, forwards; Nash, center; Lewis Wilson, Carty, guards.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF JOHN CLAYTON ACKERMAN.

The funeral services of John Clayton Ackerman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Ackerman, were held at 2:30 o'clock Saturday, from the residence of the parents. Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, officiated. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends and many beautiful floral tributes. The burial was in Evergreen cemetery on Plainfield avenue.

Mr. Ackerman, who had been living in Rochester, N. Y., for a year, was taken ill with pneumonia and died in Hahnemann Hospital, last Tuesday. He was thirty-one years of age and had a large acquaintance in this city.

ILLUSTRATED LECTURE GIVEN BY DR. HERRING.

Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, interested a fairly good sized audience in the Sunday-school room of Trinity Reformed church with a talk on Palestine Friday. Mr. Herring used slides made from photographs taken by himself. Dr. Herring showed about seventy-five slides representing parts of the country round about Jerusalem and Jappa.

The lecture was given under the auspices of the Boys' Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church and the proceeds were devoted to missions.

Lace Flowers.

Brussels lace or fine, cobwebby mallines can be fashioned into flowers and spread in this form on the dark softness of velvet. Petals are made of the lace and the centres are supplied from the millinery department of any store. Occasionally the veins are traced in gold or silver thread to give a faint suggestion of brightness on the scheme. These lace flowers are always large in variety, and the blooms most favored are the cabbage rose, the dahlia and the chrysanthemum.

A Doughnut Hint.

Doughnuts are much improved if they are coated with a layer of sugar as soon as they are taken from the stove. The best way to powder them is to put a small amount of confectioner's sugar in a paper bag and put several doughnuts in the bag at a time and then shake the bag, holding the top of the bag closed. This will coat them with sugar quickly and more evenly the any other way.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Can anyone, even a girl herself, imagine the sense of mingled trepidation and surprise a young woman would feel if she found herself suddenly possessed of a prospective but unknown husband as the result of a daring purchase of a lottery ticket? Whether done in a spirit of innocent mischief or with the view of actually tempting Fate, to find oneself the holder of the winning number would prove one the less astounding. This is the situation which confronts Lizzie, the elderly spinster in "The Lottery Man," now current at the Bijou theatre. The fact is, Lizzie is decidedly pleased with her bargain, and the dismay is all on the man's side. One must see Lizzie to appreciate the point of view. Helen Lowell, who plays the part of Lizzie, is both attractive and charming. A great deal of credit therefore, can be given to her clever art which produces this exceedingly amusing character.

At the Colonial theatre next week Denman Thompson and company will head an unusually strong bill in a one-act adaptation from his famous play, "The Old Homestead," and which has been given the familiar name of "Joshua Whitcomb." The interpretation of this well-known character brought fame and fortune to Mr. Thompson. The act is quaintly staged and the scene has the assistance of two capable artists. An act quite new to Broadway theatregoers is "La Petite Revue," an operatic offering. Reproductions of the life-like figures of famous operatic stars pass in panoramic view on a miniature stage while selections from the most noted operas are rendered by several well trained voices hidden from view in the background.

Plans are rapidly forming for the road tour which begins in Boston on April 25, and which will end in Chicago several weeks later. Early in the season it was feared it would be necessary to rebuild much of the scenery as it was fitted for "The New theatre's large stage, but experience in Brooklyn where performances have been given, prove that the original scenic effects can be employed outside of New York as well as in The New theatre. On the home stage, the acts do not occupy a two table, whereas on the average stage it is necessary to reset each scene. The scenery, however, is so simple that it may be assembled with great ease, and long waits will be conspicuous by their absence, even when heavy Shakespearean plays are produced.

"The Lily," which David Belasco is producing at his splendid Belasco-Stuyvesant theatre, in New York, in many ways represent the most notable of all the notable undertakings for which this distinguished dramatist-manager-producer has become famed throughout the last decade. The play itself, which is from the French, is Mr. Belasco's own work, and the first he has written since that phenomenal success, "The Girl of the Golden West." The company which is producing it has been universally acclaimed as the greatest aggregation of players ever assembled on the English speaking stage. This all-star cast is known as the David Belasco Company, and numbers fourteen members in all.

Donald Brian, who finally marries "The Dollar Princess," in the popular musical comedy, has been really married in real life to Mrs. Charles H. Pope, formerly Miss Florence Meagher Gleason. They will live at 40 South Washington Square, New York. One of the wedding gifts was a huge floral horse-shoe from "The Dollar Princess Company" on which was inscribed in forget-me-nots, the words "Love's a Race," the title of Mr. Brian's principal song which he sings as Freddy Smythe in the piece. Mrs. Pope's brother, Joseph J. Gleason, recently married Marjorie Wood of William Collier's, "A Lucky Star" Company. The Gleasons though not connected to the Frohman organization by business ties are rapidly marrying into it. Charles Frohman cabled his congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Brian from Paris.

St. Patrick's Day Reception.

Mrs. Edward Goerz, of West Front street and Clinton avenue, gave a St. Patrick's Day reception at her home this afternoon. The home was elaborately decorated in green and the favors were green baskets filled with candy. The guests were Mrs. William Wilson, Mrs. W. H. Sharp, Mrs. Benjamin Snyder, Mrs. Robert Dickerson, Mrs. Richard Martin, Mrs. Fred Hand, Mrs. Carrie Hand, Mrs. Charles Lewis and Mrs. Lewis Thompson.

The annual meeting of the Sunday-school of the First Presbyterian church will be held this evening. Officers will be elected and reports for the year presented.

HE PLEADS FOR ECONOMY

lines. The harmony of the last few years leads me to believe that this policy will be pursued.

"It is gratifying to me that all strife and friction in school matters has been eliminated. It is important that men who are elected to public office should understand the make-up of our town, and I am confident that the men who are selected tonight will look after the people's intehests in a proper manner. All our governing bodies should be conservative in the matter of expenses."

President Joy, in surrendering the chair to Mayor Smalley, called the attention of the citizens to the fact that the budget is $2,600 less than last year. He said that the receipts from foreign tuition has increased during the past year and that he believed that this is a source for funds on which the borough can rely on in the future without incurring additional expense. Mr. Joy also said that the board during the past year had paid $2,000 on an old note, and added, that it was gratifying to him that he was enabled to retire from the board under such pleasing conditions.

In referring to the retirement of Mr. Joy, Mr. McCutchen said it was a great misfortune that the borough is to lose the former's service after years of loyalty and industry. On a motion offered by Mr. McCutchen a resolution was adopted thanking Mr. Joy for his services rendered the borough in the capacity of a member of the school board.

Mayor Smalley endorsed Mr. McCutchen's sentiments and said it was a source of regret on all sides that Mr. Joy had determined to retire.

District Clerk Albert Steiner presented his annual report which showed the receipts and disbursements of the board. It is as follows:

Mr. Steiner acted as secretary. The tellers were J. W. A. Bauersachs, Daniel Hudick, George Webster and T. E. Currin.

CIRCLES ON SQUARE WON IN WARREN TWP.

Circles on the Square took a prominent part in the annual school meeting held in Warren township yesterday and succeeded in electing its candidates for membership on the school board. Fred Wiggin, J. V. Adams and Edmund E. Sage were elected for three years. There was a contest on the appropriation, but the Circles on the Square was successful in securing $2,400 for general expenses for the coming year.

The report of the old board was presented, but the meeting declined to approve it, referring it to the incoming members.

DUNELLEN COUNCIL KIND TO 'PHONE CO.

The Dunellen Council expected to take up the trolley siding matter with representatives of the Public Service Corporation at an adjourned meeting Monday but the trolley people failed to put in an appearance despite the fact that the meeting was adjourned as a matter of convenience for the company. Mayor Sanford, however, explained that their absence was due owing to the threatened trolley strike in Newark and the matter was laid over until the regular April meeting.

H. S. Van Fleet, a representative of the New York Telephone Co., was present at the session and made application to place a number of telephone attachments on poles belonging to the P. S. C. in various sections of the borough. The application was granted.

Mr. Hall, of the Hall Printing Press works, was present at the meeting and told the Council of the deplorable condition of North avenue in the vicinity of the factory. Mr. Hall declared that the company is willing to bear one-third of the expense if the borough will macadamize the thoroughfare. Councilman Churchill informed the Council that the cost would be about $1,200. A petition from Mrs. Elizabeth Mesbered was also received complaining of the condition of the thoroughfare. Walter G. Runyon also presented a similar petition.

Councilman Richards reported that a building ordinance is under consideration and that the matter will be reported on at the next meeting. Tax Collector Isaac Stires presented a list of delinquent and uncollectable taxes.

HOT SCHOOL ELECTION AT BERKELEY HEIGHTS

There was a battle royal at Berkeley Heights yesterday when the Circles on the Square and the Johnson-Bergmuller factions met in a contest for school committee. The erstwhile powerful combination met defeat at the hands of the new organization and William Jeffery, F. C. Shafer, Chas. Debbie and Charles Klingsteen won hands down. Every effort was made by the Johnson-Bergmuller forces to rout the Circles and it is alleged that even threats of personal violence were made in an attempt to intimidate the voters, but victory perched upon the banner of reform.

At previous elections the normal vote has hovered around the grand total of twenty-five, but yesterday afternoon ninety-six votes were cast of which the reformers received fifty-nine. After the reading of the report of the district clerk a motion to lay the report on the table and proceed with the election was carried and the voting became in order, president of the day's proceedings. Had it not been for the presence of Justice of the Peace Roland DeV. Parker there is no telling what would have happened to some of the more enthusiastic workers. Mr. Parker laid down the arrest to several before quiet was restored after an outbreak on the part of the Circles' opponents. At least so it was reported. One of the interested men said that the most unseemly and violent conduct characterized the methods of some of the more excited politicians.

Great work must have been done to have accomplished what was done yesterday for out of a total registration of 105 only nine voters failed to cast their votes and five of these were sick in bed. Interest in the election was at fever heat all the afternoon. From one source it was learned that, perhaps erroneously, that the election had passed off smoothly and without a sign of friction and that a motion by one of those opposed to the Circles to make the election unanimous was carried. No verification of this last item was had this morning.

At the annual business meeting of the First Baptist church Wednesday night, March 23, a deacon will be elected to succeed F. W. Jones, whose terms expires. Mr. Jones will undoubtedly be re-elected. Reports for the year will be presented at the

The meeting at the Salvation Army tonight will be in charge of Captain S. A. Hewitt. A cordial in-

NEEDLEWORK NOTES.

An attractive bureau set is made of lawn, embroidered with a design of bachelor's buttons, which can be either tinted or outlined or embroidered with several shades of blue, filling the centre of each flower with French knots.

The sprays and leaves are embroidered or tinted and outlined with shades of green. The flower can be arranged in clusters, placed at intervals on the front of the bureau scarf, and the pin cushion with a cluster of flowers in the centre.

The ruffles on both bureau scarf and cushion can be joined with beading run with light blue ribbon, finished on the edge of ruffle with lace or feather stitching. A lining of light blue is to be used for scarf and cushion.

Pongee buttons to be used on an evening coat can be made without much difficulty and at a much lower cost than they can be bought.

A line of heavy black silk is worked on the button in a circle, beginning in the centre and ending on the outside edge. This is outlined on both sides with fine gold thread, and the back-ground filled in with silk dots in satin stitch, or with French knots worked in the shade of silk used for lining the coat.

When finished the silk can be mounted over the button moulds which are made for the purpose.

Cable stitch is made in almost the same way as chain stitch except that the needle is put through at the side, instead of the centre, and about half way back of the preceding stitch.

The effect is like a cable and is a good stitch to use when one wishes to make an uneven edge

In chain stitch the thread is thrown over the needle and forms the loop in a straight line, when in cable stitch the thread forms the loop from the side, giving it the corded effect, which is very attractive

EDITOR HUGHES 'SQUIRE AND SCHOOL TRUSTEE

George W. Hughes, an editor of The New York Mail; Francis E. CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 20, 1910.

Topic.—Money a curse or a blessing.—Luke xii, 13-21; Matt. vi, 19-21. Comment by Rev. Herbert H. Doyle, D. D.

Everything that God has made in this world is good if properly used. But unfortunately since sin came into the world it is possible for man to make good or evil out of that which if sin had not come would only have been used in a right and proper way. Moreover, weak and sinfully inclined, man has not always the power or the inclination to use the good things of this world and not to abuse them. What a valuable organ in life is the tongue, and yet, as James says: "Therewith bless we God, * * * and therewith curse we men, which are made after the similitude of God. Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing." Alcohol as a medicine has been a great blessing to the human race, yet this same liquid used as a beverage, used to excess where it is not needed, has been a curse to the greater curses of mankind. So money may be a blessing or a curse, according to the use to which it is put. Used aright, it is a means of great blessing; used wrongfully, there is scarcely a crime or sin of which it is not responsible, and indeed, has not been responsible. In the hands of men without consciences, who care for nothing but their own will, it has been an awful power for evil. It has debauched the purity of womanhood, bribed lawmakers and the executive of the law, debauched the ballot box, inspired murders, and the desire for it has wrecked the lives of thousands of men in all classes of society. For if Judas Iscariot sold his Master, the Saviour of the world; if Francis Bacon, the great jurist, imperiled his high office, and Benedict Arnold became a traitor to his country. On the other hand, money in the possession of men of right principles has been of inestimable value to the world. The thousands of charitable institutions throughout the world, built to care for the poor, the sick, the feeble minded and insane, the parentless children, the Christian churches of the world and the support of this great world-wide work, all go to testify in favor of the value of money, whether given by rich or the comparatively poor. The wholesale denunciation of wealth and its possessors therefore is absolutely unscriptural. Whether they are worthy of condemnation or not depends upon the disposition made of wealth by those who possess it.

When, however, a broad view is taken of the subject, it must be admitted that the temptations that men are great and that men are to be urged to use it right and not disabuse its possession. No man, whether he be rich or poor, should love money to the extent that it dwarfs his soul or shuts out of him the spirit of sympathy and compassion for his fellow man. This is clearly the attitude of the teaching of Christ and the Scriptures toward money. It does not condemn riches so much as it warns the rich man against its dangers and especially the danger of putting all trust in it, even to the extent of forgetting to make sure the salvation of the soul. "What shall it profit a man," says Christ, "if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" The immense fortunes of today do not approach the value of the world, and if for the whole world we would make a bad bargain, if it cost us the loss of our souls, how much less would it pay us to lose our souls for the infinitely small part of the world that the richest man in it possesses? Money that loses the soul is the greatest of curses; money that leads the soul closer to God in Christ Jesus is one of life's greatest blessings, for it helps to lay up not equivalent to heavenly treasures, which the soul alone can enjoy. The soul cannot be fed upon gold, as the man in the parable of Christ seemed to think when he said, "Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years." Many years? Why, that night his soul was required of him, and the next day others possessed his goods. What more uncertain than life? What more uncertain than earthly riches? With what reason, therefore, Christ says, "Lay up treasure in heaven, where moth doth not rust nor thieves do not break in and steal." Why should we eat our souls and hearts out struggling for that which is so uncertain, which may leave us in a moment's time or from which we may be called? Let us all, therefore, both rich and nourich, above all see to it that we lay up treasure in heaven by faith in Christ and the performance of good works through the Christian faith. Such treasures will never leave us, and we shall never be separated from them. It's eternal wealth against temporal wealth. Which shall we choose?

Advice For a Junior Superintendent.

Here are some good suggestions for the junior superintendent that were brought out at the Christian Endeavor conferences at St. Paul:

Be always on time at the meeting.

Begin promptly.

Greet each junior with a hearty handshake.

Be kind, but always firm.

After the meeting has opened, always have a reverent manner.

Speak in a decided but quiet manner.

Have the juniors enter and leave the room quietly.

Use the greatest care in selecting hymns.

Avoid loud and boisterous singing.

"KIDS" HUNT KIDD'S GOLD AND JEWELS

Captain Kidd and his fabled treasure, believed by some to be buried on Staten Island, led to the undoing of Jimmy Abbe, a lad of ten, and a companion of the same age name unknown, early Monday at Elizabeth. The pair of youthful explorers wrenched a door from the old armory on South Broad street in that city, and using it as a raft, sailed down through the swells of the Elizabeth river, fully expecting to find the treasure trove within a few hours and to bring it back to Elizabeth before sundown.

Near the mouth of the river Johnnie Van Pelt, senior and junior, were busy in their shipyard when they saw the buccaneer boat wobbling downstream. The strange craft bumped into the Van Pelt dock, and its crew was asked its destination. They confided to the Van Pelts their hopes of bringing the raft back loaded with gold and jewels. The elder Van Pelt grasped the situation and plunged into a harrowing narrative and the terrors of the deep, particularly Staten Island Sound terrors.

The lads fell into the trap with the result that Monday afternoon he stood before Judge Mahon in the Juvenile Court.

He wore a sober, almost frightened look as the court told of the fate of a certain physician-explorer and intimated that exploring is bad business—for little boys, at least. At the close of the lecture Jimmy said he would be glad to keep out of the Kidd treasure race for an indefinite period, and he was then restored to his parents.

PROMINENT SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS TO BE IN NEWARK.

The World's Sunday school convention is to be held at Washington, May 19-24, and for the purpose of arousing the Sunday school workers of the country and stimulating their interest in the Sunday school cause, some of the leaders in the work, including such lights as Rev. F. B. Meyer, of London, president of the World's Sunday School Association; Marion Lawrence, general secretary of the International Sunday School Association; Bishop J. C. Hartzell, of Africa; Rev. Richard Roberts, of London, and Prof. E. O. Excell, of Chicago, will visit eighteen of the prominent cities of the country.

One of these meetings will be held in the First Presbyterian church, Newark, May 4-5, at which the Sunday school workers will have the privilege of hearing these world famous experts in Sunday school work. Plans are being made to have the local Sunday schools largely represented at Newark and Washington.

WOODEN STATUES FULL OF PINS

Breton Maidens who desire to get married go to Sena, near Vannes, and stick pins in the foot of the wooden statue of a saint called St. Uferier, who marries off his devotees within the year. The pin must be well pushed, for if it fall out the wedding will fall through; and it must be a strong, straight pin, for if it bend the future husband may be a hunchback or a cripple.

On the Channel island of Noirmanch, on a rock accessible at low tide, there is a little shrine supported by four Roman columns and dedicated to St. Quiree who landed there from England in the sixth century. His wooden image is stuck full of pins.

So is a statue of St. Lawrence, near Quintin. Here the pin should stick at the first push, for each failure postpones the marriage for a year.

There is an old tale told of an idot who broke the statue of St. Mirli on the eve of his fete. In order to hide his crime his mother made him take the saint's place. Now, upon the occasion of his feast there was a great gathering of pious pilgrims, who stuck pins in St. Mirli's knee in all sorts of wants. The first few pins of the day happened to be those of some children and did not much hurt the saint's flesh. A young girl followed and drew blood. A stout old countrywoman then drove a corking pin no per into the poor idiot's leg that he jumped, howling, over the devout and prostrate bodies, with the result that St. Mirli is believed to have flown up to heaven.

When old, wormeaten, decayine statues of the past are replaced by stone figures, which are of course rebellious to pins, the pins are still brought by believers, but they merely place them round the foot of the effigy.

Thomas B. Lawyer is Held Up on Rahway Road Near Oak Tree.

LOSES MONEY AND WATCH.

Two White Men and a Negro Overpower Farmer and Make Clean Getaway—Victim Hit on the Head.

Another hold up and one which cost Thomas B. Lawyer, who lives on the road from Oak Tree to Perth Amboy, thirty-five dollars in money and the only silver watch he ever owned, occurred Monday at about 10 o'clock at the Lehigh Valley R. R. bridge at Oak Tree. Lawyer suffered two wounds on the head and is otherwise hurt.

While on the way home after delivering a ton of hay to a customer in Scotch Plains, Lawyer met a man on the road who asked for a ride. He was allowed to climb up on the wagon and interested Mr. Lawyer with stories of his long tramp from Jersey City to Oak Tree. When the wagon had arrived at the bridge the stranger who was tall and athletic suddenly threw his arms around Lawyer pulling him back on the wagon at the same time shouting loudly "whoa, whoa." This was apparently a signal for in an instant two other men sprang from beside the bridge one going to the heads of the horses while the other, who was a colored man, rifled Lawyer's pockets.

After securing their booty the colored man struck the victim two or three times over the head rendering his unconscious. The trio then made off. Lawyer came to within a mile of his home, but was so dazed that he was unable to give a coherent account of all that had happened to him since leaving Plainfield.

Lawyer was able to give only a meagre description of his assailants remembering only that the man who rode on the wagon with him had on a derby hat and was probably six feet tall. The colored man was small of stature and compactly built. The other white man got away without being seen. It was dark when the assault was made and it was so sudden that Mr. Lawyer was paralyzed with fear. No clue has been found of the highway men and it is believed they jumped a Lehigh Valley freight and got away down the road.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

The farmers' institution train, which ran through South Jersey last week, will be continued on the Belvidere Division next Tuesday.

While attempting to start the engine in an automobile, Harry McCoy, of Beverly, sustained a broken leg, the crank suddenly reversing.

Falling on the floor of his home yesterday, Philip Harris, seventeen months old, of 425 Kaighn avenue, Camden, fractured a rib and was cared for at Cooper Hospital.

Trying to ride on the rear of a wagon yesterday, Percy Taylor, twelve years old, of 322 State street, Camden, sustained a badly injured leg. He was cared for at Cooper Hospital.

Thirteen babies were brought forward for baptism by Rev. William Blatchford in Atlantic City Sunday, when the rector celebrated the thirteenth anniversary both of the foundation of St. James' Episcopal church and of his rectorate. A big crowd attended the services.

Otto Herzog, of 63 Market street, Paterson, who is employed as a switchman on the Erie Railroad at Jersey City, was struck on the head by falling machinery Sunday last, and sustained cuts and contusions about the head which made necessary his removal to St. Francis' Hospital.

Daniel Horner, the veteran mail-carrier of Beverly, celebrated his eighty-second birthday yesterday by putting in a good day's work. "Uncle Dan," as he is familiarly known, is on the job from 6:30 in the morning until 7:40 in the evening. He has held the position for fifteen years and makes nine rounds a day, covering eight miles. In all he walked enough miles to make a circumference and a half of the globe. In this work Uncle Sam pays him only $235 per annum.

Vice-Chancellor Leaming in Camden yesterday granted a rule to show cause why an injunction should not be allowed restraining Atlantic City from building a wood stave forty-eight-inch pipe line in front of the property of Doughty Somers. Declaring that he owns about 2,200 feet along the boulevard from Pleasantville to Atlantic City, the plaintiff alleges that the city or the contractor never acquired the right of way from him to lay the pipe. The rule was made returnable next Monday.

SELF-MASTERS' ROMANCE

Founder and Attractive General Agent of the Institution Wedded Quietly.

DEVOTE LIVES TO CAUSE.

Mr. and Mrs. Andress Floyd Consecrated to Saving Disheartened Men—Local Men Are Interested.

Announcement was made today of the wedding of Miss Lillian B. Kline, formerly of Cleveland, Ohio, and more recently of Rahway, to Andress S. Floyd, of Rahway. The ceremony took place last Saturday at Newark and was performed by Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, of that city. Mrs. Floyd has long been interested in Mr. Floyd's "family of self masters," an institution founded by Mr. Floyd at Rahway. The institution has the support of such men as Howard A. Colby, who has recently contributed $1,000 towards the expenses of the institution; and Charles H. Ingersoll of watch fame, both of whom are members of the advisory board.

The Family of Self Masters is now located at Union, Union county, and is doing a philanthropical work which has received the endorsement of many men of prominence. Among the trustees is found the name of William A. Clark, of the Borough National Bank, North Plainfield; Alexander C. Litterst, of the Metuchen National Bank, of Metuchen; Elston M. French and others.

In the prospectus recently issued by the managers of the institution an outline of the scope and intent of the work is given. Primarily the home or colony has been established for the following classes of men: Those unable to find immediate employment; the one in a middle life who has lost his business; the intemperate boy trying to control himself; the country boy stranded in a large city; the wayward rich man's son; the man discouraged through domestic trials and the physically and mentally broken down man.

What has already been done by the promotors of this helpful home is creditable beyond anything of its kind yet established and the results in cases which have found refuge in the kindly environment of the home have spurred the workers in it to press on toward a higher attainment. Mrs. Floyd and her husband have given up all their time without hope of material recompense to this work of rehabilitating men and putting them on a firm footing for future usefulness. It is hoped that with the installation of modern machinery and tools in the home to receive the one in a supporting and with the ready response which has met the appeals of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd success is assured.

The prospectus says that "now that the work is no longer an experiment, but has proven that the proper method to reach the homeless man is through the affections to which he responds like other men, it is the earnest desire of the head workers to obtain a farm of 25 to 50 acres, with proper buildings for dormitories and work shops, located on a main automobile road, easily accessible to visitors, where the family may establish itself permanently and accomplish its great work for human betterment. A fund of $10,000 is also needed for establishing the rug industry on a proper basis, to purchase tools, machinery, seeds, fertilizers and stock to carry on a truck farm under the supervision of an experienced farmer. To equip a print shop for general printing and publishing of the Self-Master Magazine and other literature under a competent printer who is yet to be secured."

The work of this institution is nonsectarian and simply non-creedal. The man who has fallen making an appeal to the man who has won. The man who has made a mistake and who wants to re-establish himself by faithful services to others. The colony was started in nine rooms in Rahway October 22, 1908, and has succeeded admirably so far in its purposes.

Men's Don't Want to Strike.

Despite the persistent efforts of a walking delegate, who visited this city on Saturday, a futile attempt was made to to get the local trolleymen to arrange for a strike. He met with a cool reception and the firm statement that all hands were satisfied. The delegate also visited Bound Brook, New Brunswick, Perth Amboy, Newark and Elizabeth, where, it is said, he got similar treatment.

Supt. Lahr Out Again.

After a ten days' illness, George Lahr division superintendent of the Public Service Corporation Railway, was able to leave the Elizabeth Hospital on Saturday and is once more on duty, his many friends, particularly the P. S. R. employes, are glad to see him around again.

"You are not supposed to walk on those rugs" said the dealer. "You hang them on the wall. They are works of art."

"I see," replied Mr. Cumrox. "I am just beginning to understand that art is something which transforms articles of natural utility into things that get in the way."

"JOE" PENROSE SKIPS TO FAR OFF TEXAS

Joseph Penrose, Jr., the New Market boy who, with Charles Boghe was recently arrested on the charge of committing a number of robberies in that place and at Dunellen, which included several thefts of money from Clark T. Rogers, will probably escape punishment unless the Middlesex county authorities decide to take steps to have the boy extradited from Texas.

Penrose "skipped" the village about two weeks ago and during the past week his whereabouts was established by souvenir postal cards received by his friends, bearing the postmark of an interior town in the Lone Star State. Penrose, after making a confession before Justice Smith in South Plainfield, after being arrested, was taken to the New Brunswick Jail, but was bailed out by his father, who also went surety for the Boghe boy.

Justice Rogers appeared before the grand jury at New Brunswick last week in the case. It was not generally known until then that young Penrose had jumped his bail. It is believed Boghe will be paroled.

DUNELLFINITES CLAMOR NOW FOR NEW STATION

After reposing in a lethargic state for many moons Dunellen is awakening to the fact that it has a bright future ahead of it if the present progressive spirit of the citizens is continued. Since Mayor Sanford took his place in the mayoralty chair, on January 1, the question of needed public improvements has been presented to the citizens. The recently organized Board of Trade is also proving a valuable ally to the borough government in its efforts to better the conditions in that municipality.

The latest projected public improvement which is under way is a proposed campaign for a new railroad station. The Board of Trade will take hold of the matter officially soon and present the matter to the officials of the Jersey Central for consideration. The Board of Trade will be ably backed by several real estate development companies that are now operating in the borough.

The present station is inadequate for the needs of the borough, and as a member of the Council stated last night to a Daily Press representative, "It is a blackeye to the town and should be replaced by a modern depot." He also declared that it is a detriment to the town and operates against prospective homeseekers locating in the borough.

THREE YOUNG TRUANTS BEFORE JUDGE RUNYON

Truancy cases occupied the time of the city court Tuesday and Judge Runyon had to impose a fine on one woman who has been persistently negligent about sending her two daughters to school. Mrs. Melinda Brown, of Plainfield avenue, who works out days has been an old offender in regard to the observance of the law. She has two daughters, Violet and Victoria, both of whom have not only stayed away from their classes, but have been reprimanded time and again for insolence and other misdemeanors while in school. A fine of $5 was imposed in this case.

Master Frank Ross, recently of Scotch Plains, and who has only been a resident of this city for two weeks, has played hookey most of the time since he has been here. Through an elder brother word has been sent to the boy's father and correctional measures will be taken.

W. C. T. U. LECTURER TO MAKE ADDRESS HERE.

Thursday evening Mrs. Ramsey Blair will have charge of the meeting of the W. C. T. U. at their rooms on Madison avenue. On Tuesday, March 22, Mrs. Cora Seaberry, National lecturer of the W. C. T. U., will speak in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, having for her subject "The Greatest Thing in the World."

Mrs. Seaberry is an accomplished elocutionist as well as a public speaker and is sure to interest her audience. The meeting will begin at 8 o'clock.

Newark to Have a Horse Show.

The New Jersey Horse Show Association, which has been organized for the purpose of holding an annual show at the Essex Troop's Armory, Newark, has sent out announcements of the event. The first annual exhibition will be held May 12, 13 and 14, for which a large number of entries are expected from all parts of the State as well as New York. Former Governor Franklin Murphy is the president of the association. No doubt Plainfield will be represented at the show.

CASE MADE ELIGIBLE FOR COUNTY JUDGE

Among the bills signed by Governor Fort Monday was the one introduced by Assemblyman W. W. Smalley House No. 285, repealing the law passed in 1885 requiring that the judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Somerset county must be a counsellor-at-law for at least five years. The repealed law was a special act passed in the administration of Governor Abbett, and was brought to the attention of the public recently when Governor Fort appointed Clarence E. Case as a successor to Judge Schenck on the bench of the Somerset County Court.

At Mr. Case has only been a counsellor-at-law for three years, it was first thought that the 1885 law would prevent his accepting the office. The attorney-general, however, ruled that the law was not sufficient to prevent his confirmation by the Senate, and it was the conclusion of Governor Fort and others that the act was unconstitutional in the fact that it applied only to Somerset county. Mr. Smalley then introduced the repealer and it went through both Houses by unanimous vote.

COMMENCEMENT ORATOR A NOTED JOURNALIST

Talcott Williams, editor of the Philadelphia Press, famed as a speaker, as a journalist and as a man of letters, has informed the Board of Education in response to its request that he will make the address at the graduating exercises to be held at the First Baptist church in June. The announcement was made today by Dr. Henry M. Maxson superintendent of schools, and the board has been congratulated in securing such an able speaker for the occasion. Mr. Williams has a country-wide reputation in the newspaper field and is an entertaining and interesting talker.

The 10 class of P. H. S. will likely number more than fifty, the majority being young women. There are not more than a dozen young men in the class. As yet no selection has been made as to the valedictorian or salutatorian, but the announcement is expected within a short time.

Former Governor George H. Utter, of Rhode Island, a native of this city made the address last year and his remarks were much enjoyed.

CONDUCTOR MOBBED; NEAR RIOT ON A CAR

A near riot occurred Tuesday on a main line trolley car at Lincoln when the conductor who had had great difficulty in collecting his fares was threatened by a gang of Italians and narrowly missed being hit on the head with a bottle wielded by one of the trouble makers.

The fighting took place on the trolley car which leaves Bound Brook at 6:15 every morning. There were ninety-seven passengers on board when the conductor attempted to collect the fares of two men who had boarded the car just west of the Lincoln station. These men demurred and in less than a minute the car was in an uproar. Loud cursing, pushing and threats were passed and the conductor was finally pushed up against one of the seats while one of the Italians attempted to hit him on the head with an uplifted bottle.

The approach of the car to the Lincoln station frightened the incensed men as a crowd of other passengers were there waiting to board the car and they were for the most part workmen on their way to this city for the day. The Italians seeing them jumped hastily from the car and went back in the direction of Bound Brook stopping frequently to hurl anathemas at the plucky conductor. The car got into Plainfield ten minutes behind schedule time.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF BRIGHT YOUNG MAN.

The funeral service of Franklin Dorthy was held at 2:30 Tuesday afternoon from the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. The obsequies were attended by a large number of relatives and friends, including many former associates of the young man. There was an unusually large number of floral tributes.

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the church, officiated, and spoke words of eulogy concerning the life of Mr. Dorthy. During the service Miss Grace Carroll, contralto soloist of the church, sang two selections.

The burial was in Hillside cemetery and the pall-bearers were Chas. Sebring Charles H. Russell, Peter C. Sweeny, Harry Sanderson, Joseph Dunham, of this city, and V. D. Johns, of Hackensack.

WATCHUNG BOWLERS MARK UP NEW LOCAL RECORD

Watchung bowlers, of this city, did themselves proud at Elizabeth last night when they won the odd game from the county seniors in a New Jersey National tourney contest and incidentally smashed all high team scores in the tourney by registering a 1,111 score in the second game.

In the red letter stunt Johnny Campbell was high man with a total of 265 pins. Johnny was also "ace high" in the other games with marks of 218 and 202, boosting his average of 228.2 for the series. In this notable conflict Chauncy Stout toppled the pins over for a 222 mark, while Ben Scheibe had a 216 score. Nash flirted with the double century mark also with a score of 195. In this battle the locals vanquished their opponents under a majority of 178 pins; in the first combat the Watchungs won out by a score of 960 to 902.

Plainfield's high rolling in the recording smashing battle evidently spurred the Elizabeth aggregation on to bigger things, as the Tuxedos ran up a 1,022 score to Plainfield's 949 in the final contest, thereby preventing a clean sweep.

The 1,111 tally made by the Watchungs is the highest score ever registered by a local team and stands second to the 1,137 mark made by Elizabeth in the Interstate League. The scores:

NO BAUBLES FOR OLD.

Although the middle-aged gentlewoman insists upon having as many dainty belongings and trinkets as the younger woman finds necessary, however, must express quiet good taste. Simplicity of style and high character of workmanship and material should speak in every detail of her appointments, from the pin that fastens her veil to her smart seal and gunmetal trimmed traveling bag.

The woman of years does not wear imitation jewelry. Such maubles are only for the pretty young girl who takes them up as the momentary fad or matches her millinery with a particularly colored silk hose. No longer if she does not possess the real gem, wears in its place a fine cameo, a bit of jade or coreal delicately set, or a handwrought brooch of gold or silver in some special design.

Hair ornaments for the older women styles. Shell pins and combs may be had in a soft gray shade that harmonizes with silvery or white hair. Jet ornaments are also very effective in white hair, and some of the jet combs in butterfly wing and mercury wing patterns are extremely beautiful.

Jet jewelry was never more fashionable, and while these somber ornaments are really most becoming to the young woman with dazzling skin and golden hair, they have a dignity and richness that make them well suited to the dowager.

The Easter Vacation.

The Easter vacation of the Plainfield schools will begin Thursday, March 24, and will extend to and through the following week, opening again on Monday, April 4.

SWIMMING LESSONS AT Y.M.C.A. ARE POPULAR

Plainfield boys, who cannot swim, are in high glee over the opportunity presented to them to learn the aquatic art, by the local Y. M. C. A., in the free classes of instruction which were inaugurated yesterday afternoon under the supervision of Professor George H. Corsan.

A squad of 113 youths reported yesterday afternoon and enjoyed a dip in the Association's pool and 130 more are expected today. During the week close to 400 non-swimmers, of twelve years and older, will be instructed. This number, according to Secretary L. C. Parker, represents about 80 per cent. of the schoolboys, twelve years and older, in this city who cannot swim.

The classes yesterday started at 2:30 o'clock and were continued for three hours, at intervals of every half hour. From 5 o'clock on Professor Corsan devoted his attention to instructing and giving pointers to members of the association and during the evening the interest was so intense that the association rooms were packed to the limit.

Men who cannot swim will also be given an opportunity tonight at 8 o'clock. Already a score or more of them have made application to join the classes.

The feature of the evening session was an exhibition conducted by Professor Corsan, in which he, Lewis F. Hansen, Plainfield crack amateur swimmer, and "Big Jim" Hurtt, of West Front street, the Asbury Park life saver, displayed their prowess.

Three lessons will be given to members of the boy's classes on every afternoon in the week, Saturday included, at which time Professor Corsan expects to have a brigade of classy swimmers as the result of his labors.

Professor Corsan in his instruction teaches his pupils the Australian crawl system. This system involves about the same work which is essential to all expert swimmers.

The boys will have tryouts on Friday and Saturday afternoons and all learners who are able to swim the length of the pool will be presented with silver medals. On Monday, Wednesday and Friday classes will have their tryouts on Friday afternoon, while the Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday classes will strive for their medals on Saturday afternoon.

Professor Corsan expressed himself as highly gratified over the interests and showing displayed by the local youths to a Daily Press representative this morning and declared that he has never came in contact with a finer class than those he met yesterday afternoon.

DUTCH MARKET FOLK ATTENDED DUTCH PARTY.

Miss Etta Raybert, of East Second street, entertained a company of friends at the pretty little home on Tuesday at what was called a "Dutch Party." The guests included those who have been engaged in making tulips for the "Dutch Market" to be given at Trinity Reformed church on the evenings of March 31 and April 1. The women appeared in Dutch costume and presented an attractive sight, made more so by the Dutch decorations which were unique, and included everything that might convey the "Dutch" idea.

The evening was devoted to playing all kinds of games, and during an intermission dainty refreshments were served by Miss Raybert and several young women who assisted. The women were privileged to invite their men friends and husbands and they enjoyed the affair greatly.

The "Dutch Market" will be given at Trinity Reformed church under the anspices of the Young Women's Mision Band of the church and promises to be a great success.

Antique Momento.

William A. Schoch has purchased an antique ornament which he highly prizes. It is a hand carved wooden basket which was presented to former President General U. S. Grant, by Switzerland admirers while the latter was on his tour around the world in 1877.

Miss Curry in Jerusalem.

Friends of Miss Sara Curry, of The Little Missionary Day Nursery, 92 St. Marks place, New York, will be interested to know that she has arrived safely at Jerusalem and is enjoying a visit to places that have become interesting to her since childhood. Her health is much improved. Miss Curry left on the White Star Liner Arabic, January 20, for the Mediterranean and Orient and will return April 2.

PARK BOWLERS TIED FOR LEAGUE LAURELS

Park Club bowlers completed their schedule in the Central New Jersey League last night by winning two games out of three from Elizabeth, thereby tieing Jersey City for first place. Had the local pinners captured the three games they would have won the championship. It is probable that a special series will be rolled to determine the title.

Mulford, of the Parks, distinguished himself during the season by his splendid rolling, and does the individual list with an average of 182, while Long ranks third with 179.5. The record of the Parks and Jersey Citys are 24 games won and 12 defeats.

In the first game of the series the Parks lost by a scanty margin of two pins despite the 237 mark registered by Long, the score being 906 to 904; the second contest was also a hard battle which the locals won with three pins to spare, 873 to 870; in the final game the Parks rolled in superb form and snowed the Elizabethians under, 992 to 890. In this game Lyman shone brilliantly with a score of 244 and Ball registered a 202 mark. The scores:

D. R. PLANNING FOR ANNUAL SESSION AT ATLANTIC CITY.

The board of managers of the New Jersey State Society Daughters of the Revolution, is making arrangements for the annual convention of the General Society, which is to be held at Atlantic City during the week of May 8. An attractive program has been arranged for the convention, including as social features a banquet, an excursion to Valley Forge and a trip in motor launches in Egg Harbor. The hospitality committee comprises members of the seven chapters in the State.

The annual meeting of the State Society will be held Tuesday, April 5, at the residence of Mrs. Ward in Raymond avenue, South Orange, when an election for officers and four members of the board of managers will be held. Mrs. A. M. Burtis, of Orange, is chairman of the nominating committee. Continental Chapter, of this city, and Middlebrook Chapter, of Bound Brook, will be well represented at this meeting as well as at the meeting of the General Society.

STEWED CUTLETS.

To stew cutlets have ready a well-buttered pan lined with sliced vegetables, place in this a slice of ham, a bunch of herbs, and seasoning to taste; lay in the cutlets, cover down the pan, and allow the contents to fry for a minute or two till the vegetables, etc., begin to color slightly; then pour in a little stock, lay a buttered paper over it all and cover the pan.

Bring the stock to a boil, then draw the pan to one side of the stove and allow the whole to simmergently but steadily for an hour or so, after which lift the cutlets out and serve with their own gravy strained and freed from fat with any vegetable garnish you please.

For the haricot, take two pounds of the neck, trim off some of the fat and divide it into cutlets. Melt two ounces of butter or dripping in a casserole, lay in the cutlets and fry them in this till nicely colored; sprinkle over them one ounce of flour, a little salt and pepper; stir over the fire for a few minutes, then add one pint of stock or water, an onion stuck with cloves, and a bunch of herbs; bring to the boil, then put and allow its contents to simmer gently for a few minutes, when you skim off all the fat, etc. Have ready a turnip, two carrots, and if liked six small potatoes all peeled and quartered, fry them with a little butter and a pinch of sugar till nicely colored, then add them to the stew; let it all simmer gently for an hour, lift out the bunch of herbs and serve.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. HANNAH M. SNYDER.

The funeral service of Mrs. Hannah M. Snyder was held at the late residence on West Front street, at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon. The obsequies were largely attended by relatives and friends including many from out-of-town. There were many beautiful floral tributes, comprising cut flowers and set pieces.

Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, officiated. The burial was in Hillside cemetery and the pall-bearers were chosen from among the nephews and grandchildren of Mrs. Snyder.

EARTH NOT MENACED BY HALLEY'S COMET

Halley's comet, the most wonderful celestial visitor of the age, the discovery of which marked a new era in astronomy, was the topic of a fascinating and instructive lecture by Charles C. McBride, an editorial writer of the Newark Evening News, before the members of the Men's Brotherhood of the First Presbyterian church, Elizabeth.

Halley's comet is a timely subject for a lecture and discussion, for it has recently been seen with ordinary field glasses as it followed the sun below the horizon each evening. Mr. McBride's remarks included detailed descriptions of the discovery of the remarkable comet, Halley's conclusion that all comets follow well-defined orbits periodically, and its present return to the perihelion of its orbit when it soon will become visible to the naked eye.

One of the most interesting parts of the lecture was Mr. McBride's description of what will happen when the earth passes through the immense tail about May 18. He strongly denied any reason for believing that inhabitants of this planet will suffer. In substantiating this claim he said that according to recent estimates, millions of cubic miles of the matter composing a comet's tail, if confined, would not weigh more than a jar full of air. He said that the entire tail of a comet, composed of the minutest particles of material, could be carried away in a satchel.

Mr McBride led his hearers up to a thrilling description of the obliteration of all life on the earth if the head of a comet struck the earth, by saying that Halley's comet on some of its visits within the orbit of the earth passes within 40,000 miles of the earth's orbit, but fortunately, he said as he relieved the strain, the earth always has been at the other end of its orbit and has therefore been millions of miles away from the dangerous body.

In describing the immense journey of Halley's comet, which is visible to the earth only once every seventy-six years, he began with the comet located at its perihelion, or point nearest the sun. He said it was 125,000,000 miles from the sun when it crossed the orbit of Mars, 470,000,000 of miles from the sun when it crossed Jupiter's orbit, 880,000,000 miles when it crossed Uranus' orbit, and 2,800,000,000 of miles when it crossed Neptune's orbit. Then as it begins to return toward the sun and toward "light, heat and civilization," as Mr. McBride put it, it steadily increases in speed.

It requires twenty-one years for it to cross Neptune's orbit, eight to cross Uranus' orbit, five years to cross Saturn's orbit. From Saturn to Jupiter, a distance of 470,000,000 miles it requires but one year, steadily increasing its speed until it reaches a velocity of twenty-five miles per second as it passes the point nearest the sun.

He said that the nearest the head of the comet will come to the earth is 14,000,000 miles, or forty times as far away as the moon.

Mr. McBride traced the calculations of Halley, the astronomer, after the discovery of the comet. He said that Halley, after studying all the comets about which he could get reliable information, learned that three followed the same orbit, moved in the same plane and came after periods of the same length. Then combining the calculations of Newton, the mathematician, with his own astronomical observations Halley determined that all comets followed orbits of their own, and that these three comets noted were the same comet reappearing at regular intervals. He therefore estimated the reappearance of this particular comet at a specific date, and his prediction was verified. Although Halley's death had occurred sixteen years before this date, he was given full credit for his observations and predictions.

The wonderful comet has visited the earth twenty-six times, Mr. McBride said, since 11 B. C. Describing its appearance in May, Mr. McBride said that it would not be visible on May 18 because it would be directly between the earth and the sun, but that as it passed away from the sun it would appear very luminous.

"While it will not be as wonderfully brilliant as it has been some years," he said, "I believe you can depend upon seeing a wonderful sight. Just when it will appear next time does not interest us; it may scientists but not us, because in seventy-six years most of us will be where we are not interested in comets."

Mr. McBride in concluding his remarks spoke of many ludicrous superstitions which have arisen at each visitation of Halley's comet and which are preserved in historic records.

The Investment of TrustFunds is properly confirmed by law within certain well-defined limitations as to class and kind of Investments, etc.

The executor who invests the Trust fund in his business or who ventures into speculative fields hoping for larger returns, though he do so with the best of motives, may find himself compelled to make good losses incurred on individual investments of this class, even though his total administration shows a gain.

Where Investments are made outside of the legal field for Trust funds, it should be remembered that

Gains acrue to the Estate and must be left there—

Losses must be made up.

The temptation to make Speculative Investments is removed where a Trust Company is Executor. All Trust funds are constantly under State and Legal Supervision.

This is the Square Pot of the

that saves fuel and dollars and will heat the whole of a house. In every great engine and under every big boiler you'll find a square fire box. Ever noticed it? Well—we have adapted that principle to our furnaces. A square pot gives a clean, hot, clinkerless fire without waste of fuel. It requires the least attention and responds instantly. BOYNTON furnaces only have square fire-pots. It is our patent. There are other improvements. A square ash pit that improves the draft and makes removal of ashes easier. A pure air supply—for health's sake. A dust flue that saves the rooms above.

Look up the BOYNTON dealer in your town and talk it over.

There are BOYNTON heating plans of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for Steam or Hot Water. Also Ranges.

HERE AND THERE.

A new and rather unique brand of one-dollar bill has made its appearance in this section, and unless the public is wary the probability is the there will be cause for regret. The bill is printed on two separate sheets and then so cleverly put together as to almost defy detection. The engraving is almost perfect but the coloring appears to be a little more dead than that of the genuine, though not to such an extent as to attract attention. The texture of the paper, however, is rather soft. One of the bills was taken in a day or two ago at the freight office of the Pennsylvania Railroad in Elizabeth. Its worthlessness was not detected until after it was deposited the other afternoon in the National State Bank, in Elizabeth, and the first that the railroad company learned of it was yesterday when it was returned by the bank bearing the word counterfeit stamped across its face. When subjected to a test made by the bank officials, the two parts which made up the bill came apart, showing at once its worthlessness.

Although he is only 14 years old, John Maier, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Maier, of Bound Brook, has erected a wireless station at his home, and according to experts, it is one of the most complete systems in this vicinity. The boy almost daily receives messages from Cape Hatteras and from the Atlantic City stations. He also sends messages to points in the east. The Maier boy is a pupil in the Bound Brook High School, and is considered one of the brightest boys in his class. For more than a year past he has been studying wireless telegraphy. "When I am old enough," said the boy, "I want to be a wireless operator on a steamer, just like Jack Binns."

Misunderstanding a telephone message resulted last week in a mixup, in which an undertaker in Cranford was sent to the home of a man who did not need his services and the summoning of several members of his family to his bedside. It later developed that one of the relatives of Anton Fnitter called up his home on the telephone, inquring as to his condition. "He is in bed," relpied a daughter. Thinking the young woman had said "He is dead," Undertaker Sartor, of Westfield, was called. The funeral director was in New York at the time but a friend went to the house to make arrangements for the funeral. A daughter who lives in this city was also called to Cranford. It took over an hour to straighten the matter out.

THIS SEASON'S VEILS.

In the monthly expenditure of the average well-dressed woman the money for veils will be no small item.

Plain meshes are always acceptable, and every woman should number one or two of this variety in her outfit.

Made veils, decorated with ornate designs, are most expensive, but the finished style of these cannot be supplied to the waist.

Closely following the vogue for long chiffon scarfs comes the long net veil, which is tied at the back, the long ends falling to the waist.

In the plain chiffon veiling all of the pastel shades are still favored. Long lengths are used to drape over the hat brims and the ends are crossed in the back and then tied carelessly in front. The chiffon veils are seldom worn over the face except when motoring.

Some women have adopted the expensive Parisian veils, which have the fine background of mesh spotted with huge leaf forms or butterflies. They are daring in their design and require a face of unusual beauty to counteract the almost grotesque effect produced.

Soft-toned veils in colors to match the costume are much worn, and of course, black and white meshes are always in good taste.

They Were "Over."

He was a regular patron of the restaurant. Perhaps that is why he felt justified in making clever remarks to the waitresses, which they were puzzled to know how to answer. One day however, the smallest and timidest girl happened to be serving this irritating customer, and it fell to her to make him in kind:

"I'll have some steak," he said coming in late for dinner, "and some squash, and some—Got some baked potatoes, fine, brown baked potatoes?"

"Baked potatoes are all over," said the girl.

He leaned back in his chair and gazed at her quizzically.

"Baked potatoes all over, are they?" he replied. "All over what?"

"With," she replied, simply.—Youth's Companion.

BIG RALLY OF FORESTERS

Supreme Chief Ranger Stevenson Greeted by a Large Crowd Here.

HE SINGS ORDER'S PRAISES.

Plainfielders and Many from this Section Hear What Fraternal Organization Has Accomplished.

Supreme Chief Ranger Elliott G. Stevenson, of the Independent Order of Foresters, of Detroit, was enthusiastically greeted by an audience that filled the Plainfield theatre from pit to dome last night. The occasion was in the nature of a reception tendered to Dr. Stevenson under the auspices of Court Plainfield, 1144 and Court Watchung 3871, I. O. F., of this city. It was one of the largest fraternal gatherings in the history of the city and in the audience were visiting Foresters from Raritan, Somerville, Bound Brook, Dunellen, South Plainfield, Westfield and Elizabeth.

In the principal address of the evening Chief Ranger Stevenson expolited the objects and the past history of the order in a manner which commanded the closest attention of his hearers. Dwelling on the history of the Foresters, he referred to the organization in Newark in 1874 with an enrollment of 400 members. He cited the rapid growth in all parts of the United States and Canada by declaring that the great membership has reached the quarter million mark. In New Jersey he stated that the membership has reached the 12,000 mark.

The speaker called the attention of his hearers to the fact that the order has paid $29,000,000 in death benefits since its inception and that it has on hand a surplus fund of more than $15,000,000. In this connection the speaker said:

"There are chronic kickers in all orders, the Foresters no exception. There are Foresters who want to know about our large surplus, and how it is obtained. If these members will take the trouble to read last year's report of the Supreme Court they will see that $666,000 in interest was earned on investments made by the Supreme Court."

The Orphan's Home was also extolled by the speaker. He referred to the successful operation of the home situated at Oakdale, Canada, which is maintained by taking one cent each month from the regular court dues paid by each member, aggregating about $30,000 a year. That fund, he declared, provides for the care and education of children of deceased Foresters. Fifty children, he said, are now being cared for in the institution.

A feature of the Orphan's fund, explained the speaker, is that mothers are not obliged to send their children to the institution in case of the death of the father. Such being the case the lodge has created a fund for the payment of one dollar monthly for each child to widows for the purpose of educating their children and bringing them up in the home.

The tuberculosis sanitarium at Rainbow Lake, in the heart of the Adirondack mountains, which is conducted by the Supreme Court was also referred to by the speaker. He said that the sanitarium is fully equipped for the treatment of members afflicted with tuberculosis in its incipient stage.

In his address Dr. Stevenson paid a high tribute to Dr. O. orlyatekha, the late supreme chief of the order, who died several years ago at Toronto. He told how that noted Indian studied medicine, but gave up his profession an took up the work of organizing the Foresters, simply because of his love for his fellow men.

The speaker congratulated the two local lodges on their rapid growth and advancement. Court Plainfield was organized eighteen years ago and Court Watchung is the outgrowth of the pioneer court. The total membership in this city is now about 600 members.

Presiding over the meeting was F. T. Dickerson. Dr. Marc L. Clawson was chairman of the joint committee which was composed of members of the court as follows: John M. Lewis, Charles S. Hoyt, Frank E. Woodruff, A. M. Vanderbeek, George E. Volk, Edward J. McCue, John Casey, Joseph E. Kelly, Henry Hansen and Dr. A. K. Brennan.

In addition to the speechmaking the audience was entertained by several selections by the Lotus Glee Club and monologues by a New York comedian.

What He Wanted.

A commuter hurried into a hardware store on his way to the train one frosty night.

"Here," he called to the clerk; "I've only got a minute. I want to get a porn copper."

"What?" asked the clerk.

"A porn copper."

"Ha, ha!" laughed the clerk. "I guess you mean a con porper, don't you?"

"No, I don't. I mean a pon corper you chucklehead. But I can't get it now because my train is due."

"Silly ass," murmured the clerk, after he had gone; "couldn't say pop corner."—Metropolitan Magazine.

MISS SARAH BILYEAU NOW MRS. WEIGMANN

Miss Sarah Frances Bilyeu, daughter of Clarence Bilyeu, of 309 Somerset street, and Charles Hugo Francis Weigmann, of the same address, were married at 8 o'clock Thursday night by Rev. Ora J. Shoop, pastor of Grace M. E. church. The ceremony was performed at the residence of the officiating minister. Miss Frances E. Breakey, of Stone street, the borough, was the only attendant.

The wedding was a quiet one owing to the illness of the bride's father. Sometime ago he fell off a ladder and received severe injuries and he does not improve. He is still at Muhlenberg Hospital under treatment.

The groom is employed in this city as a machinist. He is the son of the late Hugo Weigmann and Mrs. Emma Weigmann. Both he and the bride are well-known and have a large number of friends. They will reside on West Front street, this city.

"RAT" IN GIRL'S HAIR ACTED AS A CUSHION.

While exercising on some rings in the rooms of the Warren County Athletic Club Wednesday night, Miss Lila Rapp fell to the floor. She landed on her head and had it not been for a "rat" she was wearing in her hair it is the opinion of the attending physician that her injuries would have been severe. As it is Miss Rapp has a strained back. She was unconscious for about two hours, but she is expected to be out again in a few days.

The young woman, who is about sixteen years old, is the daughter of Howard Rapp, and last night she went to the hall to rehearse in the chorus for the coming entertainment for the benefit of the Washington Baseball Club. During the evening she exercised on the rings. She was swinging in the air when she lost her hold and fell heavily to the floor. When picked up she was unconscious. Dr. T. S. Dedrick examined the young woman and ordered her removed to her home, where she was put to bed.

Real Estate News.

The five apartments and two stores being built by Alexander Kane on East Third street will in all probability be ready for occupancy by April 1. Johnson Brothers are the general contractors for the houses; Caulfield & Son did the mason work; Frank W. Houseman, the plumbing, and the agent is John P. Emmons.

Guests at N. Y. U. Banquet.

Winfield S. Angleman and Asa F. Randolph, of this city, were among the guests at the annual banquet of the New York University Law School held at the Astor. Mayor Gaynor, of New York and Governor Franklin Fort were among the speakers and other guests included several members of the New Jersey bench, as well as lawyers and jurists from Maryland, Pennsylvania, Connecticut and Missouri.

Bought South Plainfield Hotel.

Charles Thornton, who sold out his hotel business at New Market last fall to John Harkins, has purchased the hotel in South Plainfield, formerly conducted by Morris Higgins. Mr. Thornton will start his new business April 1.

Jeffery Nominated.

The society of "Our Men," Circles on the Square, at the meeting in the Lyceum at Berkeley Heights nominated the following men for school committee: William Jeffery, Frank C. Shaffer, Charles Springsteen and Simon P. Debbie.

A Chicken Suggestion.

Fricasseed chicken, or chicken to be used as salad, is much better if cooked a day before it is to be served. Let the meat remain in the liquor until ready to use. The chicken will absorb much of the flavor of the juice and will be that much tastier.

Tape Measure Cases.

Never have tape measures been offered in greater variety or in more attractive cases than now. As a result the wise woman is making a selection and putting these trifles away for Christmas gifts. One may find the line of tape measures coiled in gilt cases representing a cat, an owl, a watering pot, a lighthouse, a bird cage, a piano and a slipper.

An Enthusiast.

"Well, I did my Christmas shopping early."

"What of it?"

"Oh, I am so pleased with the results that I'm going to order my Easter hat right now."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Plain Field Notes and Queeries

By Druid

Already the sound of the Hunter's horn is heard in the land. The heralds are blowing their triumpets, the tin whistle brigade are tooting in Newspaper Row, and a thundering row it will be when Hero comes galloping home. How we thrilled when Bill was billed to bring us his Indian show! It was great in every way, but the Wild West will was tame despite its brilliant boss's Buffalo Billity when the mighty Pot Shot scatterer returns to exhibit his mammoth trophies from the Still Wilder East.

"Say, what went ye forth to see?"
"The glories of Nature in Afrikee,"
"Wild, that we sweet thoughts your heart must thrill."
"O pshaw! I went for a jolly good kill."

* * *

Talking of the Wild West circus recalls a delicious hour in the company of a Wild Man of the Woolly West when this kind of show was new. His private entertainment surpassed the tented scenes in hair-raising power; he might have made a million dollars if he had built a hall for bald-headed audiences who had tried all the advertised restorers in vain. One feels sprouts even at this distance of time when thinking of that glorious recital of adventures. This is how it shaped itself in the note book which records memorable interviews.

King of the Cowboys am I!
Heroic and tough, but shy;
When I draw the long bow
You may bet it's just so,
For I can't tell a lie if I try.

Do you know how I got my long hair?
I just scalped the tail of my mare,
Stuck 'em in by the root,
Manured 'em with soot,
And they grew like wild oats, I swear.

When the buffaloes see me around,
They lay their backs flat on the ground
And say, "Come on, Bill,
Have a deelightful kill,
As it's you we won't make any sound."

I once shot a rattlesnail rat,
As big as a bullock and fat,
I landed him dead
As he leapt o'er my head;
I'd a narrow escape at that.

I was swimming across a small creek,
It took me more than a week,
One evening near dark
Out popped a great shark,
It popped back when it saw my cheek.

A thunderstorm burst from the sky,
My horse wouldn't shelter so I
Made a hole in his hide,
Crept right inside,
And ever since then I've been dry.

Once I got fifty shots in my breast,
They all dropped down in my chest,
When I sneeze they all rattle
And scare all the cattle—
But that's nothing to us in the West!

We noticed the giving of a reception in honour of a coloured cook the other day. A pretty turn of the table is just reported from somewhere unnamed (after the slovenly fashion of so much reporting in the Gothamite journals). Anna Grey had been employed in the family of the Rev. Thornton M. Niven for thirty-two years, and had saved $15,000 She died, and leaves $5,000 to members of the family, besides legacies of $1,000 each to these Presbyterian societies: For the relief of Destitute Ministers, for the Women's Foreign Mission Board, and for Home Missions work. Brethren and sisters, the text shows, firstly, that it pays to be kind to the unco guid and missisis; secondly, that it pays morally to be kinder to our servants, whether they work in the kitchen or pulpit; thirdly, that it sometimes pays in ready cash. Blessed thought!

* * *

A trifle, but worth a passing note. The Dramatic Mirror of this week uses a headline, "Answers to 'Queer-ies'" quoting the split word, but not the Plainfield Press. This half way acknowledgment is howsever, exceptionally unanimous and deserves this tribute. Among queeries of this kind is this one, "Things to Think About," a heading this pen wrote offhand some dozen or more years ago over a weekly chat in a paper not only by one section of the public. By and by it appeared in the Chicago Journal or American, then in a New York daily; for a few years the Sunday Tribune has used it, and now it has the honour of being offered to the New York Evening Post for regular use. Thus may a modest bee, the Plainfield Press, make honey which its predatory neighbours delight to eat, without price or a condescending nod. And not honey headings only.

* * *

In the good old days which many good young folk believe never were, there was one distinctly good and useful custom which it would be well to revive. Churches had what were called Young Men's Mutual Improvement societies. Youths in their teens and men in their forties formed these weekly gatherings in one of the church rooms, and occasionally in a hall for the outer public, on the model of a debating society but not to encourage speaking so much as thinking. They were young fellows in the main who were now out of school and in the world, who scanned the daily paper not for "comic" or police or dress fashion stuff, but to get just enough general understanding of the subjects they heard discussed by men and women of intelligence, at table in the home, in their places of business, in public meetings and from the pulpit, in the cars, in the streets, and in their country walks. They wanted to keep up to date.

* * *

Officers and committees were chosen from all ages impartially. Topics were listed, all free to suggest one, and each week the subject for the next meeting was decided by the majority. A member was appointed to read a fifteen or twenty minutes essay on the subject, which would be, say, the national policy of the day in its larger aspect, not party politics; or the book of the hour, or a theological or ecclesiastical question, in fact no subject was excluded which touched the various points of view and the discussion of which would enlarge our own views and inspire us to do our own thinking. We found it easy to make fools of ourselves on any subject if we rashly threw out our shallowness in our eagerness to "speak." But these blunders are the making of a sincere and plucky youngster. There is nothing to be ashamed of in honest failures.

* * *

Where young fellows grow up on this food it is noticeable that the general talk overheard in cars is of the solid questions which everyone simply must be able to converse upon with strangers if he pretends to be intelligent and wide awake. The habit makes for a stronger type of manhood than the talk which seems tied to faction politics, sports, jokes, styles, trials and childish twaddle.

A GOOD LISTENER.

Be a good listener. If you can't talk, listen. Don't chatter. Guests have been "bidden forth" to dine for their listening propensities alone. The cautious hostess has a veritable Charm Lamb in her appreciation of ears. They are valuable appendages cultivated by those who only jabber when they talk.

We can't all talk; to some of us it is almost physically impossible to get even one single word in company. We may be entertaining enough to ourselves, but let something definite in the way of conversation be expected of us in an assemblage and we throw up our hands.

It's only a form of stage fright, this. We could perfectly well enter into the argument that's going round the festive board if something would only let us, but fear, the monster, holds us in his grip.

Enforced silence draws one inward and the tongue cleaves to the roof of the mouth; the very lips are sealed. All the air about one seems a pained witness to one's discomfort. Everything has gotten alive and taken on a critical attitude, but it is entirely silent while it thinks of you—only you—and not another living, breathing, soul. But if you keep on letting the quiet thicken around you, it's going to get very dense indeed.

Break the spell anyhow, but better still, prevent it from settling over you. Learn the interested listener part and you won't be in the centre of the stage enough to fluster you.

SCENT LOCKETS.

Very long chains which are worn by many women require some bauble or locket to complete their line, which generally reaches below the waist.

A thoughtful jeweler, always on the alert, has harked back to the early Victorian woman who was addicted to swooning, and there is a modern adaptation of the vinaigrette used at that time.

This is in the form of a locket with a small centre of openwork gold, silverware or enamel, and a rim of jewels is used to give brilliancy to this novelty.

Concentrated perfume is concealed in the centre of the locket, behind the grille, and with each swaying of the chain a delightful, faint perfume emanates from the unsuspected holder of scent.

Collarless Gowns.

The semi-decollete frock of last year is well established this season. America has accepted it with universal approval as the correct compromise between the street and full evening wear. It may be slightly V shaped in front, but it must show a little below the line of the neck for beauty's sake. It can be three inches low for afternoon house affairs; for indoor wear in the evening the opening at the neck is much more pronounced. This is the gown to be worn with a picture hat. It is so attractive and so commonly accepted now that the high necked frock is entirely disappearing.

A Veteran Sea Captain.

The Westerly (R. I.) Sun tells of a recent visit in that place of Captain J. Warren Holmes, a veteran sea captain, of Mystic, Conn. Captain Holmes is now 84 years old, but is hale and hearty. He has the distinction of holding the world's record for trips around Cape Horn. During the time he was on the high sea he rounded Cape Horn eighty-three times and Cape of Good Hope fourteen times.

JERSEY'S REPUBLIC SOON TO BE OPENED

That the New Jersey George Junior Republic at Flemington Junction will be opened on March 22 was announced as a certainty at a meeting of the Civic Club, of Roselle, yesterday afternoon. Although the new superintendent has not been definitely named, his appointment is sure to come within a very few days, and following that will be the immediate commencement of work in the institution, which will be ready for "citizens" at once.

William R. George, founder of the George Junior Republic system was to have addressed the Clio Club yesterday, but owing to illness in his family was unable to be present, and sent in his place Wm. Van Gale, a former "citizen," to speak on the Freeville Republic, after which the republic at Flemington Junction is to be directly modeled. Mr. Gute was for eight years a "citizen" in Freeville, and then entered the law school at Cornell University, and for two years Freeville has he studied for two and one-half years, after which he returned to the republic as an assistant to Mr. Gorge.

He told of the conditions which first brought about this remarkable organization. The George Junior Republic is not the result of any cut and dried plan; it "just grew." In 1889 William George took to the village of Freeville fifty "fresh air" boys and girls. Within the next five years this number grew to 250. There these little people spent a joyous two weeks, at the end of which one squad was returned and another was sent on all through the summer months. A tract of land consisting of 200 acres on which had been situated the camp of these fresh air children, was bought by Mr. George by the Lehigh Valley Railroad, which has given the land for the New Jersey Republic with the understanding that he should establish thereon a permanent home for incorrigible boys and girls, such as he had been laboring with in his work through the summer months.

New System Established.

In the summer of 1894, when the fresh air youngsters arrived, they found a changed program. In other years the two weeks spent there had been a delightful holiday, but not so now. Every boy who was strong and able was given a pick or a shovel and put to work. Certain hours of every day were devoted to work and a few hours to sports invariably followed. Out of this first work, done by unaccustomed hands, which was too often unwilling hands, has grown the present republic, a little community on the east hill of the village of Freeville.

At the present time the republic owns 350 acres of land and comprises thirty cottages, with several being erected and a plan to have forty buildings before another winter. Among these are ten cottages, a chapel, schoolhouse, jail buildings, printing shop, plumbing shop, carpenter and furniture shop, bakery, steam laundry, hospital, general store and farm building.

The purpose of the institution is "to prevent crime, to develop character and to promote good citizenship." When the republic was first organized it consisted only of boys and girls from slum districts, but gradually it has undergone much change and of the 135 "citizens" at Freeville today, seventy of whom are boys, there are many who come from homes of wealth, culture and refinement; children who have been inclined to be wayward and becoming ungovernable, and to whom the motto of the republic "Nothing Without Labor" is the hardest proposition of the institution. The "citizens" have a currency of their own—aluminum —equivalent in value at the republic store to the American money. Every coin bears the words "Nothing Without Labor," and the prevailing principle of the institution is kept constantly before the "citizens."

On entering the institution a citizen is permitted to choose his own boarding house, boys and girls having separate cottages. He then chooses the work he prefers to do. Every citizen must work five hours and attend school five hours on five days of the week with a Saturday holiday.

One very important step for the "citizen" is to become familiar with the laws which govern the republic. Step by step a system of self government was established, and it has worked like a charm. The first ruling officers were adults, hired for the work, but the boys and girls rebelled, and in 1895 the edict went forth that they should elect their officers from among themselves.

From that time all laws have been made by the "citizens" and passed upon at the town meetings, held monthly. The laws are strictly enforced by officers elected from their number. The government officers consist of a president, vice-president, secretary of state, secretary of the treasury, a boy district attorney, (these officers comprising the president's cabinet), a girl district attorney, boys' judge, girls' judge, police officers, prison keepers and a board of health. Having equal privileges both boys and girls pay poll taxes.

No court or public officer can commit a boy or girl to the republic, as it is a private institution, receiving no State funds excepting for the school. But there are cases where boys or girls are received through suspended sentence or on probation. In these cases contracts are usually made with city or county officers, in which they agree to pay a certain portion of the expense. Where children's parents are unable to pay board the Republic Association assumes the responsibility and draws its funds from voluntary subscriptions.

There have been many instances where boys, unruly and seemingly incorrigible at home, have gone to the republic and developed into the best citizens and excelled in their trade. The trades pay from $2.75 to $4 a week.

The largest department of work for the boys is that of the farm, 175 acres being under cultivation at present. The work of the printery is publishing their odwn weekly paper and a monthly paper for a high school in a nearby city. They handle quite and amount of job work for outsiders.

The carpentry department works in erecting the buildings of the republic, and also makes mission furniture. The plumbing department has installed the heating apparatus in all buildings heated. Boys are taught the work thoroughly.

The bakery department is in a well-equipped building where they make crackers, cookies, bread, pies and cakes, having a big trade in nearby cities.

OFFICE BOY'S PHILOSOPHY.

"If you save money, you're a grouch; If you spend it, you're a loafer; If you get it, you're a grafter; If you don't get it, you're a bum— So what's teh's the use?"

The final quintrain tells the whole story—it is the querulous refrain of thousands of persons who are continually sitting in judgment upon their neighbors, and who complain that the world is hard and are likely always to find it so. What if a few cowardly, discontented people or a few riters who ought to have nobler ambitions, and who might well place their views of life and of human wisdom on a higher plane mumble this thought or that? Of course we must have the evil with the good, pain with pleasure, danger with victory, weariness and exposure with enterprising and successful adventure. Who cares for water when he is not thirsty, or what is more precious than the crystal spring when the lips are parched and the heart fainting with thirst? How one remembers the rough fare that came after deprivation and fatigue, and the dreamless delicious sleep that followed upon utter weariness of body!

Wake up, O dolorous office boy! Tear up your bogus philosophy and "forget it." It will never bring you courage, manliness, truth, honesty, love, cheerfulness, health or success. It is of the breed of half-truths which are ten times more dangerous than whole-cloth lies—"a lie that is half a truth is ever the worst of lies."

There are great evils, misfortunes, dangers, injustice, oppression, in this mortal life, which we are bound to do our part to lessen and abolish, if we can, and to endure manfully if we must. Many more and much greater calamities and sufferings have been endured for us by men and women whose very names are forgotten—those who but died that we might be free in body and mind, in word and deed. But the office boy, who can never hope to rise to the full measure of a man, can accept your moping inconsolate "philosophy of life," and saying, "So what 'tell's the use," stroke the features of the cynic or the minister of wine, which delighted our old poet Omar Khayyam, or strike the Dutch bartender for "liger and pretzels," and become a mere cipher in the splendid sum of human achievement in our day and generation.—National Magazine.

CHILD'S SUCCESS IN PLAY.

The child that is constantly disappointed in his play enterprises, making a failure of his dreamed play dreams day after day, receiving no sympathy from those responsible for his welfare and no help in overcoming obstacles too great for him, soon loses confidence in himself; the spirit of venture dies out and he falls into the habit of making a failure of what he undertakes, and thus prepares the way for abortive efforts in the more serious ventures of later life. To succeed in building snow forts, in making kites and sailboats, in coasting the hill, in skating, swimming, and climbing trees, in dressing dolls and training pets—all such achievements prophesy success in the important endeavors of later life. The culture which the adult is measured by the play experienced of the child. The boy is father to the man.

Pretty Curtains.

The prettiest curtains imaginable may be made from unbleached cotton or muslin. They may be simply be feather stitched or cat stitched at the hems, or if you have time buy some plain colored gingham and cut a pretty conventional design from it and stitch it on about an inch at the bottom. A design of generalums in bright red gingham would be effective, especially if a pretty red tablecloth is spread on the table when it is not in use.

YEGGMEN ARE THWARTED

Drill Safe in Leo Slonim's Jewelry Store, But Attempt at Burglary Discovered.

SIX HOLES IN STRONG BOX.

Mode of Access to Store a Mystery —$10,000 in Money and Jewelry in Jeopardy.

Just too late to work their plan and a carelessness in leaving a mark on the side made the robbing of Leo Slonim, a West Front street jeweler, an impossibility Saturday night. But it was a close squeeze. Mr. Slonim had just closed the door of the safe, when he noticed a long scratch on the side that had escaped previous notice. Closer examination showed six holes drilled into the side of the big iron box, five of which had penetrated clear through, and it was evident that preparations had been made to dynamite the safe for the purpose of robbery.

Mr. Slonim notified the police and upon their arrival a thorough search of the premises was made. No burglars were discovered. It is quite likely that they forced an entrance through the trap door from the cellar as there is no possible place of ingress except through the front door. Mr. Slonim thinks the work of the would-be yeggmen was accomplished sometime during the previous night and that before the safe tappers could make their final preparations they were frightened away.

Two or three years ago Mr. Slonim was held up by a couple of men at the point of a revolver and at that time was robbed of several hundred dollars worth of jewelry and diamonds. He was made doubly nervous from the fact that one of his friends in Syracuse, N. Y., was recently robbed and in consequence was ruined and went crazy. Extra precautions will be taken in the future to guard this store as well as others in the city as it is becoming known that yeggmen are giving their attention to our business houses.

GAVE AN OBJECT LESSON ON SABBATH OBSERVANCE

Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, introduced an attractive method in the education of the children of the congregation Sunday morning, impressing the boys and girls the value and holiness of the Sabbath by means of object lessons. A five minutes' talk immediately after the sermon especially for the children served the purpose of interesting them as well as the adult members of the church.

Taking a spiral spring, some books two handkerchiefs and a disabled clock Pastor Goodrich showed the children what each one stood for in his talk. The spiral spring that will wear on man with the week's work and how the Sabbath was especially designed to put new life in everyone who is busy during the six working days. The handkerchiefs one soiled and the other spotlessly clean served to illustrate how the one soiled may be cleansed on the Sabbath. The clock was used to show how necessary it is for one to be regulated every so often, making the Sabbath the day for the purpose.

In the evening some excellent stereopticon views were shown and a short talk given on the various nationalities which come to this country.

On Friday last the Junior Endeavor Society of this church enjoyed a spocksbox party which the Japanese game of troka-troka was played. Other games helped to pass a very pleasant afternoon. Ruth Fuller won the spoon contest and Henry Brandt the peanut hunt. Refreshments were served by the following committee: Helen Wyckoff, Florence Nelson and Elizabeth Martin. To Carter L. Goodrich, the president of the junior society is due great credit for its flourishing condition.

MISS VERA NELSON NOW MRS. FRANK CHAPMAN.

Miss Vera Nelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank O. Nelson, of New Market, was married Saturday at noon, to Frank Chapman, of Dunellen. The ceremony was performed at the home of her parents by the Rev. George H. Gardner, pastor of the First Baptist church, of New Market, in the presence of the immediate relatives of the couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Chapman took an afternoon train for Toronto, Canada, where they will spend their honeymoon. They will reside in Dunellen. Mr. Chapman is an engineer in the employ of the Ransome Concrete Manufacturing Company.

First Visit in Twenty Years.

James McVoy, of the Eastern Bottling Company, has returned home after a six weeks' visit at his old home in Ireland. He arrived in New York on the Cunard Liner Lusitania, Saturday. He reports having had a fine trip. This was his first visit home in twenty years.

MISS BLOODGOOD'S BODY WAS FOUND IN A LAKE

The finding of the body of Miss Helen Bloodgood in Lake Carasaljo, Lakewood on Saturday came as a great shock to the friends of the young woman in this city. Up until the time of the finding of the corpse the family had been hoping against hope that Miss Bloodgood had been sheltered by some kindly farmer's wife and that she would soon be found. She was the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Van Boskerck, of West Seventh street, and had many warm friends here.

The long search and suspense have resulted in the prostration of Mrs. Bloodgood and it is said she is on the verge of nervous collapse. The body was found by Herbert Doughty and William Rendel, who had been dragging the lake for hours. The two men believed that the bloodhounds who had traced the scent to the borders of the lake and then lost it had solved the problem of the disappearance of Miss Bloodgood. This theory proved correct. The funeral will be private.

LONG MISSING BROTHER DIED AT RED BANK

David Roberts, aged sixty years a farmer, who disappeared from his home at Martinsville, Monmouth county, died on Thursday last at his home near Red Bank, and through the information given by him just before he passed away his relatives at Martinsville learned of his whereabouts. The funeral service was held Saturday afternoon at Red Bank and the burial was at that place.

The death of Mr. Roberts reveals rather a strane story. Eighteen years ago he had a quarrel with members of the family at Martinsville and in a fit of anger said he was going away, never again to bother his people. Ten years passed before any word of the man was heard. He was then said to be living in South Jersey.

Again all trace of the man was lost and he was not heard of again until his death on Thursday. He had purchased a small farm at Red Bank and spent his last days there. Just before he died he was asked whether he had any relatives. He said that he had a brother, John Roberts, at Bound Brook. The authorities at Red Bank communicated with Chief of Police Flammer, of Bound Brook, who knowing of the family at once communicated with John Roberts at Martinsville. In this way the latter learned of his brother's whereabouts and he went to Red Bank and identified him.

The dead man also left a nephew, John Roberts, of Duer street, the borough.

Among his effects there was found deeds for property in Florida, but it is not known at present whether he still owns the land or not. This will be investigated. Unless he does own property in Florida, his effects will not amount to a great deal.

DRUNKEN MAN PUT WIFE OUT OF HOME

Robert Moore, of 244 East Third street, was arrested Sunday morning on complaint of his wife who accused him of puting her out of the house. Moore was drunk on Saturday night and brought home with him a pal named Kelly, a resident of Dunellen. Moore and Kelly began drinking again early Sunday morning, having brought rum home the night before. While Mrs Moore was engaged getting breakfast, her husband threw a cigarette stump into the pot of boiling potatoes and when Mrs. Moore objected Moore ejected her from the house.

She went to police headquarters and complained to Chief Kiely, who had Moore brought in and locked up.

Monday Moore said he had no recollection of what had transpired the previous night, and as a matter of fact hardly remembered putting his wife outdoors Sunday. The couple have four children and have been married ten years and their only trouble during their married life has been the husband's drinking habits. After hearing the story, Judge Runyon with the wife's consent gave Moore a chance to go out and behave himself as a man and exacted a promise from him of future abstinence from liquor.

Jeffery, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Smith and Mrs Anna D. Conrad.

ELIZABETH UNITED LOST

Plainfield Association Won Interesting Game on the Clinton Ave. Grounds.

THE SCORE WAS SIX TO TWO.

Visitors Made First Point—Spalding's Great Shot—Hosie and Braidwood Did Good Work —The Lineups.

The Plainfield Association Football Club defeated the Elizabeth United on the Clinton Avenue grounds Saturday afternoon by a score of 6 to 2 in a fast and exciting game. The visitors in starting the game made a rush on the home goal and succeeded in taking the first point inside of six minutes from the start. The home team played easily for the first quarter of an hour, when they broke away and secured the equalizing point, from Braidwood. For the remainder of the first half the play was mainly around mid-field and half time was called with a score of one goal each.

On resuming the game the home team settled right down, and some fine football was witnessed. During a bombardment of the visitors' end, Bennett secured the second goal for the home team. This put some spirit in the Elizabeth eleven and they took the equalizing point again. The home team looked good to win at this point, for they simply surrounded the visitors' goal and had hard luck in scoring often.

A run down field by the Plainfield boys and a great cross shot from Spalding put the home boys one goal up and in less than five minutes Spalding took one more point, making four to all. The visitors now seemed all in, for a in a few minutes a fine corner kick from Spalding was put through by Hosie. This made the score 5 against 2. The visitors made two more breaks to get away, but were brought up at mid-field and in a close scrimmage, Braidwood put in a shot like a cannon ball from the thirty yard mark, which made the sixth goal. No more scoring resulted and the game ended 6 to 2 in favor of Plainfield. The lineup:

TWO LOCAL ATHLETES IN Y. M. C. A. STATE MEET

John Payne and Russell Miller were the only local Y. M. C. A. athletes to compete in the State championships at Paterson on Saturday night despite the fact that Plainfield won the championship last year.

Payne maintained his reputation by finishing second in the twelve-pound shot putting contest, the winner of the event being C. Glaser, of Paterson, with a throw of 43 feet 2 inches.

Russell Miller distinguished himself by winning the quarter mile potato race in 1 minute 46 seconds.

Paterson won the championship with a total of 703 points: Elizabeth finished in second place and Montclair was third.

The estate consists of $10,000 in bonds and mortgages and is equally divided among four children and one grandson. The children are Mrs. Henry Eggert, Mrs. Newton B. Smalley, John Becker and Fred Becker. George Becker, the grandson, is bequeathed the share of his father, who died about five years ago.

CO. K TO PARTICIPATE IN WAR MANEUVERS

Co. K. of this city, will be among the companies of the Second Regiment, which with the Third Regiment, N. G. N. J., will take part in the war maneuvers of the United States Army to be held in July at a place to be selected in Pennsylvania, Maryland or Virginia. Adjutant-General Sadler has received word to that effect.

The expenses of the encampment, so far as the National Guard is concerned, will be borne by the Federal Government out of the fund set aside for military instruction to the militia of the various States.

All branches of the regular army will be represented in the encampment, including cavalry, infantry, artillery, engineers, signal corps and hospital corps. Brigadier-General Dennis F. Collins will be in command of the two New Jersey regiments. Colonel John A. Mather, of Camden, will have charge of the Third Regiment and Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan, of Somerville, will lead the Second Regiment. It is expected that the National Guard of Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia will also be represented.

MONDAY MORNING IN THE BOROUGH COURT

Recorder Dolliver had his hands full in the borough court this morning in disposing of several cases, the borough treasury being enriched to the extent of several dollars. When the bill of Chief Weiss, for feeding the prisoners is presented, however, the day's results will show a deficit.

Charles Messler, a regular in the "D and D brigade," fell by the wayside on Saturday night. The frolic cost him $2.

Henry Rosenbaum, who was charged with peddling without a license, explained the situation satisfactorily to Recorder Dolliver. Sentence was suspended.

Frank Pinn, who pleaded not guilty last week to the charge of collecting junk without a license, retracted the pleas to one of guilty. As it was his first offense sentence was suspended.

Thomas Brennan, of Dunellen, loaded down with a good-sized jag, with a gallon jug of whiskey for ballast, was arrested on Saturday night. Sentence in Brennan's case was suspended.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. DANIEL C. DAVIS

The funeral of Mrs. Daniel C. Davis was held at 11 o'clock Monday morning from the First Presbyterian church, of which she was a member for many years. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends, including many members of the church who had known Mrs. Davis for years.

Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the church, officiated and he spoke words of eulogy concerning the exemplary Christian life of Mrs. Davis; of her devotion to her home and family and her church. During the service a quartet comprising Miss Rita Hart, soprano; Mrs. Grace Carroll, contralto; Elmer C. Runyon, tenor, and David E. Titsworth, sang "Lead, Kindly Light," "He Giveth His Beloved Sleep," and "Crossing the Bar."

COMPANY K'S FAIR NETTED OVER $500.

Company K's fair and bazaar came to a close Saturday night in a blaze of glory and with the largest attendance that ever gathered in the armory. It is estimated that over 800 people were in the hall at 10 o'clock. In fact the crowds made dancing rather uncomfortable in the early part of the evening.

From a financial standpoint the fair was the most successful in the company's history, more than five hundred dollars being added to the treasury.

One of the things demonstrated by this fair is the absolute need of an armory in this city where the company will have ample room for its various functions. Social life is one of the very necessary adjuncts of a military organization such as we have here, so the men say, and for lack of conveniences there is likely to be a diminution rather than an increase in the interests of the organization. Every member of Company K would like to see a building of suitable proportions erected for their use.

Auto Strikes Bike.

A collision between an automobile and a bicycle in which the damage was slight and the blame was mutual occurred Saturday afternoon at 5:40 near the corner of Park and North avenues. Alexander Gromet, of Woodland avenue, in an automobile, and J. Herbert Freeman, of 1280 Park avenue, on a bicycle, were the men involved. Apologies mended all the damage.

SAVONAROLA EULOGIZED

Rev. Ernest O. Brown, of Dunellen, Tells of the Spanish Priest's Work.

STOOD FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS.

Clergy Arrayed Against Injustice Must Present Solid Front, Mr. Brown Says.

"The Church today needs more Gideons and Savonarolas to combat the forces of unrighteousness," declared Rev. Ernest O. Brown in his sermon in the Presbyterian church at Dunellen Sunday. Mr. Brown took the life and character of Gideon as the theme for his discourse, and in the course of his remarks he made reference to the local option and open Sunday measure now before the Legislature.

In referring to the latter measure Mr. Brown said in part: "The church today is confronted with a big problem. There are people who are at work trying to destroy the Sabbath, the greatest of all American institutions. I was amazed on my visit to the State House at Trenton a couple of weeks ago to see on one side a large delegation of representatives of the churches advocating the cause of righteousness, and on the other side an equally large delegation of advocates representing the cause of unrighteousness.

"It is up to the church people to unite and present a solid front at all times and if we do that the cause of righteousness will always prevail.

"When one enters the Catholic church, one of the first heroes of that faith he becomes acquainted with is Savonarola, the Spanish priest of centuries ago. This great man was born in knighthood; when he was taken ill he consecrated himself to the church and promised his Maker that if his life was spared he would do all in his power to advance the cause of Christianity.

"Savonarola's life was spared and he kept his pledge. He made good by visiting the city of Florence and transforming it from a place of sin to a city of righteousness. Savonarola was a noble man, a true Christian, and the Church today needs more Savonarolas and Gideons."

DEATH SUMMONS DR. OLIVER R. KING

Dr. Oliver R. King, who had been a resident of this city for twenty-five years, died at 6:30 Sunday night at his home, 214 Putnam avenue, of heart trouble, with which he had been afflicted for some time. He was graduated from Princeton University and the Columbia Medical College, after which he practiced medicine in New York for about seventeen years, when he retired and removed to this city.

Dr. King lived a quiet life here and took no active part in city affairs. He attended the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. He was twice married. His second wife who was Mrs. Thomas R. Mead, whom he married in 1908, together with a niece, Mrs. H. V. Condiet, of Montclair, survives.

MISS MAY STRYKER GOES TO HER REWARD

Miss May Stryker, aged nineteen years, died at 216 Park avenue Saturday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey VanPelt, of Morris street, after a lingering illness. A year ago she underwent treatment in Muhlenberg Hospital and apparently was much improved. A few months ago she suffered a relapse and grew rapidly worse.

Miss Stryker was born at Harrison, N. J., June, 30, 1891. Her mother died when she was an infant and she was adopted by her uncle, Isaac B. Stryker, formerly of this city, but later of Centreville and now of Somerville. She was a member of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, and possessed a sweet Christian character.

An Art Exhibition.

Mrs. C. E. Newman's exhibition of paintings in the parlors of the Young Men's Christian Association on Friday and Saturday nights drew a large attendance, upward of three hundred persons taking advantage of the opportunity of viewing some fine canvasses. There were landscapes, pastoral scenes, seaside views and a splendid marine picture. Mrs. Newman has demonstrated in this collection a versitility and courage deserving of the highest commendation.

Miss Anna L. Case, soprano, and Miss Grace Carroll, contralto, the latter of this city, will be among the soloists at the concert to be given at Bound Brook on either April 15 or 22, by the Choral Society of that place. The society will sing the "Rose Maiden."

PASTOR BROEK TELLS OF THE ANGELS IN HEAVEN

"Angels in Heaven," was the theme of an interesting discourse given by Rev. J. Y. Broek, at Trinity Reformed church, Sunday. It was the last in a series of sermons on "Heaven," and made a fitting close to these talks. The text was taken from Psalm 34:7: "The Angel of the Lord Encampeth Around About That Fear Him, and Delivereth Them." In part Mr. Broek said:

"We believe that there is a body of spirits called angels. We cannot tell when they were created, but we infer from Scripture that they were in existence before man and were witnesses to the creation. The appearance of angels is always represented as very glorious. They are clothed with perennial youth.

"Celebrated painters and most people imagine that angels have wings. We cannot find any authority for saying that the Bible teaches this fact. No mention of wings is related in the Bible. Two passages state that angels 'fly swiftly.' These passages simply imply that angels travel very rapidly.

"The number of angels must be very great. They are represented in Scripture as being 'thousand thousands, and ten thousand times ten thousand.' Jesus speaks of calling twelve legion of angels.

"Angels are the servants of God who do the deeds of God. One of their duties is to take care of God's children. They are the instruments of good to God's people. It is a most blessed thought that whether we wake or sleep angels are continually watching and guarding us. Some maintain that there is a guardian angel for each believer. We have often been puzzled how to account for good impulses which come to us. They may be the work of the attending angel who speaks to us and influences us for good.

"Angels are especially present in the house of prayer and they are our ministers at death. When the soul of the believer leaves the body to go to be with God, the angels take charge of it, and bear it away to God."

DEFENDANT ON TRIAL CALLED A BIGAMIST

The domestic troubles of Mr. and Mrs. George Rennie were aired in the borough court Monday. The wife had her hubby arrested on a triple charge of drunkenness, wife beating and failure to properly support her and the children. While the hearing was being conducted, John Cator, known as "Happy Jack," caused a ripple of excitement by interrupting the proceedings in shouting to Recorder Dolliver that "Rennie is a bigamist and has another wife living." Mrs. Rennie is Cator's niece. Recorder Dolliver admonished Cator to be silent.

After receiving a sharp lecture, Rennie promised to do better in the future, and he was released on probation. He will report at the Saturday night sessions of Chief Weiss' probation class for a period of six months.

REV. DR. HERBERT SHIPMAN AT HOLY CROSS CHURCH

Rev. Dr. Herbert Shipman, L. L. D. D. C. L., rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Fifth avenue, New York, delivered an inspiring Lenten talk to a large congregation at the Holy Cross church Sunday. A feature of the service was the rendition of a special musical program by the boys' choir.

Dr. Shipman, in his address, held out Christ as an example to follow in all the walks of life. He called attention to the fact that the people nowadays, generally speaking, did not live up to their opportunities. He made a general plea for all to take advantage of every opportunity offered to do good.

Stopped a Runaway.

William Parsons, scored a big hit in the borough on Saturday afternoon, when he stopped a runaway team belonging to the Natural Ice Company in an unusual way. The horses took fright at Chatham street. Parsons saw the horses coming down the street, leaped in the rear of the ice wagon, grabbed the ice axe, chopped a hole in the front of the wagon, snatched the reins, and brought the horses to a standstill in front of the Somerset Street School.

There were many beautiful floral tributes from relatives and friends; also from the women's guilds of the church with which Mrs. Davis was identified and a tribute from the employes of the Plainfield Trust Company, where Mr. Davis is a bookkeeper. The burial was in the Methodist cemetery, and the pallbearers were: George R. Cornwell, Calvin H. Rugg, John Cory, George M. Rittenhouse and Oscar S. Teale, the last named a former resident here, but now of Newark.

E. church, shocked many of the bishop's friends in this city. Bishop Spellmeyer was taken suddenly ill on Friday afternoon, but it was not thought serious at the time. He was found dead on Saturday morning by a maid who went to call him. When the conference, which had just resumed the session, was notified of the bishop's death it was immediately adjourned.

Bishop Spellmeyer presided at the conference held in the First Methodist church, of this city, two years ago and the pastor, Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, was presiding elder. Dr. Anderson is ultimately associated with Bishop Spellmeyer having been a member of the bishop's cabinet during the conference.

Dr. Anderson said this morning that Bishop Spellmeyer was one of the most lovable of men and had won the love of all the members of the conference by his thoroughly good and wholesome character. Dr. Spellmeyer was elevated to the bishopric at Los Angeles, California, in 1904.

WM. R. GEORGE'S ADDRESS

Founder of George Junior Republic Tells Its Interesting Story.

BRANCH FOR FLEMINGTON.

Boys' Self-Government Colony at Freeville Makes Fine Citizens Out of Incorrigible Youngsters.

That the George Jr. Republic will eventually solve the problem of the juvenile delinquent can hardly be doubted. From the little Republic established at Freeville, N. Y., there have gone out into the world men of character, brain and ability, who have made names for themselves as business men, lawyers and scholars of which any university might be proud. This sums up the efficiency of the work by boys with boys in this model resort.

William R. George, the founder of the Junior Republic, interested a good sized audience of men in the Sabbath school room of the Seventh-Day Baptist church last night in the story of the building up of the republic and gave some highly interesting statistics in connection with it. Representatives from all the men's clubs in the city were present and at the end of the story asked questions which showed their real interest in the movement.

Mr. George said that as it was the first time he had had the opportunity of speaking to a Plainfield audience on the subject he would of necessity have to tell a whole lot more than he would ordinarily say about the place he is the father of, but judging from the willingness to know more exhibited by the men present he could have gone on talking until this morning and no one would have begrudged him the time.

Mr. George said that the very simplicity of the scheme as practiced at the republic made it hard to understand. Some people, he said, had an idea that it was like some sort of an institution, but that is an entirely erroneous impression. The republic is a miniature of this great republic and as such has its laws, and lawyers, guardians of the peace, jail and other modern as well as ancient systems of government and the boys run it and do it well.

The citizens work just as other citizens do and they earn wages in the same way as others. If they don't work they can't eat and if they are vagrants they are put in the jail, where they soon repent of their rashness and go to work. Wages are paid according to the ability shown in the work turned out. The boys have to pay their board and if they fail the boarding house mistress puts them out just as one would do anywhere outside of the republic. Wages are paid in aluminum coin which is exchanged, dollar for dollar, for good United States money when the citizen leaves the republic to make his way in the outer world.

The boys meet the actual conditions of life. They are thrown overboard, so to speak, and the way in which they manage to overcome the obstacles shows their innate mastery over self.

"The tougher they are the better they turn out," said the speaker, "and we want the toughest we can get. That very toughness shows that there is a character underneath the surface which needs but a guiding hand in the right direction to make it shine out as a diamond among pebbles."

Mr. George traced the history of the republic from its inception in 1897 after six years of experimenting with summer colonies of boys and girls, who grew fat and sleek with their vacations with nothing to do. The forming of the republic was the result of a sudden inspiration and no sooner thought of than put in practice. In the summer of 1897 of the 250 boys and girls who spent their time in Freeville at Mr. George's invitation, twenty-five agreed to stay and form the nucleus of the republic, but when the train pulled out on the morning of the return to New York only five actually stayed. In a few days another came straggling up having "beat it" from the city and with these six boys the enterprise was started.

"The first of these boys became the first president of the republic and afterwards went to Cornell University, where he graduated in 1902 with honors. He is now a lawyer in Syracuse with a large practice and a trustee of the republic. The second one of the six has become a lawyer of high standing in the west. The third is a smart business man in New York city. The fourth is also in business for himself. The fifth boy is in the employ of the Government at Washington and has occupied a position of trust for several years there. The sixth boy, the

HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENTS

Plainfield and Morristown to Be More Closely Connected by Macadam Road.

AFTER 12 YEARS AGITATION.

The Road Committee of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders Decides to Make Extensive Improvements.

The road committee of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders made a tour yesterday of the county and inspected the districts where new roads will be built and improvements made this season. In all the board will build fourteen and one-half miles of new roads, the most important thoroughfare being the one that will extend from the Watchung store to Smalleytown, to the Passaic River, connecting with the Morris county macadam road.

The road will be a big benefit to this city and the borough as it will be a connecting link to Morris county and will open up a gateway to boroughs and city to the mountain rural settlements. It will also provide a short cut to Morristown, and under present conditions, it is necessary for travelers to use the road to Springfield and the over mountain route to Scotch Plains, a distance of about twenty-eight miles. The new road will reduce the distance to about thirteen miles from this city to the Morris county metropolis. Agitation for the road was inaugurated twelve years ago.

The first and a five mile macadam road will be constructed from Groendyke Corner, Hillsboro, to Blackwell's Mills, and a one and one-half mile strip of macadam will be laid from Bedminster to Large Cross Roads; improvements will also be made on the road from Millington, to Liberty Corner to Far Hills.

A committee of the Middlesex Board of Freeholders also met with the Somerset county representatives and discussed the proposed extensions of the road running parallel with the Raritan river, through South Bound Brook to New Brunswick and the new Franklin Park road.

The Somerset County road committee with which will direct the building and improvements to the roads consists of Edward Hoagland, S. C. Everitt, Andrew R. Luthin, Thomas Douglass, Peter Smith and Director Thomas E. Gibson.

It will fall to Tommy's lot to sing the topical song which is being written by Judge Runyon. A number of new specialties will be introduced and the performance is expected to eclipse all other shows conducted in the chapel. Tickets will be put on sale in three weeks.

Easter at Mt. Zion Church.

The Easter program at the Mt. Zion M. FRANCHISE LAW RAPPED

Civic Society Adopts Resolution Opposing the 20 Year Limit Act.

DETRIMENTAL TO PROGRESS.

P. W. McDonough Raps Statute in Vigorous Talk—Agitation is Started for a Local Real Estate Exchange.

The Plainfield Civic Society at its meeting last night went on record as being in favor of the revival of the old charter of the Plainfield Horse Car Railroad Company, which will permit the building of a line connecting this city with Metuchen, Warrenville, Dunellen, New Market and South Plainfield. A committee will be appointed to push the matter along with other civic organizations at a hearing which will be given the measure in the near future at Trenton.

In agitating for an extension to the charter of the company, Peter W. McDonough, of South Plainfield hurled a broadside into the limited franchise law. Said Mr. McDonough: "Its principle is wrong, it is detrimental to rural communities, and it retards progress. Trolley lines never did an injury to a community and they never will. People are wrong in clamoring against corporations whose aims are to benefit the country."

William Hamilton, of South Plainfield, introduced a resolution, placing the society on record as being opposed to the present twenty-year limit law. It was unanimously adopted.

The water question was also discussed. F. A. Duttenhofer again urged that the people of Plainfield vote to buy or build a plant of their own. He wanted to know what the Common Council is doing in the matter. He was appointed a committee of one to confer with the councilmen and report his findings at the next meeting of the society which will be held on Tuesday night, April 5.

George M. Christian urged that local real estate agents unite and establish a local exchange for the listing of properties for sale or to let. He declared that it would be a big benefit to the city and a source of information to prospective home seekers. He predicted that if the real estate men would agree to work together Plainfield's population would be boosted to the 50,000 mark within five years.

H. G. Meggie, of Fanwood borough, was appointed chairman of a committee on permanent organization.

WORK ON NEW EDIFICE TO BE STARTED SOON

The trustees of St. Joseph's church are engaged in making preparations for the erection of a new stone edifice on the site of the present rectory corner Jackson and Watchung avenues. Father Miller is now receiving bids for the rectory and the building will be sold to the highest bidder and removed to another site.

As a nucleus for a church building fund the trustees now have on hand about $20,000, and after the Lenten season, steps will be taken by the various organizations of the church to increase the sum. It is expected that the corner stone of the new edifice will be laid during the coming summer.

The plan of the congregation to erect a new church, to accommodate the increasing membership, was announced in The Daily Press last fall. It is expected that the new structure will cost between $50,000 and $75,000.

It is planned to convert the present church into a hall when the new edifice is erected the building to be utilized by the various societies of the church.

Dr. C. E. Moldenke to Lecture.

"On the Shores of the Mediterranean," a descriptive talk of a trip along the coast from Spain to Sicily, superbly illustrated, will be given in St. Peter's Lutheran church, on Grove street, Wednesday night, March 30, at 8 o'clock, by Dr. Chas. E. Moldenke. The lecture will be given under the auspices of the Young Ladies' Society of the church, and was arranged by Miss A. M. Ruschke and Miss Pauline Smith.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS ACCIDENT?

An accident occurred this morning on West Eighth street in which an automobile owned by the Thompson Automobile Company was damaged to the extent of perhaps two hundred dollars, the blame for which is a difficult matter to place.

Chauncey Lant, a chauffeur for the automobile concern, while driving west on Eighth street was alarmed at the sudden splitting of a falling limb from a tree on that thoroughfare and turned his machine so sharply to avoid being struck that he ran the car into a tree near the curb, breaking the radiator and lamps and otherwise damaging it.

Street Commissioner Andrew J. Garrett, when apprised of the accident, immediately started to investigate in an attempt to place the blame, but he found the task a difficult one as it appears that no one was actually in charge of the tree trimming at the moment the accident happened. At least so he was unable to attach any blame to the man employed by the city. W. G. Hobson, as far as he could ascertain.

An Italian who claimed to be doing some work for someone else was on the job, as was another man trimming trees for Mrs. George H. Babcock, none of whom could give any adequate opinion as to who was responsible. At the automobile garage this morning Mr. Thompson when seen said that the responsibility probably rested with the man who cut the limb, as there was absolutely no warning given until the machine was almost under the falling limb. The chauffeur, Lant, declared that the first intimation he had of the impending fall overhead was when he heard a voice shouting "Why don't you look out where you're going?" The next thing he knew he was up against the tree on the opposite side of the street with a badly damaged machine, but thankful that he was alive.

Take it all around it's a pretty kettle of fish and represents a tangle which will take some unravelling.

HE WISHES TO LEARN WHAT HAPPENED TO SUIT

Gaetano Poggiola, a hurdy-gurdy artist whose home address is Newark, but who has been in the city of itinerant music peddler, came to this city this morning to find out if possible what had become of a suit he instituted against W. C. Drake, of Morristown, whose automobile, it is alleged, demolished Poggiola's automatic piano on October last.

On that date Mr. Poggiola was on his way east from near the corner of Richmond street on East Front, and it was dark. It was cold and he was hurrying in order to keep up a good circulation. He must have been dreaming of sunny Italy for suddenly his mechanical piano was lying in sections on either side of the road and he was hurled to one side as if propelled by a catapult.

The automobile was occupied by Mr. Drake and his wife and Mrs. G. W. Pierson, all of Morristown. As soon as possible the auto was brought to a stop and an investigation of damages and causes for the accident made. Poggiola had no lamp on the rear of his hurdy-gurdy and the lamps on the automobile were low and at the time Mr. Drake declared that he was going at a low speed.

Anyway, the matter was brought up in the police court on the following morning with the result that Poggiola brought suit to recover the value of his piano. W. V. Nash, Jr., who was retained by Mr. Drake, subsequently offered to settle the case for seventy-five dollars, but the offer was refused by Poggiola's counsel, McDermott & McDermott, of Newark, who demanded at least $250. After this the offer of $75 was withdrawn and today it was learned that John P. Owens had taken up the case for the Italian and will sue for the full amount claimed by Poggiola. The suit came up once before in the District court, but was dismissed because the plaintiff was not represented.

Borough Police Court.

Arthur Ahrens, a New York peddler, was fined two dollars by Recorder Dolliver this morning for marketing fountain pens and soap without a license. Joseph Wagner, a local expressman, for carting without a license, got off on a suspended sentence.

War on Sidewalk Spitters.

Chief Weiss announced today that the new spitting ordinance as adopted by the borough Board of Health at a recent meeting will be rigidly enforced in the future. Placards containing notices to this effect were posted in the borough today.

SCOTCH PLAINS' AMBITION

Its Fourth of July Celebration to Put Village on the Map.

READ THIS GREAT PROGRAM!

Toe and Heel Races, Grand Band Concerts and Moreover a Real Fireworks Display Scheduled.

Stop—Look—Listen—On and after July 4, of this year, Scotch Plains will be found on the map—that is if plans that are now under way materialize. The change is to be brought about by an old-fashioned Fourth of July celebration, which it is proposed to hold on that date—baseball games, sack races, running heel and toe races, and other games are to be held, the program being divided between the morning and afternoon. Band concerts will be given and the day will wind up with a grand display of fireworks in the evening. Excelsior H. & L. Co. has taken the initiative in the movement, although the celebration will be a town affair and the expenses borne by popular subscription, every one who desires to being given a chance to do their part.

This will be the first celebration the town has had since 1876, when the old "One Horn" cannon, which was a bone of contention among Westfield, Plainfield and Scotch Plains was stolen from the watchful eyes of its Westfield guards and borne triumphantly into town, and all during the night of the 3rd and the day of the 4th its constant boom was heard. The town at that time presented a picture of the time of 1776. Every resident did guard that night and patrolled the streets of the town awaiting the onslaught of the evening from Westfield. Feeling ran high and had a determined effort been made to capture the old relic the Plains would have been the scene of a bloody battle.

All this changed after the centennial celebration. Westfield was allowed to regain the trophy, only to have it later to Plainfield. Scotch Plains refused and has struggled and its Fourth of July since that memorable date have been very quiet affairs. The younger generation, however, have determined to revive the old custom of celebrating the day and with this end in view, the question was brought up at the meeting of Excelsior H. & L. Co. Monday night and a committee was appointed to look into the matter and report at the April meeting of the company. Considerable money has already been pledged and from present indications Scotch Plains will again take her place in history, and regain her lost prestige.

PARENTS HEAR TIMELY ADVICE ON CHILDREN

William D. Murray, a New York lawyer, who is superintendent of the primary department of the Crescent Avenue Sunday-school, and who is a student on the children's problem, delivered an interesting talk on "Our Boys and Girls" before the Parent-Teachers Association at the Franklin school last night. More than one hundred persons were present.

Mr. Murray said in his remarks that the period of adolescence is between twelve and eighteen years among children. He urged fathers and mothers to make friends with their boys and girls and to inquire into the companionships with other children.

When boys arrive at this stage in life said Mr. Murray, they go around in "gangs." A boy's father and mother has a right, and should see to it, that their boys keep good company, and steer clear of bad associations.

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. Stephen H. Voorhees, of Madison avenue, president of the association. All other business was suspended and the entire time was given over to the lecturer. The same talk was delivered by him two weeks ago at the Crescent Avenue church, and the discourse proved so helpful to the parents who had heard it, that the association prevailed on the speaker to repeat.

Sesame Club Meeting.

The Sesame Club will meet tomorrow morning at the residence of Mrs. S. R. Voorhees, 602 Madison avenue.

TALKED ON TEMPERANCE

Mrs. Cora Seabury, W. C. T. U. National Lecturer, Makes an Address.

"WHAT IS MAN," THE TOPIC.

Musical Program a Feature of Meeting at Which Mrs. T. H. Tomlison Presides—The Proceedings.

Mrs. Cora Seabury, of New York, national lecturer for the Women's Christian Temperance Union, addressed a small, but appreciative audience at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, last night, on the subject: "What is Man?" The meeting was held under the auspices of the local W. C. T. U. and Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, county president, presided.

There was special music, Martin A. Korff playing several violin selections; also a duet with Whitney Frazee, cornetist. Mrs. Charles E. Herring presided at the piano. Mrs. L. H. Dodd also sang, "Victory," accompanied on the piano by Mrs. George W. Sauns.

Mrs. Seabury is a talented speaker and held the close attention of her audience throughout. She is also an elocutionist of no small ability and during her talk she gave two appropriate recitations.

In her treatment of her subject, Mrs. Seabury said that when she recalls the words of the Scripture that God created man in his own image she thinks how the mighty have fallen, yet she said that all could be God-like, no matter what the features might be.

"Can you imagine," said the speaker, "God walking on this earth eating like a glutton, drinking, smoking a pipe and spitting tobacco juice on God and left?" Men generally concede that the soul belongs to God, and I am convinced that the body does, too.

"We know about cause and effect and know that if one contaminates the body the faculties are injured. Ruskin, who was not a temperance fanatic, declared that physical morality, Whenever I hear of a couple getting married I think of the awful responsibility devolving on them as the fathers and mothers of the children of the future. If a child should be entitled to anything it should be vouchsafed a clean, wholesome body. In many cases the father sows his wild oats and his children reap the harvest."

Mrs. Seabury then spoke of three important things in direct line with her subject, as great gifts of God; Conscience, will power and responsibility. As to the first she said that love of God and love of neighbors is all important and urged that conscience be dominated by commonsense. As to will power, she said that this overcomes all difficulties and that will power has brought everything under subjection, even to the elements of the air. Edison is called the wizard of electricity, yet his work would amount to nothing without the people in this country. The speaker declared that the whole human family is interdependent. God has given man dominion over all and as man ascends in the scale mentally, God increases his power.

In conclusion Mrs. Seabury gave numerous illustrations of the value of her work among the poor of the great cities and in the country districts where she has traveled so extensively, and did not fail to show that the rum traffic is the worst evil known to mankind.

PARTITION PROCEEDINGS IN THE VREELAND ESTATE.

Judge Isaac F. Runyon, of North Plainfield, representing the executors, had charge of the partition sale of the Mary Vreeland estate at Trenton today, which had been ordered by the Court of Chancery. Mary Vreeland was the sister of Thomas E. Gibson, director of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders.

The property is located in Trenton and comprises apartment houses valued at between $15,000 and $20,000. There are twenty-four heirs beside Mr. Gibson scattered throughout the State and various parts of the country.

WALK OUT AT SILK MILL

The Employees' Demand for Higher Wages is Refused by Concern.

AND A STRIKE FOLLOWS.

Fifty-five Quit Work and the Plant Is Closed Down—No Disturbance Seen—The Trade Is Dull Now.

Thirty-five weavers in the employ of the Watchung Silk Company went out on a strike yesterday afternoon following the refusal of the company to grant an increase in wages of one cent a yard. As a result of the action of the weavers the concern closed down its entire plant throwing fifteen other employes out of work. The strikers and those effected are men and girls.

A Daily Press reporter called at the office of the company today, but the official in charge was reticent in giving out information as to the trouble. All he would admit was that a committee of the Weaver's Union demanded the increase yesterday afternoon and that the request was promptly refused. Then followed the walkout of the weavers.

All of the machinery in the mill is at a standstill, and the visit of The Daily Press reporter to the plant disclosed no scenes of excitement that generally accompany labor troubles. None of the striking weavers were seen in the neighborhood of the mill and everything appeared peaceful.

Former Sheriff B. Frank Coriell, a stockholder in the concern, when approached by a Daily Press reporter, said that the company had a strike on its hands. He also admitted that the weavers applied for an increase in the scale but declared that it was impossible for the company to accede to their demands owing to the slackness of trade in the silk industry. He stated that the dull period is due to an over production and the low prices prevailing for material. The company, he said has been operating with a reduced force for some time owing to the dull conditions, and for this reason alone it could not see its way to grant an the increase.

STORES ON PARK AVENUE TO CHANGE LOCATIONS.

Some important changes are to occur on Park avenue among the stores between the Trust Company's building and North avenue between now and April 1. The store now occupied by Arthur DeBrigard will be taken over by the Public Service Co.'s Store, while Mr. DeBrigard will move into the Boice-Runyon building.

It is believed that the Public Service Company will occupy the store vacated by Mr. Osmun if proper accomodations can be made in it for the company's needs. W. R. Canesbrook, manager for the P. S. C., said this morning that the company required more space and that if satisfactory alterations can be made the company will move a part of their present belongings there which will enable them to serve the public more satisfactorily.

Cab Damaged by Wagon.

A United States Express wagon, driven by Norman Loughlin, collided with a cab owned by John Lynch near the North Avenue station yesterday afternoon at about 5 o'clock, in which the cab lost two hind wheels and had an axle badly bent. No one was injured.

An Omission.

In the report of the meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club in yesterday's issue of the Press, the name Mrs. Charles L. Sykes, who presented a paper of much excellence on "Dryden and the Drama of the Restoration," was unintentionally omitted.

Conferred Master Mason Degree.

GET-TOGETHERS' BANQUET

Most Enjoyable Affair in History of Organization Honors Saint Patrick.

"IF WALLS COULD BUT SPEAK."

Mr. Martine Electrifies His Hearers With Reference to "Room Overhead"—Other Speakers Heard.

Saint Patrick's Day was celebrated Thursday by the "Get-Together" Club in a fashion which none of those who enjoyed it will forget. A banquet, one of Henry Windham's best, the menu for which was prepared by the inimitable George F. Tobin, was discussed by eighty members of the club and their guests. Singing and speechmaking in which the patron Saint of Ireland was eulogized furnished entertainment, and some oratorical fireworks were let off in which only remote reference were made to politics. Songs were contributed by Elmer Cutting, Judge William N. Runyon, Freeholder Sam P. T. Wilbur, Charles Ward, Tax Collector William R. Townsend, H. G. Cook, of Roselle; the Craig Brothers, Fred Bunnell and Fred Haines and William L. Clifton.

The speakers were Assemblyman James Baker, of Hudson county; James E. Martine, the irrepressible farmer-orator; "State House" George J. Tobin, Inspector Andrew McCardell, former Mayor James P. Buckley, of "round the world" fame; Judge William Newcorn and Samuel P. T. Wilbur. All of the songs and speeches included touching references to the "day we celebrate" and many humorous stories told about the origin and nationality of St. Patrick.

Mr. Tobin made a happy speech of welcome to the guests and promised that St. Patrick's Day feasts would be a fixture on the calendar of the club. Judge Runyon, before introducing the speakers called for a standing toast to "St. Patrick, the patron Saint of Ireland," which was drunk amid cheers. James E. Martine, the first speaker, spoke on "what I think of you pirates," and said that another little prefix would cover the meaning more fully, but that he knew that those of his many some of his most cherished friends notwithstanding their opposite opinions in politics. "Socially, convivially and religiously," he said, "I know of no other gang that I would better like to join, but politically, God help you!"

Mr. Martine paid a tribute to the Irish as a class. He said they were leaders in warfare, science, art and the love of liberty and that they had found in this magnificent country a place where full scope could be given to their aspirations. He related a fact which was new to many, that this 134th anniversary of St. Patrick's Day in this republic commemorated the raising of $513,000 by the Irish for the use of George Washington and the Continental Army when they stood in greatest need of help in their fight for freedom.

"During my forty years of interest in the politics of the State and nation," said the speaker, "I have had a most unique experience and I do not know that if the walls of the room upstairs could talk they would tell a tale of 'do him' unparalleled in history. For this I give them credit for their diplomacy, but believe they were somewhat shortsighted. When I was a member of the Common Council of this city, in 1872, I was the only member of that august body who had the nerve to accept the invitation of Rev. Father Morris to attend a St. Patrick's celebration." Mr. Martine ended by reciting one of his favorite poems and sat down amid the cheers of the diners.

Assemblyman James Baker, of Hudson county, arrived in the banqueting room at midnight and spoke at the conclusion of Mr. Martine's speech. In telling how he came to be present Mr. Baker said that Mr. Tobin having failed in getting the Governor and the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court had to take the next best man which was himself. (Baker.) As he had spoken once before last night Mr. Baker hoped he would be understood as he knew for a fact that but two of the diners at the other banquet had been able to follow him and they were both from Rahway. He said the Legislature ought to pass an act defining the limits of a toast, so as to put a stop to the circulation of the wonderful supply of hot air with which after dinner speakers are filled. Let us have song instead of speech for our post-prandial exercises. The recent acts of the Legislature have simply been to empower the Supreme Court to find out what their functions. Osteopathy is actually a trust in restraint of the trade of the average lawyer in that they devote their lives to pulling your legs. As for Senator Sandford, maybe some day he will vote for it but that time has not yet come. Mr. Baker's speech was an oratorical gem and full of strong epigrams. He was loudly cheered at its conclusion.

Mr. Buckle told some of his experiences of the recent trip around the world. He declared he was the last of Mark Twain's original "Innocents" to go abroad. He referred to the "medicine chest" which his friends insisted that he should take along on the trip and he said he had followed their injunctions implicitly. The box with its contents, he said, answered the purpose fully.

Judge William Newcorn and S. P. T. Wilbur spoke briefly and humorously and the banquet ended in a cheer for the guests, the club and Henry Windham, who provided the excellent feast.

The speakers of the evening were introduced as follows by Toastmaster "Fog Horn Bill," alias Judge William N. Runyon; Some Thoughts for Sober Men, On-the-Job-Jim (alias Assemblyman James Baker); What I Think of You Pirates, The Farmer Orator (alias James E. Martine); When You Get Chesty, Just Listen to Me, State House George (alias George J. Tobin); Me and The Police Commissioner, Andy (the Factory Inspector Andrew McCardell); The Same the World Over, Human Nature Jim (alias former Mayor J. P. Buckle); Our Patron Saint, Blackstone Bill (alias Judge Wm. Newcorn); Salting "Gold" Nuggets, Principia (alias Freeholder S. P. T. Wilbur).

In addition to the above Chic MacDuff, entertained the diners with some very brave remarks and the whole company joined in complimenting Alexander Ayres, the master of ceremonies, for his efficient work and the waiters of the tables and other etceteras.

The following up-to-the-minute suggestions appeared on the menus:

It is requested that Mr. James Stewart refrain from singing Scotish ballads.

It is requested that Chief MacDuff refrain from drinking to the memory of St. Patrick.

It is requested that Mr. Robert Craig bottle up that whistle.

It is requested that Mr. Joseph Harrigan spill a bottle of mucilage on his chair before he takes his seat at the table.

It is requested that no one ask Mr. James E. Martine to tell the story of his life during the festivities.

The handsome decorations of the dining room of the Waldorf reflected credit on both Mr. Windham and Mr. Tobin, the latter chairman of the entertainment committee. An added source of favorable comment was the appropriate and neat costumes of the waitresses and the alacrity of the service. But after all is said there remains one or two things which deserve more than passing notice. The neckwear of green silk worn by the members of the club was the gift of Hyman Adelberg, who was attired in sombre black, and the souvenir menu cards furnished by the Daily Press, a courtesy much appreciation, and the insurance given by Mr. Cook, of Roselle Park, that within a short time the citizens of that bustling town would have a "get-together" aggregation which would some time rival, or attempt to rival, the Plainfield organization.

So far as comment on the banquet and its attending incidents are concerned it was the general opinion that no greater nor more pleasant function had ever taken place in this city.

CITY HIGH'S TEAM DEFEATS THE BEARCATS

The Plainfield High School basketball team defeated the "Bearcats" Friday at the Plainfield High School gym by the score of 23 to 19. The Bearcats put up a fast fight but P. H. S. proved too much for them. The first half was close, the score being 16 to 15.

T. Ricketts played the star game for the Bearcats while Thompson starred on P. H. S. During the second half it looked for a while that the Bearcats would win but P. H. S. finished with two points ahead.

The line-ups: P. H. S.—Forwards, Thompson, Clarke; centre, Manley; guards, Woodhull, Van Zandt. Bearcats—Forwards, T. Ricketts, J. Ricketts; centre, Naylor; guards, Nash, Carty.

CHURCH ATTENDANCE BANDS GIVE ENTERTAINMENT AT HOPE

The boys and girls church attendance bands of Hope chapel held an entertainment at the chapel Friday night. Over fifty members were present to enjoy the good things provided by the committee, which comprised George Leighs, Allen Snyder, Miss M. Clara Hunter, Miss Agnes Leighs and Mrs. M. W. Clark.

G. Herbert Condiet, superintendent of the Sunday school, introduced Dr. Charles G. Davis, who proved to be a capital entertainer for the young people. Games were also enjoyed. Rev. L. R. Howard was also a guest of the society, and the Boys' Club which was holding a meeting at the chapel, was also invited to join in the festivities.

Plain Field Notes and Queeries

As between athletics physical and mental we must of course give first place to the former if at all. Everybody who is anybody has gone frantic with delight over the great achievement, greatest in the world, on the Madison Square Garden last week. A man named Gusta Ljungstrom won the 20 mile championship footrace in one hour, 50 minutes, 58 and three-fifths of a second, "smashing every known record, amateur or professional." The marvel is that his feet did not get tangled up in his surname. Madison Square Garden is no more a square than the square is a garden, but what of that? The great thing is the race, a greater thing is the victory, but the greatest of all is the diet that won the prize. Ljungstrom is a vegetarian!

He has eaten no fleshmeats in seven months. The writer of this ate no fleshmeats and tasted no juicy gravy for a whole year, walked no fewer than ten miles every day, all weathers, and a twenty or thirty mile tramp at least once a week, and then broke his fast on an endless chain of sausages for which his soul had long pined. A lady has friends and acquaintances in various callings from learned university professors, clergymen, and women and men of high refinement and wealth, to workers in coal mines, business men and women, and one position she has walked hundreds of miles days a week, who were strict vegetarians, some of them for forty years. All hale and hearty in body and mind. The champion long distance runner or walker two or three years ago in Europe, covering some 400 or two miles along the country roads, was also an abstainer from flesh foods. The present writer ate fewer vegetables and fruits in that long and recent shorter experiments than in his ordinary meat diet. If people generally would shake free from the meat superstition they would bring down high prices with a rattle and without whining in the newspapers for Government relief. Flesh foods are a very nice luxury but not a necessary food.

A German circus man threw a couble back somersault in Kansas City a week or two ago. The feat was proclaimed a novelty, the greatest in the world. This means a 10 dollar item without touching the ground. I have seen this done twice, but it is a wonderfully rare feat. A few days after this two youths performed it in the gymnasium of Columbia University, one is named Quinn, age 18, from Jersey City High School, 5 feet tall, or short, and weighs 135 pounds. He will prove tough eating if they roast him on April fool day. The other is Edmund Milks, of Prof. Hillhouse's class, age, weight and height not given. Both made use of belt and ropes and springboard. If they had lived on the light and airy soo-meat diet they might not have needed the ropes and board—perhaps.

Howard University has issued an official statement, based on the records of its law school, which should set our young fellows a-thinking right hard. The law students among college men, it says, that though they may loaf as undergrads, or go in ding dong for sports, they are sure to become hard workers when they enter the professional schools. The twelve years' record show to the contrary. The record is above that the man who wins honours in the Law school without having won them in college, is rare, and that the "sport" of low standing in college who achieves distinction in Law school is almost a myth. One's own observation ever since the athletic craze set in leads to the general conclusion that a moderate indulgence in school sports is good for the body that owns a sound mind, but excessive attention given to play is sure, sooner or later, to weaken or damage the mind, and very often the body too, neither of which hindrances to world-success are worth what the silly victim has to pay.

Other indulgences besides manly sports play the mischief with our alleged intelects. Playing poet, for instance. An Irish poet of minor importance put forward to scare our rising home manufacturers into hoster laubors. He tells of the twelve "brilliant" littery chaps who formed themselves into the Rhymesters' Club in London a few years ago. Great geniuses as they were, which goes without saying, each one associated their drink—which was not the nectar of the gods evidently; a third committed self murder, and two others have "lost" their reason. Had they really found and boarded it? But what are inveterate (the pen was actually spelling it invertebrate) rhymesters but weaklings from birth. Here's a baker's dozen of them, counting the hisorian in, who don't stand alone, but must hold each other up like a bundle of sticks that have lost their rope. When an otherwise manly fellow catches the itch for club life he is in danger of bidding good bye to the very quality most needed in the battlefield of life—the stamina to stand alone, to see clearly, to keep calm, and the strength to endure to the end.

(This is from the Sun.)

The importation of English styles, which is increasing constantly in this country, has not stopped at mere clothes and manners. The use of the monocle is becoming more and more common every day in New York.

"Just watch some bright afternoon along Fifth avenue," remarked a close observer. "You will see dozens of men wearing monocles. In the big hotels at tea time they are especially common. I have noticed that a good many of the young chaps who have taken up the fad do not appear to be wholly at ease with the single glass."

OUR EXPORTS DWINDLE.

Big Drop in Eight Months from Total in Same Period Last Year.

Washington, March 14.—The United States seems to be losing ground rapidly as an exporting Nation, judging by a report issued today by the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor. This shows that during the eight months ended with February last the excess of exports over imports was $189,125,415, a decrease of $152,524,126 as compared with last year. The February imports were greater by $11,232,474 than those of February, 1909, while the exports showed a reduction of more than half a million dollars.

While the imports for the first eight months of the present fiscal year were greater by more than $200,000,000 than those of the corresponding period of the previous fiscal year the exports increased by only a little more than $50,000,000.

GODWIN BEARD SUCCEEDS SEC'Y A. RUSSELL BOND.

At the teachers' meeting of the First Presbyterian Sunday school held in the Sunday school rooms of the church last night all the officers for the ensuing year were re-elected with the exception of the secretary. A. Russell Bond, who has served in this capacity for so long, was forced to resign because of lack of time to devote to the duties. Mr. Bond was succeeded by Godwin Beard.

The other officers are: L. H. Gates, superintendent; A. V. Searing, Jr., and Mrs. Harry Williams, assistant superintendents; Jesse Lounsberry, treasurer, and Warren Townley, librarian. Rev. Lewis Bond was reelected superintendent of the home department.

The reports of the school for the year show it to be in a most flourishing condition. One of the unusual and unique features of this Sunday school is that the collections of one Sunday in the months are sufficient for the school's expenses, the money collected on the other three Sundays being devoted to missions. The pastor, Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring feels proud of this fact and believes his school stands alone in this respect.

SUPERB TALENT FOR ST. STEPHEN'S CONCERT.

Under the auspices of St. Stephen's church, a concert of more than usual interest will be given at the Hartridge School auditorium on Thursday evening, April 7, at 8:15 o'clock. The program will be of rare excellence and will be finely rendered by Edith Chapman Goold and Sarah Moore, soprano; Mildred Potter, contralto; Raymond Koehler and Raymond Loder, baritone; Fred Wheeler, bass, while Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McIntyre will be at the piano.

The affair has been arranged by Joseph McIntyre and the program will be under his personal direction. The proceeds will be for the benefit of the church. The tickets are now on sale.

UNTARNISHED GOLD.

It is all very well for girls to be told that their $10 a yard gold trimming is stylish when it is tarnished; they don't like blackened metal and they never will. A slight look of age, a barely perceptible rust look is not objectionable, but the trouble is that moisture blacks the metal. And the dust from the floors and in our atmosphere blackens all the gold and silver used on skirts. Costly as this age of metal is, it is not durable. The highest prices paid for these trimmings cannot guarantee them against that blighting touch.

Therefore a more acceptable kind of gold and silver trimming is offered. The designer find it more satisfactory to their customers. All the metal is laid on or painted on glass. It is the same process used with Christmas tree ornaments and is not more expensive than the other kind. It is especially pretty in the drop crystals which are covered with gold and silver. When a good deal of it is used, a woman must be careful not to "break" her gown.

A Knitted Costume.

A new costume for walking is a skirt and jacket f hand-knitted wool. It is of a soft cinnamon brown and fits the figure snugly. A high collar buttons at the side, from which the long jacket is fastened in a straight line by bone buttons. A wide leather belt below the waist gives a Norfolk effect. To complete this costume, which Paris he accepted, a tiny woolen muff edged with fur is carried. It is in direct opposition to the huge bolsters, but its recommendation lies in its lack of weight, a very important consideration for walking tours.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 27, 1910.

Topic.—Getting ready to live forever.—Eccl. xii, 1-7. (Easter meeting.) Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The immortality of the human soul, the existence or the continuation of the human life beyond the grave, are practically universally accepted truths today. It is foreshadowed in nature, by the numerous forms of life that seem to die, only to put on a newer and fuller life at a future time. The dream of Socrates has practically become an accepted fact of both science and philosophy. There is a yearning in the human heart for continuation of life, and therefore it must be so, else whence this longing hope, this fond desire for immortality. The foreshadowings of nature, the teachings of science and philosophy, the dreams of the human soul, are all illuminated by Christianity. Jesus Christ died. His body lay in the tomb for three days. His soul still lived in paradise. On the third day soul and body were united again and raised from the dead, proving both the immortality of the soul and the resurrection of the body.

We are therefore to live forever. This life is but the threshold of an eternal life; and here it is to be determined whether we are to live forever in happiness or in woe, depending upon our relation to God through the Lord Jesus Christ. It should not take us long to decide our destination for the future. Only the thoughtless and careless can let the days go by without deciding to live for eternity with God than to hell with Satan and his fallen spirits. If we have not decided to live with Him. If we have decided to spend the immortal life with Satan little preparation is necessary. Live a life of unbelief and sin or of indifference and the preparation will be made. But an hour of eternal happiness costs something, and preparation is necessary and effort must be made. It will well repay us for all our efforts and all our sacrifices.

Getting ready to live forever! What a solemn thought! If we were going to some other place to live than where we live now we should be busy in getting ready. Perhaps days, weeks and even months would be needed. It takes time also to prepare for the life that is to be forever. The journey itself is brief, but the preparation may take some time. We should get ready early. Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth." Just as soon as we reach the age of responsibility we should get ready for our future and eternal home. This is quite reasonable, for if we neglect getting ready the evil days may come, in which indifference or sin may take possession of us and persuade us that getting ready is unnecessary, at least for long years. But what folly! We do not set the time when the call home to our eternal home. Death is certain, but nothing is so uncertain than the time of His coming, and, having made our peace with God and possessing the assurance of our soul's salvation, we should be ever ready in all times. Years may pass before we make the journey, trials and tribulations may be met, but we should keep the faith at any cost or sacrifice, for again "no man knoweth the day nor the hour when the Son of Man cometh." Constant readiness, as in the case of the five wise virgins, is an absolute necessity. The matter of our eternal dwelling place is of too infinite importance to be neglected even for a moment. In that moment we may be called to the life that is never to end and, like the five foolish virgins, find ourselves unprepared and shut out of the kingdom of heaven. Accept Christ as your Saviour, be ever faithful unto Him, and be ready. He calls you will be prepared to enter the heavenly home which He by His death has prepared for you.

China's Great C. E. Convention.

China's great Christian Endeavor convention of 1909 met in Nanking, and the great mat tent erected for the meeting proved inadequate, so admission was by ticket or badge only. Many of the Nanking people had to be turned away, but at the close of the convention a scene of revival meetings opened in the tent, and to these all were invited. The structure itself was said to be most suitably and beautifully decorated with Christian Endeavor banners and flags of all nations. The gathering showed that Christian Endeavor is meeting a long felt need in China, the training of leaders. The older missionaries say it has surpassed their greatest expectations and are delighted to see the Chinese men and women creditably taking the lead in these large meetings. Chinese women have never before spoken in any but women's meetings. The earnestness and intensity of purpose which characterized these meetings was said to be wonderful.—Ohio Endeavorer.

Making Ministers.

"One of the results of the Christian Endeavor meetings at Sagamore Beach, Mass.," writes Howard M. Leach, president of the Progressive Christian Endeavor union, Massachusetts, "is that I am going to study for the ministry." Excellent! In these days, when the bitter cry of the church is the dearth of men entering the ministry, it is pleasing to note that Christian Endeavor is one of the influences that tend to direct the thoughts of men to that field of usefulness.

ANOTHER JEWEL IN MARY RILEY'S CROWN

Good Mary Riley, of Lincoln place, who has spent a good many years of her life in aiding the unfortunate, has earned another star for her heavenly crown. When the good steamship Baltic started from New York on her trip across the Atlantic Saturday she carried as one of her passengers, Bridget Carrick, a girl of twenty-three, who has been ill for some time. Bridget for a time after her arrival in this country, almost three years ago, came to this city, where she was employed as a family domestic. Her home is at Mt. Bellay, County Galway, Ireland.

The attention of Mrs. Riley, who is known as the "Good Samaritan" in St. Joseph's parish, was called to the sad plight and hopeless condition of the poor girl. She interested Mrs. Bridges in behalf of the visiting borough homes soliciting subscriptions to enable the purchase of transportation for the girl to the home of her parents in Ireland, and a few days ago she succeeded in collecting a total of $48 necessary. In addition to money many of the people who donated to the fund furnished a quantity of clothing and other supplies to brighten the homeward journey of Miss Carrick.

WHAT TO DO WITH YOUR GIFT PLANTS.

According to the florists more foliage plants were distributed last Christmas than ever before. Now many are asking just what these plants require to keep them in a healthy condition. To have them in the shape they were in when delivered from the florist's the capabilities to the utmost for months past; the plants have been grown in specially arranged houses with temperature and soil just right.

The azaleas have required great care to bring them to such a state of perfection. To keep them so also requires daily care. The most important point of all is that the plants must have their roots soaked (not dampened) and if in a hot steam-heated room, twice daily will not be too much. Then they require all the light possible, and should be taken out of the living room at night to a cooler place, returning to the window again after a soaking in the morning. With this treatment they will last beautifully until the last bud and flower has fully developed and faded.

The Chinese primroses and primroses will grow with as little care as the geranium. The main thing is to place them close to the window, sprinkle the foliage occasionally and keep the roots moist.

Palms and ornamental foliage plants are fast becoming a necessity in interior decorations. Palms, aspandistras, dracaenas and all the harder foliage plants should be always kept moist at the roots. They also require daily spraying. Of course, this spraying, with large plants especially, becomes quite a difficult matter in the home, but as a necessary substitution we would recommend frequent washings with soapsuds and a soft sponge. The plants really require this cleansing and the oftener it is done the more the plants will flourish and grow. Besides, washing adds to the attractiveness of the plants.

The many beautiful varieties of ferns are very popular. Their foliage is such that they cannot be washed liked the others. Keep them moist at all times, and take them daily to the bathroom for a general sprinkling over. Once a day is enough, and you will be more than gratified, as they will keep beautifully even in the dry atmosphere of the average house.

WANT PHTHISIS PAVILION

Boards of Trade and other Organizations Favor White Plague Camp.

PLAINFIELD IS INTERESTED.

Clergy, Professional and Business Men Indorse Project—Freeholders Receive Many Letters Favoring Plan.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Dr. W. H. Murray, Dr. F. E. DuBois, Dr. B. vanD. Hedges and Dr. F. J. Hughes, and William Jeffery, William Dutcher, William S. Tyler and Miss Mabelle Phillips, were the local representatives at the hearing on the county tuberculosis pavilion question Friday afternoon in the Circuit Court room, Elizabeth. The hearing was arranged by the committee from the Board of Freeholders, of which J. Hervey Doane is chairman, at the request of the county anti-tuberculosis organization. The meeting was largely attended and considerable interest was shown in the proposition.

Representatives were present from the Boards of Trade, of the various municipalities in the county, as well as all organization with allied interests. The concensus of opinion was that the pavilion would prove a profitable investment for the county, and that the expense to maintain it would be more than offset by what it costs to care for indigent consumptives and their surviving families.

Interesting remarks were made by Mayor Fisk and the local physicians present, and they promised their support in the movement. Statements were made by some of the speakers that a combination could be effected with one or two adjoining counties, but this plan was opposed strongly.

On motion of Dr. Norton L. Wilson, a resolution was ordered sent to Senator Ernest R. Ackerman and Assemblyman Schwartz, Pierce, and Thompson, asking their support in the passage of House bill 362, introduced by Assemblyman Smalley, of Bound Brook, and which gives boards of freeholders the right to appropriate money for tuberculosis sanitoriums.

Rev. Dr. Eben B. Cobb, of Elizabeth, suggested that prisoners in the county jail be employed to cultivate farms at the proposed sanatorium so as to raise fresh vegetables for the inmates. This was frowned upon, if being the opinion that the inmates would benefit more by working themselves.

Dr. E. B. Grier, of Elizabeth, opened the meeting, addressing briefly the audience of more than 100 prominent men and women on the object of the gathering which, he said, was to get the sentiment of the matter, so that the freeholders would know whether or not such an institution is really demanded by the taxpayers.

Letters were read from clubs and individuals endorsing the movement, and included one from the Plainfield Board of Trade. Mr. Jeffery was among those who spoke in favor of the project. Mr. Fisk said that there are 150 Plainfielders who should be in such an institution. There were no dissenting voices against the proposition when Chairman Doane asked for remarks from the "opposition."

The committee from the freeholders will report the result of the meeting at the April meeting of the board, when the probable cost of such an institution and other details as to location, etc., will be discussed.

NEW COLOR CHART.

A glimpse at the new color chart, which reveals the colorist's art in its highest perfection, shows us the new neutral tones in a brilliancy and purity which is most impressive. Different manufacturers differ in regard to the most fashionable shades, but there are several which are evidently struggling for supremacy. Gray in cloth is especially strong, a lovely soft, pinkish gray which is not so hard as the blue-gray and richer and more full of color than formerly. Blues are, as usual, very good, the navy and Holland blue in polards and the soft cornflower blue in shantungs. In the lavender tones there is the new iris, which has a suggestion of blue in its make-up, and the old favorite, amethyst, and the deeper, glorious grape. Artichoke and the reeda tints are highly favored in the grays, and the mustard and leather tones shading from apricot must not be forgotten. A deep raspberry tone reddish shade, has already become popular.

DIVORCE FOR G.-M. CLARK

J. E. Flannery, Named as Co-respondent, Must Pay Costs and Counsel Fee.

CHANCERY COURT DECIDES.

Woman Blamed by Co-respondent, and Vice Versa—Flannery Put in Defence—Spicy Evidence in the Case.

Vice-Chancellor Howell Thursday signed a decree granting to George W. Clark an absolute divorce from his wife, Maggie A. Clark. John E. Flannery, the co-respondent, who, at his own request, became a party to the suit, is required to pay not only the cost of the trial, but also the counsel fees of the aggrieved husband. The several amounts will be named at the time of the settlement of the decree.

The conclusions of the decree show that Mr. and Mrs. Clark were married on April 30, 1885. For many years they and John E. Flannery, the co-respondent, boarded with Mrs. Mary Fisher, the petitioner's sister on East Second street. The defendant was charged with illegal cohabitation with Flannery on May 15 and June 25, 1909. Flannery applied under the statute to be admitted as a defendant to the suit; he filed an answer in which he denied the charge made against him. He appeared at the final hearing by counsel who testified on his behalf.

The vice-chancellor says that he does not find it necessary to decide whether the charge against the defendants is true or not, but that if committed at that time it was subsequently condoned, and whatever cause of action the petitioner is entitled to arising out of the circumstances which are in evidence as to the actions of the defendants on that day is lost because the petitioner received his wife again and continued to live with her until June 25 of the same year.

The decree is based on the real charge, which the vice-chancellor says he thinks is sustained by the evidence. The decree cites the evidence given by several witnesses, including that of the petitioner and the defendants, tending to prove the defendants guilty. He says that the testimony of all the witnesses practically agree.

Vice-Chancellor Howell says further, referring to the defendants: "They appeared to me to be persons who had admitted against half denying the guilt of which they were inwardly conscious." He then says that he will therefore advise a decree in favor of the petitioner. Furthermore, he says "that this also establishes the guilt of the co-respondent, who has caused himself to be made a party to the litigation; and it likewise renders him liable for all the husband's costs and counsel fees in the proceeding."

Judge William A. Coddington was counsel for the petitioner; George W. Mayo for the defendant, Maggie A. Clark; Assistant prosecutor Walter L. Heifield, Jr., and Judge William N. Runyon for the defendant, John E. Flannery.

MISSIONARY TEA GIVEN AT MONROE AVENUE M. E. CHURCH

Under the auspices of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, a mission tea, with an excellent program, was held at the church, Thursday afternoon. The devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Robert Lee, and prayer was offered by Mrs. J. C. Pierson.

The program opened with a soprano solo by Mrs. E. D. Young, followed with a recitation, "Maruca's Mite Box," by Miss Bogle. A feature of the afternoon was an address by Miss Helen Carleton, of Elizabeth, on home missions. She is president of the Elizabeth District Home Mission Society of the Methodist church, and she told of the work being carried on in the south among the colored people.

After Miss Carleton's talk, Mrs. E. D. Young sang another solo and tea was served. Mrs. Isaac LaRue, assisted by Miss Anna Stafford was in charge of the tea. The women then enjoyed a social hour.

FATHER B. M. BOGAN THE TOASTMASTER IN ELIZABETH

Many prominent officials, business men and other citizens of Elizabeth and other cities attended the banquet of the Holy Name Society of Saint Patrick in Y. M. C. A. hall in Elizabeth Thursday. Altogether there were just a hundred diners, who under the witty and gracious guidance of the toastmaster, Rev. B. M. Bogan, rector of St. Mary's, listened to some of the best speeches that have been heard in that city for many a day.

Father Bogan's introductory remarks preceding the introduction of Hon. Thomas A. Davis, of Orange, set everyone at ease and paved the way for one of the most enjoyable evenings of entertainment ever provided by this association.

Following Mr. Davis' speech, which had for its topic "America, Our Country," Peter A. O'Boyle, of Wilkes Barre Pa., spoke of the "Influence of Irish Character on National Destiny," and was greeted with thunderous applause at the conclusion of his address. Others who spoke were Hiley Joseph L. J. Klein, of Philadelphia, on "The Day We Celebrate;" Col. Charles W. Fuller, of Bayonne, whose subject was "New Jersey," and Rev. Otis A. G. Glazebrook, of Elizabeth, who spoke on "Friendly Sons."

Many Plainfielders were present at the banquet and from all reports it was one of the occasions in life which are worth looking forward to and to hold in dear retrospection.

TRADE BOARD MEETING

Resolutions Adopted Against Increased Sewerage Facilities.

TELEPHONES IN R. R. STATIONS.

Telegraph Offices Open on Sundays —Other Important Work Is Contemplated.

In spite of the many counter attractions in and about the city Thursday the meeting of the Board of Trade was well attended and thirty-four new members were added to the roll. Three resolutions of importance were introduced and passed and the committee, of which George Christian is chairman, reported favorable action by the two telegraph companies and the Central Railroad in regard to extra hours on Sunday for the telegraph offices and the installation of telephone pay stations on both sides of the track.

It was the opinion of the board after some discussion that the twenty-year limited franchise for public utilities is a humbug and ought never to have become a law. It does not allow the capitalists whose money is invested in the various enterprises to get their money back.

The Postal and Western Union Telegraph companies have agreed to open their offices for extra hours on Sunday and they will be as follows: 9 to 12 in the morning and 5 to 6 and 8 to 9 in the evening.

The Central Railroad will allow the telephone company to install a pay station in both local stations for the convenience of the public, and it will take but a few days after the contracts are received by the local manager to place them.

The three resolutions introduced and passed were as follows: That, until the board shall have received such information that will lead it to believe that a new sewerage disposal plant is necessary it is their opinion that no further burden for a new plant be imposed upon the taxpayers of the city at this time. The present plant with some slight extension can be made to suffice for ten years more.

That, in order to secure an expression from the largest number of voters possible on April 19 next in the matter of the acquiring of a municipal water plant, the board suggests the outspoken expression on the subject from the banks, large business interests, prominent taxpayers and the newspapers, so that a decisive vote may be had; and

That, the board favors the establishing of a tuberculosis camp somewhere in or near the county. Messrs. Jeffery and Herman Schwed met with the board by prearrangement in the county courthouse, Elizabeth, this afternoon to further this project.

It developed also at this meeting that Donald McGuinness, who had been subpoenaed to appear before the board, had no grievance against Mr. Clarke on the cesspool matter, but did have a grievance against the city. He declared that he did not see why the people of the West End should pay sewerage assessmen's when they had no sewers.

At the next meeting of the board the question of the public schools will be taken up and it is expected that the two county superintendents and the principals of the various schools will be present to discuss the problems which the board wants light on.

FIRST BAPTISTS' SUPPER ON ST. PATRICK'S NIGHT

Under the auspices of the Young Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, a St. Patrick's Day supper was given at the church Thursday. It was by far the most successful affair of the kind held at the church in a long time and liberal patronage was accorded. The spirit of the occasion was carried out in the decorations, green being the prevailing color.

Each one of the eight tables was garnished with pretty favors, including Irish potatoes from which the favorite shamrock was growing, while the menu cards were emblematic of the day. About the room there was a profusion of ferns and other green decorations. The waitresses will wore green aprons, with a spray of shamrock in the coiffure. The decorations were in charge of Miss Pauline Denton.

During the evening there was an informal program of piano selections, by Mrs. J. Hervey Buchanan, Miss Evelyn Hilliman, Miss Alice Drake and Egbert Fountain, which added to the enjoyment of the occasion.

"WARRY" M'LAUGHLIN TO TWIRL FOR PLAINFIELD

"Warry" McLaughlin, who has seen service in the National and Connecticut leagues, and who is a favorite with local ball cranks, is slated to twirl for Plainfield this season. This is the best piece of dope yet untapped by Manager Ernest Dorflinger and the news will no doubt be welcomed in local fandom.

"Warry" wore a Scotch Plains uniform last season and he pitched a fine article of ball for the Plainers. He would have probably signed with the up-country club for this season, but the indications are that the old ball burg will not have a team this year.

This is due to the fact that all of the paraphernalia of the clubs was destroyed by fire several weeks ago. Another reason is that it is generally understood that the township committee would taboo Sunday ball playing this season owing to the opposition of the people of that place. Games were conducted there last season, on an orderly basis, but there is a strong sentiment against the sport being continued on the Sabbath.

Moonshine Jelly.

Three whites of eggs, three-quarters of a pound of sugar, three tablespoonfuls of red currant jelly. Whip up the whites of eggs until stiff, then add the sugar and continue whipping until the mixture again becomes stiff and will stand in peaks. Have the red currant jelly dissolved with a tablespoonful of water and let it get cold, though still liquid. Pour this liquid into the stiffly beaten whites, keeping stirring all the time. Fill into custard cups and put in a cold place to set. Serve with cream. These jellies should not be made long before they are served.

PRISONER'S LEGACY OF $10 IS PAID TO HIM

William Perrine, of this city, who was convicted on a charge of assault on Lee Young, also of this city, and who is now serving a sentence in the county jail at Elizabeth, received a legacy of $10 Friday under the will of his uncle John McGinley, who died in December, 1907. The will was probated some time ago, but the provisions are now being followed out. Surrogate Parrot paid the money this morning.

Mr. McGinley, who lived on East Third street, was one of the oldest citizens, and when he died he left quite an estate, the bulk of which went to the immediate family. Some minor bequests included a small sum of money to the Catholic Protectory at Arlington; $50 to be divided among five relatives, one of whom is William Perrine, and the proceeds from the sale of a gold watch for St. Mary's church.

RESIGNS TO ACCEPT A CALL TO THIS CITY

Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, the pastor-elect of the Park Avenue Baptist church, presented his resignation to the Calvary Baptist church, of Cleveland, Ohio, of which he is now pastor, on Sunday morning, February 29. The resignation was in the nature of a surprise. It takes effect April 1.

The Cleveland Enterprise of March 1, contains the following interesting account about Mr. Maguire:

"At first the general feeling and exclamation was 'We will not accept it!' But after the members were assured that the resignation was final, expressions of sorrow and the tears shed proved in what esteem and love the pastor was held, many remaining behind to weep.

"Rev. Maguire goes to Plainfield, N. J. During the years in which he has taken charge of the Calvary church a remarkable growth has been apparent along all lines of work. The church stands first in the Cleveland association for the largest proportionate increase in membership and the Bible school also leads in a like manner. Contributions to outside and foreign mission work have largely increased.

"The auditorium, which was enlarged and beautifully decorated nearly two years ago, has been well filled each Sunday evening, and the remark has gone abroad that 'Calvary church has the largest evening congregation in the city of Cleveland.' The prayer meeting room has been filled almost to overflowing at the Friday evening prayer meeting. These meetings have been an inspiration under the magnetic leadership of Pastor Maguire and they will long be remembered as the strengthening and soul-inspiring features of the church life. The brotherhood work, organized during the past year, is enlarging its boundaries, and men have been practically aided and greatly encouraged by the hand clasp of fraternal love on the part of Pastor Maguire and the men of the church. The reorganization of the various church societies has resulted in a new interest and increased spiritual vitality and harmony.

"Pastor Maguire is a man of broad views, of intense zeal and spiritual power; a man with a personality of purpose marked only by his determination to carry out that purpose.

"The call to the East brings increased joy in the fact that nearly all his and Mrs. Maguire's relatives live in that section of the country, and in going to Plainfield they will be near their own people.

"The church and community he has ministered to bid him Godspeed in his new field, and congratulates the Park Avenue church and the city of Plainfield on securing a man of such excellent ability and unusual power."

CALVARY BAPTIST CHURCH PLANS ENTERTAINMENT.

A musical and literary entertainment will be given at the Calvary Baptist church, Rev. G. W. Balley, pastor, Thursday evening, April 14, for the benefit of the Trustees' Fund. The Doctor's Fault.

Judge—I am led to understand you stole the watch of the doctor who had just written a prescription for you at the free dispensary. What have you to say to the charge?

"Well, your honor, I found myself in a desperate quandary. His prescription said 'a spoonful every hour,' and I had no timepiece."

Pinero's popular comedy, "Trelawny of the Wells," will be given here for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital early in May, a decision having been reached at a meeting held Friday at the home of William L. Saunders, on Rockview avenue. The play will be given by local talent. Last night's meeting was the result of a request from the Women's Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital to Mr. Saunders and he kindly consented to undertake the proposition.

Among those who will appear in the cast are Mrs. Lemuel W. Serrell, Miss Louise Saunders, William R. Cock, Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Abbott, Judge William N. Runyon, William Pettigrew, W. T. Pelletier, William L. Saunders, Charles H. Lyman, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. McGee, Mr. and Mrs. Laurens, M. VanBuren, Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. White, Hugh S. Jarvis and Charles Curtis.

Judge Runyon will take an important part, and the cast is so unusual in its make-up that an exceptional performance is expected. Rose Trelawney, the part in which Mary Manning made such a great hit, is to be taken by Miss Louise Saunders. Mrs. Serrell has been seen on the amateur stage in Plainfield for several years, and the many friends of "Col." Cock will welcome his presence before the footlights again.

Henry C. White, president of the Comedy Club, takes the stage manager, and owing to the popularity of the hospital, the members of the club have decided to abandon their usual winter performance and assist Mr. Saunders in this production.

BOROUGH COUNCIL CONTRACTS FOR STONE

The North Plainfield Council had a short and tame session Friday. The principal item of business was the seating of George T. Rogers, who was appointed and confirmed at the last meeting of the Council to fill the unexpired term of Charles L. Nichols, resigned. Mr. Rogers will take Mr. Nichol's place on the various committees of which the latter was a member, including the chairmanship of the finance committee.

John Y. Wilson was awarded the contract for furnishing stone to the borough for street repairs during the year. Mr. Wilson's rates are as follows: screenings, $1.20 per ton; fine stone, $1.20 per ton; 1½ inch stone, $1.15 per ton; 2½ inch stone, $1.00 per ton. Joseph Manhattan's bid on cross walks was referred to the street committee.

The Council adjourned until next Friday when a discussion will be held on the sewer matter.

UPPER WATCHUNG AVENUE IS TO BE OPENED UP

Preliminary steps have been taken by the Borough Council which will result in the development of the northeastern section of that municipality. Mayor N. B. Smalley, at the session of the Council last night, suggested that the street committee authorize Street Commissioner John Y. Barrett to make preparations for the opening of Watchung avenue above Coddington avenue to Johnson's drive.

When this work is accomplished a way will be paved for the opening of several streets running from that section of Watchung avenue to Somerset street. Mayor Smalley in making the suggestion said that the section is a desirable spot for house-seekers to locate when the proposed sewerage system is installed.

AN INDEPENDENT WEEKLY.

A. L. PURCE, Editor and Proprietor.

Terms: $2.00 per year.

Plainfield, N. J., March 24, 1910.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Gerson's Tinytown Company composed of 50 midgets from the Royaume de Lilliputs, Paris, France, have been added as a circus feature to the big triple show at the Hippodrome. The Midgets give a complete three ring circus in miniature without the aid of any full sized performer. They number amongst themselves trained equilibrists, equestrians, acrobats, clowns, tight rope walkers jugglers, strong men and even rapid fire cartoonists. They will be seen in the first of the three spectacles, "A Trip to Japan," and will be retained as a permanent feature. These wee performers created something of a furore at their first appearance this afternoon. The house was packed with children as well as grown ups, for the little folks especially delight in watching the clever manner in which these tiny folk disport themselves. Doubtless the crowds at the New York Hippodrome will be greater than ever from now on until the close of the season.

ROUTINE MATTERS BEFORE CITY FATHERS

Upon the recommendation of Mayor Charles J. Fisk, John Kelly, formerly a patrolman in the local police department, was appointed to the force Monday, and was started in Class C, in which there are six other patrolmen. He will draw about $77 a month. There are two other lower grades, but as there are no men in those grades, Mr. Kelly was placed in Class C. Mayor Fisk informed the Council that Mr. Kelly had served as a policeman for six years and had a clean record and is now in perfect physical condition.

The police committee, through resolutions offered by Councilman Charles C. Randolph, was authorized to purchase new rubber tires for the patrol wagon at a cost not to exceed $60 and three new bicycles for members of the department at a cost not to exceed $100.

In response to a petition from residents, three lights were ordered placed on Denmark road, between Dixie lane and Revine road, and one light was ordered placed on West Fourth street, between Clinton and Hunter avenues.

Councilman Gloak presented a map and also an ordinance providing for the installation of a storm sewer in Richmond street, between Madison avenue and East Second street. This will complete the storm sewer work on that street. The ordinance was read for the first time and a public hearing will be granted later. The cost for this work is to be paid for out of the general fund.

Enoch Berry, of Leland avenue, communicated with the Council relative to the removal of the old railroad bank in the East End of the city. He said if he had removed a good section of the bank and asked the Council to make an allowance of $200 for completing the work; or he agreed to contribute that sum toward the completion of the work if the city would agree to do it. The matter was referred to the street committee.

Mr. Buxton offered a resolution, which was adopted, appropriating $300 for the care of the city dump. Mr. Buxton referred back ten bonds, presented earlier in the evening, for the approval of the corporation counsel; also the petition of Mary Denny, of Johnson avenue and East Second street, and one from Rose A. Hall, of East Second street and Netherwood avenue, referring to double assessments on their property. Upon the recommendation of Corporation Counsel Marsh one assessment in each case was authorized cancelled.

Upon the petition by Councilman Gloak the Central Realty Company was granted permission to connect with a sewer main in the West End of the city, in accordance with a previous petition.

PLAN AN EXTENSION TO CHURCH EDIFICE

The Consistory of Trinity Reformed church met Monday at the home of Elder George L. VanEmburgh on East Second street, the pastor, Rev. John Y. Brook, and all the members being present, except William F. Oliver. The members devoted the whole session to discussing the advisability of building an extension to the rear of the church to give the Sunday-school the extra room needed at this time. There was free and full discussion of the matter, after which it was voted to refer it to the congregation at a meeting to be held Wednesday night, March 30.

There are two matters of expense that will be brought before the congregation at that time for sanction, namely, the raising and expenditure of $5,000 for absolute necessary repairs to the present church edifice, the painting of the exterior and the decorating of the interior.

The other amount to be asked for is $3,000 for building the addition to the rear of the church in order to accommodate the members of the various departments of the Sunday-school. It is proposed to raise all the money that is possible for the improvements and then borrow the remainder. It was between 11 and 12 o'clock when the business was concluded, and before the Consistory left Mrs. H. C. VanEmburgh served sandwiches and coffee and received the hearty thanks of all present.

A Floor Map.

Make a map of your floor for intricate places that suggest difficulties in the cutting and possible failure in the fitting of your new linoleum. The map is to be perfectly fitted size and shape, done in newspaper or even heavier manilla paper. The paste pot comes in just here. The first trial won't be perfect, but every little chink may be fitted in by a pasting process until you have got the exact dimension. Then for the final cutting of the new oilcloth. The forethought and trial paper will be of just the same use as is the perfect paper pattern in garment-making. Try it and you will be convinced. The map is useful, whether the floor covering be carpet, oilcloth, felt, denim or matting.

Pre-Memorial Service.

OCEANICS ARE DEFEATED

Plainfield Aggregation Triumphs Over Steamship's Eleven.

THE SCORE: FIVE TO FOUR.

Oceanics Make First Goal—Enthusiastic Crowd Cheers Local Team—The Brooklyn F. C. Next Saturday.

The Plainfield Association Football Club won a great victory Saturday afternoon, when it defeated the crack S. S. Oceanic F. C., on the Clinton avenue grounds, by a score of 5 to 4. The contest was witnessed by the largest crowd of the season. The local boys were continually cheered for their fine work.

The Oceanics took a hold of the ball immediately on the start of the game and made a rush on the home goal. Cassells secured the first point for the visitors within two minutes of play. They returned to the attack again, but the time defence succeeded in clearing nicely.

In the next ten minutes of play the visitors again made a rush on the Plainfield end, and Longman, took one more point for them. The visitors up to this time, had been making rings around the home team, but the local boys now got down to business, and in a nice run down field, Spalding put in a dandy shot, which made the first goal for Plainfield.

This point was challenged, but the referee decided in favor of the Plainfield team. The locals again took the ball up field, when Heaume managed to take one more point. Shortly before half time, Heaume again scored amid loud applause and this gave Plainfield a lead of three to two, which they succeeded in holding until half time was called. The visitors up to this point had the best of the play, but were unlucky at goal.

On resuming play in the second half, the home team settled down to a fine steady game, and before long had added one more goal to the score from a scrimmage, making it four to two. Although the visitors were playing nice ball now, the home team held them easily and they seldom got over mid-field, while the locals were peppering their opponents' goal, which was well defended by Painter, who was making some dandy saves.

A big kick out to centre was quickly taken up by the Oceanics, and followed by a fast run down field, when Smith succeeded in beating Hosle, making one more point for the visitors. On scoring the home team rushed on the visitors' goal when a corner was awarded them, and being nicely centred by Spalding, Heaume succeeded in adding the fifth point for Plainfield.

With about five minutes to go the visitors started pressing and soon har secured one more from Fagan, who put in a fine shot which sailed through. The lineup:

Plainfield.		Oceanics.
Hosle	goal	Painter
Gould	right back.	H. Sutton
